Using or Losing

There is a law of life which requires that men shall use what they have or lose it. It is immutable and universally applicable. Whether in the world of material possessions, or mental endowments, or spiritual capacities and powers, what we use we keep and multiply and what we neglect we lose. We have and keep only what we use, and the more we use the more we have. Jesus emphasized that truth when he spoke the parables of the pounds (Luke 19:11-27) and the talents (Matt. 25:14-30). The law is exacting in its requirements, makes no exceptions, and is unalterable. It is true in every field of human values, is fundamental to all being, and no excuse can be offered that will free one of the inevitable consequences of inactivity. We lose what we do not use, always and everywhere; it is inescapable.

Many a soul's dwindling spiritual life bears witness to the strict execution of the requirements of this law. He who will not open his eyes to spiritual truth becomes blind to it, and he whose heart is closed to all appreciation of spiritual values, loses all sense of such values. The man who buries his talent will have it taken from him. Mr. Darwin's experience is a classic illustration of this fact. He became so absorbed in the pursuit of scientific knowledge and in the accumulation of facts that the part of his brain that was given for the appreciation of beauty and sentiment and spiritual realities was lost from lack of use. It is according to his own testimony: "I cannot endure to read a line of poetry; I have tried lately to read Shakespeare and found it so intolerably dull that it nauseated me. I have also lost my taste for pictures and music. My mind seems to have become a kind of machine for grinding general laws out of large collections of facts. But why this should have caused the atrophy of that part of the brain alone on which the higher states depend I cannot conceive. If I had to live my life over again, I would have made a rule to read some poetry, and listen to some music at least once a week; for then perhaps the parts of my brain now atrophied would have kept alive through use." And what Darwin experienced to his everlasting regret may become true, possibly to a lesser degree, in the lives of every one of us. It may be that we become so absorbed in the doing of things that we neglect to spend time in the contemplation of spiritual realities and lose the power of mystical communion. Or we may give ourselves so completely to religious devotions that we lose all sense of the importance of practical service. We may become so possessed with the importance of our own convictions that we lose all power of consideration and tolerance. Or we may give ourselves so constantly to compromising that we lose the ability to stand for our convictions and life becomes vacillating and meaningless. Whatever be the field of human interest that we neglect. Let us be assured that what we fail to use we lose.

This law is at work also in the lives of our churches. Where there is a growing interest, a broadening of vision and an increasing of activity, there is being built up a congregation of believers with an ever widening circle of influence, of increasing power in service and of steadily enlarging reaches of faith. And we have churches of that sort. On the other hand, it must be confessed that we have churches that are dragging out a steadily diminishing existence, because they are failing to use their opportunities and refusing to exercise their faith. They turn deaf ears to the pleadings for the gospel among the unevangelized portions of the world, and the reach of their sympathy narrows its circle. Home missions, educational demands, obligations to the aged and infirm and the needs of an enlarged and more efficient publishing establishment—all these and other phases of kingdom activities call in vain for the support of their prayers and gifts. They live unto themselves and within the circle of their own interests, and those interests are daily becoming more restricted. A people cannot hear these calls that are constantly going out and harden their hearts to them without seriously effecting their own lives. It is no slight thing to refuse to enter an open door of service. A congregation loses immeasurably by damming up the outflow of its sympathy and helpfulness.

The Mohammedans have a legend which tells of a tribe that dwelt on the shores of the Dead Sea. These men had forgotten all about truth, had taken up with lies and were drifting into an intolerable condition. Whereupon by the grace of a kind Providence there was sent to them the prophet Moses to instruct and to warn them. But Moses received only scoffs and sneers, and so withdrew. But the laws of nature did not withdraw. The men of the Dead Sea, when he next visited them, were all changed into apes, sitting on trees, grinning and chattering nonsense. There they sit and chatter to this day, only every Sabbath there returns to them a bewildered, half-conscious condition of mind, in which they have a vague recollection of a former and higher order. Those legendary beings lost their souls because they made no use of them. And that weird legend is a warning to the churches of Christ that those who do not use their faith and their vision, their lives and talents, who will not give and serve, who do not yearn, intercede and sacrifice for the saving of souls and the building up of the Kingdom of God, will lose their lives. It is inevitable that we are daily using our powers and opportunities or we are losing them.

Beginning Volume Forty-nine

With this issue The Evangelist enters upon its forty-ninth year of existence, and the editor upon his ninth year of service in this capacity. We will not at this time enter upon any reminiscences concerning The Evangelist's career, nor yet with regard to the present editor's experiences, except to say that we have always tried to do our duty as we saw it, and we have found joy in the service. The paper under our administration has not been flawless, we have made mistakes aplenty, but our many friends and supporters have been magnanimous with regard to them. And we are determined to forget the things that are behind, except the lessons we have learned, and to press on, as Paul did, toward the goal of greater efficiency in service. We are conscious of the fact that there are many ways in which our church paper might be improved, some of which are seeking steadily to accomplish, but others must wait the day of a larger financial program, made possible by the church. Notwithstanding all this, we are gratified to recall many expressions of appreciation of our services and the frequent statement that the Evangelist has been steadily improving through these years. During this last year a larger number than usual have been kind enough to write us about their appreciation of the Evangelist as a whole or of some feature in it. These expressions have been a great encouragement to us and at times have caused us to feel revived in spirit when we have been wearied in body and discouraged in spirit. We thank all who have been thus appreciative, and also those who have offered criticism, most of it in a kindly spirit, by which we have been profited.

We are especially grateful to the many fine spirited and loyal, cooperating pastors and laymen who have contributed so much to the success of the Evangelist. As we have said many times, whatever merit the Evangelist has is due largely to the service of love which our noble contributors have rendered. No one knows better than the editor how much he is dependent on the cooperation of the hundreds of unpaid pens of the brotherhood, nor how much they mean in the way of inspiration, instruction and spiritual enrichment for the Evangelist family. These busy pastors and laymen deserve the gratitude of the entire brotherhood.

One feature connected with our work that has been a real joy to us is the fine spirit of understanding and fellow-feeling that has grown up among Evangelist readers. So warm, intimate and mutually considerate has the general attitude been that the expressive term, "Evangelist Family," has become quite widely used and full of meaning. We cannot boast of large numbers, as church paper subscription lists go, but we are convinced that there are few subscription groups that, taken in the large, can be as truly characterized as a "family" as the Evangelist subscribers. One of the prime causes of the development of this fine and enviable spirit is the large space given to communications from churches and church leaders, and the possibility there given of sharing with one another our ideas and experiences, our visions and activities, our undertakings and achievements. We know no other church paper that gives so much space in comparison to its size to such informal communications and direct news reporting as the Evangelist encourages. This feature makes our church paper more than a magazine of instruction and inspiration, more than a propaganda sheet, more than a religious newspaper even, it really becomes a circular letter distributed among the churches each week, and to which each recipient contributes a portion. That is the thing that builds up the spirit of intimacy and fellowship, and that makes the Evangelist's coming into the various homes as the weekly visit of a faithful friend, to use the expression of many who write us. Viewed in this light, it can be easily seen how important is it that every pastor and church leader shall share his or her helpful experiences and achievements with the brotherhood through our news department. When we begin to neglect this, we begin to drift apart, as members of a family do when they cease letter-writing.

With the first number of this volume the Publishing Company has authorized the change of the date of publication from Wednesday to Saturday of each week. This will not affect the time for the actual mailing of the Evangelist; we will continue to go to press in time for the paper to be in the post office by Wednesday night. Newsletters or announcements which the writers wish to come out in a particular Saturday's issue, should be mailed so as to reach the Editor not later than the preceding Saturday morning. Newsletters arriving earlier in the week will be given the preference. Urgent announcements will be received up to the closing of the Evangelist on Monday noon; that is the dead line. Please cooperate with the editor by sending communications early in the week for release during the following week,

EDITORIAL REVIEW

We are informed that Brother Arthur D. Cashman, who has been taking graduate work in Ashland College, has accepted the pastorate of the Brethren church at Dallas Center, Iowa, and is to move on the field at the close of the first semester, about the last of February.

Brother W. A. Gearhart, Home Mission Secretary, reports that the Home Board is well pleased with the response to the Thanksgiving appeal for offerings, but states that many churches have not made remittance. This should not be long delayed, or some interest will be caused to suffer thereby. He has encouraging news concerning the mission churches at Fort Wayne, Indiana, and Columbus, Ohio.

Dr. G. W. Rensch replies in a beautiful way to the many Christmas greetings sent to himself and wife. Brother Rensch's life has been a benediction to multitudes in the church and it is meet that they should thus remember him and his good companion and co-worker. May God richly bless him and the other noble men advanced in the ministry, who by life and counsel have been an inspiration to the many who have been following after them.

Brother A. B. Cover, pastor of the church at Falls City, Nebraska, tells of the effective rendition of a splendid Christmas pageant, and that the church is endeavoring to maintain its commendable record in the making of special offerings. He also reports concerning the successful evangelistic campaign recently held at Mulvane, where Brother Homer Anderson is pastor. Brother Cover states that he is to take the pastorate of the First Church of Los Angeles in February, instead of the Second church as announced in these columns.

We are pleased to publish the pictures of Brother and Sister B. H. Flora on the occasion of the celebration of their "Golden Wedding" anniversary. It is good to make much of such occasions as these when the daily press is playing up the gambol, the insincerity and the fickleness of the marital relations. It is inspiring and reassuring to find men and women of God bearing witness to the binding power of the Christian marriage, and after a half century of united life, still rejoice and take pride in the union. Congratulations, Brother and Sister Flora.

Dr. Martin Shively resumes in this issue his highly appreciated series of articles on the pioneer ministers of our church. This series was interrupted in the midst of the last year by his automobile accident, and the unusually heavy burden due to the college endowment campaign in the city made it impossible for him to take up this service again until now. We have had numerous favorable comments on the articles that were published and inquiries concerning them when they were discontinued. Dr. Shively expects to supply us with one article a month, and the series will run for possibly two years yet. We are greatly indebted to Brother Shively for this service.

The Business Manager says the way to start the new year right is to renew your subscription to The Evangelist. This is the time when many churches and individuals should take care of this matter. But it's well to start the new year right by "doing it now." Brother Teeter also calls attention to the Publication Day offering and the purpose to which it is devoted. It is a matter of importance, and every pastor should feel a personal responsibility for cooperation in the effort to free our Publishing House of the debt incurred by the purchase of its new home. It ought to mean much to the brotherhood in the way of an improved literature, and more of it, to have a debt-free publishing house. For the money that must now be paid out in interest could then be devoted to the improvement of our publishing house equipment and our periodical literature, and also to the building up of a permanent literature. With the hearty cooperation of every church this debt could soon be liquidated, and our churches would feel proud of the accomplishment and would have a deeper interest in this institution which is so essential to the welfare of our beloved brotherhood.

Our readers will greatly appreciate the good newsletter from Dr. J. Allen Miller, and the editor especially appreciates what he says regarding the importance of writing newsletters from the various churches of the brotherhood. We have been urging this matter upon the pastors by correspondence as we were able, but it is a physical impossibility to bring the matter to the attention of every pastor of church correspondent every time a letter is due. It ought in some way be impressed upon the hearts of our pastors and other church leaders as a duty, which their consciences would not permit them to neglect. The brotherhood will rejoice to learn of the progress of the Ashland church. Dr. Charles A. Bame, the pastor, reported thirty-one additions to the membership during the year closing at the last annual meeting of the congregation and six more were added during the recent evangelistic campaign conducted by the pastor and an efficient group of co-workers. It was a campaign in which personal work was featured and meant much in the way of awakening the church members to a sense of their responsibility. The attendance at the regular services has been good and the special feature programs of the Ashland church are looked forward to by the townspeople with special interest.

True, Acceptable Religion

By E. M. Riddle

"Ye also, as lively stones, and built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 2:5.

It is a matter of highest importance to every worshipper to understand the importance of true religion. It lends beautiful peace here and permanent felicity hereafter. Those who seek consolation and help in spurious religions will have their faith and expectations blighted, and thereby become victims of disappointment. To examine with the utmost care the blessed Holy Word, is the only way to ascertain definitely the character of God's religion. So it is our aim in this message to show you that true, acceptable religion is one that is spiritual; that it is also a religion of faith, love, self-denial, obedience, and prayer. Let us consider these separate thoughts in order as mentioned.

A true acceptable religion is one that is spiritual. Wisdom and knowledge are not all of religion. It is more than an intellectual principle. Religion is described under the similitude of light. The founder of the Christian religion is revealed as the Light of the World. His disciples are said to be of the day and not of the night. Many men in this day understand the Bible exceptionally well and yet they have never appropriated a single command or teaching unto themselves. Religion is more than a knowledge of the Book.

True religion is spiritual in its source. It is the work of the Holy Spirit of God. Man, sick in sin and trespasses, is quickened and renewed, made alive by the Holy Spirit. "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works." Genuine religion is realized only with the new birth, or regeneration. Jesus our Lord and Master said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." Nothing less than what Jesus said is sufficient. A change is necessary to be a believer. The text says the believer is a building, or a temple, not of material stones but a spiritual house to the Lord. It is not only the Holy Spirit but the work of the Spirit on our hearts and souls. The cleansing of conscience, the bringing the will into perfect obedience to God's gracious authority, is all an inward spiritual work. Jesus said also that the "Kingdom of God is within you." The teachings, commands and ordinances of Jesus have a specific bearing on practical religion. Speaking of, hearing the word; Baptism into the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; the ordinances and eucharist; we have both precept and example for duly and fully regarding them.

Indeed all that is essential to a spiritual religion, the gospel reveals; the word of truth and the promise of the Holy Spirit to all who believe.

This leads us to our second thought; a true, acceptable religion is one of Faith. "Therefore it is of faith that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed: Not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of faith of Abraham who is the father of us all." Man meets God on a peculiar ground. The word says "There is none righteous ..." "All have sinned. ..." His first essential need in this world is the help of God. If saved at all, it is because of the free, beautiful act of God's grace.

ELDER E. M. RIDDLE

Faith is the credence given to testimony. It is belief in what is said or lived. It cometh by hearing. The ground of faith is the gospel. The atoning, sacrificial mission of Christ to the world to save sinners, the wonderful plan of salvation is set forth in the Holy Scripture, and thus our faith is demanded in order that we might be the recipients of the blessings of salvation. In this day we see so much of the fearful nature of unbelief! It disbelieves God's word. It despises his mercy. It rejects his Son. It refuses his pardon. Faith is the very opposite. Faith calls upon God for help in an hour of trouble, or greatest affliction. Faith casts all the care and burden upon the Lord. Faith holds fast to the truth.

Yea Paul says in Ephesians, take the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. Have we this shield? Do we appreciate its inestimable worth? Will we not as Christians, call upon all to believe the gospel and live?

Acceptable religion is one of Love. 1 John 4:16 says, "And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." This text describes a character who dwells in God. It can be added that in one of the Psalms are the words, "God dwelleth in him." Thus they are his portion and God delights in them. God is the supreme object of our love. No circumstance, age or dispensation can change the great and significant—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God. ..." We as representatives of the Christian religion should be possessors of this wonderful attribute called love. However there are people who pretending to be Christian, are so repulsive, that it is difficult to love them—to others you are almost irresistibly drawn. Again, love is a bond of relationship between neighbors, for the word reads, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." We believe that Jesus had in mind that a neighbor should regard, reverence and protect his neighbor's family and possessions. Love is also a necessary badge of Christian discipleship; "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one toward another." It surely is one of the chief features of our resemblance to Christ. We are to be imbued with this spirit of love, if we would seek to have our life conform with that of Christ. No other points of likeness can be sufficient without this. Notice further that Faith and Love are both basic truths in the great eternal offer. We quote John 3:16, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Here we have salvation from sin, and the promise of life eternal as well. No greater gift could be offered to man, for nothing is so desirable, and so highly valued as life, and especially is this true as it applies to the life that is beyond,—the life of the future,—everlasting life. In what greater measure could the Omnipotent God have revealed his love to the world, dying in sin.

Note further that true religion is characterized by obedience. My text verse for this thought comes from John's gospel, "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will make myself manifest unto him." There have been many disputes whether salvation is of works or of faith. Faith and works are both essential, and each has its proper place. Good works are to be the evidences of our faith. Hence I feel that we can say that faith is the root and obedience is the fruit, or faith is the soul of religion and obedience the body. Our obedience must not have a self-righteous style, not mere respectable morality, which the world can wear. Christian obedience is one of love and affection. It is more than the obedience of the hireling, whose eye is ever on the wage or reward. Paul says, "We ought to obey God rather than man." Our obedience should be uniform, obey him at all times. It must be the habit of the soul. Someone has said that obedience should be the golden thread running through the web of life. every person who has the New Testament has the commandments of Christ, and if he deliberately refuses to obey them from the heart, it cannot be truthfully said that he loves his Lord. There are positive institutions and ordinances set forth in the New Testament which must be obeyed. True obedience is only bounded by the divine word. To the obedient comes this comfort and blessing, "Blessed are they who do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." To the disobedient: "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die?" "Let the wicked forsake his way. . . ." Also see Romans 2:8, 9. Could we not profit by the sentiment of Francis Quarles: "Let the ground of all thy religious actions be obedience; examine not why it is commanded, but observe it because it is commanded. True obedience neither procrastinates or questions." This is the secret of Christ's kingship—"He became obedient, wherefore God also hath highly exalted him."

Another phase of this subject is that an acceptable religion is a religion of self-denial. "And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." In our Lord Jesus Christ we have a true example of acceptable religion. Christ's disciples must follow in his steps. The Lord connects this thought with the spirit and practice of self-denial. The very essence of self-denial is to be given up to the will of God, to yield self and suffer if need be for his sake. The Bible is rejected today by all too many, because men will not deny their own wisdom. We have not learned to commit our way unto the Lord. When we do our prayer will be, "O Lord teach me thy paths"; "Thou shalt guide me by thy council"; "Lead me in a plain path." Think of the excellent spirit which the apostle manifested when he said, "By the grace of God I am what I am." Now true self-denial chooses not, dictates not, but ever seeks to utter the submissive words, "Not my will but thine be done."

Lastly, Christian religion is one of prayer. "Continuing instant in prayer" . . . Romans 12:12. All religions true or false, recognize the duty of prayer. The Indian, the Pagan, Mohammedan, all express some religious emotion. Prayer had a large place even in the times of patriarchal religion and in the New Testament religion, it has an exceptional place. Jesus the Master Teacher, instructed in prayer. He sanctified most of his work by prayer, if not all of it. He was baptized, then prayed; he prayed more earnestly in the garden; his dying breath on the cross was a prayer. There are a few distinguishing features of prayer: namely, Sincerity, without which prayer is a form of hypocrisy. Simplicity, the powerful prayer may not always be one of elegance, for that prayer which reveals child-like simplicity and faith will always be heard. Humility, think of the majesty and glory of God, then reflect upon our own weakness, pollution and guilt. We need to be bowed down with our load of sin. Believing—confidence, for "he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." James says, "... Let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally," and again, "let him ask in faith nothing wavering." Now our prayer of faith must have two considerations: first, reverential submission, leaving the time and way that a prayer shall be answered to him who makes no mistake; secondly, expectation, we are taught to pray and watch thereunto. We should always zealously look for the returns to prayer. How greatly the prayer service is minimized these days. It is so undervalued even by too many of the professing church. Indeed it is a great privilege to exhort the believer to a life of PRAYER.

With this quotation from Alexander Maclaren, we close, "He who is one in will and heart with God is a Christian. He who loves God is one in will and heart with him. He who trusts Christ loves God. That is Christianity in its means and working forces. That is Christianity in its starting-point and foundation."

IMMORTALITY

C. F. Yoder

To know and obey the truth that makes men free, (John 8:35, 36).

To destroy the body of sin that burdens me (Rom. 6:6).

To build the spiritual house that is mine to be, (Ephes. 2:21, 22).

To think thy thoughts, O God, after thee (John 16:13).

To love with the love of dignity, (John 17:26) .

To find joy in serving the race unselfishly, (Matt. 20:27, 28).

To commune with the Spirit of God in harmony (1 Cor. 2:15).

Till at last I attain to my highest destiny, (1 John 3:2).

And the image of God is seen through Christ in me, (Rev. 3:12).

—This is to live, to live for eternity. (1 John 2:17).

We have always this thought for comfort in our church, that its foundations are divine and eternal and that we can't break up the organization even if we wanted to. We may swing over too far in the wrong direction and topple over the building, but the foundation will remain fixed and eternal and another structure will spring up to take its place. We may have seditions and contentions, and curious doctrines may spring up among us to disturb us, but we rest on a solid, eternal foundation—the love of Christ for humanity and humanity's need for Christ.—Frances M. Morton.

Some Brethren Church Leaders of Yesterday, as I Knew Them

VI. Elder J. H. Swihart

By Martin Shively, D.D.

While I knew many things about the subject of this sketch, I do not know either the date nor the place of his birth, though I am fairly certain that he first saw the light of day in the state of Indiana, and believe that if he were living today, he would be almost if not entirely a nonogenarian. The facts I shall mention in this paper are some which I had from his own lips, in the many conversations I had with him. From these I learned that he was ordained to the ministry in what was then known as the German Baptist church, now The Church of the Brethren. This event occurred in August, 1886, Elder George Shively being the officiating elder, and by him the preacher-to-be was earnestly charged to preach the Gospel, saying nothing about the decrees of the church. In those days no great stress was laid upon the decisions of the Annual Conference, and this suited well the rather independent spirit of the new recruit to the ministry. And this was due to the fact that he never held the opinions of men very seriously, unless they were clearly supported by the word of God. He preached his first sermon soon after his ordination, at Bremen, Indiana, and had the pleasure of seeing one soul turn to the Lord on that occasion. Feeling that he needed time for reflection and preparation before entering upon the work to which the church had called him, he decided to remove to some community in which he would not be known, and in which exercise in the ministry would not be asked of him, until such time as he should feel prepared. Thus he moved to Rock Creek, Illinois, providing for the wants of his family by work at the carpenter trade, giving all the time possible to study, little expecting to be called upon to preach. He felt that he was the more surely hidden, because there was only one member of his denomination in the community, outside of his own family. However, he was soon called upon to preach a funeral sermon, and from this time on, calls came thick and fast, and to each of these he gave his service in response. The Lord so abundantly blessed his ministry, that in a few months a congregation was organized, with 65 charter members, and the preacher was widely called "John the Baptist", because of his frequent administering of the sacred rite. But not long afterwards, the new congregation received a number of recruits from congregations in the eastern states, and these, unhappily, came from localities in which much importance was attached to "Nonconformity", in the matter of dress, and these very soon called his attention to the fact that his people were not "in the order." He really knew little about "the order," and cared less, so that, sure enough, his flock did not look like the newcomers. The Annual Meeting party thus interjected itself and its teachings, into his work, and harrassed him more or less so long as he remained even nominally identified with it. He was, however, ordained to the Eldership in the early 70s, and continued to preach the gospel as he understood it. In the Black River congregation, located in Michigan, to which he had been called to hold evangelistic services, he encountered the Seventh Day Adventists, who took issue with him on his teaching relative to baptism. The contention grew so warm that the Adventists sent him a challenge for a public debate upon the question. No man has ever loved peace more than Brother Swihart, but after many an honest effort to ward off trouble, he accepted the challenge. The debate which followed proved a great blessing to the Brethren cause, resulting in many additions to the church, to the great chagrin of his opponents. He returned to Indiana in 1875, nominally a member of the German Baptist church, but in reality an independent. Here division had already come, the seceding party being known as the Congregational Brethren. He persisted in fellowshipping both parties, which created constant friction, until finally he publicly announced that we could not and would not longer be even nominally a party to the foisting upon men of a peculiar order of dress, and making the same a test of Christian fellowship. He thus formally withdrew from the Annual Meeting party, and cast his lot with the Congregational Brethren, and in September, 1881, he began the publication of a monthly religious journal called "The Gospel Messenger," and continued successfully to do so until June, 1883, when the so-called Progressives and Congregational Brethren were united into one body, when his paper was merged with the Brethren Evangelist. From that time until the infirmities of advancing age compelled a halt, no man was more active in the ministry of the church than he.

I became acquainted with this man of God during the winter of 1884-5, he being at this time pastor of the small congregation at Edna Mills, Indiana. A number of things stand out in my memory of him at this time. First, he was a powerful preacher, indeed one of the most effective it has ever been my privilege to know. He had an almost uncanny ability to touch the heart strings of men, and to draw from them sweetest music in honor of his King. He knew his Book, and he knew and loved man, and this knowledge he used to advance the Kingdom of Righteousness in the world. Second, he deserved even then to be known as "John the Baptist," for as I well remember, during a period of two years, during which he preached three sermons per month at Edna Mills, he did not fail once, to administer the rite of baptism in connection with the services. While he lived in the village, he spent but one Sunday in four there, preaching on Saturday evening, and twice on the following day, but with the results which I have just indicated. I do not recall the other points at which he gave regular services at this time, but I do remember that he was much in evangelistic work, and that everywhere, his services were greatly blessed. You will be the more ready to believe this when I say that 3,500 souls were led to Christ by his ministry, and that 32 congregations were organized by him. I remember, too, his unfailing good humor and optimism, for during all these busy years of his life, the compensation he received was pitifully small, but there was never a word of complaint, either from him or his family, and they were all willing partakers of the privations which came, incident to the great service he rendered. Those who follow such pioneers reap the rewards which in great measure were earned by those who paved the way for them. I visited him, not long before his death, and was amazed at two things, at least. First, in spite of the fact that he had few of the comforts which most of us think necessary to living, he was as cheerful and happy, as if he had possessed every comfort which money can furnish. I said to him then, as I had earlier said to Brother J. B. Wampler, "May God grant me the grace to grow old as beautifully as you have done." No man is poor unless he admits it, and Brother Swihart lived absolutely above poverty. All who knew and loved him, must regret that he could not have lived longer in the beautiful Old Folks' Home at Flora, for there he died, after short residence, but his new home is more beautiful still, for the Master who assured his own, that "He that reapeth receiveth wages," has not forgotten his faithful servant. The second thing which amazed me when I saw him last, was the fact that he did not wear glasses, but read the finest print without such help. I might have concluded that he was having his so-called second sight, but he told me that he had never worn glasses, nor needed to do so. Thus he was a remarkable man, physically as well as spiritually.

In spite of his unusual gifts, he was the very opposite of self-assertive. Indeed I never heard him say even a single word at our general conferences, unless he were called upon by some of those who knew the value of his counsel, and even then his remarks were very brief but to the point. But when he rose to preach the Word, his reticence fell from him, and he was possessed of the boldness which comes from both love of the task, and an unquestioned belief in its worth-while-ness. I am glad that it was my privilege to know him, and to have heard him so often in the presentation of Scriptural truth. And my reverence for his memory may at least in some measure be due to the fact that he was my father in faith, having led me into baptismal waters, and also ordained me to the Christian ministry. But I am sure that for other reasons, no man of my acquaintance is more worthy of a grateful remembrance.

The Head Usher

By Hubert C. Herring

He did not pick the post; he was foreordained to it. We had tried ten other men, and they never quite seemed to fit. And then came this one, and we promptly forgot times ever were when his graciousness did not preside over the front door of the Lord's house. He carries the air of having always been there, of belonging to the place. He does no violence to the scene. He fits, and that is the end of it. He is elected for life.

He it is who meets the late comers with the smile which they never deserve. He cajoles them into happy acceptance of the wait in the lobby until the choir has ceased torturing "Unfold, ye portals everlasting." He almost persuades them that they should not expect to march down the aisle during the reading of the Scripture lesson.

He is appointed the taker of the weekly census. He counts the congregation and reports to the parson on Sunday evening. By faith he learns to count by fives; and if by reason of rain the crowd is sparse, even by tens does he number the people. By grace he learns to add the janitor and the parson to the number, and in moments of strength to number also the young people who are sitting on the church steps. By hope, he adds to this count by adding those who will drift in just before the benediction to take the girls of the choir to their appointed homes.

He is the evangelist of the gospel of the front seat. He speaks in winning whispers of the advantages which accrue to those who follow him down under the shadow of the pulpit. Hopefully he leads the way. Three quarters of the way down he turns to usher his victims into the seat which he has chosen, only to find that he is alone and unattended and that his victims have slipped into a seat at the rear. Then does he smile the half smile at the usher who has long since learned his lesson, and tries again.

He is the master of the soft word. Even the portly deacon who prefers the end of the seat yields to his blandishment and makes way for the Smiths, who always bring their Willy with them.

He possesses that sixth sense which is reserved for head ushers. He can detect a draft from afar, and gauge its potency by the vibrations of the bald head in the fifth row on the right. He knows temperature by the same sign, and has learned how much heat is safe for the Joneses and how much cold the Johnsons can bear. He works levers and switches and buttons, and keeps the quorum in reasonable content.

He is master of the art of quarantine. He knows where the woman who talks too much can be lodged with the minimum of risk. He knows where to place strangers that they may be greeted with zeal when the service is ended. And when that family with the little Betty Ann, who wriggles and rattles, appears, he knows just where they can be put with the least damage to the spirit of worship.

He is the sure refuge of the parson when the day is over. He can think of more decent things to say about sermons and anthems, and of the prospects for better congregations next Sunday, and of reasons why the Andrews and Brighams didn't appear today, than any ordinary man could imagine in a week.

And so it is, at eventide, when the last service is over, and the janitor is turning out the lights, that the parson and the Head Usher make their way down the street together, and the parson decides that, after all, life is worthwhile, and that he can prepare more sermons for next Sunday.

There are many orders of priests in the house of the Lord, but none are greater than the Order of Head Ushers.—Western Christian Advocate.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Standardized Living

By J. P. Horlacher

TEXT: What do ye more than others?—Matt. 5:38-48.

Life today is submerging the individual in the crowd. Certainly one of the shortcomings of democracy is its tendency to make an ideal out of averageness, and an idol out of conformity. The peaks of life must be reduced, and the hollows elevated. A constant process of leveling is apparent in our common life. Whoever refuses to conform and dares to be different is at once labelled and stigmatized. He is cranky, has notions, is a radical, lacking in common sense, and sanity. Common sense is taken to be the ignorance of everybody lumped together and struck off in an average. A genius or an outstanding intellect is not respected and honored, but is discredited for differing from the norm. It has actually come to the pass that the leaders in a democracy instead of being unique minds and outstanding men, must be pale and washed out copies of everybody, so that the voter can see and recognize himself in the one he votes for.

This tendency to reduce life to averageness, and submerge the individual in the crowd, is nowhere better seen than in the life of a great city. To the haberdasher of, say, New York, men are not so much individuals as they are wearers of hats. To the politician the people in a given district are spoken of and thought of as so many votes, every vote exactly like every other vote. The newspapers are printed for the masses the huge Wrigley chewing gum sign blares forth on the masses the theatres and moving picture houses entertain the masses; the elevated cars, the subways, and the sub-subways carry them from place of work, to place of residence, to place of entertainment, and the only sphere in which they are individuals at all is during the very brief time they spend in their flats with their families. One only has to join the crowd at night moving on Broadway, or become engulfed in the mass of humanity circling Times Square, to realize how completely individuality is lost in the great metropolitan centers. While there are millions of people living in New York, the structure and complexity of modern life has seen to it that there are few individuals.

Modern industry also tends to shrivel the individual and shrink him into a unit of the crowd. More and more, men work in masses, are known by numbers, are thought of by their employers as so many units of production, are constantly shrinking to the place of mere cogs in the great industrial machines. Formerly, when men worked mostly by hand, there was individuality in work, some work was finer than other work. Now, when everything is done by machine, all that is required is average efficiency and speed. The man becomes mechanical, a part of the machine, and his sense of individuality is destroyed.

How far this process of standardization has already gone is to be seen in times of crisis and emergency, as when during the war, through propaganda of a million sorts and from a million sources, the entire nation thought alike, felt alike, acted alike, and the very, very few who so much as dared be exceptions were safely put in prison where their differentism would not be contagious.

May I pause here to say that the teachings of Jesus are a strong protest against the crowd swallowing up and destroying the individual. He persistently declared that the thing of supreme worth on this earth is the individual human personality. And if we are to be saved from losing our sense of worth and dignity as individuals it will be by the profound assurance Christ has given us, that in the eyes of God we are not so many millions of insects crawling over this speck of a globe, but individual objects of the love and concern of his Father. "The very hairs of your head are numbered," said Jesus, to drive home the truth of God's interest in each one of us personally. He notes and observes the fall of the sparrow how can he be indifferent toward you? It gives a man some self-respect, and sense of worth to receive this assurance from Christ. And we live in an age that needs that assurance very badly.

This standardization of life has not left the realm of conduct unaffected. It is immensely difficult to resist the standards of the crowd, which are all the while becoming more potent. In the unmoral, not immoral, matter of fashions, this is most apparent. So strong is the need of conforming felt to be, that a man would not dare wear a straw hat in January. And the high school girl who doesn't have her hair bobbed can tell you something of what it means to resist the urgency of the crowds' standards in this matter of fashions.

But fashion is a minor respect in which conduct is standardized. Respectability is the religion of the crowd, and mediocrity its righteousness. So long as a man can walk the tight-rope of the ten commandments without falling into jail on the one side or loss of reputation on the other, he is all right. And he can justify himself in most any act, if he can say "Everybody's doing it." Thus conduct is standardized, and crowd morality appears. And this crowd morality is, beyond question, one of the gravest dangers to the health of our civilization. When it is analyzed it turns out to be the least common denominator of the morals of everybody.

Christians ought not to take the crowd's standards as their own, but they do. It is exceedingly difficult to escape the standardizing process. The cult of respectability has stalked into the church, and Christians are to be found who are endeavoring to be just good enough to keep from being bad. But the complacency of this moral smugness does not go unchallenged. And the challenge comes from Christ himself. "What do ye more than others?" he demands, and his question is a very searching question.

Modern life is like the bed of the giant that Ulysses encountered. This was a very remarkable bed in that it exactly fitted every person who slept in it. If a guest was too short, his host, the giant, would tie him to one end of the bed and stretch him till he reached the other. If he was too long, his bones would be broken so that he would fit the bed perfectly. So it is in this age; no matter what our size, the pressure of standardization is applied to us until each of us is very much like all the rest of us.

The idea I am anxious to make clear, is that if we wish to sincerely follow Jesus, we must resist this pressure. The clear and azure heights to which Christ calls us are far above the level of the crowd. If we live down on the crowd's level, then let there come sharply into our ears that severe demand of Jesus: "What do ye more than others?"

It is easy to be specific here. If you refrain from murder and adultery, you satisfy the conventional standards. But you do not satisfy the standards of the gospel. Jesus says if you do this merely, what credit do you have, for do not even the publicans the same? Christians must do more than others. They must dry up the wells of hatred and ill will from whence murder springs. They must quench the smoldering fires of lust which produce the moral devastation of adultery. In other words, they must go beyond, and way beyond, the prevailing pattern of crowd morality, which is so much more comfortable, and so much less demanding.

It is mighty hard to resist being poured into the moral mould of the day, the place, the society in which we live. While others all around us are giving an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, it is hard to do more than others, and turn the other cheek. While others all around us are grudgingly going the first mile of duty, it is hard to do more than others, and go the second mile of surplus service. While others all around us are despising their rivals, and hating their enemies, it is hard to do more than others and love those that despitefully use us. Of course it is hard to resist the pressure toward conformity, when so many factors in our standardized life make non-conformity almost a martyrdom.

But what of those words of Jesus, whose echo will not die in our minds: "What do ye more than others?" Awake to the challenge of them! Are we easily satisfied with being just like others because being like everybody else has become a sort of religion with us in these modern times? Let us be done with mediocrity; let us be done with averageness; let us be done with conformity! For I solemnly say unto you that unless your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the crowd, you shall hardly enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

Meditations

By E. Romanenghi

It is sometimes asserted that poetry is dead and that the novel is likewise on the verge of passing out. I have looked into the problem, and defining matters properly, I have discovered that those who proclaim the death of the one and announce that of the other, are precisely those who neither compose verse nor write novels.

We find the same thing happening with Christianity. Some proclaim the death of this religion, while others drawn by pessimism, prophecy its death.

Neither class is properly sensing the situation. Christianity has not yet died, except in so far as it has died for those who have ceased to believe or practice it. To them it is indeed dead.

The seed (the Word of God) that long since fell into the open furrow of my plastic mind has germinated and no one can snatch it away.

Man makes decisions and plans and speaks of the future. Meanwhile death, whetting his scythe on the stone of time, arrives and surprises man right in his tracks.

As for religion, while some debate it, others dump onto paper their thoughts concerning it, and neither group say anything new.

Religiously speaking modern man does no more than to rehash what others have already said.

Ninety-five percent of the interpretations that men give to the Bible are adaptations to modern life.

Regarding the various philosophies, the only one that interests me is that which is forged on the anvil of experience, or which, if you please, rises from man face to face with life in all of its joys, sorrows, bitternesses and anxieties.

The other philosophy, that is best known, that which is abstruse and which couches itself in involved sentences and kinky arguments, that which, Sphinx-like, weaves the same thing around a half dozen fundamental principles, that which takes away one's faith without putting any hope in its place, that Philosophy, I say has my respect—but it bores me and by no means convinces me.

I am not overly fond either of dogmatic scientists nor of fanatical Christians.

I consider science the twin sister of religion. I have come to regard heterogeneity in religious matters a necessity. The only way for me to have my opinions respected is to respect those of my neighbor.

My continuous prayer is to learn more of Jesus, and my lone desire is to be able to see my Savior when it may fall my lot to cross the portals of death.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READING AND COMMENT

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

LIVED IN POVERTY—Luke 9:57-62.

"Hath not where to lay his head"! What poverty! How totally oblivious to earthly values and temporal prizes! How absorbed in the things of the Spirit, the things that abide! Can we follow him thus?

CAME TO MINISTER—Matt. 20:20-28.

It ought to be sufficient rebuke to our self-seeking, self-exalting, self-pampering tendencies to hear the Lord of all say unto us, I "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." How slow we are to understand the spirituality and high character of his kingdom!

WEDNESDAY

THE MIND OF THE MIGHTIEST—Phil. 2:5-11.

Here is one of the hardest lessons the Christian attempts to learn—to be indwelt and actuated by the mind of the Master.

THURSDAY

JOHN THE BAPTIST A BELIEVER—John 1:19-34.

He pointed out the very heart of the mission of the Christ when he said, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." To be freed of sin is the heart-cry of the race, and Jesus came to answer that cry.

FRIDAY

ANDREW AND PETER BELIEVE—John 1:35-42.

One remarkable characteristic about this belief was that it forthwith got into action to win others to this new-found faith. It is a type of belief that we need more of today.

SATURDAY

PHILIP AND NATHANAEL BELIEVE—John 1:43-51.

Philip gives us a lesson in the art of convincing men of the worth of Jesus to their lives—"Come and see." And any soul coming to Jesus with the guilelessness and open-mindedness of Nathanael will find in him the One altogether lovely.

SUNDAY

JOHN THE APOSTLE BELIEVED—1 John 1.

He believed with the positiveness of an eye-witness that Jesus was the "Word of Life" and the manifestation of the Father who was all "Light", in which light we may walk with blessed fellowship, having the consciousness of sins forgiven.—G. S. B.

What is Prayer?

As universal as prayer is, yet the success in prayer, or the lack of it, that is the experience of the average Christian, makes it worth while to ask "What is prayer?" "Prayer is more than asking God for things," says another, "for it is talking with God about our love, our repentance, our gratitude." "Nearly all Christians 'say their prayers,' but not so many have learned how to pray." "Prayer is an act, but it is an atmosphere also. It should surround and fill our lives."

Jesus' Teaching About Prayer

What Jesus taught about Prayer. "What Jesus says about prayer is of supreme importance. If we would pray aright we must test our practice by his teaching and be ready to abandon anything that seems in its nature to conflict with that. Only in this way shall we pray prayers that can be called Christian. The teaching of Jesus is conveyed by his words and by his example. His words teach (a) secrecy (Matt. 6:5, 6), (b) simplicity (Matt. 6:7, 8), (c) certainty (Matt. 7:7-11), (d) steadfastness (Luke 18:1-7; 11:5-8), (e) a sense of unworthiness (Luke 18:14), (f) a spirit of forgiveness (Mark 11:25). The example of Christ also shows that prayer was not with our Lord a mere glance, or sign, or attitude of mind, or passing ejaculation, but rather a sharply defined effort, so engaging and focussing the faculties as to demand all the circumstance of time and place which is demanded by the most serious engagements of business life."—Condensed from "The Discipline of Prayer."

The Prayer Habit

Jesus prayed habitually; he was ever in communion with the Father. And he had the habit of seeking strength for a strenuous day or a trying time by going off into a desert place or to the mountains to pray in secret. He wanted often to be alone with the Father. That is important for us all. We need the places of undisturbed prayer to prepare our hearts against the time of crisis, and to prevent us from running down in spiritual energy and purpose. J. Stuart Holden has said, "Much prayer means power; little prayer means little power; no prayer means no power."

Petitions in the Lord's Prayer

The first three petitions are for God's kingdom to come among men. The other four are for ourselves; but most of these are that we may be good, and overcome evil, for this is the most important thing in the world for us, and is the way we can do the most to help God's kingdom to come.

Remember Ruskin's words: "If you do not wish the Kingdom to come, don't pray for it; but if you do wish for it, you must do more than pray for it—you must work for it."

Empires, temples, scepters, thrones—
May they all for God be won!
And, in every human heart,
Father, let thy kingdom come! (John

Submissive Prayer

"Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth." This is a prayer that our wills may conform to God's will, says Dr. Tarbell. Too often we pray that he will approve of our way. "I am sure I will receive either what I ask for or what I should ask," says Bishop Hall. It is a prayer of consecration, not of resignation. Augustine amplifies the thought: "O Lord, grant that I may never ask to bind the straight to the crooked, that is, thy will to mine; but that I may even bind the crooked to the straight, that is, my will to thine; that thy will may be done and thy kingdom come." Dr. Edward Lee Pell says: "The spirit of self-will is the opposite of the spirit of prayer. Prayer is a confession of our dependence on God, and so prayer is in its very nature submissive. Prayer is based on humility. 'The trouble with us is that we want to be exceptions to God's rule. We know that we must harmonize God's will as roses do and as stars do, but we don't want to be compelled to harmonize in the way they do. We don't want to have to go to God and fall in with his wishes and plans. This is the secret of most of our distressing failures in prayer. This is the secret of our lack of power."

Why Some Prayers Are Not Answered

"Certainly all the 'pretense' prayers must go among the eternal strays. Like many letters which never reach their destination, many prayers have to be marked 'missent' or with some other fatal brand, and consigned to oblivion. Sometimes prayers remain unanswered because they are not directed right—not addressed to God but to the audience. Other prayers never 'go through' because the address is illegible. They are too full of pomp and rhetorical flourish—mere 'monologues of flowery prose.' Other prayers get lost because they are 'unavailable matter'—prayers whose answers might gratify us, but would fall like showers of daggers on our neighbors—and so are denied passage through the divine channels as sharp-edged tools, corroding acids, explosives and the like are not allowed in the mails. No legally 'stamped' sincerely directed and well-meaning prayer is ever lost. The answer may be delayed, but the prayer is 'on file.'"—Anon.

Unforgiving, Unforgiven

Unforgiving, unforgiven. "You say that the desert is a desert because no rain falls upon it; but that is only half the truth. No rain falls upon it because it is a desert. The heated air rushing up from its arid surface disperses the vapors that would descend in rain. Some moisture there must be on the earth, else there cannot be rain from heaven. So in your heart this forgiving disposition must be, else you cannot rejoice in the fullness of God's forgiving grace. The pardon may wait in the sky above you, but it cannot descend to you until that mind is in you which was also in Christ Jesus."—Washington Gladden.

Six Reasons for Class Organization

By Fr. W. C. Pearce

1. IT IS A BIBLE STUDY MOVEMENT. The Bible has lost none of its power over the lives of men. When clearly taught and practically applied, its truths appeal to their hearts as no others can. In the Chicago Presbytery alone, within a period of five years, forty men's organizations connected with their churches disbanded. Not one of these was a Bible class. We are therefore hopeful that the work is not a mere temporary enthusiasm, but that will abide, growing stronger each year.

2. IT IS DEFINITELY CONNECTED WITH THE CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL. Thus, it is not a new organization but merely the strengthening of our old ones. This insures economy, opportunity, simplicity, effectiveness and wise guidance.

3. IT IS CO-OPERATIVE. This makes a strong appeal to the young men and young women. They speak enthusiastically of this movement as one that is continent-wide. They are inspired by the thought that it is to play a large part in the conversion of the world. One of the chief factors in the success of the federation is the passion to enlist the followers of Christ in a co-operative, definite effort to win the last man, woman and child to the Master.

4. IT IS MISSIONARY. Although many of the classes have but recently been organized, they are taking a definite and a large part in the Christian conquest of the world. It is not unusual to find classes supporting special missionary enterprises in addition to contributing liberally to the general missionary work of their churches.

5. IT IS A FORCE FOR CIVIC RIGHT-EOUSNESS. Everywhere it is materially aiding and strengthening the forces of law and order. In several places it has taken the lead in defeating or decreasing the power of the liquor traffic, and these are but indications of what may be expected when the men and women of our continent have been won to Christ and enlisted, around the Bible, in co-operative Christian enterprises.

6. IT IS EVANGELISTIC. These classes are studying and teaching the scriptures that they may find Christ. As they reveal the Master in their lives, their fellowship, and their service they are growing in membership and power. The work done by the Devotional Committees, the Secret Service Bands, and the Personal Workers' Leagues is winning large numbers to the Savior. Thus it is that the Bible classes are becoming leaders in personal evangelism, and we have the promise, present and sure, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto myself."

As these characteristics are secured and magnified the movement will possess strength, purpose, and power, and will continue to "increase in favor with God and man." If it should lose these, it will weaken and fail in the work it has been raised up of God to perform.

Practical Suggestions for Christian Endeavorers

IN TWELVES

Dr. J. Campbell White and the Men's Church League are urging that the men of the church organize themselves in twelves to get things done in their churches and communities for the more rapid promotion of the kingdom of God. The idea is that most of our organizations are too big, and that the small group close together will do far more than the large company, where responsibility is so easily shifted.

Twelve—because our Lord chose twelve disciples.

It is the Christian Endeavor idea all over again—and they advocate a pledge, too. It is a new emphasis on the Christian Endeavor principle that only those should be admitted to the society that really mean business, in opposition to the idea that a young people's society should take in all the young people of a congregation.

That "inclusive" society may take in every boy and girl of the community; but it shuts out one very important member, whose name is Good Work. A. R. W.

WIN PRISONERS TO CHRIST

By Howard G. Launsbach, Citizenship Superintendent of the New York State Christian Endeavor Union

Endeavor to win the men and women behind prison bars for Jesus Christ! Just that!

The Endeavorers of Brooklyn are assisting the Brooklyn Federation of Churches in conducting Sunday morning religious services in Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn, a city prison. A society is responsible for part of the programme every Sunday morning. A young man Endeavorer gives a five-minute "straight from the shoulder and heart" talk, the other Endeavorers sing. Dr. Frederick M. Gordon of the Federation has expressed to me his great appreciation of the assistance rendered by the Endeavorers.

Societies the country over might do this thing!

Brooklyn, New York.

FOR YOUR NEXT SOCIAL

Miss Rosalie Carter, Franklin, Tennessee, recently had a cake-cutter made in the shape of the Christian Endeavor monogram, and at banquets the cakes are delightful advertisements of Christian Endeavor.

ONLY FOUR COMMITTEES

By Mrs. Paul Boyer, Junior Superintendent of the Indiana Christian Endeavor Union

I have found it very helpful to have only four committees, namely, missionary, social, lookout, and sunshine, in the Junior society, with eight children on a committee, and an adult worker over each committee. One committee has charge of each Sunday programme, thus leaving the general superintendent free to suggest to all four committees and supervise all phases of the work. The superintendent and all four adult leaders should be present at each Sunday's meeting.

MEMBERSHIP CONTEST PRIZES

For Lookout Committees

Two prizes are offered by the Market

Square Intermediate society of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, as rewards in a membership contest. The one prize is for a girl, the other for a boy. To the girl that brings in the greatest number of members within a given time the society offers a twenty-four piece ivory manicure set; and to the boy that brings in the largest number a leather key-folder and the case is offered.

THE WAY TO THE BEST

A strong and very attractive pamphlet on stewardship entitled "The Way to the Best" has been written by Rev. Robert P. Anderson, editorial secretary of the United Society, and published by the United Society for the United Stewardship Council of Churches. The pamphlet has sixty-four pages, and is divided into five chapters, the first dealing with the general subject of stewardship, and the remaining chapters considering the stewardship of life, of ability, of time, and of money. All Christian Endeavorers know how pointed and stimulating is Mr. Anderson's writing, and how practically helpful it is. Each of these chapters is followed by a large number of questions. The pamphlet is admirably adapted to class use, and fits in well with the Tenth Legion enrollment of the United Society. We hope that many classes in this text-book will be formed, and formed at once. The price is 25 cents a copy.—From C. E. World.

JUNIOR ENDEAVOR

By Virginia Haun

Making Our Tongues Helpful Proverbs 15:1-4

"I would rather that mother would switch me than scold me," said Katie.

"That's funny," said Emma. "Do you mean that your mother can hurt you more with her tongue than she can with a switch? My mother doesn't switch me and she doesn't scold me very often, but I don't want her to ever try to hurt me to make me be good."

Katie looked Emma over very carefully and then told her, "You must be awfully good if your mother never has to punish you. But let me tell you, it hurts me a whole lot more for mother to tell me how bad I have been than for her to punish me any other way. Her tongue really hurts worse than a switch."

As these two little girls walked along the street, discussing the tongue, they did not realize that they could have looked in the Bible and found verses that fitted in with what they were saying. In one place the Bible says, "The tongue is a little member and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth!" This means that the tongue is little but it can do big things just like big fierce fires grow out of the flame from one little match.

As Emma and Katie walked along they came to one of the public playgrounds. They went in and hunted a see-saw that just suited them and started playing. As they played they talked and because they used their tongues to say kind things to each other and not to fuss at each other, they became very good chums as the time passed by.

There were other children on the playground that day. Emma and Katie noticed that some of the older children were being unkind to a very little boy who wanted to play with them.

"I wonder who that little boy over there can be. He seems to be smaller than any of the other children." After Katie had said this the two girls went over to the place where there was a group of children.

As the two girls approached the other children, they heard one of the bigger boys saying:

"You're a big baby, you are. You are afraid to play with us. We might hurt you."

Then another one said, "We won't bring you along the next time we come to play. We will leave you at home so that mother can take care of you. Babies should always be left at home."

The small boy was almost ready to cry and he left the crowd for fear that they would see him cry, and laugh at him for that.

Katie and Emma went to the child, took his hand and led him over to a bench. Then they began talking to him. They did not make a fuss over him for they knew that he would be ashamed of it if they did.

Emma said, "We can not all be big at once and sometimes those who are bigger than we are play games that are too hard for us to play."

"Big brothers and sisters really love their little brothers, I guess," said Katie, "but it hurts us terribly when they forget to show it."

Soon the boy told them all of his troubles. When he played the same games that the other children played, he nearly always fell down. Then the others made fun of him because he felt bad.

The two little girls talked to him and made him feel better. When the rest of the children started for home the small boy was ready to join them.

Emma and Katie liked the boy so well that they promised to come back and play with him sometimes in the park. The girls both went to their homes happy, just because they had used their tongues to help another child.

Our tongues can be very helpful members of our bodies.

Home Missions

The Thanksgiving Offering

We are well pleased with the contributions for our National Home Mission work, coming from the churches, Sunday schools, auxiliary organizations and individuals. Many have not sent their offering yet. Some may not have found it convenient to set a Sunday to receive the offering at Thanksgiving time. We would advise that the date be not postponed too long, else it will interfere with other special offerings. Time can be given for payment of pledges up to July 1st, 1927. A goodly number have sent an offering for our new CHURCH ERECTION FUND, but we should have more real Brethren people interested in creating this fund which is to be loaned for the building of churches.

Mission Churches

Late news from Fort Wayne, Indiana, shows that this new mission church is making splendid progress. Several fine Brethren people have moved into the city recently and have affiliated themselves with the new organization. Brethren and Sisters all over our brotherhood, should consider the church matter more seriously when relocating, and if possible, make their homes where there is a Brethren church. If this is impossible, do your best to keep the Brethren spirit alive until a church of your faith can be erected in your city.

We also have good news from our Columbus mission. Brother Gotschall, the new pastor, is making a good beginning. We have heard several people remark that there is a fine spirit of enthusiasm and willingness to build up the work. A number have already been added to the church and the Bible school is growing. Your Home Mission Secretary has been invited to visit them soon, and we shall try to do so ere long, and if possible encourage them to still greater activities.

 Home Mission Secretary.

Does South America Need Missionaries?

By Rev. Thomas E. Barber, Medellin, Colombia

Some people, not familiar with the facts, think of South America as already Christian, so that there is little or no need for Evangelical missionary work in these republics.

It is very true that not all South Americans are ignorant and pagan. On the contrary many in the beautiful and attractive, modern cities, and in rural regions, are equal in culture, breadth of knowledge, and progressive ideas, to those in similar occupations in any land. They take important part in international counsels and are gaining world recognition as leaders of modern thought and progress. But this is also true of modern India, Japan, China and other countries that are generally recognized as proper mission territory.

Does South America then need missionaries? We must remember that most of the great Indian population is still as pagan as when the Spaiards first landed there. They are neglected and ignorant. They need missionaries. They are able to learn and the lives of many are transformed as truly by the Gospel as is the case among other peoples. Parents long to have their children have an opportunity to learn. These poor, unlettered Indians sometimes stand before a missionary with sad faces and show their children, earnestly asking that a teacher be sent to them. During past centuries little has been done either by the Roman Catholic church or the State for them, and nothing adequate is being done for them now.

Many leading citizens of South America who are Roman Catholics, and even priests in good standing in this same church, recognize this need for evangelical missionaries.

One day an ex-president of Colombia said to me: "A great part of our people are only half civilized and they are afraid of the Protestants and persecute them because they do not know them and their teachings.

They are ignorant and superstitious and know no better. The missionaries need to come more in contact with the people, especially in the smaller towns, and when the people know them and their teachings about Christ and the Bible, then they will lose their fanaticism and respect the Protestants."

A prominent business man made the following statement: "We need you Protestants and your work. You teach the Bible and our priests do not. Our priests are so ignorant that they do not know the Bible."

A prominent lawyer on being approached by the missionary about some business matters said: "I shall gladly render to you any service I can without charge because you missionaries are doing something to help our country. You strive to educate and uplift whereas our priests tyrannize and keep the people in ignorance."

A young Colombian recently graduated from an institution in the United States said: "Mr. Barber, when you tell me of the persecutions you missionaries suffer, and the conditions among these mountains it makes me think of the missionaries I used to hear tell of their work in India and China and the conditions there when I was a student in the United States."

We might add thousands of testimonies of the parents from all walks of life who send their children to Evangelical schools. The poor in the multitude of towns say: "Come to us; send us ministers and teachers to help us."

Such requests are too numerous to be counted, and come to us frequently. Our first missionaries went to the cities of Bogota and Barranquilla, because of urgent appeals made to the Mission Board by prominent citizens.

The majority of Catholic priests in these South American republics are not openly opposed to Protestantism, but they bitterly oppose the open Bible. Every year there are numerous examples of persecutions toward both the nationals and the missionaries. I have been arrested twice this year for selling the Bible, the charge being that the Bible is an immoral book. In one case the mayor of the town refused to take the responsibility to decide against the priest who had brought the charges, and appealed to the governor of the state who at once replied declaring the Bible to be a good book. There was no attempt on the part of officials to inflict punishment in these instances but jails and prisons have often opened their doors to receive Evangelicals whom the priests accused only of selling the sacred Scriptures to the people. Bibles have often been confiscated and burned, even as late as 1925.

One priest, who has been for several years friendly toward me and who is a graduate of the Catholic Seminary of Medellin, perhaps the best in Colombia, told me that they had taught him only a little of their philosophy, a little of their theology, and hatred toward all other beliefs. Today they are teaching the same. He said that when he was graduated he was a poor, innocent young man who knew nothing. He had tried for over forty years to preach the Gospel during all that time he had never read the Gospel. The first time he ever read the Bible was when he purchased a copy from one of our colporteurs. It seemed so good that he purchased four more and gave them to other priests.

An ex-priest, Roldan, left the Roman Catholic church in the year 1922, and united with the Evangelical church at Dabeiba in the year 1923. Later he gave up a position with a comfortable income in order to establish a school in a mountain region where there were no means whereby the children might receive an education. Last January the bishop of that diocese sent one of his most prominent priests with a letter signed by the bishop and more than thirty priests beseeching Roldan to return to the "mother church." On arriving at the house the messenger said: "Father Roldan, the bishop has sent me to take you back to the church."

Roldan replied: "That is impossible, but come in and we will talk about it." When the man entered the house Roldan said to him: "What does the Second Commandment say?" The priest pulled from his pocket a New Testament which he had borrowed in Dabeiba and began turning its leaves. Roldan said: "What are you looking for?" "Looking for the Ten Commandments," was the reply. "Man," said Roldan, "You are just as ignorant as I was before I left the Church of Rome!" The following day Roldan met two other priests of Dabeiba and all showed the same lack of knowledge.

The spirit of intolerance toward Evangelicals was shown last February when I was visiting a number of preaching places of the Medellin station in company with the national minister of the Medellin church. As we were nearing the town of Segovia and while descending into a narrow valley two men and seven or eight young women of the poorer class began shouting, "Here come the Protestants! The devils are here." At the same moment we noticed a priest coming at full gallop towards us and shouting: "Down with the Protestants! Down with the heretics, the followers of Luther. Hurrah for the Pope and the holy Virgin!"

We waited for this priest to arrive and then greeted him cordially, allowing him and his followers to take the lead. On arriving at the town the priest called out to the people on both sides of the street: "Here are the wolves! Look at the wolves! Beware of the wolves!" At the public square he shouted: "May they give you nothing to eat, for yourselves or your horses." The people already knowing us, became indignant over his behavior, and our meetings were larger than ever. What would have been the result if the town had been fanatical like so many of the townspeople?

Among the more enlightened priests many respect the Evangelicals and are very friendly. Righteous lives and enlightenment are winning the admiration and love of those who were formerly enemies; so that now they are not only friendly, but have become helpers.

Missionaries are urgently needed in South America. We must take into consideration the vast untouched areas, as pagan today as when the first white man set foot on these western continents. There are vast regions over which the Roman Catholic church has had complete sway for more than four centuries, that today report appalling statistics of illiteracy, illegitimacy and poverty. Ought not Christians in the more fortunate lands count it all joy to have the blessed privilege of lending a helping hand to them and to rise up and take the message of Christ's Truth and Freedom to them?

South America needs Evangelical missionaries, because South America needs to know and to obey the Word of God.—Missionary Review of the World.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

NEWS ITEMS FROM ASHLAND

I eagerly scan the pages of the Evangelist every week for the News from the churches or from the workers in the church. I must confess that for altogether too long a time I have been quite disappointed in this feature of our Evangelist. I have wondered how the Editor feels about it when no one has furnished him with a line. Then I have felt a bit incensed over what I thought of as the indifference and neglect of a hundred men and women whom I could name from any one of whom I had a right to expect a word now and then. After my review of all and sundry reasons why our paper was so barren of real and interesting Church News I concluded that only two reasons could be legitimately given. First, that there is nothing worth reporting being done in the churches—that is, in 99 percent of them, and so we have no Church News. But is this true? I think not. The second reason is, THAT NO ONE REPORTS THE NEWS. Is this true? Yes. And so perhaps I am guilty with others. At any rate I have made up my mind that this once some space would be filled with a report from Ashland and elsewhere so far as I could bring it to pass. It is now up to the Editor. Really, if we want a live and interesting section of "News from the Field" in the Evangelist it must come from several hundred writers.

There is one other word I would like to add while we are thinking on this point. I have heard some complaints as I have been out in the churches on this very matter. It is impossible for any Editor to print any NEWS ITEMS FROM THE CHURCHES unless some one reports the same. From my observations this is the very matter that is always looked for and read first. Why not have a REVIVAL among the pastors and church correspondents and make the heart of the people glad by the News we supply? You say you have nothing worth reporting? Any happening in your church is News to all the readers. What we are interested in is the multitudinous activity of the churches and the workers in the churches. There is little apology for a CHURCH PAPER that has lost its power to function through the neglect and indifference of the very people for whom it is intended. THE BLAME RESTS UPON FOLKS WHO LIKE MYSELF HAVE DONE NOTHING to make a paper.

Ashland

Ashland church and her constituency is always active. Since we are in our beautiful and restful new church we have enjoyed it to the full. The old College Chapel holds many dear memories to those who worshipped there for thirty or forty years. But the church with its almost perfect appointments for uplifting and inspiring worship is indeed a blessing.

Our quarterly business meeting passed pleasantly and the reports were gratifying. Dr. Charles A. Bame remains in the pastorate for the year with the same privilege as before of giving three months of evangelistic work in the church. Prof. J. A. Garber is the Moderator for the year and under his careful and efficient leadership in the business affairs we shall be able to meet our heavy responsibilities. Joseph Stookey is the general superintendent of the Sunday school.

Recently Dr. Bame preached for two weeks in an evangelistic effort. The sermons were thoughtful and effectively delivered. Our difficulty was found to be just what others find it, how to bring the unconverted under the influence of the preaching of the Gospel. We had splendid congregations and on Sundays and especially Sunday evenings the crowds were very large. Under the well thought-out plans of an evangelistic committee and by the assistance of many volunteer workers a survey of a large part of the city was made. Many families were found unattached to any church and our more immediate field of service was delineated. This seems to be the method which churches must adopt. Personal and house-to-house evangelism is proving a partial solution at least to the failure to bring people to a revival.

During the meeting Miss Evelyn Coons rendered special numbers on the harp in a most pleasing and spiritually uplifting service each evening for eight days. The music was under the direction of Mr. Lawrence B. Fritz of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. Brother Fritz is our choir director and is giving time and talent unstintingly. His services are greatly appreciated. Miss Dorcas Bame was the soloist for the meeting, and her singing was impressive and highly appreciated. The immediate results of the meeting were six additions to the church. At our quarterly meeting the pastor reported thirty-one accessions for the year. So we have been making some progress since we are in the new church.

Recently the capacity of our church was fully put to the test. Upon several Sunday evenings during our meeting we had very large congregations. But on December 12 the choir, under the leadership of Mr. Lawrence Fritz, rendered a Christmas Cantata and the church was taxed to the limit to seat the people who came. A week later the Sunday school under the direction of Mrs. Lorin Black and assistants gave a very fine Christmas pantomime in which the whole story of the Christ-child was wonderfully portrayed. Again we had a house full of deeply interested people. Our church, by the way, seats six or seven hundred.

But this contribution is already too long and so I must close. Let us make the New Year worth while in the service we render in the name of our Lord and Master.

J. ALLEN MILLER.

FALLS CITY, NEBRASKA

Christmas activities are over for the year 1926, and we are face to face with the New Year. Serious mindedness always questions what will the year bring forth? How gracious God is to conceal from us the oncoming events of life. But we do know that he wants us to keep busy with the affairs of the Kingdom, watching and praying. This will keep us ready for the unexpected and the consummation of the age.

The routine has continued in the usual tenor since last reporting. When last reporting we were preparing for our Christmas exercises which since have been executed. We used the Pageant, "The Shepherd Boy's Vision." The cast required about fifty characters beside the special chorus. The larger number required for the rendition meant real work in training, but the effort was rewarded by an exceptionally well rendition of the same. This repaid the pastor for the special effort in directing. Our church was filled to capacity and the large audience was well pleased with the production. The choir was augmented by an orchestra which greatly added to the effectiveness of the program. The Pageant was followed by the usual "White Gift" offering; the full amount has not yet been reported to the writer but we are certain it is up to our standard.

The Thanksgiving Offering was taken at the usual time but to date has not been fully reported. We trust that the church will maintain her generous contribution to the urgent need, when all is reported.

The congregation has permitted the pastor the privilege of holding two evangelistic meetings during the year and unexpectedly a call came from Mulvane, the result of which has been already reported through the Evangelist columns. The congregation at Bethel, close to Mulvane, are a live bunch of workers. They maintain a live Sunday school all the year and a working Christian Endeavor. This speaks favorably for them as in some of our larger churches Christian Endeavor goes begging. Our work with Pastor Anderson and the brethren at Bethel was most pleasant. Brother Anderson did not save the gas and so "Mr. Henry" took us gleefully to the various homes where we were cordially received. As reported there were but three accessions; but they were valuable ones and the field must always be taken into consideration when judging success of an evangelistic campaign. The young people are in the church with very few exceptions. So the field lies in those young married people who for some reason were not reached earlier. Every church worker knows the difficulty of reaching people of that age. We prayed with and talked to such but the will was still unwilling to yield to the Spirit's wooing. Several young wives expressed their willingness to come, but they were unwilling to come without the husbands. May the Spirit still strive that these too may become willing to let God into their lives and save their precious souls. The meeting as reported was a spiritual feast not to pastor and people alone, but also to the evangelist. Brother Anderson is shepherding the flock in a commendable manner. May God continue to bless and uplift this people and pastor. The courtesy extended us in the homes shall always remain a sweet memory. Our home was with Brother and Sister George Wygal and it was a real home. The evangelist simply enjoyed the comforts of their hospitality as he desired with no need of restraint. This must be added, we had a choir of from twenty-five to thirty voices of YOUNG PEOPLE for the most part, and let me whisper, these folk can sing if you permit the numble judgment of the writer.

The next report will be the pastor's closing one from this congregation and the Midwest for the present. As has been stated already, we close our work here about February first and go to the First Brethren church of Los Angeles, California. Let us ask a continued interest in your prayers in these experiences facing us.

A. B. COVER.

BETTER BUSINESS

I am not thinking of market reports, or of foreign trade, but of John Hay's significant use of the phrase. He said: "To take a child by the hand and conduct him to his own is better business for men and angels than swinging censors and loafing around the throne." So speaks the statesman concerning human values. And remembering the estimate which Jesus put upon childhood, I believe he would unreservedly agree. "Of such is the Kingdom," he said. And, at another time, he declared that it were better for a man to be sunk with a millstone about his neck than to cause one of the "little ones" to go astray. To such code is the church committed, in so far as it may describe itself as Christian. But we have scarcely lived up to our code. Praising childhood, we yet depreciate it in the program of activities. We are prone to measure Kingdom progress in adults, rather than in child units. Of a successful evangelism we record, perhaps, "a hundred accessions to the church, mostly adults." Whereas "better business"—the best business—must be reckoned in terms of "conducting children to their own"—to the Father's way and house.—Selected.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

Of Elder and Mrs. B. H. Flora

ELDER B. H. FLORA

MRS. B. H. FLORA

Elder Benjamin H. Flora and Sarah Trent were united in marriage at Flora, Indiana, in Centennial year, December 24, 1876. Later they attended Ashland College together in 1888. He gives us the following regarding his ministerial labors:

"We began agitation of the 'progressive cause' in the 'Old Church' five years before the organization of the Brethren church at Flora. We were alone in that fight, but when we go to Flora and see the fine new church there and the beautiful Brethren Home, we feel well repaid for the struggle.

"Following that I organized the churches at Cerro Gordo, Illinois; Clay City, Indiana; and Dutchtown, Indiana. I served the following churches as pastor: North Manchester, Indiana, five years; Nappanee, Indiana, seven years; Chicago, Illinois, six years. Also for a short time served the churches at Akron, Indiana; Gravelton, Milford, Edna Mills, Ardmore, Cambria and Darwin, all of Indiana. I am now serving as pastor of New Paris for the third year and preaching at Dutchtown on alternate Sundays. Besides I preached the Gospel in Canada for seven years.

"I served the churches of Indiana two years as district evangelist, visiting all the churches and preaching at mission points and for pastorless churches."

We take pleasure in presenting the likenesses of Brother and Sister Flora and these statements concerning them, and express in behalf of the Evangelist family hearty congratulations and wish them many years of happiness and service yet together.—THE EDITOR.

OUR GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

To our many friends and brethren, who so kindly remembered us with presents and greetings, we wish to take this method of thanking you one and all for your kindness. To those who have not heard of the happy event we wish to say that we are happy on this, our fiftieth anniversary.

The church and our friends at New Paris rendered a very beautiful program at the church on Christmas eve in our honor. The church was beautifully decorated with an arch of golden bells. All available space was taken. The service was opened by the Smoker orchestra playing "When They Ring the Golden Bells for You and Me." "When my Golden Hair has Turned to Silver Grey" was sung by Mrs. Everett Miller. "Smilin' Through" was sung by Chester Smoker. "I Love You Truly" was sung by Max Smoker accompanied by saxophone and trombone. "Silver Threads Among the Gold" was sung by Father John Smoker. Lohengrin's Bridal March was played.

Six little girls (among them Catherine Jobson, two and one-half years old, whose parents are missionaries in Africa) preceded the bridal couple, strewing flowers. They were followed by six little boys. The first presented the bride with a basket of flowers. The other five each in turn presented the bridegroom with a tray containing a ten-dollar gold coin. After congratulations by all present, a beautiful Christmas program was rendered.

Some one said at the conclusion of the service, "What will you do at your next golden anniversary?" I replied, "When life is over we will wait for each other at the Golden Gate, accept from the angels our golden slippers and white robes, walk up the gold paved streets to the great White Throne, receive our golden crowns from the wounded hands of Jesus, walk down the golden pavement to the river of life, and wander about and sing of all the golden splendor of the mansions that Jesus prepared for us in our Father's house."

B. H. FLORA.

CALLING BACK

This is Christmas once more—good old Christmas day. I would be ungrateful if I did not in some way express my appreciation of the many Christmas cards received from all over the country, bringing good cheer and best wishes to Mrs. Rensch and myself for the coming year.

I wish I might be able to reply to all these fine things said to us, but there are too many. Faithful old Johnstown, Goshen, South Bend, North Liberty, New Paris, Nappanee, North Manchester, Peru, Florida, Princeton, New Jersey, Chicago, Shipshewana, and a few others whose addresses could not be made out, we thank you for calling back. The many presents received (including a year's subscription to the Atlantic Monthly) makes one feel that he has not lived in vain.

"If you have gone a little way ahead of me, call back—
"Twill cheer my heart and help my feet along the stony track;
And if, perchance, Faith's light is dim, because the oil is low,
Your call will guide my lagging course as wearily I go.

Call back, and tell me that he went with you into the storm;
Call back, and say he kept you when the forest's roots were torn;
That when the heavens thundered and the earthquake shook the hill,
He bore you up and held you where the very air was still.

Oh, friend, call back, and tell me, for I can not see your face;
They say it glows with triumph, and your feet bound in the race;
But there are mists between us and my spirit eyes are dim,
And I can not see the glory, though I long for word of Him.

But if you will say he heard you when your prayer was but a cry,
And if you say he saw you through the night's sin-darkened sky—
If you have gone a little way ahead, oh, friend, call back—
"Twill cheer my heart and help my feet along the stony track."

Again I say, thank you, friends' for "calling back." I can only answer, "I'm coming."
G. W. RENCH,
Shipshewana, Indiana, Dec. 25, 1926.

WHY ADVERTISE THE CHURCH?

The October "Expositor" prints the address of H. V. Jamison, advertising manager, American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, delivered before the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, the Church Department, on advertising the church.

Here a practical man is speaking, and in practical language he states his reasons for believing the church may be advertised and ought to be.

Here are his reasons:

"Because it has in it and about it great and eternal values and advantages that this old world direly needs.

"It offers a source of spiritual comfort and activity to all people.

"It has a message of help and inspiration for the community.

"It possesses a remarkable ability to uplift human life and inspire new ideals.

"It is of inestimable service to the young, as well as old.

"It affords social features and friendships that are invaluable.

"It offers wide opportunity for philanthropic and relief endeavors.

"It is wonderfully efficient.

"The blatant complaint that the church is decadent is veritable chatter, which comes only from the unthinking. When properly used and supported, the church is about the most efficient and capable organization extant. It possesses practically unlimited features and abilities that merit continuous and wide exploitation and public presentation."

Let the detractor of the church come forward and show that any of those statements are contrary to facts. Much more might the church have been and done for humankind, but these things it has to its credit and that's why it may be advertised without hesitancy whether on paper or by those who are not ashamed to do it honor by word of mouth and walk of life.

And let it not be forgotten that its best "ad" is the walking kind, the man who because of its influence in his life, walks blamelessly before God and men.

THE SIGN OF THE DOLLAR

I yield to no one in my devotion to these United States. Yet I tremble at the material standard we have allowed to be set up here. We follow the dollar sign rather than the cross of Jesus. Unless we rise above this travail of money getting, unless we realize the true sublimity of spiritual service, we are doomed just as surely as those nations of the past now standing stark and ugly in their ruins. They died because they had no right to live. Let us so lift the standard of the cross that the standard they followed may be lowered to its proper place.—Right Rev. Thomas Campbell Darst, Episcopal Bishop of East Carolina.

The Bible walks the ways of all the world with familiar feet and enters land after land to find its own everywhere.—Henry Van Dyke.

IN THE SHADOW

DIVELY—Mrs. Margaret Musser Dively, wife of Albert Dively, of Berlin, Pennsylvania, passed to her reward November 19, 1926, at the age of 68 years, 2 months and 22 days. At an early age she united with the Brethren church. Sister Dively lived a beautiful Christian life. She found pleasure in ministering to others, and was always faithful to the church. She filled, from time to time, various offices in the church auxiliaries and was, at the time of her decease, Cradle Roll Superintendent. Her love for the truth and faithfulness in service will be honored by the Lord in the day of rewards. She is survived by her husband, five step-sons, two sisters and a host of friends. Funeral services were conducted by the writer assisted by the pastors of the local Reformed and Lutheran churches. Her's was the first funeral in the new church, and was attended by a large audience. This attendance, with the beautiful floral contributions and the kind words spoken, attest the esteem in which she was held.

W. C. BENSHOFF.

SAYLOR—Elmer C. Saylor of Warsaw, Indiana, was called very suddenly to be with his Lord, on December 24, 1926, at the age of 34 years. Brother Saylor was a carpenter by trade and was employed by the Rickel Contracting Company of Warsaw. When the fatal accident occurred he was employed in the building of a church at Atwood, Indiana. He was changing a brace, lost his balance and fell through a window to the ground, death coming instantly.

In 1919 he was married to Joyce Kanauer to which union was born one daughter, Sybil. In his going he leaves his companion, one daughter, father, mother, four sisters and three brothers. These, with a host of other friends and relatives, together with the order of which he was a member, the community and the church seem to have suffered an irreparable loss. In the church he was honored many times by being called to places of trust and responsibility. He was loyal and faithful to every activity of the church, and was happy in the joys and experiences of the Christian life. Brother Saylor was a member of the Warsaw Brethren church since 1923, having been baptized by Elder M. J. Snyder. Certainly a great and good man has gone from us, whose life and virtues we shall ever cherish. May God in his infinite mercy tenderly care for, and sustain the bereft companion and little daughter.

Peace to his ashes until the dead in Christ shall come forth in the morning of that first, glorious resurrection. Funeral services held in the Brethren church in Warsaw on December 26, in charge of the pastor, assisted by Elder A. T. Ronk, in the presence of a mighty throng of sorrowing, sympathizing friends.
C. C. GRUSSO.

LOVE—Donald Wayne Love, son of Oscar J. and Leria Love, was born in Thorn Township, Perry County, Ohio, on July 3rd 1905. He died on November 2nd, 1926, aged 21 years, 3 months and 29 days. His father, mother, brother and sister preceded him in death in the year of 1911. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Mary Swartz of Newark, Ohio, and his grandmother, Mrs. Emma Love Long, Ashland, Ohio, a member of our church, with whom for some years he made his home and under whose influence he united with the Ashland Brethren church, when he was seventeen years old. He met his death driving a car from New York to Chicago for a wealthy man whose employee he was, trusted and respected. He was found under his car, dead, near Buffalo, New York. Funeral by the undersigned.
CHARLES A. BAME.

AUSTIN—Amos K. Austin was born in Richland County, Illinois, July 10th, 1845, died in Ashland, Ohio, November 21st, 1926, aged 81 years, 4 months, 11 days. He was married to Mary Katherine Grimes and to this union was born three children: Mary, who died February 13, 1912; Charles Peter of Grant, Michigan; and Myer of Ashland, Ohio, with whom he has lived for many years. His granddaughter, Francis is a member of our church. His wife preceded him to the spirit world July 2nd, 1926 and he is survived by his two sons, six grandchildren, and one great grandchild.

A merciful God was kind to him in that his final illness was of short duration. He passed to the beyond without having made a formal confession of faith, yet he was heard trying to sing "Nearer My God to Thee," on the last day of his life. Let us believe that he is in the hands of a just and merciful God who doeth all things well; live to promote the good that was in him and cover his faults and failures. Sermon from Proverbs 7:19 by CHARLES A. BAME.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

The Strange Bedfellow

By Hilda Richmond

In the night Dana had a bad dream. He dreamed that he was sleeping with an iceberg and that he shivered and shook as his feet touched the cold wet ice. He did not wake but only snuggled down closer under the warm bedclothes and tried to sneak away from the iceberg, but it seemed to keep coming closer and closer. Then he fell sound asleep again and did not wake until the sun shone in his window bright and clear.

"Why—What—Who are you?" he said as he saw a bundle of gray clothes with a dark head sticking out of the bundle. "How did you get here?"

"I don't know," said a little voice from the bundle. "Who are you?"

"I'm Dana Blake, and I went to bed alone last night. In the night I had a bad dream and thought an iceberg was sleeping with me."

"I'm Richard Limes and I live in the big house down the street—the home where boys and girls live who have no fathers and mothers," said the stranger. "I don't know how I came to be here."

"I'm going to get up and dress and ask Mamma all about it," said Dana climbing out of bed.

"I'd get up too, but I don't see my clothes," said Richard.

"Come on! You can have some of mine. I'll put on my old shoes and you can have my new ones."

So they ran down stairs and found Mrs. Blake just coming in the door, looking tired and sad. "O, children, the big home for orphan children was damaged by fire last night, and we've all been working hard so that no one would be chilled and fall ill. Papa brought this little boy home all cold with his feet wet from pattering in the water and tucked him in with you, Dana. The other orphans are scattered all around the neighborhood. Nobody was injured, but it will be a long time before the big building is ready to move into again," she said.

"I don't care how long it is," said Dana.

"I have a boy to play with now. Mamma, do we have to eat breakfast? I want to show him all my playthings and Spot and the rabbits and everything."

"I don't care, either," said Richard. "I like this house and this suit and everything. I'd like to live here always."

But when daylight came and the workers examined the big house, looking sullen and dark from the smoke, it was found that the people had been more frightened in the night than necessary. There was a great deal of cleaning to be done and new bedding and furniture bought, but with painting and some repairs the Home would be ready in six weeks at the most. Everybody helped and before long it began to look as if the fire had been rather a good thing, as the old things could be thrown away and new paint and repairs helped the building greatly.

"Mamma, you're not going to let Richard leave me, are you?" said Dana one day when Richard had gone over to the Home in company with some of the other children to see the new schoolroom. "He doesn't want to go, and I don't want him to. It's the nicest thing in the world to have a bed-fellow and we have such good times in the play room. Mrs. Smith has four boys and it seems to me we might have two."

Dana saw something bright in his mother's eyes, and presently a little wet spot was on his cheek as she held him close to her. "Are you sure you can share everything with Richard—take him for your very own brother?" she asked in a voice that trembled a little.

"Why, Mamma, I've done that already," said the little boy. "I'll give him more than half if you'll let him stay."

A little later Richard came soberly up the front walk. "What do you think Miss Helen told us?" he said. "There are six boys and girls who will not come back to the Home at all. They are going to stay in the very homes where folks carried them the night of the fire."

"Not six, but seven," said Dana, unable to keep still any longer. "O, Richard, you're going to be my bedfellow for always. I'm so glad."

STAINS

One day Ruth came home from school with three stains on her pretty white dress. When mother saw them, she said: "You may get them out yourself. I'll tell you how."

So Ruth rubbed the cocoa stain in cold water. That disappeared. Then she poured boiling water through the strawberry stain. The red turned to pink, then faded away. The ink stain was hardest of all. Mother gave her something in a bottle that banished the ugly black. Some drops from another bottle kept the acid from eating the cloth.

It is easy to take stains out of cloth, but do you know how to take stains out of thoughts?

There is a quarrel stain. Your playmate does something that you do not like. Soon there is an ugly brown stain on your friendship. You can make it disappear by pouring on the water of remembrance. Think of all the fun you have had together and of all the kind things which your playmate has done. Away will go the quarrel stain.

Some stains are very hard to get out if you let them get old. There is the bad word stain. It is hard to get that out if you keep thinking about the words or even repeating them. Take them out at once. Make yourself think of the last Sabbath's Golden Text or your favorite stories whenever words want to say themselves over.

Whenever you make a thought stain, see if you can remove it as quickly as the boiling water faded the strawberry stain.—Dew Drops.

STARTING RIGHT

This is the beginning of a new year. This is the first number of the Evangelist for 1927. What shall be the fruit of the year for the Evangelist family? Shall we make a number of resolutions we have no expectation of fulfilling? Don't do it. Don't waste time on meaningless resolutions, so long as there is something better that can be done. Resolutions are all right, so long as there is nothing better that can be done; but I am convinced there is something MUCH better than making resolutions.

Do you ask what it is? It is not at all difficult to answer. It is not my purpose to write an editorial, we have an editor for that, nor to preach a sermon, we have many preachers to do that; but I do want to suggest that the thing that is better than a good resolution is good action. The Bible tells of a young man that said to his father "he would", but he didn't, and of another young man who said "he wouldn't", but he did. Now, we don't care whether you say "I will, or I won't," so long as you act.

The action we are soliciting is that of RENEWING your subscription to the Evangelist. We presume there are nearly TWO THOUSAND subscriptions that should be renewed RIGHT NOW. Why should you wait until you receive a personal notice of expiration from us before you renew? If your subscription is past due or if it will soon be due, why not start the new year with a prompt renewal? It will save us a lot of extra work for which we have insufficient help, and it will give us more time to devote to other equally important matters. Moreover it will make you feel better we are sure.

Immediate Attention

Some time ago we received a request from a good brother to change the post office address of his Evangelist, and added to his request were these words: "I don't think I will miss a single number of the paper, if you give this your 'immediate attention.'" Now that would be very nice indeed, if we could give all requests for change of address immediate attention, but any one who is acquainted with the system of caring for the mailing list of a publication will understand that it is extremely difficult to do so without greatly increasing the labor and expense of operation. In fact it is impossible to do so without engaging more office help. But we feel sure it would work no hardship on our readers, if about two thousand of them would give immediate attention to the matter of renewing their subscription to the Evangelist, and it certainly would be an accommodation to the Publishing Company.

Our Sunday Schools

Most of our Sunday schools seem to be keeping up in attendance through the cold winter months, according to the orders received for supplies for the first three months of the year. We were very much crowded with our work immediately preceding Christmas, but we are glad to announce that every order for Sunday school quarterlies that was received before Christmas was filled and the supplies mailed before Christmas day. The Primary Bible Stories and The Educator were not quite ready for mailing at that time, but they all went out before the beginning of the new year, and we trust no great inconvenience was experienced by any of our schools. We are now getting started on the publications for the next quarter and we expect to get everything completed unusually early this quarter.

LAST BUT NOT LEAST

Frequently the most important statement in a letter is contained in the postscript.

We are not planning any postscript for this corner, but we do want to remind all our readers that Sunday, January twenty-third, is PUBLICATION DAY. There may be a few new readers of the paper who do not know just what Publication Day in the Brethren church is. For their benefit we will briefly explain.

Some years ago The Brethren Publishing Company purchased the large, three story building in the business district of Ashland for a home for all Brethren publications. This purchase was made entirely on faith, as the Company had no funds. The General Conference set apart the fourth Sunday in January as Publication Day, on which offerings are to be made annually by the churches for the payment of the debt on the building.

These offerings are used for no other purpose, and are always used to reduce the debt. The indebtedness is now $14,500.00, and one really good offering of about sixty cents per member would liquidate the entire indebtedness. Wouldn't that be a worthwhile achievement for the first month in the new year? It could be done, if every pastor would co-operate and lead his church into the promised land of a Publishing House free from all indebtedness. Some churches have already contributed their full portion, but, realizing that there are always some that do not comprehend the full significance of the occasion, they are willing to continue going the "second mile" until the task is done. It can be done. Why not do it now?

Publication Day Offering--Why Support It

Judged by the response heretofore given appeals for a Publication Day offering, the time has not passed when we need to argue why support should be given. Some churches have done splendidly, so much so, in fact, that if all had given a like support, the debt remaining, due to the purchase of our new building, would now be paid. But not many churches have responded to that appeal in anywhere near that measure, and some have given nothing at all. It is not in a censuring spirit that we say this, but simply to point out the fact that the churches have not been convinced of their duty with regard to this interest. We have confidence in the rank and file of the church membership that they will respond favorably to any reasonable and worthy appeal that may be presented to them, if they are rightly informed as to the need and convinced that they are responsible for meeting that need. We are persuaded that this has not been done with regard to the Publication Day offerings. A mere announcement, or a remark or two, is not enough to get this need upon the hearts of the people. They must be thoroughly informed; some one must help them to think through the problems surrounding the making of a denominational literature; some one must sell the proposition to them, and the pastor is the one outstanding individual responsible for doing that. The people's attitude will depend very largely on what he says and does.

That has been the case with regard to every other interest that has been presented to the people for support. Foreign missions has gone across big mainly because the pastors have become thoroughly convinced as to the importance of it and have imparted that conviction to the members under their care. So strongly do they feel the responsibility of doing what they can toward the evangelization of the world in many cases that pastor and people alike have come largely to measure the success of their congregation by the extent of their missionary support. Those who have gotten back of the home mission task in a real way have done so as a result of some one bringing to them a vision of the need and an impelling conviction of their relation to that need. The college endowment campaign has received ready and generous response where the local leadership has given it his hearty support, not for a day or a week when the Campaign Secretary was around, but week in and week out and year after year. And what is necessary to put this publishing house campaign across is a leadership thoroughly sold to the proposition, who in turn will become the enthusiastic agents to sell it to the rank and file of our membership.

That we have not yet had this sort of support is not necessarily to the reproach of the pastors. It takes time and intense propaganda for even an urgent need to gain wide acceptance. And the publishing needs of our church have not enjoyed the long period of education and agitation that some other needs have. It is only a few years since those who are close up to this agency have begun to realize the wide reach and urgency of the needs of our church press. Our confidence in the rank and file of the membership is no stronger than our faith in the loyalty of the average of our ministry. We believe they will stand by that which they consider a vital and needy denominational agency. Therefore it is possible that a generous portion of the blame for the tardiness of our church to get back of the publication interests with adequate support is due to the lack of persistent propaganda on the part of the Publishing House itself. We may have been too reluctant to press our claims while other interests were executing their programs. But it is time we were opening up the throttle and putting on full steam ahead. It will be to the interest of the whole church to do this. The brightness of our denominational future, our contribution to the Kingdom of God, the richness and balance of our intellectual life, and the fervor and stability of our spiritual concepts and ideals, all depend very largely on the efficiency and wide use of our church press. We feel warranted, therefore, in pressing very strongly upon the leadership of our church their responsibility for acquainting themselves very thoroughly with the many advantages of a publishing house unencumbered with debt and equipped to serve the literary needs of our people in a larger and more efficient way, and for imparting that vision to the membership. There is little excuse for longer delay in getting into action along this line. The one interest on which every other interest depends for the execution of its program, and on which the influence and perpetuity of our church so largely depend, deserves immediate and prayerful attention and generous financial support.

And on the Brethren constituency far and wide we would press the claims of our Publishing House to a really worth-while offering on this approaching Publication Day. We believe every member of every church is under obligation, an obligation that is high and divine, to participate in the making of this offering to the extent of their ability. We believe this is true because the Publishing House is distinctly a Kingdom building agency and not primarily a business proposition. We would have no arguments for an offering to support a purely business enterprise. If our Publishing House were that and nothing more, if money-making were the thing to which it gave first attention, we would have no appeal. The only excuse the church has for engaging in the printing business is that it may increase its contribution to the extension of the Kingdom of God. The importance of the printed page as a promotional agency is widely recognized by the multitudinous enterprises of the world, as well as by many religious fads and isms that are making rapid headway today. The church of Christ also has recognized this fact, though rather slowly in some quarters and many bodies are hastening to make full use of its vast service. We as a church must step forward in this line. And as we use it more largely we will come more fully to realize how great a blessing is a press dedicated to the service of God. The more we use it the more will we appreciate its inestimable value as an agency for Kingdom promotion.

The support of the entire membership of the brotherhood in such offerings as are asked for on this Publication Day is important and necessary that the church may be enabled to propagandize its plea more efficiently and widely. We have never gotten really enthusiastic about extending the faith of a whole Gospel church. It is but to repeat what we have often said, We have proven ourselves poor propagandists. And that fact does not speak very well for the strength of our convictions, or the enjoyment of our faith. We need to be revived along this line, have our convictions re-enforced and our denominational ambitions enlarged. Give your publishing house the resources that will enable it to lead the brotherhood more aggressively in propagandizing our church plea.

A more adequately financed publishing house is our one and only hope of meeting the steadily increasing demands in the way of a periodical literature. If the history of the last dozen or fifteen years is any gauge, we are destined in the next decade to face demands for the improvement and enlargement of our periodical output that we shall be utterly unable to meet unless we speedily free our publishing house of the burden of debt and make larger provision for its future. This will be found to be as true of our church paper as of any other publication. It must march forward with the changing conditions and increasing demands of the times, but it cannot rely on the income from subscriptions alone to meet those demands. These are hard days on religious publications. Three, two of them distinctly church papers, have been compelled to suspend publication in recent months. While the Evangelist has enjoyed a good patronage considering our membership, yet the expense of publication is bound to increase with the coming years. If we build stronger steadily, we shall be able to meet all future demands.

Of the need of a better financed publishing house for the building of a permanent literature, there needs much to be said, though we have said much already on previous occasions. The need of such a literature has not been felt as it ought. But it is encouraging to note that more and more are getting the vision and making their demands. It is an expensive proposition, however, to make books, and many a book is made to meet the needs of larger denominations than ours that never pays for itself. And many individuals, members of large denominations, publish books on their own account and suffer considerable loss because of small sales. How much less is the chance of succeeding financially in a church of the size of ours. Yet we must have books that speak the Brethren message, record Brethren history, cherish Brethren values, perpetuate the Brethren spirit and impart the Brethren viewpoint, though we can scarcely expect the sales of such books among our small constituency to cover the cost of their publication. What is more reasonable than to ask the brotherhood to share in that undertaking by providing our Publishing House with such funds as will enable it to publish the books we need, though at a financial loss. Ideals are worth more than dollars, and we can afford to sacrifice many dollars for the sake of conserving and perpetuating the religious heritage that has been such a blessing to us.

Let us not consider Publication Day from a mere dollar-and-cents standpoint. It concerns Kingdom building, service to the church and promotion of a vital faith.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

We are informed that Brother C. D. Whitmer of South Bend, Indiana, who is now writing Christian Endeavor notes for the Angelus, is again preaching for the La Paz, Indiana, congregation.

Endeavorers attention is called to the communication of Associate President Riddle regarding the International Christian Endeavor Convention to be held at Cleveland next July. It is not too early to make plans to attend.

Brother Thoburn C. Lyon, pastor of the Lydia, Maryland, congregation informs us that Brother Robert F. Porte of Louisville, Ohio, is now engaged in an evangelistic campaign in his church and prayer is requested in behalf of the meetings.

The brotherhood will rejoice to learn that the church at Washington, D. C., is ready to dedicate the first unit of its new church home. Dr. L. S. Bauman is to officiate. This church has made splendid progress under the wise leadership of Brother Homer Kent.

The Brethren Annuals are now on sale and can be had by mailing your order and check to Rev. O. C. Starn, Gratis, Ohio, Secretary of General Conference. The price is 25 cents per copy. Every church should have a supply. This publication regularly contains information that is indispensable.

A good report comes from the St. James congregation at Lydia, Maryland, where the people are highly pleased with the services of Brother Thoburn C. Lyon, the pastor. The various departments show commendable interest and activity. This congregation has suffered a heavy loss in the death of Brother Harvey S. Poffenberger, the spirituality and hospitality of whose home the editor was once privileged to enjoy.

Dr. C. F. Yoder writes of the condition of the mission work in the Argentine. It would seem strange to us to prepare Christmas programs in the heat of the summer, but that is the kind of weather they have there when the Christmas season comes around. The summer offers some detractions to our mission work as well as some advantages, notwithstanding the handicaps the work is pressing steadily forward. Brother Yoder has eight in his class of converts being prepared for baptism. Miss Nielsen is visiting the various mission points.

Brother W. C. Benshoff, the able pastor of the church at Berlin, Pennsylvania, writes that their new church has served them well, making possible not only greater local work, but also the enjoyment of privileges that would be otherwise denied them. Brother Benshoff has engaged in two evangelistic campaigns in recent months—at Aleppo and Pittsburgh. Brother F. G. Coleman was called to lead the Berlin church in a revival which resulted in thirty-five confessions, twenty eight being added to the church. Thirty-four have been added to the church since last report and forty-seven during the calendar year.

Prof. M. P. Puterbaugh, treasurer of the National Sunday School Association, gives his first report of White Gifts and it is evident that the Sunday schools have shown considerable interest in this offering. Of course this is just the beginning of the report and doubtless still more encouraging installments will be made possible by other schools yet to report. Brother Puterbaugh is a careful workman in whatever he undertakes and you can be sure of proper credit. The Association is doing a great service to the brotherhood and deserves your generous support. The make-up of this week made it impossible to run this report on the Sunday school page, where it is usually found, so it is placed in the general news department.

Brother W. R. Deeter, the resourceful pastor of the church at Portis, Kansas, reports an evangelistic campaign in his church conducted by Brother L. G. Wood of Fort Scott, same state. The numerical result of these meetings was seven added to the church by baptism. The Portis work continues to press on in an encouraging manner under its various departments. Brother Wood gives his version of the campaign, reporting a very enjoyable experience and speaks a good word for the Portis church under the leadership of Brother Deeter. He also gives us a word regarding his own work at Fort Scott, where, after many discouragements and hindrances, a "favorable outlook" seems to have appeared. One has been added to the church since last report, and a campaign with Brother A. V. Kimmell is now under way, according to announcement.

Dr. W. S. Bell, endowment campaign secretary, reports a successful canvass of the First Church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, where Brother C. H. Ashman is the capable pastor. This splendid church made a contribution of $6,246.50, which brings the total of the Endowment Fund reported to date to $87,723.97. The Sunday school of that great church did a fine thing in making a thousand dollar gift to the Endowment. It is encouraging to see this campaign going forward in such a splendid way. And yet it is not going forward any faster than the needs of the college demand. Our churches are giving with much interest, but the needs of our college are so great and urgent that the best the brotherhood can do, will not be any more than is needed. Things are transpiring in the educational policies of Ohio right now that make it unmistakably certain that if the church stops short of a 500,000 dollar endowment, apart from the necessary increased equipment and new buildings, the college will be in a hard row.

"Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." God wants a marching faith, not a standing faith.

He who lives on the ragged edge of his spiritual energy will find himself illy prepared for the emergencies of life.

A man has a right to advertise his church as a "friendly church" or a "church home", if the stranger is accustomed to find it so.

He who would impress others with his own superiority is deceived if he himself believes it, and is doubly deceived if he thinks others believe it.

The Business
Manager's Query

WHAT
WHEN

By R. R. Teeter, D.D.

Every bright child is a living interrogation point. What, why and when are three of the most frequently used words in his vocabulary.

The growing mind must be an enquiring mind, and one of the great problems parents and teachers must face is that of furnishing satisfactory answers to the questions that come to the minds of the children placed in their keeping.

It is a trite, but true, saying that men are only boys grown tall, which might be taken to mean also that their minds are also still boys' minds grown large. Enquiry should always be a part of the exercising of the mind to keep it supple and able to properly function.

We hope every reader of this page will have his curiosity aroused by the heading of this column, and that he may be led to enquire, What is it? and then that he may go the whole way as to Why? and When?

The thing we want you to enquire about is the Publication Day offering. Surely, every constant reader of the Evangelist is cognizant of the fact that for some years past the churches of the brotherhood have been asked to make an annual offering to the church's only Publishing House, this being done with the permission and consent of the General Conference. This briefly states WHAT our heading suggests.

Secondly, the WHY is a different matter. Some may ask, Is the Publishing House running behind every year? and must we take up an offering to make up the deficit? Let us shout from the house-tops NO! It is not that at all. The Publishing House not only pays its running expenses, but it has bought a large amount of equipment from its earnings, and is still progressing along this line.

Will our readers please remember that when the Publishing House came under the present management in 1915 there was less than $2,000.00 worth of equipment in the entire plant. For the first four years of this period nothing of material value was added to the equipment; but about eight years ago we began to improve the plant by adding new and more modern equipment. During the past eight years about $24,000.00 worth of equipment has been purchased by the Publishing House, and, except for one offering taken a number of years ago to aid in paying for the two typesetting machines purchased at that time, this equipment has all been paid for from the earnings of the Publishing House.

Of course, in making the purchase of this new equipment, old equipment was traded in at a price that could be agreed upon by both parties; but, instead of the $2,500.00 worth of equipment we had in 1915, we now have equipment worth about $20,000.00, which you must admit is not a bad showing for that period of time. Just last fall, as we previously reported, we placed two new Intertype machines in our composing room to replace the old machines, at a cost of nearly $9,000.00. We present on this page an illustration of one of these machines, which are of the latest model, with improvements found on no other machine: These are both three magazine machines, and give us a larger diversity of type than we ever had before. These machines are being paid for from the earnings of the Publishing House. We are not asking for one penny to apply on this obligation. We can take care of that.

Then, Why do we ask for an offering? For this reason. The location and building occupied by the Publishing House, until a little more than seven years ago, were not suited to the development of a larger and better publishing business. As has been so frequently stated, the Publication Board decided to purchase the large business block we now occupy in the business district. This purchase was made entirely on faith, as not a dollar of funds was on hand that could be applied to this purpose. The faith was in the Brethren church. Faith that it would come to the rescue and apply the funds to pay for the building. The building has increased in value fully $25,000.00 in the last seven years. So it has been a wonderful investment from that standpoint, as well as from the standpoint of bringing our business before the local public. We now frequently have more business callers in a single day than we sometimes had in our former location in a month.

Another reason for asking the churches to pay for this building is that it, as well as all the other property of the Company, is also the property of every member of the Brethren church. Every member is a stock holder in the Company, and it seems they should consider it a high privilege to be permitted to make such an investment. For it is not a donation; it is an investment. The money furnished to pay for the building is still the property of the one who supplies it, as The Brethren Publishing Company is a corporation, owned and operated by the general brotherhood. Then, Why not make a clean sweep of the indebtedness at this time? There remains but $14,500.00 to pay, and a really enthusiastic response from the entire church should invest that much in the building that houses all the literature put out by the Brethren church.

Thirdly, a preacher must have his thirdly you know, WHEN? That has been definitely settled by the General Conference, and is always the FOURTH Sunday in January, which, this year, falls on January twenty-third. Should this special day not be convenient for any church the matter can easily be adjusted to the previous Sunday or to the Sunday following the twenty-third. The important thing is that the people be given an opportunity to make this INVESTMENT. We are confident the membership of the church will respond, if they are made to understand and the responsibility is impressed upon them. The writer has been active in the work of the Brethren church for more than thirty-five years, and he never expects to work in any other. We have confidence in the Brethren, though our confidence occasionally receives a jolt, but it will require a pretty big jolt to get two hundred and twenty-five pounds off the track.

The question now is, Will our confidence be confirmed? or will it be shaken by the response to the appeals made by the different brethren in this number of the Evangelist? Let us again appeal to the pastors. The writer had twenty-six years' experience as a pastor, and he always found his flocks ready to answer appeals that were enthusiastically approved and presented by the pastor. The pastor is the "key man" in practically every church. Were we still in the pastorate, we would count it a high privilege to be able to enthusiastically cooperate in this worthy cause. Fellow servant, will you do it?

The First Step Toward Building Up a Literature

By Dean J. Allen Miller, D.D.

There has never been a day when there was so large an output of reading matter as today. It is utterly inconceivable when one goes into the "figures" in this matter—books, magazines and newspapers of every description and upon an infinite variety of subjects. Much of this printed matter is worse than worthless. Some of the products of the press are veritable works of fine art, and some of course are very commonplace, or even bad in form.

Another aspect of this study is the influence exerted by the printed page. Think of the reading of the youth of our day and its effects upon the minds of this vast crowd of young folk. Westinghouse the great inventor read a single line in an unknown paper and there sprang into his mind the key to his compressed air-brake which revolutionized railway traffic and made it immensely safer to travel. Think of the texts and treatises used by our public schools and the colleges and universities. Measure if you can the influence for good or for evil of an attractive and absorbing book! Think of the power of fiction over human life and conduct. Calculate if you can the unbounded reach of magazines and newspapers.

But why do I speak of these things? To call to your mind, if I can, the place the Press, including literature for our Sunday schools, our church periodicals and books, should have in the church and in our Christian homes. Of one thing I am fully persuaded—that is, that as a church we have never fully appraised the worth of the printed page in our work. We go begging for support for our periodical literature of all kinds. And here I must digress to relate a pleasing compliment which I recently heard. I was a visitor in a home where the matter of the Brethren Educator was brought up in the conversation. A Sunday school teacher of another denomination praised this publication in very high terms. She said she counted it the very best help she had on the lessons. Yet many of our own teachers fail to use it. I am strongly given to the support of our own publications and very much more so when they surpass in actual value much that is used.

I am deeply humiliated when I consider the fact that we have produced no literature in the way of books of real and permanent worth. Does this mean that we do not read as a people? I can not believe that. Does it mean that we have nothing of worth to commit to print? It can not be this either. I would myself be happy to be a purchaser each year of a book of the dozen or fifteen best sermons by as many different preachers. Besides there is other subject-matter which ought to be committed to writing, and circulated. Does it mean that we have no men or women who could do this writing? This is not true either. Few, if indeed any, denominations have a greater per cent of educated men and women than we have. But to be an author whose product can be printed requires money. A publishing house which has to struggle to keep itself going can not undertake any very big project in the way of supplying a people with literature.

This brings me directly to the purpose of this brief contribution. The church has never really given our own Brethren Publishing Company the unstinted and loyal support it has merited. If we should really make an effort, a serious and honest-to-goodness effort, we could pay off the debt on the property and be done with it. THIS IS WHAT WE OUGHT TO DO and DO IT SOON. Our next General Conference should do something on this matter.

Suppose we paid the debt. That would stop an interest bill big enough year to help put out ONE GOOD NEW BOOK OF OUR OWN. Then suppose after we used the rentals from the twenty or so apartments in our building for some years to more fully equip the plant mechanically we could add another BOOK A YEAR to the list. The Publishing Company, representing the church, could undertake such practical printing projects and we would soon build up a body of literature of which we would not need to be ashamed. This field is unlimited. There are needed books for young people, books for Missionary propaganda, books for Christian education, books for the preparation of a more efficient ministry and many more of equal worth. LET US DO SOMETHING NOW. Has it ever occurred to the reader that a denomination such as ours must work unitedly if we are to do anything of real worth to the church? Has it occurred to the reader that we could do one real big thing each year if we had a will? For example, we could build a NEW CHURCH in a promising new field and thus do more than we are apparently getting done. We could endow a hospital in Africa one year. We could endow a TEACHER for the training of a NATIVE MINISTRY IN ARGENTINA. And we could PAY THE DEBT ON THE PUBLISHING HOUSE PROPERTY one year. Now does not that look as if we might be getting something done if our giving and doing were centered upon some one worth while task?

In the meanwhile, until we do plan our work and our giving at least more definitely, we should rally to the appeal of the Publication Board and give a substantial offering on the day designated. Methodist conferences without exception have rather large deficits to make up for their several publishing houses. This they do under their government by assessments upon conferences and through these conferences upon the churches. The churches pay the deficits. With us it is not a matter of making up a deficit. It is really paying for a property and paying for necessary equipment. We can very consistently and conscientiously give to this cause.

Consequences

By Quinter M. Lyon, Editor Sunday School Lesson Publications

It is strange how certain consequences always follow on this and that.

This is illustrated by a legend of the East. A wise old shiek, on parting from a young Arab prince, mentioned a number of crimes and vices and bade him choose the one which seemed least harmful. The young prince told the old man that he would choose intemperance. "You have chosen that," replied the wise old man, which will bring you all."

The Christian believes that a great train of consequences follows upon receiving Jesus as Savior and Lord. If we truly appropriate Christ we appropriate every good virtue in the course of time.

Let us consider what consequences follow upon proper support of our publishing house. A publishing house does not exactly create a church. The opposite is usually true in the beginning. And yet the church which fails to create a publishing house is bound to disappear. And in the end a publishing house is largely responsible for the success of a church.

No one realizes, perhaps, more than the writer, the importance of a church college. It is a central institution where young people gain a unified vision of the whole world of learning, and learn to see through the eyes of the church. But can you think where our college would be today if it were not for the church's publishing house? Take away our church paper and the college will lose its best friend.

Our church has rallied to no program so loyally as to foreign missions. It is to be commended for this great loyalty, and for what it has accomplished in this important field. And to say that the publishing interests are more important than either the college or foreign or home missions would be putting the cart before the horse. And yet, have you considered, how much more might our church do for foreign missions than it is now if its publishing house were better supported?

No one realizes who has not seen the publishing house from the inside what its problems are. The average church member and the average leader does not stop to consider the handicaps against which we are working on every hand. If they think they are not getting what they should from us they simply blame it on personalities and let it go at that.

We sometimes blame mothers and fathers in very poor circumstances for not making more out of their children. But when they are driven to the washtub to make a living, or when the mother works outside the home, and when the parents are forced to spend most of their time keeping away starvation, they have little opportunity to train their children. Society must provide better for certain classes before it can expect more of them.

In like manner, although perhaps not to the very letter, your publishing house can do no better than the money that it can command. Money talks. And if it talks it also prints. It takes money to hire linotype operators and proof readers and clerks. And it takes money to buy good stories and pictures to make good Sunday school papers. It takes money to hire good, responsible editors and assistant editors to make good church and Sunday school literature, and do it consistently from year to year.

We are frank to admit that Brethren literature could be more complete and more decorative and more interesting than it is. But please believe me, it takes money to do it.

If the publishing company owned the building in which it operates, one great handicap would be removed. The money that goes for interest now would then go for improvements. More and better literature would be issued. Missing publications would appear. Old ones would suddenly become more attractive and vital. The printed page would stand a good chance then of doing for the Brethren church what it has done for other churches and for the enemies of the true church. All the worthy enterprises of the church would then prosper as they never will until the power of righteous propaganda through the printed page is realized and used.

When you consider the influence of the publishing house on the success and prosperity of the church throughout the coming years, what will you give this year for your Publication Day Offering? Remember the consequences!

Ohio Conference Moderator's Address

By R. D. Barnard

(Delivered at the Fremont Conference on October 20, 1926)

Members and friends of the Ohio Conference, Greetings:

Gratitude fills our hearts as we are assembled today. Our very presence indicates that another year has passed. What we have done for our Master we are assured he will remember. What we have not done that we should, what we have done that we should not we trust that he will blot from his book of remembrance. God has been good to us,—he is always good to his children. We have enjoyed the blessings of material prosperity for the season. We have enjoyed the approval and confirmation of God upon our work. We are enjoying the blessings of a world more stable and hopeful than the world of a year ago. France and Germany are nominal friends. The United States is allowing her influence to count for world fellowship and world peace. Continual efforts for peace are being attempted by religious and civic groups. Throughout the world an unusual portion of blessings have come to us this year. May God be praised for every blessing.

The World Challenge

The world offers to us a most imposing challenge today. Would anyone dare to say that the Christian world is living up to its best? That we are accomplishing as we should the world tasks to which we set our hand? With missionary enterprises so often neglected, with new fields of service beckoning to us each year, with misunder-

A "Two-foot Shelf" of Books for Children

By Mrs. Ada C. Lawson

It was James Russell Lowell who said that the ability to read "is the key which admits us to the noble world of thought and fancy and imagination, to the company of saint and sage, of the wisest and wittiest at their wisest and wittiest moments. It enables us to see with the keenest eyes, to hear with the finest ears, and to listen to the sweetest voices of all time. More than that, it annihilates times and space for us."

But this same ability to read opens to the child also a world where ideals are not all high, where thought and fancy are not always beautiful, and where actions and motives are not all noble. Too often books are written just to sell. The guiding of children's reading is important and even fundamental in laying the foundation for their education and for character building. As we read the biographies of great men and women we find that often the awakening feelings and emotions, and sometimes the strong governing purposes of life, were stimulated and kept up by the power of the great books read in the home during childhood. Our children may never become great, but it is our opportunity to see to it that they have the best reading material available at the time when they need it most.

Just because a book happens to be in a library or in a bookstore dressed in holiday attire is not proof that it is worth reading or buying. Good and bad books may be had for the asking. Neither is the child's own choice in the matter always a good guide because of so many deteriorating influences which mold his way of thinking. Miss Olcott, in "The Children's Reading," tells us, "Our children are thrust almost in babyhood into the ceaseless bewildering rush of life outside the home. They are exposed to weak and bad companions, to the exciting pleasures of the street, to the influence of low shows and to coarse pictures in our large dailies, to suggestive bill-posters and sordid love tales and tales of adventure. Their minds are contaminated by coarsening thoughts and ignoble purposes. The church, school, and public library are all doing their share to counteract these influences, but the foundations of the walls that will successfully shut out these warring enemies of the soul must be laid in the home." All other agencies can cooperate with, but they cannot serve as substitutes for educated parents who exert a more powerful, direct daily influence on the moral, mental, and spiritual growth of their children. Mothers must realize more and more that they, and only they, can do certain things for their children in the way of culture and development. It takes time and thought and study to be able to guide intelligently a child's course in reading.

There are two or three books especially helpful to parents along this line; namely, Farrar's "Buying Children's Books for Christmas" W. T. Field's "Fingerposts to Children's Reading;" and Francis J. Olcott's "The Children's Reading" which is published by Houghton Mifflin Co.

It is not always easy to detect with a passing glance the unwholesome story. Some of the ear-marks of the undesirable or really bad books are the thrilling tales of impossible adventure which are weak, sentimental, and enervating. They are not strong enough to incite to action and do not aim to inculcate ideas of right and wrong. The really vicious tale is often written in bombastic language, presenting false standards of life and morals under the glamour of a sensational love story or of daring adventures of criminals or questionable heroes. If you care to go into this problem further, read "Little Pharisees in Fiction," which deals with Elsie Dinsmore and her kind. Also "The Children of the Road," by Flynt in his book "Tramping With Tramps," and "The Influence of Books" in Field's "Fingerposts to Children's Reading."

A fundamental requirement in the guiding of children's reading is a mutual enjoyment of books. Some one has said that "appreciation of good literature is caught not taught." The time to begin the child's course in literature is long before he is a year old. At a few months of age he loves to hear rhythmic sound and to look at bright pictures of large size. From the nursery rhyme to the longer stories to be told, to the stories to be read aloud later, to the books to be read together, to those which he reads alone and you discuss together—all these pave the way to a happy companionship which will do very much toward solving the problems of girlhood and boyhood as they arrive at that sometimes trying but wonderful period of adolescence.

There are little devices which the mother may use to motivate her child's course in reading. For example, she may make out a systematic program which is not too iron clad and which has some purpose or goal or she may keep a list of all the books read. And if the habit of reading to the child is kept up many books of value may be introduced which would not have been read on his own initiative. The child should be taught that the value of his library depends not upon the number of books but the kind of books which it holds. It is a good rule to buy for the home library only those books worth reading twice. Besides these, of course, there should be books of reference.

Inducing Children to Read

How can children be led to read the right books? The answer is so simple that we are always likely to pass it by unheeding. It is the answer of an old farmer on the method of getting his horses to eat: "Keep your racks full of good feed; that's all there is to it; the critters will do the rest."

The way to get children to read is to have ample, attractive quantities of suitable reading available. In the home where books abound, where on table and shelf there are always to be found clean, attractive copies, if children are there, they will be found tucked up in a corner with a book. Just leave it to them. Select the food and trust them to find the appetite. When the parental heart swells with joy, because Mary is discovered reading exactly the right book, a wise silence will do more good than a commendatory homily. Take it for granted that she would read such a book. Rest your mind in the confidence that if such books are readily available they will be read.

But the old farmer's advice is not quite as simple as it seems. He who would provide the food must know how to select; he must know what is the possible range of selection. He must understand the tastes and needs of those for whom the selection is made. We adults who want children to read religious books, what do we know about them ourselves? How can we select when we are too lazy, or think we are too busy to try books; to discover their qualities and to keep ourselves up with the ever-enriching world of literature? The problem of good reading in the home is still up to the father and mother. They must furnish the food, they must know the possible resources of spiritual nourishment; they must understand childhood and its needs and they must themselves set the example of the use and love of books as a normal, everyday practice of the happy life.—Henry F. Cope, in The Watchword.

The value of permitting the child to read the best of the fables, myths, and fairy tales is no longer a source of perplexity. If we do not guide into this field of reading much of the world's great literature later in life will be a closed book to him. Not to become familiar with the best in folk literature closes the door to a world of imagination and perhaps hampers the power to do great things in later life. We see the fruits of the constructive imagination in all our great inventions, in the works of great writers and world builders of today.

When we think of the field of fiction of today we are reminded of that remark of Plato made over two thousand years ago. He said, "The first thing will be to have a censorship of the writers of fiction, and let the censors receive any tale which is good and reject the bad. At the same time most of those that are now in use will have to be discarded." There is great need for a censor today when the authors take for their chief characters men and women from the underworld and hold them up as heroes and heroines oppressed by law, thus working on the youth's sense of admiration and filling him with the generous but mistaken desire to protect the criminal and perhaps to emulate his actions, when books for girls teach them to judge character and actions by the amount of wealth and social distinction possessed by the heroine and her friends, to think more of dress than ideals, to gossip, to slander to think lightly of white lies and of deliberate untruth told ostensibly for a noble purpose. There is, however, growing up to take the place of these weak girls' stories a class of interesting womanly stories, but they do not yet show girls in a convincing manner the close and perfect relation that should exist between the new activities of the college athletic girl or business and professional girl and home life. Miss Olcott says, "There are a few which make the enrichment of the home the final aim of a womanly girl."

The field of biographical histories and historical fiction is a very interesting and a very fruitful one. These stories open up the pages of the past and show deeds in relation to consequences, introduce boys and girls to the great men and women of all times and thus make them a part of the social world. There are a few very excellent historical stories, such as, "The Pilgrim Maid," "Men of Iron," "Otto of the Silver Hand," "Jack Ballister's Fortunes," "Green Mountain Boys," "Two Little Confederates," "Wulnoth the Wanderer," "Captain Phil," "Jed," "The Great Captain," "A Boy's Ride," "Puck of Pook's Hill," "Master Skylark," "A Boy of the First Empire," "Rolf in the Woods," "Mayken," "The Boys of Scrooby," "In the Brave Days of Old," "Merrylips," "Uncle Peter's Trust." Books akin to these, but too sensationally written are the Henty books and their kind.

The best books of travel for children are not books of travel at all but stories full of local color, fine descriptions of scenery, customs, and manners. Really to see, or to come the next thing to seeing, the deserts and plains and canons of the southwest, let a child read "Juan and Juanita," and "The Basket Woman." To get an intimate picture of life in the Alps read, "Heidi" to know the frozen northland read "Norseland Heroes," and "Lisbeth Longfrock" takes one to climb Norwegian mountains. "The Boy Settlers" and "Chilhowee Boys" experience the dangers of travel in the early days of the settlers and Indians.

As a help to the younger children, "Foster's Bible Pictures" done in black and white, to my mind is the best of its kind. The author takes the main stories and instances of both the Old and the New Testaments and dramatically pictures them, giving in Bible language, the story below the picture. The number of reverent, non-sectarian, juvenile books of fiction may almost be counted upon the fingers of one hand. Among these are: "Daughter of the Rich," "Donkey John of Toy Valley," "Captain Phil Rich," "Wulnoth the Wanderer," "Chilhowee Boys," "The Life of the Dudley Grahams," "Masterman Ready," and "The Sword Maker's Son."

In closing I shall give a list of twenty-five books which are considered as juvenile classics by men and women of experience. It is a well selected "two-foot shelf" which any mother will do well to remember. The child who really knows these books has a splendid start in the appreciation of good literature. He will have developed a healthy love of reading that will be a blessing throughout life. "Little Women," by Louise M. Alcott; "Alice's Adventures Under Ground," by Lewis Carroll; "Robinson Crusoe," by Daniel Defoe; "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," by Mark Twain; "Treasure Island," by Robert L. Stevenson; "Boy's Life of Lincoln," by Helen Nicolay; "The Jungle Book," by Rudyard Kipling; "Fairy Tales," by Hans Christian Andersen; "Aesop's Fables," edited by Jacobs; "Child's Garden of Verse," by Robert L. Stevenson; "Merry Adventures of Robin Hood," by Howard Pyle; "Tales From Shakespeare," by Charles and Mary Lamb; "Boy's King Arthur," by Sidney Lanier; "Story of Mankind," by He

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

SAUL OF TARSUS BELIEVES—Acts 9:10-22.

Out from among the hostile, though sincere, honest souls, the power of the exalted Christ draws men unto himself and calls out faith and devotion that will preach the Gospel to the ends of the earth and will endure persecution and death for his name's sake.

TUESDAY

MANY BELIEVE—Acts 2:27-42.

To many or one the way is the same—faith in the crucified and risen Lord. Faith is followed by repentance and baptism, and these bring forgiveness of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit.

HIS VICARIOUS SUFFERING—Isa. 53:4-12.

"Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows." It was the price of reconciliation. Men were estranged from God, and could only be brought back through the suffering and death of him who was to be their Savior.

THURSDAY

JESUS AND NICODEMUS—John 3:1-17.

Discipleship to Jesus did not mean merely the keeping of certain commandments, nor yet mental acceptance of Christ, but heart belief; it meant an entirely new attitude of mind and heart, a new birth, made possible through the power of the Spirit.

FRIDAY

NICODEMUS DEFENDS JESUS—John 7:45-52.

Jesus claims his friends from among all classes of people—the learned and powerful as well as the humble and ignorant. He is the Savior of all, and in him there is that which appeals to men of every station and gains for him defenders from among the mighty as well as the weak.

SATURDAY

NICODEMUS ASSISTS IN THE BURIAL—John 19:38-42.

It is heartening to know that Jesus was lacking for friends and a decent burial in his death, and our hearts are warm toward Nicodemus and Joseph because of their kindness, but we would have regarded them more highly if they had been more courageous during his life.

SUNDAY

BEGOTTEN OF GOD—John 1:6-13.

Those who receive Jesus become the children of God, because they are begotten of God and are no longer of the world.—G. S. B.

drik Van Loon; "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," by Kate Douglass Wiggin; "Home Book of Verse for Young Folks," edited by Burton E. Stevenson "Last of the Mohicans," by James Fenimore Cooper; "Christmas Carol," "Charles Dickens; "Rip Van Winkle," by Washington Irving; "Mother Goose;" "Hans Brinker, or the Silver Skates," by Mary Mapes Dodge; "Boy's Life of Roosevelt," by Herman Hagedorn; "Wonder Book," by Nathaniel Hawthorne; "Wild Animals I Have Known," by Seton-Thompson; "The Arabian Nights."

standing and misjudgment so common even with us; who can but agree that we are falling far below the highest standard of usefulness to God? And the challenge is increasing. Romanism each year becomes a more perplexing political and religious problem. The various cults and isms are growing more speedily, and putting forth more aggressive campaigns than not a few other parts of the religious nuclei. Those who have investigated report much of Europe to have deteriorated to a faith in name only. The religions of China and Japan have been so modernized that they are holding an increasing number of their own people. Mohammedanism is pursuing its course in the East and in Africa, until today one-seventh of the world is of that faith. But in the face of all these advancements by the Anti-Christian forces of the world, the church fails to increase her pace to any great extent for the evangelization of the world. In saying this we are not discrediting, or failing to observe the many fine evangelization agencies in the field today. We are only pleading that we may be so inspired as leaders of the Brethren church in Ohio that we may more fully take our place in this great work.

Conditions Making Christian Service Hard

In our intensification of this active spiritual message and mission to the world there are so many things that make our work hard. Outstanding among these hard conditions which we have to face is the growing spirit of materialism. But someone says,—materialism as a theory is dead. True it is or nearly so. That is the very danger. This spirit which is manifesting itself even in our church life today is more subtle than a theory could be. It would confess a Spirit God as creator of all things, would doubtless profess and claim allegiance to Christ and the church, but in the healthy, active days of life it would cause men to live as if there were no God, no Christ, no church.

This spirit seems not only to inhibit but to destroy as well the whole fabric of our Christian nature. It touches first the devotional life. It gently leads its captive to the conclusion that the waking hours of the day are too precious to be lost in the quiet of meditation, Bible study or prayer. It makes the idea seem right that the Scripture learned in childhood plus the occasional verse partly mastered in later life is sufficient. It makes one believe that he can pray as well while moulding the metal, or tending the crop as in the special hours of the day dedicated to God; that if one just desires he can meditate enough at odd times, even though the mind be filled with business problems and perplexities. In a word this materialistic spirit destroys the very basis for a devotional life.

In a second place this Spirit strikes at the very foundation of our Christian idea of stewardship; not the stewardship of possessions alone but the greater stewardship of life. It develops an aggressive selfishness. One who is thus tempted appropriates at first even so little of God's time for himself, and then more and more until finally God and his work is refused entrance to the life. And the danger is imminent. When the individual has started on this policy of time appropriation, it is only a short step to the place where in practical life he will refuse to acknowledge God as owner of all things. Reasons he,—I have the deed for this possession, I earned the money, my title is clear. It is mine. I will use it as I desire. He forgets who gave him health and the ability to acquire; he forgets who gave the sunshine, the fresh air, the rain, all so necessary to his success. Who put the nitrogen in the soil, the ore in the mountains, the forests on the hillsides, who placed the very germ of life in the created world. Such an individual, is not, neither can any man be, the sole owner of what he uses in the world. Certainly if there is any one thing that is important for us as Brethren it is to preach and teach a Gospel of spiritual things in a way that actuates practical spiritual living. For is it not true, Brethren, that so often we preach and teach a Gospel beautiful in glittering spiritual terms, which gives but little help in the plain, everyday living of the Spirit-filled life? I confess I do not have a panacea to offer but I am sure that if we realize the danger and difficulty, that a year of actual searching will bring us far on our way.

Another group of surrounding conditions which as I view it makes life hard is to be found in the Border Line Amusements. There is no question but that we are living in a period of pleasure seeking, and I wonder sometimes if this is so very wrong. Is not pleasure seeking at least akin to the great principle of joy and enjoyment in life? I am more and more of the conviction that we cannot condemn man's pleasure loving nature wholesale any more than we could condemn the principle of love because love misdirected leads to the cesspools of life. The pleasure seeking which we cannot approve is really true enjoyment seeking so permeated with the modern desire for a "kick" and a "thrill" that it has gone bad. For this very reason the border line amusements are hard to combat. The movie, to illustrate, is not bad in principle, but rather affords a wonderful opportunity for giving the Christian message quickly to the world. This institution, as many others, can work either for good or bad. And capital representing complete anti-Christian standards of life has captured the movie industry for its own lucrative gain. The unprincipled seems to sell to the public better than the good principled.

I do not know the solution to this problem, but it must be that in the near future something will be done, something that will capture this powerful agent for the accomplishment of Christian purposes. There is almost no limit to the possible power of the Protestant voice in the United States whether it be in matters social, economic or religious. May God hasten the day when we shall unite on a policy of action with reference to the movie industry, an industry which at present is giving decidedly unfavorable example to our children. Along with the movie, in this class of border line amusements we most assuredly would include all petty gambling, dances, mild to wild parties, and such other questionable amusements as infest our cities. The church as I see it, to be consistent with the belief in the simplicity and purity of life, can only stand as unalterably opposed.

If we take this position there is one question youth has a right to ask of the church. "If you take these things away, what have you to give us that is better?" This is a continual and staggering question. The church cannot enter the field of amusements in competition with the world, that is not the mission of the church. It can, though, and should offer a complete Christian social program for its young people. Much has been done recently in this respect. There are denominational and interdenominational conferences and conventions that care for the four-fold life, there are interchurch contests in athletics and oratory, and in so many recreational fields. In our own beloved church the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha is doing an exceptional work. We trust that present plans may be hastily completed when we will have an adapted work for boys in all our churches. I believe we should go on record as ready to officially promote some such work.

The Christian Overcoming Temptation

Scripture Lesson—Luke 4:1-13; 1 Cor. 10:12, 13.

Devotional Reading—Rom. 8:31-39.

Golden Text—In that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted.—Hebrews 2:18.

LESSON LIGHTS

The Tempter

The tempter was Satan, as the scripture says, but in what form did he appear? It is not at all likely that he appeared in bodily form, unless, as another had said, "it was as an angel or a plausible stranger." He was "tempted like as we are." And we would never be tempted by a Satan in the form of a fire-breathing Appollyon, or as one wearing a human form equipped with huge bat-like wings, horn, tail and webbed feet, as on the doors of Pisa Cathedral, or as a black monster with tail, claws and horns, as in St. Mark's, Venice, are mere allegories and symbols to make his real nature apparent and the impression deep. Such a Satan actually before us could never tempt us.

George H. Hodges says, "There must be something so attractive about a temptation, so deceptive, so persuasive, that even a good man shall feel inclined to accept the invitation. The choice which we all make, sinners though we are, is not between the known good and the known bad; it is between two courses of action, each of which appears to be good. It is very rarely that we sin, saying boldly to ourselves, 'This is plainly in defiance to the will of God, but I will do it.' No, we somehow persuade ourselves that darkness is light and evil is good. We do the bidding of the devil, but in order to get us to do it, he has to disguise himself so that we may not recognize him. If the devil came, the plain devil and said, 'Do this,' we would not do it. It is not in that manner that we are tempted. Still less was Christ thus tempted. The sight of the tempter, the consequent knowledge that the suggestion of his pointing finger was the suggestion of evil, would have made any true temptation totally impossible."

Temptation versus Testing

Distinguish between temptations and tests. Temptation is the testing of a person with the purpose and desire of making him yield and do wrong. Testing is a means of finding out what a man is with the hope that he will stand the strain, for the purpose of knowing what he can do, how far he can be trusted and helping him to be better and more useful. Satan and bad men tempt. God and good men never tempt, but test, and transform bad men's temptations into trials and tests.

Temptation versus Sin

Christ was tempted, and therefore the fact that we are tempted is no proof that we are wicked. "Some sensitive natures conclude that they must be very sinful because they are so much tempted; whereas multiplicity of temptation is often rather an evidence of faithfulness and integrity. The strongest attacks are made upon the strongest forts. Repeated temptations argue the existence of resistance. Sin is consent to the temptation. When there is no acquiescence there is no sin."

The Purpose of the Temptations

They proved that he was worthy to be the Messiah, as a battleship is tested before it is sent to war. (1) "For his own sake. He was a man and had a character to build, and temptation is essential to character building. No man knows what is in him—how weak he is or how strong—till he is tried." (2) For the sake of others. If Jesus would be the Savior and helper of men, it was necessary that he should not only be exposed to the same temptations as we are, but that he should gain the victory over them, and by the same means which are available to us (Heb. 4:15) He conquered, not as the Son of God, but as man, else his victory would be no pledge that he could give us the victory.

Modern Applications

Our bodies and our souls are full of desires, appetites, hungers, which are innocent in themselves, but which we are tempted to gratify in wrong ways, Satan's ways, in contradistinction to God's ways. This is the essence of most sins of the flesh, which work disease and death, as intemperance, gluttony and social vices. So, too, our highest and deepest longings—as for love, for usefulness, for success or larger spheres—may be gratified in wrong ways, at the expense of character, and in low, outward, instead of holy, spiritual methods.

But more general than the wrong use of natural and perfectly legitimate desires and appetites, is the giving of too large and important a place to these things in our lives. They crowd out the higher and more important, whereas we ought to keep in mind that when it comes to a question between the bodily appetites and spiritual needs, the higher are infinitely more worth while. Francis Greenwood Peabody rightly points out: "Jesus has nothing to say against bread-making; in another place he feeds the multitude. When, however, it is a question of the supreme need of life, he knows that there are necessities more profound than hunger. The fundamental craving of human life, he well knows—and many a human being, though oppressed by poverty and hunger, still feels the deeper need—is for capacity, inspiration, regeneration, personality, power."

The great temptation of the mind is self-seeking. "If you have any kingship or queenship in you, make sure to use it for redemptive ends! Sing no song that is not fit for Christ to hear! Paint no picture which you would not dare to hold up before his gaze! Write no book which you would not lay upon his altar! If you can hold a seat in Parliament, hold it for your country's good! The moment you begin to use it for 'miserable aims that end with self,' you forfeit your right to it."

The third temptation translated into modern terms is the seeking to obtain success, happiness, a life worth living, by worldly means instead of the divine; the attempt to build up the church or Sunday school by pandering to fashion or wealth instead of by spiritual life; the expectation of heaven without the faith and love that make heaven, as by means of forms, or ceremonies, or asceticism; to expect the fruit of victories without fighting the battles. Men expect health, while they violate all the laws of health; they expect results, while they refuse to use the means and call it faith.

HOW TO READ BOOKS

Read the preface first. Go in through the front door.

Read plenty of books about people and things, but not too many books about books.

Read one book at a time, but never one book alone. Well-born books always have relatives. Follow them up.

Read the old books—those that have stood the test of time. Read them slowly, carefully, thoroughly. They will help you to discriminate among the new ones.

Read no book with which the author has not taken pains enough to write in a clean, sound, lucid style. Life is short.

Read over again the ten books that you have already read. The result of this experiment will test your taste, measure your advance, and will fit you for progress in the art of reading.—Henry van Dyke.

Never seek for amusement, but be always ready to be amused. The least thing has play in it, the slightest word wit, when your hands are busy and your heart is free.—Ruskin.

ENDEAVORS: THE WORLD IS COMING TO OHIO THIS YEAR

At the request of our worthy President, J. A. Garber, your Associate President will offer a short message.

Within a few months, Endeavorers from many parts of the world will be on long journeys to assemble in Ohio, at Cleveland; to have a part in one of the best conventions ever held in America. Our watchword in this state is: "BRING THE WORLD TO OHIO." Ohio Endeavorers are working hard and have been for two years to make and conduct the greatest Christian Endeavor Convention, July 2-7, 1927.

Plans are laid for a mammoth parade, a magnificent pageant, for world renowned speakers, broadcasting equipment, special conferences, banquets and sight-seeing trips. Ohio Endeavorers expect to meet fellow-Endeavorers from many states, even to California and Washington.

Our societies should elect delegates at once, have them register with your county or state officers, save cash, and plan to come to Cleveland for the Fourth of July vacation, there meeting Endeavorers of the world.

Watch for our next message VIA Brethren Evangelist.

Ohio Christian Endeavor Secretary for Brethren Church,

REV. E. M. RIDDLE,

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

"He that overcometh shall inherit all things."—Rev. 21:7.

"Give, and it shall be given unto you."—Luke 6:38.

"If any man serve me, him will my Father honor."—John 12:26.

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."—Matt. 21:22.

"Lo, I am with you alway."—Matt. 28:20.

Address Themes

The Promises of God.

Conditional Promises.

I Know It Is True.

Putting God to the Test.

Our Promises—The Christian Endeavor Pledge:

At the End of the Rainbow (rewards for service).

Features

The rainbow, emblem of God's promise, will be an appropriate symbol in advertising this convention.

"A Rainbow Banquet" will make a splendid social feature, with decorations of paper streamers in the rainbow colors. The toast programme may be arranged as follows:

The Violet's Message (loyalty and fellowship).

Indigo Faces (a jolt for the pessimistic).

Sky-blue (Christian Endeavor sunshine).

Green Gardens (Christian Endeavor Growth).

Yellow Fields (opportunities).

Orange Hopes (plans and possibilities).

Seeing Red (a challenge to fight).

At the End of the Rainbow (rewards for service).

The following poem by Annie Johnson Flint may be used on the cover page of the convention programme:

What God Hath Promised

God hath not promised

Skies always blue,

Flower-strewn pathways

All our lives through;

God hath not promised

Sun without rain,

Joy without sorrow,

Peace without pain.

But God hath promised

Strength for the day,

Rest for the labor,

Light for the way,

Grace for the trials,

Help from above,

Unfailing sympathy,

Daring to Stand Alone. Daniel 6: 7-10, 16-18

Once upon a time there was a boy named Daniel. This boy was the son of a king. His mother loved him very much and taught him to believe in God and to do the right things. She told him I feel sure, such things as this, "Daniel, it is better to do the right thing than to have great pleasures. I would rather believe that my boy was true to God and would always be good than anything else that I know about. Goodness is far better than wealth. Dare to do right even if you have to stand alone."

And so as he grew, Daniel loved and obeyed his mother and always he was true to God, whom he worshipped.

One time, when Daniel was about grown, a mighty king invaded the land. Now Daniel was a very nice looking boy. He looked both healthy and bright. This king who was invading the land decided that he would like to have some boys like Daniel to serve him with the other attendance of his court. So, Daniel and several of his friends were taken to the court of this mighty king.

These boys found that there were other boys in the court. At first, it looked like they would find lots of friends with whom they could have a good time. But they were not there long until Daniel and his friends began to realize that these other boys did lots of things that were wrong. Daniel's mother had taught him that he should not drink wine or eat foods that were not good for him. Daniel saw that these other boys were not only eating and drinking the wrong things but they were indulging in types of pleasure that Daniel knew were wrong. When Daniel saw this, he said to his friends,

"Let's talk to those who have charge of us and see if they are willing to give us the kind of food that we know is best for us."

That seemed like a hard thing to do. If the boys would have been willing to do the things that the others were doing, then they could have spent their time with a whole group of young fellows having a good time. If they asked to be treated in a way that was different from the rest, they might never learn to know the people about them and have friends in the court.

When the boys had made their request it was granted and so they stood alone for the right, while the many people in the court did the things that were wrong.

Many years passed and the king, finding that Daniel was a good fellow, one who was dependable and who was never afraid to do the right thing, gave him an office in the court.

All these years, Daniel remembered to worship God, for the other people in the court did not believe in God. Even the mighty king of the land did not believe in God. So when someone in the court asked the king if he wouldn't like to have the people worship him, he said "Yes." Just think, the king, who was just a man like everyone else, was willing to have people worship him. He even signed a decree saying that everyone had to worship him.

Now what do you think that Daniel will do? Daniel knows that everyone ought to worship God. He knows that he will be punished if he does not worship the king. But Daniel had shown all through the years that he was not afraid to stand alone. So, again he shows his courage. Even when he knows that everyone else is worshipping the king and that people are watching him to see if he will worship the king, too; Daniel kneels down and worships God.

Then the punishment comes. The men took Daniel and thrust him into a den full of lions. Just because he dared to stand alone for the right, he was thrust into a cage of wild animals.

But God rewarded him for standing alone. God took care of him and so the animals did not hurt. So even unto this day people say, "Dare to be a Daniel" and they mean dare to stand for the right even when you have to stand alone.

December here corresponds to June in the home land and we are having summer weather. This favors the attendance for some, but detracts from it in other ways, for it is the time when many families leave to work in the harvest for several months, and the summer diversions also have their influence.

Our different missions are preparing Christmas programs and picnics. Such occasions serve not only to inspire the children, but also attract new people, who when they once come find it easier to come again.

In Buenos Aires the heat has been extreme and has affected the attendance. In Laboulaye many have gone to the harvest, but the attendance has increased until it has passed sixty at each of the two Sunday schools. In Alejandro the hall is rather small to accommodate all the people who come. In Cabrera and Deheza some families of believers have moved away but others are coming in and the work is making steady progress.

In Rio Cuarto we miss the help of Sister Nielsen, who has been gone six weeks visiting other missions, but the church is working well and the house is filled on Sundays, both afternoon and evening. The Sunday school is having several more benches made to accommodate the people. Our branch school is also growing. I have eight in my class of converts preparing for baptism and we are prayin gand organizing for a campaign in January. Several more of our members are called to other towns by their work, but they will be faithful wherever they are.

The Bible Coach is in Laboulaye, having arrived over some terrible roads after evangelizing the southern part of our district. Brother Yett has returned to Huinca Renanco to help for awhile in the work there and Brother Siccardi is canvassing Laboulaye with Bibles.

The Barracks Fight

By F. S. Miller

These missionaries are just standing by and doing nothing to aid our country in its day of trouble. They are letting it be eaten up; I am going to Seoul to help to save it," declared the "Firebrand" to a group of Chungju Christians. This conversation was repeated to the missionaries, and they smiled, for they knew the "Firebrand," as they called him, and they knew that his zeal was not tempered with either knowledge or wisdom. They were perplexed, for he was making it difficult for them to hold the confidence of their people, standing as they did between two firing lines. This was at the time when the Japanese thought the missionaries were helping the Koreans, and the Koreans suspected them of siding with the Japanese, because America rendered them no aid. How was the problem to be solved before it scattered the flocks to the mercy of the wolves?

Mr. Flower met "Firebrand" in front of the compound a week later. "Well, Nam, what did you do in Seoul to help your country?" he asked. With rather a shamed face Nam replied, "There was nothing I could do; it was too late." Just then the postman handed Mr. Flower a letter from his children saying: "We leave Chefoo Tuesday and arrive in Chemulpo Wednesday. Please meet us." Bidding Nam good-bye, he hurried home, packed, and started for Seoul, where he learned that the ship was delayed for several days in Chefoo harbor.

The next morning at the breakfast table, as the company was talking of the possibility of an uprising to prevent the annexation of Korea, several volleys were heard from the city walls. "There it starts," they exclaimed, as they arose and ran out to the edge of the terrace toward the city. For several hours the battle went on; Japanese machine guns in the South and West Gate towers were rattling a deadly fire into the barracks. Every once in a while a sound like a pistol shot occurred near the watchers. "What is that?" was asked several times before they realized that it was the sound of stray shots striking bricks and tiles near by.

"Better go inside," advised the doctor, but it was impossible to keep heads from projecting over the window sills, especially as the Koreans began to climb down the city wall in an attempt to escape after their ammunition had given out. Shots could be seen striking the wall around them, and several Koreans were killed.

The firing ceased; the gates were opened to traffic. "There is work in there for physicians and nurses," the missionaries had kept repeating, and the doctor's wife had prepared red crosses to pin on the arms of those going in. The Japanese guard at the barracks gate, recognizing the crosses and stretchers, made no objections to their entry.

The Japanese wounded and dead had all been carried away, and their physicians and nurses were too busy with them to care for the Korean wounded, some of whom were rapidly bleeding to death. While the doctor and nurses gave first aid, Mr. Flower searched among the dead for the living, carrying buckets of water and satisfying their thirst, collected windows and doors to serve as stretchers, and helped to carry the wounded outside the gate. The guard would not allow him to bring carriers in, but just outside was a crowd of onlookers who were willing to bear a stretcher if the Japanese at the gate could see that they were being forcibly compelled to do so by the Americans. In this way about fifty were sent off when the Japanese physicians arrived and forbade further interference in their affair.

Later several Westerners arrived and lent a hand; with them was the editor of the Korean newspaper. In his report the next day he mentioned Mr. Flower as being among those who rendered assistance, and when Mr. Flower and the Buds arrived in Chungju they found that this newspaper report had preceded them and had put a stop to the local talk about the missionaries' failure to help the Koreans.

When the insurrection spread all over the Chungju territory, and colporteurs and lay preachers were in danger from both sides of the struggle, any man with a card from the missionary was allowed to go about his work within the insurgent lines, and was told, "He is our friend; he helped the wounded at the barracks fight."

In a Far Country

People who keep in touch with foreign missions realize the extent to which modern inventions are making their way all over the world; they are not particularly surprised when a missionary from India states that he is now covering in a Ford the ground he used to traverse on a camel thirty years ago, nor do they wonder very much when a letter comes from the remotest new station in Africa written on the same kind of typewriter as that which fills a niche in thousands of offices and studies in the United States.

But once in a while some familiar bit of our experience gets to the East in such a striking way that we are more and more certain nothing is too small to be important. What, for instance, could be more commonplace than a can of Dutch Cleanser? But on the other hand, what could be more unusual than the combination of a can of Dutch Cleanser and a group of Devil worshipers out in the hills of Irak, beyond Mosul? The Yezidis or Devil worshipers are a sect who, as the name implies, believe that Satan is more powerful than God; they fear the Evil One to such an extent that they do not mention his name, but offer terror-stricken prayers to him under the name of King Peacock, making sacrifices with strange rites to keep him from doing the harm they dread. No Zezidi ever knew how to read; none had any conception of the tumultuous life outside their hills, or what the part played by the new Kingdom of Irak might be. Only their sheik, as his son grew to be an energetic boy, realized that the world was changing, and that if the Yezidis were not to drop out entirely, they must change too. So he took the law of centuries into his hands and sent his son down to Bagdad to a high school under British direction, where he is learning the ordinary things a boy learns in high school anywhere. That was startling enough, but it was only a beginning. The sheik had a daughter, too, a little girl of eight. About the time she was born, one of the American missionaries who was friendly to both sides during the terrible days of the Kurdish massacres had saved the Yezidis from destruction, and the sheik had been his warm friend ever since. Sitting on the roof of the house as Orientals do on the hot nights, the sheik and the missionary looked out on the ruins of ancient hills, and down into the courtyard of the Roman fortifications along the crest of the house, with its paving and pillars taken from the ruins of an old Roman villa; but they had their minds upon the future as they discussed what was to become of the sheik's people.

One outcome of their talks was that the little girl was intrusted to the care of the missionary, to live in his family, to go to school and—if she could, for probably even her father doubted—learn to read as boys did. What the elders of the tribe said, how they shook their heads, wagged their beards, and prophesied disaster, we do not know; but the child went to town, learned to brush her tangled hair, learned to wear slippers on her wild little feet, and did learn to read from the Arabic primers used in the schools. The English books in the missionary's house she could not read, of course, but she could look at the pictures, and how she could ask questions! So the missionary's wife had her make a scrapbook to take back to her village when vacation time should come; into it went pictures from the world without, cut from magazines—automobiles and airplanes, children and grown people, houses, cities, and towns.

At vacation time she went back to her village with her book; and it was hard to tell whether people were more astonished because she could read, or because she was so clean and orderly.

And the women were even more surprised. "She washes her face every day," they said, "and her hair is as smooth as the pigeon's wing. She is not afraid of anything, not even"—they lowered their voices—"not even of King Peacock! It is a miracle that such a thing could happen."

But the little girl knew it was not a miracle. She had learned about soap and water and scrubbing powders, about books and automobiles, but she had learned more than that. She had learned why she need not be afraid. For the missionary and his family were not afraid of the Evil One. Why should they be? And so to all the hushed, frightened questions she answered, "I am not afraid any more, because God is stronger than King Peacock!"—Forward.

THEN AND NOW IN JAPAN

I visited the museum in Tokyo the other day, and I saw a sign which said, "The evil Christian sect is firmly forbidden as heretofore." That sign is in the museum as a curiosity. Fifty years ago it was found everywhere, and Christianity was forbidden in Japan. Fifty years have made a wonderful change.

Fifty years ago there were only eleven baptized Christians in Japan. Today there are 133,000, and there are 219,000 children enrolled in Sunday schools.

Fifty years ago Japan was an Oriental nation, keeping apart from the world, and not wanting to mingle with the life of other nations. Now Japan is a great world power, largely because Christianity opened the door to her.

Seventy years ago Japan did not trade with foreign nations. Today she sends to the United States alone three hundred million dollars' worth of goods.

Sixty years ago there was not a modern school in Japan. Now there are 36,000 schools, 186,000 teachers, and 8,500,000 pupils.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Firs Church of Johnstown goes over $6,000.00 to College Endowment

This church is well known to the readers of the Evangelist as one of our Front Line churches. It was only a few years ago that it took some forward steps in erecting one, if not the most beautiful house of worship, in our brotherhood.

Past associations with this people as their pastor for nearly six years, made our work a delight. The fullest cooperation was given by their pastor, Brother Charles Ashman and the membership gave a united support to the Endowment.

Johnstown is one of the industrial cities of Pennsylvania and has been hard hit the past year in a business slump and the giving of this people was a real sacrifice.

The Johnstown church is not made up with people of wealth; the facts are, the membership is composed of wage earning people. The people and pastor are to be congratulated upon the fine piece of work done for the kingdom. I found the church a bee-hive of activity. They have the best Christian Endeavor society that I have seen for a long time and their school of the Bible is being largely attended.

Brother Albert Trent (the veteran Sunday school superintendent) is still at his post and they got back of the Endowment with a $1,000.00 gift.

THE TIME IS HERE IN THE HISTORY OF ASHLAND COLLEGE AND SEMINARY, THAT IF THE CHURCH DESIRES TO MAINTAIN A SCHOOL OF MERIT AND RECOGNITION, IT MUST PUT OVER THE REQUIRED ENDOWMENT. THE STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA HAS TAKEN A DECIDED STAND IN EDUCATIONAL STANDARDS AND NO COLLEGE THAT DOES NOT HAVE $500,000.00 ENDOWMENT BACK OF IT CAN HOPE FOR RECOGNITION. THIS IS MORE THAN A MERE MONEY RAISING CAMPAIGN, IT IS A QUESTION OF LIFE OR DEATH OF OUR ONLY EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION.

The total gift of the First church of Johnstown was $6,246.50, and if I am not mistaken this will be enlarged before our campaign comes to a close.

W. S. BELL

PORTIS, KANSAS

It was the privilege of the writer to spend two weeks the last part of November and the first days of December in an evangelistic effort at the beautiful town of Portis, Kansas, where W. R. Deeter is the efficient pastor. It was a real treat to spend the time here with the good people of this community. The hospitality of their homes is unsurpassed anywhere. I was not a stranger here, as there were several old friends, whom I had learned to love more than twenty years ago, when I was a pastor in north-western Kansas.

The Portis church is forging forward, not withstanding the reverses it has encountered in the past, these reverses are being used properly, as stepping stones to a greater future. And my estimation is that Deeter is the right man at the right place. He is well known and highly respected by the entire community. His work is well organized, advertised and energized. We had fine attendance all through the meeting, and the other two churches revealed a fine spirit of cooperation, in attending the services and even dismissing their services on Sunday evenings.

The writer was once pastor of the Deeters, and at that time it became his privilege to speak a few words, which means the blending of two lives, and I do not think they hold any grudge toward him for those words.

I spent about one week at the home of Brother Turners and the next week at the parsonage with the Deeters.

As it is impossible to mention all by name, I will say that I enjoyed every minute of time spent there, and really was sad when leaving time came. Will leave the report of the meeting to Brother Deeter. He certainly kept me busy while there. These people certainly know how to entertain the evangelist, and I think I will not call this the "short grass country" any more.

Fort Scott, Kansas

The work here was well cared for, in my absence, by Miss Ella Saylor, of Portis, and Mrs. Wood. Miss Saylor spent several weeks with us here and we appreciate her work very much. Our work here is moving slowly on, and we now have some favorable outlook, for the future. The attendance is increasing and we are getting some new families enlisted in attendance. We had a good Christmas program and also a very successful Watch Meeting, conducted by the Christian Endeavor Society. We have received one into the church by baptism since our last report. The Bible school is gaining and so also the Woman's Missionary Society and the Christian Endeavor Society, the mid-week prayer and Bible study is going steady with about an average of 15 present.

Before this is printed in the Evangelist we expect to have Rev. A. V. Kimmell of Whittier, California, with us in an evangelistic campaign. We feel very fortunate in finding Brother Kimmell and the Evangelistic Bible Study League, willing and able to help us in this fine way. We solicit the prayers of all who pray, for this campaign. The meeting is set and advertised to begin January 9th. We are out to do our best and keep on doing it for the glory of the name of our coming King. L. G. WOOD.

PORTIS, KANSAS

On November 23rd, L. G. Wood came from Fort Scott to hold us a two weeks' revival campaign. The weather and roads were fine most of the time, and most everything contributed to the welfare of a great meeting. To say that Brother Wood's messages were second to none in soundness and truth, is but to say they were strictly fundamental. They were also well received by the many who heard them. They carried the note of revelation as well as instruction.

Ever since we have been in the ministry we have craved the opportunity of working with Brother Wood. After years of waiting the time came and we enjoyed it immensely. He is a true yokefellow. We visited in many homes both in town and country.

We worked the evangelist hard while here, preaching three times each Sunday, and gave the message for the Union Thanksgiving service, as well as giving four afternoons to Bible study. The average attendance at the latter was 18 and the average for preaching services was 112.

Monday, December 6th was stormy and icy and cold, and instead of keeping Wood for the evening services in which we were to baptize we left him go on the evening train. Three had come forward at previous services. But at this one when the invitation was given, four more came out to accept the Lord as Savior and be initiated into the church by the rite of holy baptism. Our hearts were made glad, for some came whom we had been praying for for many months. A few others promised to come later on, and we are looking forward to this happy event, for such occasions always make us rejoice.

Brother Wood went back to his home and his work feeling well repaid for his efforts among us, spiritually, financially, and physically, for he did not get hungry among our good people.

One interesting feature of our meetings was the good singing. The question came up, "Who shall we have to lead the song services?" After some deliberation the Official Board gave their consent to use local talent. We had a young lady whom we asked to take over the responsibility, and she did herself proud. She is efficient enough to lead in most any meeting. We are grateful to Miss Aneta Thompson for her splendid work.

We are open to date any one a meeting during the coming winter season or early spring months. If interested, write us.

The local work is holding up real well considering industrial and financial conditions. We are looking ahead through faith to better times. The Sunday school has elected new officers for the coming year, and other auxiliaries are still active and doing quite well.

Our Christmas program was unique—in that it was "different." It was entitled "Little Orphan Joe," entirely in keeping with the spirit of the occasion, intermingled with carols and hymns that were appropriate. At the close the classes came forward and presented their White Gifts for the King, while the superintendent offered a prayer of consecration. The gifts amounted to over $40.00. W. R. DEETER.

BERLIN, PENNSYLVANIA

Our last report from Berlin was May 12 and had to do with the dedication of our new church. The last seven months have proven the new church an absolute necessity. How did we ever get along without it? The fact is that a number of things have occurred which would have been impossible without this building, as this report will show.

The first of these events was the bacca-lareate service. An audience of about seven hundred assembled on this occasion, the sermon was preached by the Lutheran minister. The evening of July 4 marked the dedication of the new pipe organ. The program consisted of an address by the pastor and special music by the choir. Some of our good people from Meyersdale very ably assisted in the music. An organ recital was given two evenings the next week by Prof. Alfred Johnson. Prof. Johnson is a Berlin boy. He is at the present time instructor in the Musical Institute of Pittsburgh. We are well pleased with our organ. It is the Mohler make, two manual, and cost $4,000.00. Miss Thelma Saylor is the efficient organist.

It was the privilege of the Berlin church to entertain the Pennsylvania Conference in October. The presence of Brethren people from over the state was an inspiration to our people. The program was exceptionally good and proved to be enlightening and instructive. A number of our Berlin people have for some years been active in the conference work, others were led to see the importance of this gathering. It is to be said to the credit of the folks here that they acquitted themselves nobly in their entertainment.

Evangelism

Two meetings have been held by the writer in recent months. The first at Aleppo, Pennsylvania, from July 20 to August 2. This is one of a circuit of three churches in Green county. The work here was formerly much stronger in numbers and organization than at present. These are rural churches and are passing through the experience which is common to such. The first need is a pastor for full time. Brother Orville D. Ullom, an Aleppo boy, has been serving these churches during the summer months, but is absent the greater part of the year on account of school work. Here is a needy field, and one which is not without its prospects. The meetings were fairly well attended and we have reason to believe that good was accomplished. Many of the believers expressed themselves as having been helped. A pre-prayer service was held each evening in the home of Sister Julia Murray. These meetings were well attended and gave strength and encouragement to the evangelist. Entertainment was in the home of Sister Margaret Moore. This was also the home of the pastor. Sister Moore, her daughter and son-in-law have since moved to Texas. Their going has been quite a loss to the church. My boy was with me in this meeting. We will ever remember with pleasure the kindness and hospitality shown us in the Moore home and by all of the Aleppo people. It was a pleasure to work with Brother Ullom. He is a young man with a great future before him.

A second meeting was with our people in Pittsburgh from October 17 to 31. Brother A. L. Lynn is the efficient pastor here. This was our first meeting with Brother Lynn and the Pittsburgh church. This people had but recently renovated their building. We have here a large and well equipped plant. The membership here is scattered over this large city, some living beyond the limits. This condition makes the work extremely difficult. But Brother Lynn is equal to the task; he has proven himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. The pastor here has the confidence and respect of his people and is much loved by all. Considerable time was spent in visiting. This made possible a more intimate acquaintance with the members and friends of the church. In this meeting we were brought face to face with the problem of building up a Brethren church in a large city in these modern times. Two were led to confess Christ. Many of the believers expressed themselves as having been blessed. Entertainment was in the home of the pastor. The fellowship together was most blessed. It was a privilege to work with Brother Lynn and his good people. This meeting, as did the one at Aleppo, closed with communion.

Our meeting here at Berlin was held from November 15 to December 5. We were assisted in this special effort by Brother F. G. Coleman, pastor at Flora, Indiana, as evangelist, and Brother and Sister J. B. Long of Los Angeles, California, as the singers. A time indeed of special blessing and refreshing. The attendance throughout was good, and there were times when we had a capacity house. Many people of other denominations attended and expressed themselves as having been spiritually blessed. Brother Long as precentor gave to us at service a variety of program which was inspiring as well as entertaining. Sister Long presided at piano or organ in a very efficient manner. The "Singing Longs," as they are commonly known, greatly endeared themselves to our people. These talented and consecrated young people are doing a great work for their Master. Too much cannot be said for Brother Coleman. For some years we had been trying to arrange for this meeting. We expected great things and were not disappointed. Talented and consecrated, fundamental in his belief, he preaches with a power which moves men toward the cross. Truth was presented in a very clear and precise manner. Hearts were touched, vows were renewed, the lost were saved. The visible results are as follows: thirty-five confessed Christ, twenty-eight of these have united with the church, the others will go elsewhere. And the revival continues. Five others have united with the church by baptism, and still others are coming. These with one who was baptized during this summer makes a total of thirty-four added to the church since last report, or a total of forty-seven for this calendar year. We rejoice in the victories throughout the brotherhood. May the Lord continue to bless and keep his own.

W. C. BENSHOFF.

ST. JAMES, MARYLAND

We are glad to be able to report that the Lord's work at St. James is making commendable progress under the leadership of Brother Thoburn C. Lyon, who will soon close his first year of service as our pastor. Brother Lyon is a man of God, thoroughly consecrated and capable of preaching the word of God. We feel that we are indeed fortunate to have him to work with us for the Lord.

Regular services are held here and at Tilghmanton each Sunday; both places have their peculiar problems, but we are glad that we can say there are some mighty loyal people at both places.

Our fall communion service, held November 14th, was well attended; so, in fact, are most of our regular services. Our last quarterly business meeting was the largest attended in the history of the church.

The various auxiliaries of the church have been faithfully maintained. Our Sunday school is keeping up its standard and going forward under the leadership of our Superintendent, Brother Byron T. Bloom, and his able corps of officers and teachers. Rally Day was observed in the Sunday school in October, with 156 present; the Sunday school offering, about $27.00, was given toward the purchase of new song books for the church. Already we are enjoying the use of these books. The W. M. S. is alive and working to keep things on the move. On November 4th they gave a special program in behalf of our Kentucky work, which was very well attended. Our S. M. M. has been active. They recently entertained the Sisterhood girls from Hagerstown, when there were about forty girls present. The Sisterhood also gave a special program at the church on the evening of December 2; a silver offering was received, and a nice sum of money realized for their work.

On Sunday morning, December 19, our hearts were made sad when Brother Harvey S. Poffenberger left us to meet his Savior whom he loved and served so well. Mr. Poffenberger was one of the promoters of the church and a faithful member. He was a deacon and the treasurer of the church for a number of years. The church shares with the family a natural sorrow because of our loss.

We are anticipating a great time in January, as we have made arrangements with Brother Robert Porte, of Louisville, Ohio, to lead us in a three weeks' revival meeting. We are working and praying that these meetings will be of real spiritual benefit to this community. We wish in advance to thank the good people of the Louisville church for the loan of their pastor. We covet your prayers for this revival.

We wish for and pray God's blessing on all his people.

Men render the power of God inoperative and valueless in their lives because of their unbelief. Lack of confidence in God deprives us of the most powerful ally we could have and leaves us helpless to fight the battle of life. For a life triumphant we must have confidence in ourselves and faith in God. Then we will know that our souls are unconquerable.—Presbyterian Standard.

WHITE GIFT OFFERINGS

The following White Gifts have been received to January 6. There are 72 reports compared with 51 reports for last year to January 6. In general it appears that the offering this year will fall 25 per cent below the 1925 offering. Last year there were 143 reports (individuals and churches) and it is hoped that there will not only be an increased number of reports this year but also that the reports that will yet come in will boost the total very much higher. Many churches have done splendidly and the kindly notes and letters to the Treasurer found with many of the checks are enjoyable and encouraging. We wish some of them might be printed. May we urge you again to send all reports in promptly to M. P. Puterbaugh, Ashland, Ohio. There is no reason why the reports should drag out. Christmas is over! Take down the Christmas tree, put away the bells and wreaths, starting wearing your Christmas presents and SEND IN YOUR OFFERING!!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

OHIO PASTORS' CONVENTION

"The Ohio Pastors' Convention is a unique institution. There is nothing like it anywhere else in the world," Rev. B. F. Lamb, executive secretary of the Ohio Council of Churches, said today.

He urged Ohio churches to take advantage of their unusual opportunity to reap the benefits of interdenominational cooperation for their communities by sending their pastors to the eighth annual Ohio Pastors' Convention, in Columbus January 24-27.

"While religious leaders throughout the country have for several years been watching this convention as one of the most significant institutions in present-day religious life," remarked Dr. Lamb, "I find that Ohio church people in general do not appreciate what an unusual gathering it is.

"In our conferences, synods, conventions and other denominational meetings we deal with our various sectors of the Kingdom-building program. But in this one meeting alone do we have the opportunity to broaden our viewpoint to take in the whole Christian enterprise in its entirety, which is wider than any denominational program. Here we place our common purposes in evangelism, religious education and many other fields of work above denominational interests. Here we can unitedly make an impact upon the whole population of Ohio, both within and outside the church, which is impossible for any denominational body.

The Ohio Pastors' Convention is doing a great work in breaking down barriers between the churches and overcoming sectarian isolation. The result is evident in scores of communities where the spirit and practice of cooperation are growing and competition among the churches is dying out."

Pointing out that 726 ministers of 23 denominations from 84 Ohio counties registered for last year's convention, Dr. Lamb continued:

"That such a gathering will have far-reaching effects is certain, for the men who attend carry back to their home communities the influence of collective thought on great issues that confront the churches, the inspiration of intimate contact with great national religious leaders and the consciousness of fellowship and common purpose among all Christians, regardless of denomination.

"Facing an opportunity that is enjoyed in no other state, every Ohio church ought to embrace it eagerly by sending its pastor to the convention."

V. E. McVICKER,
415 Outlook Building, Columbus, Ohio.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Brethren of Washington, D. C., wish to announce that they will dedicate the first unit of their new church the last Sunday of January. Previous to the dedication services there will be held a series of inspirational services beginning Sunday, January 16. Brother Louis S. Bauman of Long Beach, California, will have charge of the dedication of the new building. We covet the prayers of the Evangelist family for God's blessing upon us in these services.

HOMER A. KENT, Pastor.

EDITORIAL

Is the Church Becoming Childless

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon suggests as much in an editorial in the "Christian Herald" recently. He recounts having faced an almost childless congregation of more than one thousand persons in a large city. On the Saturday night preceding this engagement the main street of that community, he says, "swarmed with children and young people, hundreds of whom were on their way to moving-picture houses, of which there were seven always crowded every Saturday night. But when the service in the church began next morning at eleven o'clock, there were fewer than twenty-five children in the audience. By actual count made by the ushers there were fewer than that number of young people of high school age. Altogether, counting in all ages between twelve and twenty, there may have been forty all told who would be called young folks." This experience of Dr. Sheldon caused him to ask a few pertinent questions, which he thinks are voiced "by the average American minister" as he preaches Sunday after Sunday to his audience of grown-up Christians and considers with sinking heart his practically "childless church." The questions he asks are these:

"Do children need to go to church as well as to Sunday school? If so, whose fault is it that they do not go? Is it the fault of the parents, or the minister, or the service?"

"If the children of this generation neglect the church services, how much church will be left after the present generation of grown-up people is dead? Are parents afraid of their children, and dare not require them to sit in the pew with them?"

As this prominent writer and preacher suggests, this is not a new problem, but has long puzzled the minds of many sincere shepherds of souls throughout the land. Yet we doubt whether the "average American minister" has given any very serious thought or effort to its solution. For no church problem can successfully withstand the efforts of so large a percent of the church's consecrated ministry. There is a goodly number of the ministry vitally and actively concerned, but it is probable that the "average American minister" does little more than lament the absence of children and young people from his services, and lamentation solves no problems.

Dr. Sheldon's first question strikes at the key to the problem. If we believed, and believed it very strongly, that the children need the church services as well as the Sunday school, we would not have such a big problem on our hands. The fact is, neither ministers nor parents in any very large numbers believe the child needs the church, or the latter would see that he is in attendance and the former would make provision for his interest. Practically everybody wants the young people and believes they need the church, but there is a very large question in the mind of the average minister and church member as to whether the child needs or realizes any benefit from the church service. Here is our chief weakness—we are accustomed to let the absence of the little ones of our flocks to pass unnoticed or without concern until they have reached the "young people" age, and some have even preferred their absence during these tender years because they have considered them an annoyance. It is true that the average child adds little or nothing to the worship programs of our churches, and sometimes, especially for the nervous-tempered people, his presence operates as "static" to the spirit of worship. However, if there must be a choice between the two (which is seldom necessary with proper understanding and preparation) the future of the church and of the child is more to be considered than the slight annoyance of a few unsympathetic worshipers.

It is of the utmost importance whether the child learns to love, and forms the habit of, church-going. The habits that are formed during the first dozen or fifteen years of the child's life are very likely to remain with him to the end of his days. If the church attendance habit is not formed during that period, it seldom becomes a very real part of one's life. It is folly to overlook or be indifferent to the children, and then bewail the absence of young people. If we are to have young people in our public worship in any appreciable numbers and regularity, we must begin with the children. That is not only true of young people but of adults as well. The vast majority of the irregularity of our adult attendance is traceable to the failure to form right church attendance habits in childhood. Many a preacher is worried half to death about the irregularity of his church members and the almost total lack of attendance of non-church members and all sorts of tricks and honest efforts are resorted to to get a decent hearing. But until we begin to correct the evil at its beginning, or seek to prevent the forming of antagonistic habits, we shall find ourselves tugging away at an uphill proposition. It is a serious weakness that churches far and wide have slipped into—that of neglecting or ignoring the children in the church services.

It seems very clear that the responsibility for this situation lies in two directions—toward the home and toward the pulpit. And any satisfactory solution will involve the cooperation of both parents and ministers. And ministers being leaders in religious matters must be responsible for leading out in any serious attack upon the problem. This in many cases will require an almost entire reconstruction of the minister's mental attitude. He must realize that reaching and interesting the children in church services is not unworthy of his talents, that he is not wasting his time in so doing, that it is not beneath his dignity. He must possess or cultivate a genuine love for childhood, and allow human interest and kindness to characterize his attitude. He who is frigid and unduly formal must needs be worked over and warmed up before he can get on with children. He must seek to understand child nature, his mental limitations, his natural turn toward variety and the concrete and what in general is his field of interest. And with that mind and heart equipment he must set himself to the task of putting something into his worship program and sermon, or into a special brief message, that is within the range of the child's interest and understanding. Having done this and made plans for encouraging the child's attendance, he may conscientiously approach the parents to appeal for their cooperation.

It seems strange that there should be found any difficulty in securing parental cooperation in the encouragement of church attendance on the part of children, and most especially when parents are church members. We would expect parents most of all to be interested in the highest welfare of their children, and so, eager for the cooperation of any one who stands ready and equipped to aid them in building up in the minds of their little charges habits that will work to their eternal good. But some parents on account of their own non-church-going and irreligious habits do not realize the value of church attendance on the part of their children. The mere consent of such parents is about all one can expect. Others have the erroneous conception that Sunday school is for children and church services for adults, and the problem is to give them a new view of the situation. Many others, Christian parents as well as non-Christian, are disinclined to urge their children to attend church after having been in the Sunday school session, because they imagine it will work a hardship upon them. But many of these same parents will permit, if not encourage, their children, after spending a much longer time in day-school than they do in Sunday school, to go to the stuffy moving picture house, where their eyes are exposed to strain, their nerves to undue excitement and their minds to unworthy suggestions. It is like straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. Still other parents fail to urge church attendance on the part of their children merely because of an over-indulgence of the child's wishes to do something else, or because they purposely pursue a policy of not forcing the child to do that which he objects to doing lest there be developed in him a distaste for that thing. But the way to develop in a child a taste for parsnips, after they have been appetizingly prepared, is to encourage the thought of their being relished and to insist on their being tasted whenever they are served. The same sort of wisdom exercised with regard to church attendance would result in the vast majority of cases in building up a delight in it. And even where childish objections are persistently expressed, which would be unusual with the parents accompanying the child and the preacher cooperating to make such attendance a pleasure, the issues at stake are so vital and far-reaching that parents can afford to insist upon the child complying with their wishes with that regularity that will build up a habit that will be a fortification against the days of greater independence on the part of the youthful individual. The element of discipline is all too much omitted in the average home, and in that mission we are not only violating the law of God for the highest development of the soul, but lessening the prospects of the child's future.

There will be many other objections offered, but thank God there will not be wanting those parents who will give their hearty approval and cooperation. Such parents and the minister must be prepared to do what they can to meet all objections, wisely but earnestly, and to enlist the cooperation of all so far as possible, for the support of parents is invaluable and the lack of it greatly limits the degree and permanence of the success. The issues are vital and urgent and warrant the utmost zeal. The welfare of the church and of the child are at stake. The church cannot persist childless and the child cannot build an abiding life churchless.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother W. A. Gearhart's report of Home Mission receipts is found in this issue. Look it over and see if your church is given credit, if not better report soon.

The general secretary of the National Sunday School Association, Brother J. A. Garber, supplies us with a newsletter this week. Turn to the Sunday school page and read it.

Brother Charles H. Ashman, pastor of the First church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, is holding an evangelistic campaign in his own church and expects to be in a similar campaign at Berne, Indiana, in February.

Dr. W. H. Beachler, pastor of our big Dayton, Ohio, church is his own evangelist in a campaign which began January 9th and is scheduled to last three weeks. Prof. O. E. Gebhardt of that city is the song leader.

The management of the Moody Bible Institute has completed plans for the broadcasting of messages to be delivered by the principal speakers at the twenty-second annual Founder's Week Conference, February 1 to 5, in Chicago, through station W M B I, 288.3 meters.

Dr. E. E. Jacobs, president of Ashland College, gives us several news items concerning the college and related personalities. Among them, we are glad to note that through the offices of Professor Mason the work of the college in Education continues to have the full approval of the state department of education. With this assured the enrollment of the college ought to continue to increase.

Our correspondent from La Verne, California, writes an interesting letter, revealing a healthy condition of the work at that place where Brother H. H. Tay is the capable pastor. The Sunday school has experienced a splendid growth and the church is to press evangelism for a period of two months. One of the noteworthy features of their Christmas celebration was the giving of gifts of very practical sorts and in generous amounts, especially in the remembering of our missionaries and mission stations in Africa and Kentucky.

Prof. J. A. Garber, president of Brethren Endeavordom, calls attention of Brethren societies to Christian Endeavor Week, January 30 to February 6, and tells where material may be secured for carrying out the program suggested. See Christian Endeavor page in this issue. This is an excellent opportunity to witness to the virtues of Christian Endeavor and to extend its influence and service. The wide-awake societies will make use of it.

Brother H. E. Eppley, who is engaged in evangelistic work, reports his meetings at Listie, and Raystown, Pennsylvania. At Listie he officiated at the dedication of their remodeled church and he reports all funds raised before he left the field. He leaves the reporting of results to the pastor Brother H. W. Nowag, from whom we hope to hear in the near future. At Raystown he had the assistance of Brother W. S. Crick, the enterprising pastor, who has already made his report. Brother Eppley's efforts in the evangelistic field are being blessed of God, and he requests the support of the prayers of those who pray.

The article published in last week's Evangelist entitled, "A 'Two-foot Shelf' of Books for Children" was reprinted from the "Herald of Gospel Liberty" and it was not intended that it should slip through without due credit, but we noticed after the paper was off the press that that very thing happened. Our good friend, Dr. Kerr, the editor of this splendid periodical, probably never would have made a complaint, but it is only fair to him and to our readers to make this statement. It was a most excellent contribution and we suggest that Evangelist readers preserve it for future reference, especially those who may have the responsibility of directing the reading of children.

The Indiana District Board of Evangelists purposes to be an active cog in the church machinery of that district, and they have outlined a program of fundamental activities in which they are seeking the cooperation of the churches. It too often happens that when a conference elects committees and assigns tasks that the duties are not taken very seriously and time flies by with little or nothing accomplished. It is encouraging to note that this committee purposes to be active, to do the work assigned to it. And the churches whose representatives elected this Board of Evangelists owe these men their cooperation. They are Dr. G. W. Rench, president, G. L. Maus, secretary, and H. F. Stuckman.

Dr. G. C. Carpenter, pastor of the church at Hagerstown, Maryland, reports a successful evangelistic campaign in his church, with Brother F. G. Coleman as the evangelist and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Long as directors of music, the numerical results being twenty-three confessions. Christmas was fittingly observed in this church and the giving spirit is growing as is evidenced by the offerings for General Home Missions and the White Gift. Brother Carpenter seconds the suggestion recently made by Dr. J. Allen Miller, that pastors and church officials report more frequently to the Evangelist, and this word comes very fittingly from Dr. Carpenter because he has been very faithful in his support of the paper both by his church reports and his contributions to the thought-life of the brotherhood.

Dr. W. S. Bell reports the success of the College Endowment campaign in the Second and Third churches of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. In the Third Brethren church of which Brother J. L. Gingrich is pastor the gift was $1,189.97. This is considered good in view of the fact that this church recently built a new house of worship, and then erected a splendid new brick parsonage. The Second church is a mission point and since Brother Dyoll Belote took charge it has been lifted out of discouragement into considerable confidence and promise. Evangelist readers will recall the recent description of the dedication of their commodious new church. In view of this condition the $500.00 gift for College Endowment is considered a mark of loyalty. Dr. Bell considers both these churches to have shown a good spirit and purpose to have done what they did in the face of prevailing conditions.

GENERAL ARTICLES

"On Time"

By G. C. Carpenter, D.D.

On asking a railroad conductor, "Are we on time?" he looked at his watch and answered, "Yes, sir," and it was evident that he took personal pride in being able thus to answer. Of course he meant that the train was on time according to the fixed schedule adopted by the railroad. It is a worthy ambition to be on time always.

Adam Clarke, the noted Bible commentator had as a neighbor a ripe scholar. One evening both men saw advertised for sale a copy of the Greek Testament of Erasmus. As soon as the scholar swallowed a bit of breakfast he hastened to the shop but heard the bookman say: "You are too late, the book is sold." "Too late? Why I came as soon as I had eaten my breakfast." "Yes, but Adam Clarke came before breakfast." "On time" depends upon what time it is needful to be on hand. Everybody knows the meaning of the call "All Aboard!"

This is a day of travel. A railroad system or an individual has a right to take justifiable pride in being "On Time." All are traveling on the highway of time that leads to eternity. God has furnished a fixed schedule in his Holy Word. Are we "On Time?" Happy they who travel on the Highway of Holiness, which Isaiah described. Happy indeed are all who travel by the NARROW WAY, always avoiding Satan's road which is the Broadway Unlimited, down-grade, fast time.

Many people prefer the easy way rather than the hard way. It always appears easier to travel down-grade, rather than up-grade. But this is the devil's deception. Most autoists would rather drive a car that is full of pep and power up a mountain than to coast down a mountain, any day. There is more real sport in traveling the up-grade of the Highway of Holiness than in coasting down-grade on Broadway.

Some people think they are having a good time on the Broadway Unlimited, but ask them: "What about the end of your journey?" "O that is not worrying us, we are prospering. Look at the 1926 dividends, the largest ever. America is getting rich."

Yes, that is true, and America would be the most fortunate nation on the face of the earth if getting rich in gold meant also getting rich in godliness. We have unparalleled wealth! Eleven thousand millionaires in this country, many of them multimillionaires! Seventy-six individuals in the United States each of whom has a net income exceeding a million dollars! Many corporations making over one hundred million dollars each per year!

In our hymn books is a wonderful hymn beginning, "Guide me O thou great Jehovah." One line reads: "Land me safe on Canaan's shore," but in a certain hymn book the printer by mistake made that line read: "Land my safe on Canaan's shore." And while that revised version might be acceptable to many, yet no millionaire or any of the rest of us will need any iron safe to take care of earth's gold on Canaan's shore.

Harry Daniel in the Thrift Magazine says that the American people are spending more than one billion dollars a year in stocks, bonds and other investments with dividends payable in autumn leaves. Who does not have one or more beautifully engraved certificates which, as he says, can be cashed in at any time upon presentation to the butterflies?

ELDER G. C. CARPENTER

Such certificates ought to be object-lessons to remind us that the American dollar is on a schedule that will permit it to earn only about so much legitimately and fairly, and no more. These engraved keepsakes ought to make us wise when someone comes along with a smooth tongue and insists on letting us right in on a big, wonderful, amazing and unparalleled investment opportunity that will double our money in three months if we sign on the dotted line at once.

Better stay by the schedule. These "get rich quick" runs are by special trains and not many of us ride on special trains. The "Get rich quick" bugs are flying around and bother most people sooner or later, but the best way is to brush them aside and learn with Saint Paul "In whatever state we are, therein to be content." That means making life's journey by the schedule God has given us.

People today have forgotten God and turned to their own ways and deserve to be blotted out, but God has withheld judgment for a time, and at the cost of the life of his only Begotten Son has provided a plan of redemption, giving to all men a chance to live by his schedule.

How important that everybody know the schedule! A convenient plan is to read three chapters each week day and five chapters each Sunday, thus reading the Bible through in one year. Twelve minutes each day on the average will be sufficient time.

Somebody asked the late Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman: "What is the secret of your success and power?" He answered: "I find that I have power just in proportion as my soul is saturated through and through with the Word of God."

George T. B. Davis, who has distributed millions of Bibles, Testaments and Gospels, says: "My mother, when eight years of age, had read the New Testament through eight times, and for eighty years she delighted in the Word of God. From sixty-nine to eighty-eight, the last nineteen years of her life, she read the Bible through each year. Mother and I were spending a Sunday in Rothsay, Scotland, and the minister there told us the true story of a young official and his wife who resolved on their wedding day to read the Bible through once each year as long as they lived. They continued the practice and God blessed them. The young man became the Lord Chancellor of England. After his death this sentence was found in his journal, 'This day my wife and I have finished reading the Bible through for the fortieth time, and the last time it was sweeter and more precious than ever before.'"

Then Mr. Davis says: "I told this incident to a group of missionaries in Nanking, China, and after the service one of them said, 'I would like to tell you about my father. He was a farmer in the southern states of America. He read the Bible through once each year for fifty years. He had seven sons, five of whom became ministers of the Gospel and two elders of the church, and one of the sons has been a missionary for more than forty years, and I am that son.' "

We need more fathers and mothers in America who will see to it that their children get acquainted with God's schedule, and who will see to it that their children start life's journey according to that schedule. Give us that and there would be less juvenile crime. The trouble with multitudes of American youth is that the only schedule they have is what they get on the street and in the alley, the dance hall, the card party, the poolroom and the corrupt movies. Let children feed upon the Wild West hold-up movies, but do not be surprised if those children go out and shoot and kill and rob our citizens.

God's schedule says: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," and we are reaping godlessness, lawlessness, unbelief, crime and indifference toward God's schedule.

Some would blame prohibition, but that is wet propaganda. If it were not for prohibition conditions would be unbelievably worse. It was amusing to see the wet congressmen shedding crocodile tears recently because of the deaths by poison alcohol during the holidays. And yet despite their tender consciences they would bring back conditions under which all would be able to debauch themselves with alcohol, as before prohibition, and under which there would be a hundred times as many deaths by alcoholism. All have been warned and none need to drink it, and it would be better to make alcohol more poisonous rather than less. If only America would travel by her God-given schedule!

ule! George Muller, who by faith cared for tens of thousands of orphans in England, and never asked anyone for money, and never was in debt, late in life said to a friend: "During the past twenty-five years my faith has greatly increased." The friend asked how it came about, and Mr. Muller went over to a table and raising aloft his worn Bible, declared, "My friend, I have read this Book through more than one hundred times in the last twenty-five years; I know the Book and I know the God of the Book." And that is the need of the hour, more people who know the Book and know the God of the Book. Let all men everywhere be true to the schedule and to the God of the schedule.

Let all men take an inventory, asking: "Are we running 'On Time' in life's journey, according to God's schedule? Are we seeking first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness? Are we trying to keep the Golden Rule? Are we pure in heart? Are we proving our love by keeping his commandments? Are we 'On Time'?"

And when the day comes when we shall make our last run in life's journey through time, may we arrive at heaven's terminal "On Time", and may a host of our fellow-travelers gone on before be waiting at the gates to welcome us.

Above all may we have the unspeakable joy of seeing face to face the King of the Highway of Holiness, even Jesus Christ our Lord. And may we have the added joy of hearing him say to each of us in loving approval, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." May we come to the end of life's journey "On Time" according to God's schedule.

The Adult Division of the Sunday School

By Prof. Alvaro B. Cober, Supt., Adult Division

(To be Published in Tract form by the National Sunday School Association)

THE ADULT DIVISION

The Adult Division of a Sunday school comprises the following departments:

1. The Adult Bible Class Department.
2. The Home and Extension Department.
3. The Parent Training Department.

THE ADULT BIBLE CLASS

Organization:

The time has gone by when the teacher of a Bible class assumed entire responsibility for the class by being not only instructor but also record keeper, treasurer, and general manager.

An organized class becomes a stock company in which each member shares equally in work and management. It ceases to be "Brother Smith's Class" or the "Preacher's Class" and becomes "The Progressive Bible Class" or some other properly named class.

Organization divides the work; develops workers; distributes leadership; delegates responsibility; and determines permanence, strength, and increase. It is very difficult to develop a good class spirit without efficient organization.

The International Sunday School Association Standard requires five officers and four committees—

Officers:

Teacher
President
Treasurer
Vice President

Secretary.

Committees:

Membership Committee
Social Committee
Devotional Committee
Missionary Committee.

A civic committee is also recommended. Other committees should be appointed for definite work whenever there is need for them.

Age of Members:

Members of the A. B. C. must be over twenty-four years of age. In small schools pupils under twenty-four and over eighteen may be enrolled if they cannot be accommodated in a Young People's Class, but the majority of the class must be over twenty-four.

SOME OBJECTIVES FOR THE YEAR 1927

1. Every Bible Class Properly Organized.
2. Every Organized Bible Class Registered with the National Sunday School Association.

Application blanks for certificates of recognition may be secured from the secretary, Prof. J. A. Garber, Ashland, Ohio.

3. Every Organized Class Endeavoring to Increase its membership with this goal in view: An increase in enrollment of 2 percent each month based on the enrollment of the class January 1, 1927. With little effort many classes will go over the top many times. Where conditions are favorable classes should set higher goals and then work earnestly to attain them.

4. Every organized class engaged in evangelism, seeking to win all members to the Christian life.

5. An Objective Sunday School Lesson taught by a teacher who will emphasize a few real important points of the lesson rather than merely spray the class with Biblical information which may have little effect on the Spiritual life of the members of the class.

6. At least two special Adult Division Rally Days in the Sunday school during the year.

The following dates are suggested—The first Sunday of May and first Sunday of November.

SOME THINGS AN ADULT BIBLE CLASS CAN DO

1. Purchase books on Sunday School work.
2. Provide equipment for the school.
3. Organize a Teacher Training Class.
4. Furnish substitute teachers.
5. Furnish autos to bring members who live at a distance and have no conveyance.
6. Take the Cradle Roll Superintendent and the Superintendent of the Home and Extension Department around to make their visits.

7. Provide proper class rooms for the children.

8. Encourage Daily Vacation Bible Schools.

9. Help to get out the church vote for primaries and on election day.

10. Cooperate in a campaign to bring all the members of the Adult Division to the acceptance of Jesus.

THE HOME AND EXTENSION DEPARTMENT

The Superintendent of this department should be an associate to the Adult Division Superintendent, or in a small school to the General Superintendent. A secretary and visitors should be appointed if the enrollment is large enough to require assistants to the Superintendent.

The membership roll should be hung on the wall of the Sunday School room.

There should be persistent effort to secure new members and also to transfer members, where possible, to the Adult Bible Class Department.

Members should be visited at least quarterly.

Members should be encouraged to study the Sunday school lesson at least thirty minutes each week.

Home Department Day should be celebrated once each year.

PARENT TRAINING DEPARTMENT

An interested, intelligent leader should be elected as Superintendent of the Parent Training Department. His work will include organizing and maintaining parents' classes in the Sunday school.

The main purpose of this department is to teach parents (1) the importance of a more intelligent understanding of child life. (2) To impress upon the minds of parents the importance of religious training in the home. (3) To secure books for parents on child welfare and training.

In Sunday schools too small to maintain regular Parent Training Classes, the parents should be excused from the regular Bible classes to attend an occasional conference or lecture given on "The Religious Training of Children."

Ohio Conference Moderator's Address

By R. D. Barnard

(Concluded from last week)

But there is one other external condition which makes living and guiding the Christian Life hard. This, as we shall term it, is the disrespect for law so generally manifest. If I read aright, there is no section of the country which can claim immunity. Life is considered cheap, so cheap in fact that it is readily taken in the different classes of murder. There is a shameful disrespect of the Prohibition statutes. So many of those charged with enforcement are so touched by fraud and bribery, that we scarcely know whom to trust. In certain quarters where liquor could not be sold under any conditions, malt syrup is to be had. Just a few hours they tell us boastfully and this makes the very best of liquor. Gambling, whether it be the petty kind with punch boards and cards, or the major type, surrounding the horse race, the auto race, the ball game, or the prize fight, exists, and that not even under cover. THESE EXIST IN OPEN OPPOSITION TO OUR STATE LAWS. Without being considered anarchistic may I say that for some reason it is next to impossible to obtain conviction in our local enforcement agencies.

I doubt if law and law enforcement will ever be the final word in community righteousness. The minister of the Gospel, the Sunday school teacher, the individual Christian who is living his faith is the best policeman in the world. My appeal is for a united Brethren purpose cooperating with other Christian influences to proclaim an obedient Christian righteousness. The greatest concern for the Christian is not so much the disobedience to civil law as the results of this. The law-breaker in the civil code, is only a step from being the law-breaker with respect to the eternal code of God.

If we consider civil law lightly we easily grow into the attitude of considering God's law lightly. If we doubt the authority of civil government to enforce its law, we can easily doubt God's authority to enforce his will. Brethren, it behooves us to preach, and teach, and live obedience to law, the law of man and above all the Law of God.

There is just one hardship in the Christian Economy that I would mention which comes from within. It is the lack of Christian training, real, intelligent, practical training. With our life today becoming continually more complex, unless we offer a training to youth that is continually more helpful, what will the youth of tomorrow be? It seems unfortunate to me that we give 7 to 9 months of the year for 12 to 17 years to develop the child mentally, probably 20 years of careful training to make the boy a man physically; that parents will take great time and pains to abolish the child's manners to prepare him socially, that they will generate enough political enthusiasm to make the boy of the same political faith as his father; and still give so little of time or effort for that training of eternal benefit. Even with the recent increase of activity in the Sunday school, the Weekday Vacation Bible School, and in the different expressional schools our effort is not yet equal to the need. It seems to me that there are at least three possible ways of bettering our conditions. In the home faster a more complete worship program. Throughout the year the Brethren Evangelist has offered a fine worship lesson for each day. But there are so many who do not read the Evangelist; and so many

Man in the Making—A New Year's Sermon

By Charles A. Bame, D.D.

"There is in the career of every human being a possible magnificent masterpiece, or a wretched, distorted daub. Whichever it proves to be will be hung in civilization's gallery" said Orison S. Marsden. Around these two quotations, one from the word of Jesus and one from the great writer, I desire to direct your thinking. How are men made? Real men? What are the processes through which a man must go to become a rock instead of a vascillating and impulsive weather vane. Many answers are suggested to us in these days if wisdom, pretended and otherwise. In these days of invention, men are trying also to find new ways of making and even of remaking men. Educational processes environmental processes; eugenic processes; and even political processes, are offered as methods of making men fit and ready for the work of life. I believe that the words of Mr. Marsden are wise words. He has here epigrammatically set forth for us a great truth. Where is it made more plain than in the life of this man to whom Jesus said, "Thou art . . . thou shalt become" and then, after three years of tutelage under his shaping, and after the finishing work of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost, the stone appeared. From smallness to greatness; from pettyness to princeliness, this is the result of the Master hand of Jesus Christ, working upon the life-processes of a willing but vacillating disciple. Strange wonder that men seeing this marvelous transformation should ever think of another method of making a man when this one has been so well proven! Of course, it was a long and hard process. Only mushrooms grow over night; it takes years to make an oak. Speedy development is made with youth and children, but they who are older change slowly. Yet, how much there was to change and how much there is in us all! It was as if Jesus has said, "thou art impetuous, thou shalt be impressive thou art undisciplined, thou shalt be balanced; thou art rash, thou shalt be discreet; thou art fickle, thou shalt be faithful; thou art cowardly, thou shalt be courageous; thou art thoughtless, thou shalt be triumphant"—all this and more the Master had to change and remake before the rock would stand out. It would be interesting to follow this couple from day to day as they journeyed together; to follow the Master and disciple as they travel together, suffer together, rejoice together and behold the patience of the teacher with his disciple. Let us thank God for his patience with us as he tries to change us from what we are to what we ought to be. Let us pray God that we shall not make smaller progress than did this disciple who after he had graduated from the school of the Master, became the outstanding preacher of all time for quick responses to his mighty preaching.

There are just three things that I desire to call to your attention this connection, of making of men. Three things that I know are necessary to the completion of lives so that they shall find approval of our Lord as well as that of men. They are the Bible, Prayer and the Holy Spirit. We may be assured that Peter as he made his slow way from what he was to what the Master wanted him to become had a great tutelage in the Word of God. He listened day by day to Jesus quote from the Old Testament and make his appeal to it as the final authority in every decision they had to make. "For thus it is written in the prophets" and "that the "Scriptures might be fulfilled," were the great imperatives that determined the course of Jesus as he lived and wrought out his life before the wondering and amazed disciples.

If anyone is inclined to doubt the wonderful use they made of the Old Testament writings in the teaching and preaching of the Lord and his disciples, let him be reminded that Genesis is quoted at least 19 times, Exodus, 24 times, Leviticus, 12 times, Deuteronomy, 26 times, the Psalms, 59 times, Isaiah, 50 times. Or if that will not convince, let him read the sermon of Peter on Pentecost, or the defense of Stephen both of which are Old Testament classics. If still unconvinced, turn to the arguments of Paul in Romans, especially, the three wonderful chapters 9, 10, and 11, or remember that Hebrews is really a commentary on Leviticus, and without the quotations therefrom, it would be a small book, indeed. If to all these we add more than 300 allusions which are not quotations, we must be quite convinced of the very large part the Bible had in the making over of this man and his contemporaries. It seems very safe for me to declare that these men did not learn in the school of Glenn Frank, who in this New Year's season gave the world in one of his syndicated articles this atrocious sentence: "And yet, in the long run, the doubt-raiser will prove to be a safer guide in the modern world than the belief-peddler." May God forgive him both for the sentence, and the terms in which he states it!

The second thing that stands out in the remaking of men is prayer. This may seem a commonplace and yet, perhaps no one need of the great multitude of folks, is so needful as systematic prayer. One can not forget that Peter was one of that favored group that always went with his Master when he went into his prayer-places, nor that it was he who was prayed out of prison. Nor yet, that it is this one-time impulsive man who says in his old age, "be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer." Two men stand out in our country's history and their pictures that remain with us most, it seems to me, are that of Washington on his knees at Valley Forge and Abraham Lincoln in the crisis of the civil war. What a man of prayer and Bible knowledge was the latter—and perhaps not much less, the former. Mean men lately would tear away much of this halo from the brows of these men who moved and led men above most of their fellow-men, but their published speeches belie these traducers of the truth. The Bible and prayer had a large place in each of their lives. But there is a third thing that was needed to perfect the life of Peter and that was the Holy Spirit or God in his life. "When thou art converted" must have sounded strange to Peter, when the Master said it to him. "Tarry at Jerusalem" not much plainer. But when it had all come to pass, we behold the stone. I think it was a long wait in that upper room for this impulsive man, but it was worth while. Without it, the prophecy of the Master would have never been fulfilled. One of the last things he did for the Master before this remarkable occurrence was to deny him and confirm it with an oath;

but the first thing after it happens is the "stone" hurling arguments into the face of the crucifiers of the Lord and making them cry for salvation in the name of him whom they had killed. What a change! The rock stands unmoved by the failures and frailties that before weakened and baffled him. He has attained.

The practical question for us is, are we attaining? Is the Master saying to us, "thou art . . . thou shalt become"? Let us not forget this new year that this is his purpose for us. "Ye shall be perfect," is his Word for us, but are we attaining? Perhaps we can test ourselves no better than to measure ourselves by three questions: Are we praying? Are we getting the Word of God into our hearts? Are we in the Holy Spirit's leading and power? If we can not rightly answer these questions, a new resolution and a new consecration is needed. "Thou art . . . thou shalt become"—what?

who do give so little time to this! Could not a commission study this problem in our state and offer some suggestions for helps which will be uniform in every church, and applicable to every home? In the Sunday school we might develop more efficient schools. The greater part of this development is possible only through the Superintendent in charge and the teachers. They must know what and how to do. The Community training schools, now being conducted, aids tremendously in this. But so many communities are not so situated as to have them. Why could not the superintendents and probably later the teachers form reading circles? The National Sunday School Association would gladly arrange a series of approved and recommended books on theory and practice. I believe much inspiration and actual practical help would come to every superintendent in this way. I recommend that a committee be named to promote such activity.

My third recommendation has to do with the vacation Bible school. This school should afford us a wonderful opportunity to instill the groundwork of Christian teaching. Other denominations when they promote such schools individually teach their special doctrines according to established courses. We have none such courses. I am anxiously awaiting for some proposed plan for a genuinely Brethren Daily Vacation Bible School plan. The basis for this would be a treatise or pamphlet presenting the Brethren's Message with a 20 century appeal in such language as would appeal to children. "Studies in the Way of Life" is wonderful for adult life, but is not applicable for this purpose. This basic treatise should have at least the same purpose for us as the catechism has for certain denominations. My recommendation therefore is that some capable committee be directed to study this problem and if possible offer plans and material for our own state work.

We have considered now some of the things which make life hard, we are happy to turn to the notes of optimism in our work.

The very fact that any group of people begin to realize the difficulty ahead is a note of optimism, it is the first step in the solution of the problem. If I interpret the trend of things aright in our state we are measuring the problems ahead and are beginning to grasp the situation. We are building new churches, remodeling, rebuilding our churches to better serve, beautifying and enhancing our churches to promote a finer spirit of Worship.

This is a dependable indication that we are set to win and win on the basis of a pure Gospel. The individual fields which have reported during the year have given a continual account of steady gain. The aggressive work of our State Mission interests, under the capable leadership of present officers have made great strides toward that which has so often been expressed in this conference as the desire, that is the centralization and intensification of its work. External conditions give us reason to be jubilant in our work.

Besides the optimism which comes from field survey there is another source of real spiritual zeal, this source is the Brethren's message in itself. I believe the Brethren's Message to be such a message as the world needs. If it is, it should be a source of abiding and inspiring joy to us. Let us consider. We are aware that there are some who doubt whether the Brethren's Message is sufficiently distinctive today. They feel that because of the worldly influences upon us we have lost much of our purity and simplicity of life, that our conference system is becoming so powerful that the congregation is losing its freedom, that the freedom of individual interpretation of Scripture is endangered, that much of the Protestant world has committed itself so definitely for world peace that we are not distinctive in this respect, that the s

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

MONDAY

BEGOTTEN OF CHRIST—1 John 2:23-29.

As the Lord Jesus declared that he was in the beginning with God and that without him was not anything made that was made, so the Apostle John insists that the Son's cooperation in the creative work of the Father applied to the spiritual realm also—that he is the source of all righteousness.

TUESDAY

BEGOTTEN OF THE SPIRIT—Titus 3:1-7.

As the Father loved the world and gave the Son, and the Son redeemed the world and made righteousness the priceless possession of all who will receive it, so the Holy Spirit works in and through men to the renewing of their spirits.

LIFE THROUGH THE SON—John 3:31-36.

The Son of God is the life of the world and he who believes on him hath eternal life imparted unto him, and without him there is no life, for, said he, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

THURSDAY

JESUS THE LIVING WATER—John 4:13-26.

He who is the fountain of living water approaches every thirsty soul and offers to satisfy it with that which is drink indeed and which fully satisfies. How often he finds us in a quibbling and unresponsive mood, as was the case with the Samaritan woman!

FRIDAY

WATERS OF REST—Psalm 23:1-6.

Jehovah is fittingly spoken of as a Shepherd, indicating his tender, watchful care over the people who are his sheep. In the heat of life's day he leads to some sequestered nook beside a flowing stream of God's mercy where the soul may be refreshed and find rest.

SATURDAY

RIVERS OF WATER—John 7:37-44.

What an abundance of water! Satisfying and life-giving! And it may be had freely and by "any man" that thirsteth, and merely by believing on him who is the source of all life.

SUNDAY

CLEANSSED AND RENEWED—Ezek. 36:22-31.

"And ye shall be clean from all your filthiness"—that is what the heart of the world craves in its serious moments, and that is what the Father of all grace is moved to offer because of his own righteousness and compassion.—G. S. B.

called Divine Healing is so common our anointing service is almost antique.

The common Protestant malady has affected us some; that malady which says, It isn't what one believes or holds as church practices which counts, it is how one lives. This liberalizing influence tends to abandon all church forms and ordinances. Those who believe this come to the natural conviction, we are small, and should disband in favor of larger groups. We shall view these attitudes.

We are willing to admit that with the complexity of the twentieth century life some of the special things considered as marks of simplicity of life have vanished, we are not sure but that they should. Sorrowfully we must admit though that of our folks a few have been claimed by worldly lives and have no right to be called Brethren. So long, however, as the mass of our people are willing to acknowledge the mastery of Jesus, to follow his command symbolizing the washing away of sin, reverencing each the Father, the Son, the Holy Spirit; so long as Brethren are willing to sit together at the feast of love, serving and being cleansed by the washing of one another's feet, so long as they are willing to show forth the Lord's death till he come in the Loaf and the Cup, we have little reason to fear that we shall slip away from the simplicity of life. We have a ground for existence for this reason.

We admit that something of the congregational separateness, usually known as freedom has also vanished. But should it not? If we should turn back to those days in the 80's we would find a complete revolt from Annual Meeting control. Our early Brethren flew to the opposite extreme, that of ultra congregational rule. We probably would have done the same. In most respects it has been a wonderful blessing. But in one respect at least it has caused us great loss. We have but little church oversight, but few church wide programs capable of completing themselves, and but little concerted action in the church like unto that which other much younger denominations have had. May God hasten the day when we shall have a united consciousness in our brotherhood. That we may have some oversight, of course not the oversight of the scourge, and some plan of church polity by which we can promote united efforts in special programs.

OUR SCRIPTURE

I am the light of the world (John 8:12). Ye are the light of the world (Matthew 5:14). As thou didst send me into the world, even so sent I them into the world (John 17:18). Jesus therefore said to them again, Peace be unto you; as the Father hath sent me, even so send I you (John 20:21). As he is, even so are we in this world (1 John 4:17). I have been crucified with Christ; and it is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me (Galatians 2:20). But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion for them (Matthew 9:36). Finally, be ye all likeminded, compassionate, loving as brethren, tender-hearted, humble-minded; not rendering evil for evil, or reviling for reviling, but contrariwise blessing, for hereunto were ye called (1 Peter 3:8, 9). Have this mind in you, which was also in Christ Jesus (Philippians 2:5). That I may, know him and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, becoming conformed unto his death (Philippians 3:10). Now ye are the body of Christ, and severally members thereof (1 Corinthians 12:27). Always bearing about in the body the dying of Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be manifested in our mortal flesh (2 Corinthians 4:10). And working together with him, we entreat also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain (2 Corinthians 6:1). God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself (2 Corinthians 5:19). We are ambassadors therefore on behalf of Christ, as though God were entreating by us: we beseech you on behalf of Christ, be reconciled to God (2 Corinthians 5:20). And whosoever would be first among you shall be your servant: even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many (Matthew 20:27, 27). Verily, verily, I say unto you. He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father (John 14:12).

OUR MEDITATION

Jesus came into the world to reveal God and to save mankind. His sacrifice for sin was a work which none of us could do; of it he said, "It is finished." But he left unfinished a great work in which each of us can and should have fellowship with him. Unless we do our part, the world will never hear of his love, his compassion, his sacrifice. We are to preach him, not only with the spoken, written, and printed word, but with our lives. Our lives should be copies of his in love, compassion, patience, purity, truth, faithfulness, zeal. It has been said that we are the only Bible the world will read. Are we true Gospels, or do our lives slander Jesus? Are we fairly good pictures of him, or wretched caricatures? Jesus died to reconcile men to God; but they will not be reconciled unless we tell them of it. The benighted heathen who has never heard of Jesus, and the man in our midst who enjoys the blessings of Christian civilization without considering whence they come—both must hear the story. Jesus came to the earth for no other purpose but to glorify God and save men. Whatever he did—driving nails, preaching, working miracles, or mingling with men socially, all was for that end. If all of his followers would live thus, the whole world would soon hear of the Savior. But nearly nineteen hundred years have passed, and more than half of mankind have never even heard of him. From the way many of us spend our time and our means, it would seem that reconciling men to God was the least important concern of our lives.

OUR PRAYER

Our Father, we thank thee for the great honor thou hast conferred on us, in making us partners with Jesus in saving men. Forgive us for regarding so lightly this great privilege, and neglecting so shamefully the holy work to which we have been called. Help us so to live from this time forth that our words and our lives shall show to others the love and the saving power of Jesus. We ask in his name. Amen.

Maryville, Missouri.

There is need of a clear understanding of what consecration means. It is not an indulgence in pious yearnings and smug phrases. It is the willingness to face facts squarely, to deny oneself in behalf of others, to give, and to work with all one's heart and soul that God's kingdom may come upon earth.—Herald and Presbyter.

LESSON LIGHTS

The Talent

The Talent was a great sum, the silver talent being worth from $1,000 to $2,000, and the gold talent fifteen to thirty times as much, so that the first servant received from $5,000 to $150,000. As money then had ten times its present purchasing power or more, the slave received in reality from $50,000 to $1,500,000. "This is Christ's way of impressing on us a sense of the powers entrusted to us. There is virtually no limit to what a loyal disciple of Christ can do if he will set himself heartily to the building up of Christ's kingdom in his own heart and home, his own church and community, and reaching out into the world. If there is a limit, it is of our making, not Christ's. In the parable of the pounds each servant received one mina, worth one-sixtieth of a talent, perhaps $16 to $33., and able to buy ten times as much as that sum in modern times. The teaching of that feature of the parable of the pounds is that all men have essentially the same responsibility, namely, to make the best use of what they have received. But, as this parable teaches, not all receive alike, but there is a diversity of gifts, as Paul also taught (Rom. 12:6). There is an enormous distance between the mental and spiritual endowment of an ordinary Christian and that of Phillips Brooks, but the great preacher was no more responsible for the best use of his magnificent gifts than we are for the best use of our few talents. The two-talent man is the Christian of merely average ability and possessions. He makes up the great bulk of the church, and as he goes the kingdom of heaven is likely to go. Great is the opportunity of the two-talent man."

Stewardship

"Stewardship of money is only a fraction of our full Christian stewardship. Giving is only a fraction of our stewardship of money. Tithing is only a fraction of our stewardship in giving. All of these have their place in the larger stewardship, but when put together they do not constitute full stewardship living, nor meet the boundless needs of the times. The call is for such stewardship living as will not be fractional, in which the whole life will be included, in which self and substance will both come under the rule of stewardship principles."—Charles A. Cook.

Verse 30, which is a part of our lesson, is the tragic part, which, since Christ put it in, we do not dare to omit from our thinking. "The outer darkness" into which the unprofitable servant is cast is all the more terrible because it is vaguely described. It is hell. It is dark, gloomy, unutterably sad, the very opposite of the light and joy of heaven; and its darkness is caused by its being "outer," that is, apart from the Divine Being who is the light and joy of all his faithful children. "Weeping and gnashing of teeth" gives only a hint of the fearful, endless sorrow, shame and despair of those who by their own wicked sloth have cast themselves out of their Lord's favor, their Father's love. Let us take all heed that this awful fate may not be ours.

The Talents and the Pounds

The talents represent the powers and means God has entrusted to his people for carrying on his work. They are the "gifts" Paul enumerates in 1 Corinthians 12. In the parable of the pounds each one received the same amount, but gained in differing proportions. They represent the things which all can share alike, as the Word of God, the Holy Spirit, the means of grace, faith, hope, love and all the fruits of the Spirit. The talents refer to the other class of gifts which differ in different persons, as genius, talent, wealth, abilities, tastes.

The Man with Two Talents

Phillips Brooks, in his sermon with this title, suggests (1) that most of us count ourselves persons of two talents, average people. The two-talented people have not the inspiration of the five-talented from conscious power and incentive to great results, "high enough to hear the calling of the stars," nor the spur that comes to the one-talented man from desperation, "low enough to feel the tumult of the earthquake," and difficulties "which are a bugle call to many men." (2) The two-talented man has a great chance in the world. Being an average man he can sympathize with average men, and his success and usefulness show themselves as possible to the majority. Small talents with will and purpose can accomplish great things. There is no limit to their final achievement. "Every time we do our duty it becomes easier for some one else to do his duty; every time we neglect our duty it becomes easier for some one else to neglect his." "A little man with a great gospel is mightier than a great man with a little gospel." The gospel is the same mighty wisdom and power of God no matter who uses its power. (See 1 Cor. 18-29).

Note a common mistake with those who have not become familiar with the Orientalisms of the Bible. The pound was "kept laid up in a napkin" (Luke 19:20), but the talent was "buried in the earth." The first, being only from $16 to $33 was easily hidden in this way. The larger sum could not be so hidden. Yet we frequently hear references to "hiding our talent in a napkin."—Illustrated Quarterly.

Church School News

Professor Puterbaugh, treasurer of the National Sunday School Association, reports a growing response in the White Gift Offering. A number of our schools have reported more promptly this year. It is hoped that others will report at an early date so that this offering may be gotten out of the way of other special offerings that will come later.

A few weeks ago we announced the combination offer which enables our school workers to secure both The Brethren Educator and The International Journal of Religious Education for the price of one, namely two dollars per year. We repeat that both magazines will be found decidedly helpful by our church school workers. First Church school of Waterloo, Iowa has taken advantage of this offer, subscribing for eight copies of each of the magazines.

The January number of The Educator sought to feature church school administration and organized adult class work. The five Sundays in the month and extended lesson notes crowded out some of the general articles notwithstanding the enlarged size of the magazine. Some of these articles are being shared with The Brethren Evangelist through the courtesy of our esteemed Editor. Through this cooperative method we are able to get these materials before our workers.

Among other matter we included a graphic representation of our Standard of Excellence with accompanying explanations and suggestions. Off prints were made and these have been mailed to the several superintendents of our church schools throughout the brotherhood. We trust that this printed help will enable the executive officers to get the Standard clearly and vividly before the whole school. We hope by this means to stimulate a desire on the part of all to attain the highest possible number of points of excellency on the Standard.

We have asked the superintendent to send in news items with reference to their school. If they will only respond we will be glad to share this news with all our workers through these columns and The Educator.

WHEN EGYPT PRAYED FOR BRITAIN

The last annual report of the Egypt General Mission speaks in this striking fashion of our debt to take the Gospel back to Egypt: "Has it ever dawned upon us that when Britain was pagan, Egypt was thinking of us, praying for us, pleading with God for our salvation? At that time Alexandria was the 'Home Prayer Base,' and Canterbury a mission station in a dark heathen land. This is what Gregory wrote to Eubogius, Bishop of Alexandria:

"The English race, situated in the far corner of the world has hitherto remained in unbelief, worshipping stocks and stones, but aided by your prayers, I made up my mind (it was God who prompted me) to send a monk of my own monastery to them to preach. . . . At Christmas last more than ten thousand English people, we are informed, were baptized by our brother and fellow-bishop. I tell you this that you may know what your prayers are doing at the world's end."

Christian Endeavor Week

January 30th to February 6th

During this anniversary week Endeavorers of everywhere are planning to tell everybody about Christian Endeavor. The facts are fully told in a "Christian Endeavor Week Package" which may be secured from the United Society of Christian Endeavor, 41 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, or 17 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill., or your state Christian Endeavor Headquarters. Some of the facts are summarized in the following way:

The International Fellowship of Christian Endeavor

Christian Endeavor societies are found in the following countries: Africa, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Barbados, Belgium, Bermuda, Bolivia, Bohemia, Brazil, British Guiana, Bulgaria, Burma, Canada, Caroline Islands, Ceylon, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Egypt, Ellice Islands, Esthonia, Fiji Islands, Finland, Formosa, France, Germany, Gibraltar, Gilbert Islands, Great Britain, and Ireland, Greece, Grenada, West Indies, Guatemala, Haiti, Hawaii, Holland, Hungary, Iceland, India, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Korea, Labrador, Laos, Lapland, Latvia, Lithuania, Loyalty Islands, Madagascar, Madeira Islands, Marshall Islands, Mauritius, Mexico, Norway, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Palestine, Panama, Persia, Peru, Philippine Islands, Poland, Porto Rico, Portugal, Russia, Samoa, Siam, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Syria, Tasmania, Tokelau Islands, Trinidad, Turkey, United States, Upper Hebrides, Uruguay, Venezuela. See "Christian Endeavor Around the World."

The Fundamental Principles of Christian Endeavor

Confession of Christ; Service for Christ; Loyalty to Christ's church; Fellowship with Christ's people.

The Size of the Christian Endeavor Movement

4,000,000 members. 80,000 societies. See "Christian Endeavor Around the World."

The Interdenominational Fellowship of Christian Endeavor

The following are some of the churches in which Christian Endeavor societies are found: Advent Christian, General Baptist, National Baptist, Northern Baptist, Seventh Day Baptist, Southern Baptist, Church of the Brethren, Brethren Church, Christian Church, Church of God, Congregational, Disciples of Christ, Episcopal, Reformed Episcopal, Evangelical, United Evangelical, Evangelical Synod, Friends, Lutheran, Mennonite, Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal South, African Methodist Episcopal, African Methodist Episcopal Zion, Free Methodist, Primitive Methodist, Methodist Protestant, Union American Methodist, Wesleyan Methodist, Moravian, Associate, Reformed Presbyterian, Cumberland Presbyterian, Presbyterian in U. Homeless Boys and Girls in the Near East. John 21:15-17

Not many years ago, in a little home far across the sea, there lived two children. These children were named Mary and Julius. Mary, the little girl, was five years old and Julius, the little boy of the family, was four years old. Julius and Mary and their parents were a very happy family. They were not rich but the father had a good job and the mother loved her home and tried to make everyone in the home happy. On Sundays, they would go to worship together and then in the afternoon, often they went for long walks. Daddy and mother could always find something interesting for the children to do.

Then suddenly, something terrible happened. A war started and mother and daddy started talking about that with very solemn faces and Julius and Mary felt scared and unhappy. Soon the children understood that their daddy had to go away to fight in a terrible fight.

One Sunday, when they came in from their walk, daddy kissed each member of his family and started off. But before he went he said, "Children, love your mother and be good to her. Try to be happy together, and take care of each other." Then he left them.

The children and their mother missed daddy from the home. Mother had to get a job and the children had to learn to take care of themselves. Mary learned to help get the meals and both children learned to wash and dress themselves. So as time passed, though they missed their daddy terribly, they learned to work together and they learned to love each other very dearly.

Then suddenly rumors began to reach the village that the soldiers were coming, not the soldiers who had been sent out from the village but the soldiers who were fighting against that land. Mother came home that day after hearing that news and told the children, "You must stay in the house always unless I am with you. The soldiers are coming and they might hurt you." One day mother came hurrying and told the children to come with her to the kitchen quickly. She got out some little sacks and one big sack and she filled each one of them with food. Then they went upstairs and got just a few clothes for each of them and packed them in something that would be easy to carry. Then still on the run, the mother arranged her packages and they left their home. They joined the rest of the villagers and soon they left the little town, hurrying as fast as they could. They had heard that the armies were nearly to their village and so they had to flee before they should get hurt. Thus they wandered about the country and for quite a while they escaped the army. But their food began to run low and it was almost impossible to find places to get food. Finally the army did overtake them. The villagers were on a big farm where they had gone to try to get food. When the mother saw the soldiers coming, she took Mary and Julius and hid them behind some old boxes. She said to them, "You children stay here and keep real quiet. If you can't find me after the soldiers have gone on, then stay together. Try to find food like we have been doing and take care of each other."

So the children stayed there, together for a long, long time. One time their mother whispered to them, "Be quiet, children and stay where you are for a very long time. Go to sleep if you can." And so the time passed. The children heard the soldiers. They heard people scream and they were scared but they stayed where they were just as their mother had told them to do. Finally, the children came out of their hiding place. The soldiers were gone and only a few people seemed to be left of all the villagers. They could not even find their mother but they remembered her words. "Stay together." So for a long, long time they wandered about the land. They got food wherever they could. Sometimes they could not find anything to eat. Whenever, they found the least small scrap of bread or anything, they divided with each other. After many, many months, some Americans found them and took them to the Near East Relief. There the people took off their dirty rags and dressed them and gave them food and taught them. Now Mary and Julius are trying to learn to be happy again but they still need help in the Near East if they are to have food and clothing enough to live.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Second and Third Churches of Johnstown Support Ashland College Endowment

Johnstown has a population of about 100,000, and is the only city in which we have three churches. Each church supports a pastor for his full time. The present Johnstown is made up of several towns that grew together, so that different sections of the city are distinguished by their original name. The Second church is located in Moxham and the Third church in Morrelville. The First church is in the central part of the city and the other two at the far extremes.

Third Church

This ranks next in size to the First church and is located in Morrelville. Brother Joseph Gingrich is their pastor and is doing good work. BY THE WAY, ALL FOUR SERVING PASTORATES IN AND AROUND JOHNSTOWN ARE ASHLAND COLLEGE GRADUATES. This answers the question—IS ASHLAND COLLEGE ENDOWMENT A LOCAL CHURCH PROBLEM. The facts are, if the Brethren church does not maintain its educational institutions—IN TIME THERE WILL BE NO LOCAL CHURCH PROBLEMS, FOR THERE WILL BE NO LOCAL CHURCH. THE LOCAL CHURCH DEPENDS UPON OUR EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS FOR ITS FUTURE LEADERSHIP. It is needless for me to say that I was given fine support by all these pastors who did their best to help put over the campaign.

The Third church has erected a fine new brick building for worship and just completed a fine brick parsonage. The membership is not large, but are having a steady growth and the people "have a mind to work." While they have been under heavy financial burdens in their local work, they were willing and anxious to have a part in the College campaign. The total gift to date from the Third church was $1,139.97. The Aaron Stutzman will in which he made a gift to the school of $500.00 is still in the hands of the court, but we have hopes of securing this in the near future.

Second Church

This church is located in Moxham in one of the best residential sections of the city. Brother Dyoll Belote is the pastor and from a very discouraging condition has successfully led the little group here to a promising future. Just recently they erected and dedicated a very commodious house of worship. This part of the city is made up largely of Americans and home owners which gives much promise to the future growth of the church. The membership here is small and they are to be congratulated for their faith, sacrifice and interest in the work. There is no question in my mind with Brother Belote as pastor, with a united support back of him, that in time we will have a good work here. Although my campaign followed only two weeks after their financial drive for their new building, yet they were willing to do something for the College. While it was not as large as it would have been under normal conditions, yet for the little handful there, I consider their gift a real sacrifice, the total was $500.00. THE ENCOURAGING THING

TO ME IS, THAT ALL OUR CHURCHES HAVE A REAL INTEREST IN ASHLAND AND ARE GETTING BEHIND THE CAMPAIGN.

W. S. BELL.

NEW ENTERPRISE, PA., PASTORATE

It has been just three months to the day since we compiled the last quarterly report for the church news columns of the activities on the New Enterprise-Raystown-Yellow Creek pastorate in Bedford County. During the last three months, there have been several occasions of rejoicing.

Raystown

The most recent cause for rejoicing was the special meeting lasting two weeks, held at Raystown church by Brother H. E. Eppley of Winona Lake, Indiana, acting as evangelist, soloist, and song director. Five were added to the membership, three by baptism, one by reconsecration, and one by relation.

It was a strenuous two weeks, during which time the evangelist and pastor visited every day in the homes of the members and friends of the church. The possibilities of personal evangelism was shown when from one home two daughters were baptized and the mother reconsecrated, although they had not been privileged to attend a single service at the church. On Monday evening, December 20th, the Communion services were held, at the opening of which those having come forward were formally received into the membership.

Brother Eppley's messages were true to the Book, convincing, and edifying. He never dissented to spending every afternoon in visiting and personal work, and appeared always to have abundant resources of energy to play the threefold role in each evening service. The membership responded loyally to the challenge and attended faithfully despite discouraging weather conditions. The membership itself was greatly inspired and drawn more closely together.

The work of the various auxiliaries of the church are moving forward consistently, and just now are outlining programs for greater achievements in 1927. On Thanksgiving evening several families of the church journeyed the fifteen miles to our home and surprised us with a generous donation, and after a social evening, served refreshments. Then over the Christmas season, we were the recipients of many gifts from individual families, the Woman's Missionary Society and the Sisterhood each remembering us with a gift of five dollars.

Yellow Creek

The Yellow Creek church has made another advance during the last three months, in its effort to be of greater service, by effecting the organization of a local chapter of the Woman's Missionary Society. This was directly the result of the visit of Miss Gertrude Leedy on the field. Seven women became charter members, and at the first monthly devotional meeting three new members were added. We feel that this organization offers great promise, and the members have gone right to work to make the society a means of greater service.

Twelve members of the Teacher Training class took the examination on the first section of the Textbook on December 28th, and are entering upon the second series of lessons, those on the New Testament, with enthusiasm. The training class has been loyally supported by the regular attendance of the members, and we are certain that much benefit is being derived.

Just before Thanksgiving, when the Training class met at this writer's home, almost all the women of the church came and brought a generous donation, which was much appreciated.

New Enterprise

We have been the recipients of many gifts from individuals and families in the New Enterprise church, but a climax was reached when on December 2nd, we were given a Chevrolet four-door sedan in A-1 condition by Brother and Sister Al. S. Ebersole of Altoona and New Enterprise. This exceptional gift represents a fine spirit of Christian service and generosity on the part of the donors, and supplies a need keenly felt by the pastor and family. Fifteen miles separate the New Enterprises and Raystown churches, and making the trip in cold weather in our Ford touring car was real exposure for the wife and three little daughters. During the next two weeks meeting reported first above, I drove the car nearly eight hundred miles.

In General

All these churches had delegates at the District Conference at Berlin. During the last three months we have had as visitors Dr. W. S. Bell, whose genial personality won many friends for the College, and a gift from the circuit of $1,171.41 toward the Endowment Campaign; Brother C. L. Sickel, who was given a responsive hearing, brought our South American work closer home to us, and endeared himself in the affection of the people; Sister Gertrude Leedy gave a splendid account of herself in encouraging the Woman's Missionary Society organization at Raystown, and in arousing enthusiasm and outlining plans for the organization effected at Yellow Creek.

Regular fall communion services were held in all three churches and the Thanksgiving and White Gift Offerings responded to.

At a joint meeting of the Pastoral Committees of the three churches held December 12th, a unanimous call was extended the writer for a third year's service, beginning May 1, 1927. The call also grants leave of absence for a two weeks' vacation and a month leave of absence to engage in special evangelistic meetings. We covet the prayers of the friends of this field that greater advances may be made in the Master's Work in the coming year.

W. S. CRICK.

New Enterprise, Pennsylvania.

HAGERSTOWN, MARYLAND

Travel through "The Gateway to the South" has been very limited as comparatively few tourists are spending the winter in Florida. This is likely due to the storm that swept parts of the southland recently, but those who live there predict an early recovery. The many friends of Sister Laura E. N. Hedrick would doubtless appreciate a letter from her as would all the Evangelist readers. Sister Hedrick with her husband and daughter live in the wind-swept area, but we are thankful that they came through without bodily injury, although with hosts of others they suffered some material loss.

Our fall revival campaign did not result in as many confessions as usual, yet much good was done. Brother F. G. Coleman of Flora, Indiana, preached the Word faithfully, proving himself an able evangelist. J. B. Long, was the song leader, while his wife, Mrs. Long, presided at the piano. She proved herself an able pianist. There were twenty-three confessions. Twenty were received by baptism, one by letter and two by reconsecration. Brother Coleman enjoyed the hospitality of the home of Brother Ben Schindel while Mr. and Mrs. Long were well cared for in the pleasant home of Mrs. Avis Witmer.

Our Sunday school presented a most impressive Christmas program made up wholly of Christmas carols and Scripture recitations. Thus Jesus was exalted and honored and Santa Claus was left to the chimney and the nreside where he belongs. On Christmas Sunday our choir rendered the "Gloria from the Twelfth Mass" by Mozart in a most creditable and impressive manner.

The White Gift offering amounted to $157.00, while the Thanksgiving Home Mission offering amounted to $382.00. Both of these are larger than for the year preceding. When a church gradually increases its benevolences it can be counted a good indication of the spiritual conditions.

The reminder by Dr. J. Allen Miller in a recent Evangelist about reporting church news ought to bring forth fruit. It is within the reach of pastors and church officials to make the Evangelist of greater inspiration and helpfulness in the advance of his Kingdom on earth.

Quite a number from this church attended the afternoon service at Waynesboro when the church there dedicated their renovated and greatly enlarged church building. They have a splendid building with sufficient capacity to care for large congregations and a large Sunday school. The pastor, Brother J. P. Horlacker, and his people deserve most hearty congratulations. It was a pleasure to listen to the interesting reminiscences by Brother Marcus Witter, former pastor, and also the able address by Brother R. R. Teeter, the speaker of the day.

Another delegation just attended the opening revival service in our nearest Brethren church, at Saint James, where Brother T. C. Lyon is the pastor and Brother R. F. Porte of Louisville the evangelist. The beginning was promising and may the Lord give them showers of blessing.

G. C. CARPENTER.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Dr. W. S. Bell paid the College a visit the latetr part of the Christmas vacation. He had just returned from his work in Pennsylvania and is now among the Indiana churches.

The local campaign here is not yet over as we are gathering in some of the outlying districts. Also the Alumni have not yet been fully canvassed but this all ought to be over soon.

The second semester is about to open. There will be several new enrollments.

Professor Mason was able to make very complete arrangements while at the state office during the vacation, so that our work in Education will go forward with full state approval.

The Girls' Gospel Teams have been engaged in several meetings recently. Some of these engagements have been in local churches.

Don Bame, '26, secretary in the Cleveland Y. M. C. A., recently paid the College a visit. Also Brother Chas. Phillips, of Kenton, Ohio.

Professors J. A. Garber, J. A. Miller, and Milton Puterbaugh have been teaching their usual Sunday School Teacher Training courses in the city. Prof. J. A. Garber also conducts a class in Mansfield.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

LA VERNE, CALIFORNIA

Another quarterly report is due the Evangelist. I believe, from the work in this part of the Lord's vineyard. We are still in love with him and he is indeed gracious to us. We are enjoying the fellowship with our returned missionaries, Brother and Sister Sickel. Brother Clarence will be with us now until July, with the exception of the month of February when he will supply the Whittier pulpit.

It is also a privilege to have in our congregation again, the Broad family from Fillmore. Brother T. H. Broad is filling the pulpits at Whittier and the Second church in Los Angeles for some eight months to come, while living at Pomona. Our own pastor, Brother H. H. Tay, continues to preach fearlessly and faithfully the blessed Word of God besides carrying on most creditably his heavy course at Pomona College. In the fall he delivered an interesting and profitable series of sermons on the Ten Commandments.

In November a district Bible conference was conducted at the La Verne church, with such able speakers in charge as the Doctors I. R. Dean, J. A. Youngberg, and L. S. Bauman. All were greatly strengthened because of it. Following the conference our fall communion was held and again proved a blessed time together.

The missionary society is alert, with its all-day meetings of work and mission study. Sixty pounds of dried fruits and nut meats were sent to our missionaries in Africa, for Christmas, and Christmas boxes and barrels were packed and sent to the Kentucky field, both by the missionary society and the Sunday school. These included curtains for the dormitory, pictures, fancy work, clothes, games, and dressed dolls, besides $100.00 in cash, which was all sent in time to reach there before Christmas. The children presented a Christmas program in the church and enjoyed the treats following but but the spiritual climax of the day was the beautiful cantata, "To Bethlehem," given before a large congregation by the choir in the evening.

The Sunday school is in a healthy condition, with a fine superintendent, a large orchestra, and especially live classes each of high school girls, high school boys, and young married folks. On Christmas Sunday the Sunday school attendance reached the new record of 268.

On New Year's Eve the annual business meeting of the church was held and as Young 1927 was ushered in the church was found in prayer. The Sunday following an impressive installation service for all officers and teachers of the church and Sunday school was conducted. After a most helpful sermon urging all to faithfulness to God at the new posts, the teachers were asked to sign the statement of the Brethren ministry—which custom will bar all teachers who are not fundamentalists.

Some of the plans for the immediate future are two months of evening evangelistic sermons and effort with the pastor in charge. There is also a plan in hand whereby we will have more children's services and children church officers.

I wish to thank you for the space you have given the La Verne church in the past ten years of my reporting. Your next reports from La Verne will be from Sister Amy Steves—the new reporter. May God bless all the Brethren in their efforts to glorify the name of his dear Son.

R. 1, Pomona. MRS, H. L. GOOD.

TO THE CHURCHES OF THE INDIANA DISTRICT

At our last District Conference which was held at Warsaw, Indiana, your delegates saw fit to elect Dr. G. W. Rench, H. F. Stuckman and G. L. Maus as your district evangelists. As to the duties of such evangelists you may find in Chapter Two, Section I, Article 6 of the Manual of Procedure of General Conference and also of the Indiana District Conference. In former years this board has been elected but has not functioned as it should. On October 19th following Conference this board met in session at Goshen with all members present, to formulate plans by which all the churches of the district may do a bigger and a better piece of work than ever before. In this meeting the board organized which resulted in Dr. G. W. Rench being elected president of the board and G. L. Maus as secretary.

Brethren, it is not the thought of this board that we should come into your churches and tell you how to run your business, far from it, but that we as your board working together with your pastor and you as people, may be better able to do the work we are called to do as a District, by all of us cooperating together in order that we might save the world for Christ. District supervision by your chosen evangelists includes a constant care of the local churches. If we are to advance as a church, there MUST BE COOPERATION with leadership. This is true with local church and pastor, and is also true with pastors and churches and your board of evangelists.

In this meeting it was thought best that the churches should be divided into divisions, and that said division should be named after some church which is centrally located in that division. The divisions were made geographically. All churches located south of the Chicago & Erie railroad should be known as the Peru division with G. L. Maus as the district evangelist. All churches located north of Chicago & Erie railroad and west of Big Four railroad should be known as the South Bend Division with H. S. Stuckman as evangelist. All churches north of Chicago and Erie railroad and east of the Big Four railroad should be known as the Warsaw division with Dr. G. W. Rench as evangelist. All the churches in each of these divisions who wish the help of this board may receive such help by corresponding with evangelist in said division.

It is the desire of this board that the churches of the District may work more unitedly, as applying to the whole district. We therefore bring your attention to six great fundamental things we believe we as a church should stand and work unceasingly for in our local church activities.

I. The Lord's Day. A day of all days when all people should come together for prayer and praise and for the preaching of the Word.

II. The Bible school. A more faithful attendance at this service, when men and women, boys and girls may assemble together for the study of the Word, and where all departments of the school may be brought to its highest efficiency.

III. The church in Communion Service. Not less than 75 per cent of our people to be in this great service. The strength of our movement is in our New Testament communion. The attendance at this service is a measure of the church's spirituality.

IV. Evangelism. Reaching out and taking the community for God. A revival in every church, saving souls at every service, putting our District Missions and all our missionary interests to the front.

V. Mid-week meetings. A strong prayer meeting with the greater part of the church in this great service. Spiritual class meetings, etc.

VI. Church Administration. Keeping our house as God would have it. Pastor and people, elders and deacons and deaconesses and supervising evangelists cooperating together.

Brethren of the Indiana District, it is the thought and prayer of your Supervising Evangelists that we may work together in this great program, making our churches 100 per cent in the upbuilding of the Kingdom. May God richly bless you as pastors and people this year, that when we meet in Conference this year, we can praise God for victories won.

G. L. MAUS,

Secretary District Board of Evangelists.

MULVANE, KANSAS

A Happy New Year to all. The Brethren church will advance just as fast as we advance it. And the newsletter of Dr. J. Allen Miller is an eye-opener to every pastor about our church news. Why wait for six months and fill a whole column? Why not write often and keep the lamp burning that enlightens our mind as to the progress of our beloved church? Time and again the editor has called for news, and must fill the pages specified for news with something else.

This church at Mulvane is partly supported by the mission board, and we feel the best way for us to let them know our appreciation and progress is to write some news from Mulvane. We are at work this year and have hardly time to write, but will take time. We started the New Year in the harness. We preach a morning sermon, teach the Bible class, give a Bible study Sunday nights, and preach a sermon every night in Mulvane at the Presbyterian church. We began a meeting there on the third of January and have had a full house nearly ever night. We have not made a call yet, as we expect to preach the whole Bible to a whole world, and the gatherings tell us that people are interested. This meeting will continue for two weeks and possibly longer.

The mission board will be glad to hear that we are after the release of our debt on the parsonage. We elected a building committee and a building treasurer to take care of this. The three men constituting this committee are to canvass the field once a year until this is paid. They are men who will do it. This is the first week since they were elected and they have solicited the field and raised two hundred and fifty dollars, and the money is in the treasury, thank the Lord. The Ladies' Aid said they were going to pay fifty dollars. Thus one fourth of the debt is raised.

The interest is fine and the church is moving forward as fast as the average country church. We are here to work. We will soon be in the midst of the oil fields. Three miles south of the church is an oil well that is called a wild-cat, it is making about sixteen barrels an hour. This is telling us that there is coming into our midst more people, and as people who work in oil fields have souls, the church will have a chance to grow.

The first Sunday in the year we had above 50, but many of our people were away on their holiday visits. This is not as great as many of our churches report but this is one unit of the church and is not dying. A brief letter the first of February will announce the results of our meeting in Mulvane. Pray for us.

H. W. ANDERSON.

LISTIE, PENNSYLVANIA

On Monday evening following the meeting in the Johnstown Third church I began a meeting at Listie. Listie is a mining town, located among the hills of Pennsylvania. I have met folks who were inclined to look lightly upon the people of a mining community. This is unfair. If there can be found a people anywhere who are more kind, pleasant to be among, and generous than the Listie folks I have not met them. These people do not have a resident pastor. H. W. Nowag serves them from Johnstown and is highly respected by all.

The church building had been enlarged and re-decorated. The improvement was needed; it is a credit to the people who made it possible. It was my privilege to officiate at the double service of re-dedicating the old part and dedicating the new. Prior to this service some fear was entertained regarding the finances, but when the day was over the response was so fine that only a few dollars were not provided for and these came during the next week. It was a great day and the people were truly happy.

The meeting continued two weeks. The writer did the preaching and conducted the song service and sang solos. The pastor will no doubt report the results. Hello, Listie friends, and may the continued blessing of the Most High be upon you.

Raystown, Pennsylvania

Immediately following the Listie meeting I began one in this church. The work to be done here was to preach, sing, and direct. W. S. Crick is the hustling young man in charge of the work. His home is in New Enterprise, about thirteen miles from Raystown, but every day found him on the job and ready to go. This is a rural church, located on the Raystown river, in the midst of the Blue Ridge Mountains. The experiences here were interesting. Calls were made on top of the mountains as well as in the valleys below. It was a privilege to be entertained in the home of the wife of Arthur DeLozier for several meals. D. A. Carberry of Saxton furnished our good home while in their midst. It was a real pleasure to work with the good people of Raystown, and their genial pastor. The results of this campaign will be given by the pastor. Hello, Raystown, and blessings upon you.

Next

After an absence of nearly seven weeks the journey homeward was begun. It was good to be home again. Christmas was spent in a very quiet manner in the home of a sister-in-law in Chicago. We are now in a meeting with Brother Horlacker and his splendid people at Waynesboro. A place in the prayers of God's praying people will be appreciated.

Yours in the service of the Master and the church.
H. E. EPPLEY,
Winona Lake, Indiana.

operation with nearly all denominational leaders, the Christian Endeavor societies of America are giving emphasis to the following themes:

Stewardship, Service for others, World Friendship, Evangelism and Bible Study, Larger Leadership, Survey and Extension. Christian Endeavor's Work for Christian

Citizenship

It was Christian Endeavor which proposed the slogan "A Saloonless Nation by 1920." It was Christian Endeavor which started the campaign to close the postoffices on Sunday. Christian Endeavor led the fight to prohibit the interstate shipment of prize fight moving pictures. In hundreds of ways Christian Endeavor societies are rendering civil service in their own communities. Read "What Christian Endeavorers Can Do," pages 19 to 34. Read Chapters 17, 22 and 23 in "The Evolution of an Endeavorer." Christian Endeavor's Activities for World

Peace

As the only great international, interdenominational and inter-racial organization for young people, Christian Endeavor is rendering great service in establishing friendly feelings between nations. Read "Christian Endeavor as a Promoter of World Fellowship and World Peace," by Francis E. Clark.

Christian Endeavor's great Conventions

The largest gatherings of Christian young people in the world are the International Christian Endeavor Conventions. The next International convention, will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, July 2 to 7, 1927.

The Service Activities of Christian Endeavor

Christian Endeavor societies everywhere are doing what they can to make their communities better places in which to live. They are winning friends for Christ. They are supporting the work and worship of their churches. Read "What Christian Endeavorers Can Do."

COOPERATION FOR PEACE IN THE PACIFIST CHURCHES

Mennonite, Friends and Church of the Brethren met to consider joint work for peace in a conference held December 29 and 30, 1926, at Elizabethtown College Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

A telegram to President Coolidge encouraging him in his stand for peace as expressed by his Trenton speech and by his opposition to appropriations for more cruisers, and urging the solution of the difficulties with Mexico by reason rather than force; approval of the Findings of the Carllock Conference of last summer as the basis of the joint work of the Pacifist Churches; and hope that a large and widely representative Conference be held in the summer of 1927, were the actions taken by the Conference.

Paul Jones, a bishop of the Episcopal church and secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, was the speaker at the opening meeting on Wednesday evening, December 29. "Pacifism at work" was the subject of his talk, and he described the work being done by the members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation in Europe. He attended the General Conference of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, at Oberammergau, in Bavaria, last summer. About 175 delegates from 25 nations described the work for disarmament in Denmark, for de-militarization of the frontier between Sweden and Norway, for reconciliation between the hostile Germans, Czechs and Maygars in Czechoslovakia. French and German groups of the Fellowship of Reconciliation are exchanging visits and speakers, cementing the friendliness between their countries. Bulgarians and Roumanians, Bulgarians and Jugoslavs, are promoting understanding and removing fear.

This work is being done because the Fellowship of Reconciliation, feeling that as Christians they can take no part in war, feel also that they must do what they can to bring healing and reconciliation to every point of human relations where friction may cause hatred and war.

Dr. Alfred C. Garrett opened the session on Thursday morning with an interesting discussion of the teachings of Jesus and the prevention of war. Showing that Jesus commands all men to love their enemies, and that his Kingdom is not of this world, else would his servants fight, he examined the difficult texts which are used to confute the claim that Jesus taught pacifism. The scourge of small cords is not recorded to have been used against the men in the Temple; when Jesus says that he comes to bring, not peace, but a sword, the Revised Version uses dissension instead of sword, and if the word is sword it is quite as likely to be used against the Christian as by him. The entire example of Jesus' life, in a land suffering from military despotism and eager to revolt; shows that he opposed violence on both spiritual and practical grounds. His method was the method of victorious love.

Earnest Christians of all denominations desire peace, and a policy for peace on the part of their government. Dr. Robert Bagnell, chairman of the International Relations Committee of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, declared that they may not be absolute pacifists, but they want peace and are ready to work for peace. They want international cooperation, through the World Court and the League of Nations, they want the United States to treat Mexico and the little Central American neighbors fairly, they want our country to be generous about the debts, and they think that we will find it good business as well as generosity to reduce the debts in exchange for general reduction of armaments and the outlawry of war.

The work of the Brethren, Mennonites and Friends was reported at the afternoon session. The Brethren are arranging peace oratorical contests in their colleges, and a group of able younger men are devoting themselves to studying the question of peace and war, preparing themselves for greater service for peace. The Mennonite Sunday schools are teaching all their young people the peace principle of the church, and the reasons for them. Friends are endeavoring to spread the message of peace at county fairs, by a news service and through a speakers' bureau. All three have done or are doing relief work, which promotes friendship and gratitude between nations.

The continuation Committee report indicated that progress has been made in getting regular peace lessons into the Sunday school material of the three denominations, and the International Lesson Committee has been asked to include at least one peace lesson a year in its Lesson Series.

Danger spots in the world were reviewed by Frederick J. Libby at the final meeting Thursday evening. In spite of much that may cause war, he feels that, through the League of Nations there is hope to end the world of war. But the League needs the United States in it, and it needs more "steam", a more determined will to peace, to enable it to prevent war between great nations. It has demonstrated, a year ago, in the trouble between Greece and Bulgaria, that it can prevent war between small nations. There are enough Brethren, Friends and Mennonites in the United States to rid the world of war, if they all really cared and really worked to bring the Kingdom of God on earth.

On that note the conference adjourned.

RICHARD R. WOOD,
Chairman Continuation Committee.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

The Air-Mail Apron

(A True Story)

Florence Scott Hurst

Eleanor was nine years old and lived in the East very near the Atlantic Ocean. Her cousin Marguerite was much older—more than ten years older—and her home was in the West beside the Pacific Ocean.

Now, Marguerite was to be married. A letter had come telling all about Daniel Hoover Bruce, whom she was to marry on a June day, and about the happy plans for a church wedding. There were to be fresh orange blossoms on her hair, and a long, fluffy veil to trail below her white silk gown. After that there was to be a motor trip, and finally a dear little bungalow home.

It was all very interesting to Eleanor. How she wished she could see the California cousin, whom she knew only through letters and pictures! But it was fun to help mother select some fine linen for a wedding gift and to say when the day came, "Now Marguerite is being married!"

Then mother had a happy thought; Eleanor had been making a pretty apron in school. Why not finish it quickly and send it to Marguerite to wear in her new home?

Eleanor was delighted with the suggestion and worked busily putting tiny stitches into the pink binding that went all around the gay cretonne. It was a very gay cretonne indeed, all abloom with bright flowers and brilliant birds.

It was finished about the time a letter came from Marguerite enclosing pictures of her happy little self, crowned with orange blossoms, standing beside her tall, proud husband. And it gave, too, an account of the wedding trip to the wonderful Yosemite, where they had a whole week to marvel at the gorgeous beauty of the park and valley.

"Oh, I wish my apron could be there for her first 'anniversary'—when she's just been married a month!" exclaimed Eleanor, glancing at the calendar. "But it takes so long to get to California!"

"There is a way," said mother slowly, "but perhaps—"

"I know! I know!" interrupted Eleanor. "The air-mail! Could we send it by air-mail, mother?"

"We can get it ready and then see what father says about it," replied mother cautiously.

So when father came home to dinner that night, Eleanor rushed to meet him with a neat little parcel in her hand.

"Oh, father, can this apron I made go to California in an airplane? Please say 'Yes!'"

"Well, suppose you wait until I take off my hat and wash my face and hands and catch my breath. Then I'll hear all about it."

Of course the result was that father took the little parcel to the post office himself and mailed it very carefully. And it sailed over New York State, and the Central States, and the Western States, over rivers and valleys and great towering mountains—until it reached California.

Marguerite was as much delighted to receive an air mail package as Eleanor had been to send one.

"It was the first air-mail any of us in our circle of relatives and friends had ever received," she wrote Eleanor. "I am so proud of my air-mail apron. I shall wear it only on very particular occasions and keep it very nicely so that if you ever come to see me, even when you are quite grown-up, I can show you the dear little apron that you made in the far East and sent to me in the far West by air-mail."

That letter of appreciation made Eleanor very happy. She felt more than repaid for every tiny stitch and every little moment that had gone into the making of the Apron. And best of all there was a new, real bond between the two cousins—a bond of loving service given and received.—Zion Herald.

IN THE SHADOW

ST. CLAIR—Jack Neal St. Clair was born near Portis, Kansas, August 6, 1918, and departed this life at Morning-side Hospital, Tulsa, Oklahoma, December 3, 1926, aged 8 years, 4 months and 28 days. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar St. Clair, members of the Portis church. The family brought the remains 425 miles in their Ford touring car, setting the casket and roughbox on the backs of the seats on the right, back to their home community. The funeral service was held on Monday, December 6th in Portis by the writer, assisted by Brother L. G. Wood of Ft. Scott. Burial at Osborn's Cemetery. W. R. DEETER.

FURRY—Daniel B. Furry, scion of one of the pioneer and highly respected families of Morrison's Cove, a member of the New Enterprise, Pa., Brethren church, died December 24th, being in his seventy-third year. He is survived by a son and a daughter, three sisters and five brothers, who have become widely separated. The son lives in Washington, D. C., a brother in New York City, a sister in Nebraska and a brother in Oklahoma. He was tenderly cared for during the declining years of his life by his daughter, Miss Very G. Furry, of Altoona, Pa. Funeral services were conducted by this writer and burial services were in charge of the Masonic Fraternity, in which Mr. Furry had advanced to the Thirtysecond Degree. W. S. CRICK.

POFFENBERGER—Harvey S. Poffenberger, a lifelong resident of Saint James, Maryland, and for forty years a most active member of the Saint James Brethren church, departed this life Sunday morning, December 19, 1926, at the age of sixty-three years.

Brother Poffenberger held many positions of trust and responsibility. In the church he has for years well fulfilled the office of a deacon, served as Moderator, trustee, and treasurer. The passing of so useful and spiritual a leader in the church can only mean eternal honor and reward for him, but it means a very real loss that must be deeply felt by our congregation. In all community interests he was equally active; for thirty-five years he had served as the local postmaster, and was a member of the Board of Directors of the Mechanics Loan and Savings Bank, of Hagerstown.

Several hundred friends were present at the funeral services, which were held at the home. He is survived by his wife, two sons, Howard Poffenberger, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Rev. Ferd Poffenberger, pastor of the Christian church in Williamsport, Pa., a daughter, Mrs. Myron Bloom, one brother, five sisters, and two grandchildren.

Services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Frick, pastor of the Downsview Christian church, of which his wife and daughters are members, Rev. Norment, pastor of the Hagerstown Christian church, and Rev. Everett Sperow. Interment in Boonsboro Cemetery.

Is Christian Endeavor Becoming an Orphan

That is, is Christian Endeavor allowed to shift for itself, unnoticed and uncared for, without the protecting arm and guiding hand of the church of which it is supposed to be a part? Are pastors ceasing to foster and supervise it? Are they losing a consciousness of responsibility for nurturing its life, inspiring its activities and directing its interests? Is there a growing tendency to consider Christian Endeavor a separate and distinct organization, an institution apart from the church, instead of an auxiliary of it, having its own distinct aims and programs, unrelated to and possibly unconcerned with congregational aims and interests? Are pastors ceasing to trouble themselves with it and washing their hands of responsibility for its existence and activity? We cannot believe they are in any very large numbers, not in the majority of instances, at any rate. And yet certain observations have led to the belief that there is some tendency in that direction, and that is unfortunate.

Christian Endeavor as originally conceived was an auxiliary of the local church in which it had its existence, and by which it was fostered and guided. The society pledged allegiance to the local church and sought to develop loyalty and promote service on the part of its membership thereto. And, though it has become an international movement with societies in every land and under every flag, yet it has maintained its original character, in that it is first of all a local institution, a distinctly congregational agent, an arm of the local church, sharing its aims and ideals, putting forth effort and training its young people primarily to serve the interests of the congregation. Those who are directing the movement are not failing to keep these original characteristics in mind and in all their plans and programs they are urging loyalty to the denomination and particularly to the local church to which a society is allied.

But where congregational leadership takes little or no interest in Christian Endeavor, puts forth no effort to link it up with the church in its aims and undertakings, offers it no counsel and gives it no representation in the councils of the church, there is likely to grow in the consciousness of the society as well as that of the church a sense of separateness and aloofness that does not work to the advantage of either. Christian Endeavor will lose its usefulness and worth to the church when it develops a sense of independence as to its course and aims, and freedom from congregational supervision and plans. But there is not that in the Christian Endeavor movement itself that tends to encourage such a state. It does not desire an orphaned existence, it could not long perpetuate itself thus. Where such a condition seems to be developing is where Christian Endeavor has been left out of the consideration or active concern of the congregational leadership. Where pastors treat the Endeavor society as if its work and problems were foreign to their interests, it is not surprising to find a spirit of aloofness growing up between it and the church. It should be kept under the wing of the church and given the benefit of its protection, supervision and inspiration. Its long history of noble service has proven its worth in a multitude of ways when properly owned and shepherded.

Dr. Cherrington Remains at His Post

Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, General Secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism with headquarters at Westerville, Ohio, has been for more than a quarter of a century engaged in the temperance reform movement, and concerned especially in the educational phase of it. Other temperance advocates have been more widely known, but few have contributed more to the moulding of sentiment and the enlightening of the public conscience. He is in the work because he thoroughly believes in it, because he considers it most vital and urgent, and because he feels himself called of God to engage in it. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and was elected last November 19th by a unanimous vote of the Board of Bishops to the office of Secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of that church. It is a most important position, and one that few of Methodism's prominent ministers would have declined. He himself admits that the opportunity greatly appealed to him, yet he believed that duty lay in another course, and he refused.

He said in his statement of declination, "The movement for sobriety, both in America and in the world at large, is passing through a crucial period. Furthermore, never before in the history of temperance reform has educational and sentiment building work been so imperatively needed as today. Moreover, the international implications of the movement against alcoholism, to which more especially my efforts have been devoted during the past five years, and the world contacts in the interest of that reform which this relationship has made possible, have in themselves created obligations which are unavoidable. Conflicting emotions have surged within me during the past month, but my mind is now quite clear and the path of duty is now quite plain."

Aside from the fact that Dr. Cherrington, by the very type of his service and relationship, belongs to all churches, we are interested in this decision because of the example that it sets for the inspiration of men and women in many walks of life, and especially in those that are distinctively related to Kingdom building, and still more especially when the path of duty means sacrifice. It is human nature to seek and to readily accept places of power and prominence and positions of greater monetary advantage, and sometimes our selfishness in this regard causes us to overlook or to ignore an even greater work (for us, at least) in which we have already been placed by the divine Spirit. It is refreshing to find a man courageous enough to stay by the job he feels called to do, even when it means the sacrifice of a most enviable position. It is not for us to compare the importance of the two positions; it is sufficient to know that he stayed where he believed duty called. And it is significant that there has been no disposition on the part of Methodists to criticise him; they have rather praised him, though the church is denied his service.

More and more of our churches are conducting Vacation Bible Schools during the summer months. This movement has become very widespread and yet it is but in its infancy. An International Conference of Vacation School Workers to be held at Hotel Sherman, Chicago, February 9, 1927, is the sixth annual gathering. This is an opportunity for those who wish to keep abreast with the growth of the movement. A two-day program has been arranged.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Of course you will not forget that Publication Day offering. Make it a generous one because the cause is worthy and the need is urgent. Send offerings to Dr. R. R. Teeter, the business manager.

Brother I. D. Bowman reports a preaching trip he recently made. first supplying Brother Witter's pulpit at the Third church of Philadelphia, and then preaching in homes at various points in Delaware. Six confessoins were received and two were baptized.

Prof. Alva J. McClain has been confined to his bed for two weeks, critically ill with the "flu," but we are glad to announce that he is improving and it is hoped that he will soon be up again and about his duties. Pray for his speedy recovery and restoration to health.

The church at Loree, Indiana, has enjoyed a successful revival and evangelistic campaign under the leadership of their pastor, Brother C. A. Stewart, as evangelist and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richer as music directors. Twenty-eight souls made the good confession, not all of which joined the Brethren church, but a goodly number were added, and the membership was greatly stirred and given a larger vision as to the church's future.

Our correspondent from the Campbell church, near Lake Odessa, Michigan, reports the church much pleased and encouraged with their new pastor, Brother R. I. Humbert, who recently graduated from Ashland Seminary. The various departments are pressing forward under his inspiration and the attendance shows the church's interest in his pulpit ministrations. Brother Humbert shows his usual zeal in spreading the Gospel by means of the printed page, a novel feature of his effort being the loaning of books from his private library.

The First church of Philadelphia has reason to rejoice in the splendid record made during 1926, the report of which, made by the pastor, Brother R. Paul Miller, was voted published in The Evangelist. In giving, in increased membership and inspiritual growth their advancement was registered. It is difficult to single out any one feature that is most significant; each item in the report is important. And the prospect of the new year now entered upon points to the still greater blessing of God upon this church. May it be true that God shall continue to lead pastor and people on into greater things for his glory.

Brother J. L. Gingrich, pastor of the Third church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, reports seven accessions during the recent evangelistic campaign in which he himself did the preaching and Evangelist H. E. Eppley acted as song leader and soloist. The latter's services are highly commended. The pastor finds himself surrounded by a people who are willing to work, a situation which certainly bring joy to any pastor's heart. The consecration of children which Brother Gingrich observes, is a function of which the church has been too negligent. There are many reasons why this might well become a universal practice among us.

Dr. W. S. Bell reports his campaign for College Endowment in the Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, church, which, with Brother Austin R. Staley as pastor, the church was willing to do its best for this great and vital interest. Brother Bell finds the task much easier where the pastors are fully convinced of the importance of the the endowment campaign, and it would be difficult to find a former Ashland student who is not convinced of this. Brother Staley's good people measured their loyalty to the amount of $2,561.05, which added to the amount previously reported, makes a grand total to date of $91,974.99.

Prof. M. P. Puterbaugh gives his second report of the recent White Gift offerings and a most encouraging report it is. Nearly four thousand dollars have been received to date, and among those reporting there were twelve schools making an offering of at least $100.00, and Nappanee comes in for the honor of having made the banner offering thus far, in amount $223.11. If you help to make the treasurer's next offering as good in proportion as this one, the Sunday School Association will be practically assured of enough to take care of all the splendid service it has purposed to render the brotherhood.

In a recent personal communication from Brother R. E. Gotschall, pastor of our mission at Columbus, Ohio, he informs us that at their communion service of the congregation they had forty-eight communicants present, Brethren W. A. Gearhart and Davis of Dayton being visitors. He further says: "Our prayer meetings are growing; there were twenty-four present last evening. Our Sunday school also is growing, though it seems slow to us. It is hard not to be over-anxious. There are three awaiting baptism." May God bless him and his good wife for their enthusiasm; their people seem to be "catching" it from them.

Brother Percy L. Yett, our missionary, stationed at Huinca Renanco, in the Argentine, gives us a good report concerning the progress of the work under his care. He has made splendid progress in the short time he has been on the field and has evidently been hard at work to have accomplished all that has fallen to him to do. It has been apparent all along that our missionaries are by no means men and women of leisure, or of easy tasks, they are all set to difficult jobs and work hard. That is the way people usually do when they are thoroughly in earnest. Let us all in the homeland be inspired to more vigorous and sacrificial service by the example of our active representatives on the mission field. It should be noted that two Christian Endeavor societies have been organized in this mission, and they are active and giving valuable help to the work. The general representative of Christian Endeavor in the Argentine reported to the Christian Endeavor World two societies in Huinca Renanco some time ago, and we know these may be ours, as we have the only Protestant mission in the town.

The weekly calendar of the First church of Philadelphia recently carried an encouraging bit of news from Yalouki in French Equatorial Africa. Miss Tyson had written: "The school building foundation is finished and the roof will be started this week. The church building is nearly finished and the dispensary building will soon be started. The church building is an immense structure made of burned bricks. We certainly praise the Lord for the funds that have come for the buildings at Yalouki. I wish you and all the folks at 10th and Dauphin could attend our Sunday school. We had 218 present today! Brother Hathaway has 60 men in his class. Mrs. Hathaway has 24 women; Miss Emmert has 46 young men, and in my class there are 84 youngsters up to the age of eight years! These are too many for one teacher, but what can we do but do the best we can? How I do long that these little tots should be led to the Lord. Pray for me that I may have the patience and love that is needed." On a later date Mrs. Hathaway wrote to Brother L. S. Bauman this statement which we found in his church calendar at Long Beach, California: "The last Sunday of the month (October 31) we had an attendance of 568." That is a challenge to even our largest Sunday schools in America, and the average school is trailing way behind.

The editor of a certain religious journal complains about the continual interference on the part of the people in the running of the government. He says, "The President and Secretary of State can scarcely do anything without a whole lot of folks rising up, sending in telegrams, petitions, questionnaires, and a thousand other things, making suggestions on how governmental policies should be formed and operated." Then he asks, "Why not let the President and Secretary of State run things themselves?" The answer is simple, as he himself reluctantly admits, "We live in a democracy, and the folks must have their way." In more classic phraseology, ours is a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people." And when the people cease to take an interest in the affairs of government, democracy is doomed. It is true there is sometimes too much destructive criticism and not enough cooperation. But that must be endured in the confidence that the great mass of the people will stand by those whom they have placed in positions of responsibility and charged with leadership. Let us not become impatient with the people's active interest in the affairs of state, nor try to quiet their voice. It is a safety-valve. Let them have their say, and, though they be mistaken, they will the more readily listen to reason. It is also a ballast to keep those in authority weighed down with the consciousness of their responsibility and accountability to the people.

Right Conviction a Power in Religion

By A. R. Staley

(Address before Brethren Ministers at late Pennsylvania Conference at Berlin)

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Rom. 1:16).

There is a difference between a sympathy and a conviction. The first is simply an agreement of inclination, and as such, deals only with the feelings which lie on the surface. It does not enter into the fiber of character. But conviction is an act of compulsion in the admission of truth. It is that which makes a convict of a man and binds his intellect as a slave of the thought. It is a matter of the deepest affection possible to humanity—the result of deep consideration upon, and personal experience of, the fundamental truths in any line of thought. The sympathy will be colored by the circumstances under which it exists and is uttered. The utterance of a conviction however will be the mental integrity taking its stand upon the solid rock from which it defies all storms of circumstances to move upon it.

One does not need to repeat the text many times to discover whether it is the expression of a mere sympathy or of the deep rooted conviction of the writer. "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth to the Jew first and also to the Greek." Beneath the strong form which the expression assumes there breathes a spirit of finality which tells us that here a soul has taken its stand and here by the help of God it intends to stay. It is the utterance of a supreme conviction. It is alive with heroism. It is the propelling force of a great career.

The conviction which the apostle here expresses is a great need of our time. In the present day there is a noticeable tendency to depreciate the importance of definite religious belief. We often hear it said not merely by outsiders but by members of the church, "If a man lives a moral life and follows Christ's practical precepts to the best of his ability, who cares about his opinion?" Is this the conclusion of the whole matter? Was Pope the poet right when he said, "He can't be wrong whose life is in the right?" Is such a thing possible? Suppose that I believe that I am dying from an incurable disease. Or suppose that I believe that the business in which I have invested everything is about to fail. Is it conceivable that my conduct will be uninfluenced by such beliefs? Suppose these beliefs are wrong. Then they would put me on the wrong track and betray me into wrong performances. Tennyson rightly says:

"O purblind race of miserable men,
How many among us at this very hour
So forge a life-long trouble for ourselves
By taking true for false, and false for true."

If it matters what we believe about the secular details of life, how much more seriously must it matter, what are our convictions about the truths of religion. From the day of the apostles on, the church has affirmed consistently that convictions do influence a man's state for good or ill. They said, "Right belief sets a man in harmony with the truth for thinking right, acting right and becoming what he ought to be. Wrong belief, sets him at variance with the truth of things, and so inevitably disqualifies him for discharging his proper function and filling his proper position in the universe."

ELDER A. R. STALEY, Pastor

At the close of Paul's third missionary journey he was arrested at Jerusalem. He appealed to Caesar and was taken to Rome as a prisoner. After spending one day in Rome he invited the leading men among the Jews to meet him, that he might explain to them why he was in chains. They desired to hear what Paul thought concerning Jesus. So they arranged a day with him and came to him in considerable numbers at the house of friends who were entertaining him. And then, with solemn earnestness, he explained to them the subject of the Kingdom of God, endeavoring from morning till evening to convince them about Jesus, both from the Law of Moses and from the Prophets. Some were convinced, others refused to believe." Was belief or disbelief in this case a matter of indifference?

Does Peter's sermon delivered on the day of Pentecost impress you as the message of one, who rather fancied he believed in some sort of a something, or as one who firmly believed in the power of Christ? It was the power of conviction added to the gift of the Holy Ghost that enabled him to stand before that surging multitude, with their hands dyed crimson in his Master's blood and without fear charge them with the awful crime: "You disowned the holy and righteous One, and ask as a favor the release of a murderer. The Prince of Life you put to death."

What was it that caused Daniel to open his window toward Jerusalem and pray three times daily, when he knew that it would mean being cast into the lion's den? Was it not because of deep convictions formed while a child at his mother's knee? Amidst the rabble of deities, gods and goddesses of Babylon, he remained true to the living God, Jehovah. Dare to be like Daniel.

Again, think of the experience of Daniel's three friends. The King had decreed that all who would not fall down and worship the golden image should be cast into a burning fiery furnace. Policy might have suggested to them, Why forfeit rank, wealth, and prospects? Do what is required this once. Bowing the knee will not be giving the homage of the heart. No! They would not betray their religious convictions for safety or gain, but were ready to sacrifice all for conscience sake. All right and proper demands they are willing to obey, but "this matter" they declared to be beyond the king's dominion. Their's was not the calmness of stupidity or the recklessness of blind zeal. Witness the firmness and fortitude, the power and patience of strong religious conviction! Delivered or destroyed, their resolve was unalterable. Burn they might, but turn they would not. A manifestation of unconquerable religious principle! Because they stood the test, idolatry was condemned by a signal salvation, the living God of Israel was honored, the hearts of the exiles were encouraged and inspiration given to the persecuted of all succeeding ages. What kind of religion is ours? Of conviction or convenience?

Does it make any difference what one believes about God? Would it make no difference if we believed that God did not exist? Shall we call God "He" or "It"? Shall we think of him as a person revealed or as "The passionless impersonality of the Unknown and Unknowable? Shall we think of him as Fatherly Providence operating in his universe, or the great Absentee who never does anything? Is it important that we give the right answers to such questions as these? Yes, we claim that it is all important. The Scriptures plainly teach that God is our Heavenly Father, the Father of our Lord Jesus, and the Father of all men. The Father is creator, Sovereign, or King, and also the loving provider of all our needs. The best definition I know is that given by Clark, "God is the Personal Spirit, perfectly Good, who in holy love creates, sustains and orders all."

Our belief concerning Jesus will in a large way determine our success as messengers of the Gospel. Paul's was a gospel associated inseparably with the person of a living Christ. He had left Jerusalem on his journey to Damascus with certain definite ideas as to the Nazarene. To the mind of Paul the death of Jesus stamped him as an imposter. He thought of Jesus as a deceiver of the people, as a traitor to his nation and a blasphemer of God. True he may have heard what he no doubt considered the absurd story of the resurrection, but he placed no credit in it. To his mind Jesus was a rank imposter whose body lay secreted somewhere in the hills or valleys of Galilee. This false conception urged Paul on after the stoning of Stephen to a merciless persecution of the Christians. But as he looks up from the ground on that memorable day, it was to gaze into the face of that Jesus. It was to see the form he thought decayed in the soil of Judea. It was to hear the voice of one whom he thought destroyed. It was to learn that the Nazarene had been very close to him all the time and was present even at that moment. And from that time the chief element of the Gospel to Paul was the truth of a present and living Christ; no Christ hidden away by his disciples. It was a living Christ present with him every moment and whose power to keep was constant, that he declared he realized the nearness of his Master and that nearness sustained him in every trial. Thus we see that Paul's conviction was based on a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. He had experienced that saving power in his own life "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation," "I am not ashamed, for I know in whom my trust reposes, and I am confident that he has it in his power to keep what I have entrusted to him safe until that day." It was this knowledge of the saving and keeping power of Christ, and that the message of the gospel was the most important message in all the world, that sent Paul out to become one of the greatest messengers of Christ that the world has ever known.

Brethren, we too, have answered the summons of the greatest call that can come to mankind—the call to be messengers of our Lord Jesus Christ. He has called us to be leaders in the greatest institution in all the world—the Church of the Living God. It is the one and only institution in the world which was founded and organized by our Lord and for that reason if for no other, it can have neither rival nor substitute. While others come and go the church can never be destroyed; for the promise of God is that, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

The Brethren church stands for, "The Bible, the Whole Bible, and Nothing but the Bible." She claims to be a Whole Gospel church. This simply means that there is no command or teaching of my Master, which I cannot believe, practice and teach in the Brethren pulpit. This gives the Brethren preacher a freedom and power that is not found in man-made creeds.

The only reason why the Brethren church has a right to exist separate and apart from any other denomination, is the stand that she takes concerning the great fundamental teachings of God's word. The Pre-existence and Virgin Birth of Jesus; the fall of Man, and the necessity of his New Birth; the Vicarious Atonement of the Lord through the shedding of his own blood on the cross; the bodily Resurrection of Christ and his Glorification at the right hand of God; Justification by personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; the Personality and Deity of the Holy Spirit, who is our Comforter and Guide; the Personal and Visible return of our Lord from Heaven as King of kings and Lord of Lords; the ordinances of baptism by trine immersion; confirmation; the Lord's supper; the communion of the bread and wine; the washing of the saints' feet and the anointing of the sick with oil. These we believe are fundamentals. When we cease as a church to believe, teach and practice these, then we can work with any other church just as well as the Brethren.

If the Brethren church is to move forward with any force, if she would fill her rightful place in her relation to God and man, then she must have men in her pulpits who like St. Paul are firmly gripped with the conviction that the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. She must have preachers who will not shun to proclaim the whole counsel of God regardless of what the world might think, say or do. Brethren, let us all remember Paul's counsel to Timothy when he says, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." May the Brethren ministry stand true to the Faith once delivered unto the Saints. May we be firmly gripped with the great fundamental truths of the gospel. May the message of the church that we love continue to ring true to the teaching of the Book of Books. May our religion be one of CONVICTION and POWER, because we have in our lives a personal knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

"FOR TO ME TO LIVE IS CHRIST"

By J. Whitcomb Brougner

This is my life motto. It should be the motto of every preacher and every church. Think Christ, talk Christ, live Christ, be as nearly as possible a Christ to your community and the world. Christ, and Christ alone, can furnish a solution for every problem known to human experience. He is the world's all-sufficient Savior; mankind's supreme Teacher; humanity's incomparable Guide; the Goal of all human aspirations; the infallible Authority on all matters pertaining to morals and religion. He is the Universal HOMO, blending in himself all races and ages, temperaments and types. He is the only One whom I ought to live to please. If I please him and not the people, so much the worse for the people. If I please the people and not him, so much the worse for me. With Christ as the center and the circumference of life let us so preach and live that we can say with the apostle Paul, "For me to live is Christ."

Ohio Conference Moderator's Address

By R. D. Barnard

We must say a word about what is supposed to be a change in the field of private interpretation. We realize in so doing we are entering a very controversial field, but this is the more reason that we should consider it. There have been those who have left the ranks of our ministry because they believed this condition of limitation to exist and to be unbrethren. To illustrate something of the condition as I see it, may I use something common? Some of us do not like the taste of carrots or parsnips, some do. Some believe in a high protective tariff as necessary, some do not. Some believe in the principle of the League of Nations, some do not. The truth is, we differ, mentally, physically, morally and spiritually. And so our convictions with respect to interpretation will differ. But unless there is some basic teachings and principles for which we stand we are goalless, purposeless, powerless. I am willing to believe that the Message of the Brethren Ministry probably best expresses the position of Historic Brethrenism. Believing this we should teach it, preach it, practice it from the viewpoint of loving loyal service to our church and Master but never should it be tied upon anyone as phylacteries to the forehead or sandals to the feet. This very message with the New Testament as our text, gives us a rightful season for an aggressive existence. In our message, or what we unitedly stand for, we have a greater reason for distinctive existence than we have had previously. This gives optimism.

And now with respect to the rather common consent that we have lost a place of leadership in the promotion of world peace. We will admit that our fraternity has not been active in this field. We bow our heads in shame at the faltering attitude assumed during the days of '17 and '18. But we are extremely happy that so many of the most influential Christian bodies are active in this teaching and promotion. There is one rather minor condition we might easily forget; I believe it important. After every great war there is a concerted movement, consciously or unconsciously, by all civic and religious bodies for peace. So often this feeling passes with the next national disturbance. The Brethren church has a traditional position, to proclaim peace and oppose the very principle and practice of war which it has maintained for two and one-quarter centuries. The very continuity of our position gives a rightful claim to distinctive existence. One thing we should do however, that is, work at our position. We recommend that some concerted action be taken for the teaching of peace in our Ohio churches.

Again, in the actual obedience to the commission as given in James 5:14-15 we are distinctive, sharing that distinctiveness with only one or two other denominations. Although most zealous Christians believe in God's power to forgive and heal, and pray earnestly in the sickroom for such there are but few who practice or even claim to practice in simplicity and faith this God-inspiring, sin-pardoning, bodily-healing service as the Apostle taught it. It is true that many fanciful people, along with one who is before the public eye today, have claimed divine healing, and have even practiced this service after a fashion changing it from the privacy of the sickroom to the boisterous place on the public stage. I contend that we have a distinct responsibility to the world, in saving this sacred service. There is yet one consideration in the Brethren's message, that, as I view it, makes us distinctive. If so, it is a source for joy and optimism. I refer to the faithful obedience to the literal commands of Jesus with respect to church ordinances. It seems to me that there are just one of two positions that the earnest ones can take. Either practice all that Jesus asks us to, or be consistent and do nothing, considering that every item has a spiritual interpretation alone. To illustrate,—by common consent we can say that Jesus had part in three items of service in a certain upper room in Jerusalem, namely, a feet washing, a supper, an offering of the bread and wine. Can we consistently say that Jesus intended that we practice the latter of these, to the neglecting of the first two? The same Jesus, in the same room, at the same time, with the same disciples ministered in all. We are distinctive in this proclamation. May we consider too the baptismal claims? There is almost unanimous agreement that the literal word Jesus used in giving the great commission was a frequentative word meaning, "to dip repeatedly." Jesus was careful in all his choice of acts and words elsewhere, why was he not careful here as well? We are thinking too of the personality of the God-head. Orthodox belief places Jesus, the Father, and the Holy Spirit with distinctive personalities equally God. It believes that the three agree in all relationships. Why then should the one baptism not reverence equally and specially the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit? We believe that the Great Commission as given in Matthew 28:19 to so teach and direct. In this humble and loving obedience we are especially distinctive and have a special mission to the world.

There is one condition that has developed especially in later years that is perplexing. Our position as I believe it should be is without compromise with respect to admission to membership without trine immersion. This makes it that we cannot accept or recognize a membership from any other denomination, excepting perhaps one or two. The perplexing part is a practical solution which each of us can use by which we can retain this high position and still offer a satisfactory fellowship to those of other faiths worshiping in our midst. As I see it in our present arrangement we give no official recognition of a Christian of a different communion than ours more than we would to the man of the world. I have never believed this to be completely right. I have had the fortune, good or bad, to face this situation repeatedly in my pastorates. I have even been called before a council once because of a misunderstanding in this respect. So I cannot face the issue as one who has never heard of it before. I have formed an opinion. This is my opinion, and I give it realizing that I may be seriously misunderstood and misquoted. I give it though because I fear for the consequences to our Denomination unless something be done, and because I believe the suggestion will not discredit the position which we revere and honor but will be a safe working policy for us. I wish that it, or another upon which we might all agree might be adopted in Ohio. We could offer to those living in our communities, members of other denominations, but in sympathy with us a "Church Home" while they are in our community. It is not a membership, their membership still remaining in their former church. This would cause these folks to feel that we considered them as more than common sinners, and many such do not feel that way now. It would cause them to grow spiritually with us, and would not as I see it compromise our position, it would really enhance it in the eyes of these people, for they would come to believe that our desire was to be fair, and still uncompromising.

Now just a few general considerations in summary. I await for some more practical planning for work. Some day I am made to feel that we are doing so much in the field of thinking and theory that we have neglected the practical work of Kingdom building. As I have been impressed the messages of national and state conferences have been of this type, and doubtless most of them should be. But I want to enter a voice in favor of more "ways and means" messages. This cannot be changed immediately, but let's grow that way.

With respect to our local policies, I wonder if we are not apologetic. We should be from the viewpoint of explicating our positions. But our messages and our teachings should be shot through and through with the note of victory, "Ye are more than Conquerors." Shall our position not be that which is aggressive, not apologetic; planning victory, and not defeat. Youth demands a challenge where the outcome, if they fight hard, is victory and not in any sense defeat. We should give them such a challenge.

Lastly, we should have love not fear. Brethren, in some fields at least is there not a condition among us by which we question the faith and the Brethren integrity of one another. Perhaps you will not want to agree with me openly, but I fear whether we confess it or not, it is true and I could illustrate. When we come back to fundamental positions I do not believe there is anything to fear. Although some of us may emphasize one part of Christian Doctrine more than another, shall we not so long as I am one person and you another? But was not that true with the very first followers of Jesus? Some believed Jewish practices were necessary for all. Paul said they were all right for Jews but were absolutely wrong if forced upon Gentiles. Paul was the great exponent of Faith, James of Works. But shall we infer from this that Paul did not believe in works, nor James in faith? Certainly not. Paul said little if anything about the miraculous Virgin Birth of Christ, shall we conclude that he did not believe it or consider it important? I do not think so. Then why, why Brethren, although we may place different emphasis on different things shall we not completely dismiss this fear and questioning that is present, to a measure at least, and in a great spirit of love and determination press forward toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. In the pursuance of such a course may the blessings of God the Father, Jesus Christ, his Son, and the Holy Spirit our guide and helper be with us. Amen.

Observance and Enforcement of Prohibition

By Arthur E. Hungerford

Washington, January 21, 1927—Challenging the forces opposed to the observance and enforcement of the prohibition amendment and its enabling acts, the Annual Meeting of the Citizens Committee of One Thousand in Washington on January 6, was most significant.

Held at a time when the country faces a peculiar crisis because of the insidious and dangerous campaign for the nullification and disregard of the prohibition laws, the meeting was in reality a great mobilization of the forces of decent citizenship.

"A challenge to both political parties to deviate from prohibition at their peril" was a newspaper description of the gathering. Practically every Washington correspondent somewhere in his article spoke of it as "a challenge."

Official Washington took note. President Coolidge sent a letter on law observances and expressed regret at his inability to be present. Senator William E. Borah, a leading Republican, and Senator Morris Shephard, an outstanding Democrat known as "the father of prohibition," spoke at the closing banquet.

All the speeches were put on the air and many officials listened to them in their homes. The guests of honor at the closing banquet were Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, General Lincoln C. Andrews, and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Before and during the gathering "wet" forces kept up a barrage of disparaging publicity trying to destroy the effects of the meeting. Their heaviest shells were "duds."

The meeting was most discouraging to the wets and those urging nullification and disregard of law. Arrangements were made for 150 at the luncheon. Two hundred persons came. The banquet was attended by many more than six hundred persons, many from out of town. New England, the East, the South, the Middle-west were all well represented.

Many Congressmen and Senators were at the banquet. There was but little mincing of phrases and polite quibbling at the three sessions of the meeting.

Throughout there was a stern demand that officials enforce the laws, especially the prohibition laws, because they are more under fire than any others. The leaders were determined that the position of the forces they represent should be plainly understood.

The meeting came at a particularly appropriate time. The propaganda for nullification and disregard of the prohibition laws has been so deceitful that many persons did not realize that a real crisis had arisen. It was a rallying call to good citizens, a new mobilization for law observance and enforcement. Among those in attendance were men sincerely opposed to prohibition as well as advocates, but all actions taken were unanimous.

Colonel Raymond Robins, of Chicago, who was not in favor of the prohibition amendment because he thought the country was not ready for it, urged that regardless of what men think of prohibition they must support the law. He declared prohibition is good and from every point of view is worth considerably more than the cost.

"To elect and support such public officials as may be trusted to carry out the principles of law observances and enforcement" was the keynote of a call issued to the American people. It quoted the recent message to Congress of President Coolidge and by unanimous vote a copy of the call was presented to him the day after the meeting by a committee of three: William H. Van Benschoten, of New York City, William T. Galliher of Washington, and Colonel Patrick Henry Callahan of Louisville.

Plans for a nation-wide campaign of education and publicity were unanimously adopted. Pledges of support were

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Saved for Service. Isaiah 6:8

By D. A. C. Teeter

1. God asks the question, whom shall I send? God wants a person. He cannot send a thing, a machine, nor a sound, nor a book. God wants us not to aid him in guiding the stars in their course, or in giving growth to the vegetable, or life to the animal. For us God's business is with human lives and human souls. That which God has in view, that which God is perpetually taking counsel upon, is the welfare, the happiness, and, if either have been disturbed, then the restoration, the rectification, the redemption, the salvation, of the lives which he created, of the soul which he made. When he says, Whom shall I send? he inquires, in other words, who among the living will lend a hand to this work? Be jealous of the one sent.

It is the life that counts for or against Christ. Some one has said, there is a gospel according to Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, but let it not be forgotten that there is a gospel according to you, and if your gospel does not ring clear and true you shall be called to account. Such a life can play havoc with the church. "In a little group of men, leaders in the church, I heard this question asked, What is the weightiest argument in behalf of Christ today?" One of the wisest in the group replied after a few moments silence, The weightiest argument for the Master is always the same argument,—the daily walk of "Christians." That is true! it is what Peter means in bidding us to walk carefully in our daily life that we may put to silence the ignorance of men. It was what Jesus meant when he called us the light of the world. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

"He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also and greater works than these shall he do; because I go to my Father." Christ opened the eyes of a blind man and he saw his father. You can open the eyes of a man's heart and he shall see God. He lifted up a man who was lame; you shall bring a man to walk in the ways of righteousness. He took a young man by the hand and raised him up from his bier. If you are filled with the spirit of God you can bring a man up from the death of sin unto God. It is a greater work than that which Jesus performed when he opened the eyes of the blind man.

II. If we are to have power with men, we must pay the price of self denying service. Never until one realizes the value of a soul, and the price at which it was purchased, and never until a love as intense and personal as that of a brother burns in our soul, shall we be much used in saving the lost. You know that his service is varied enough to have a place that you are fitted to occupy, that his service is needy enough to demand your help, and finally that it is resourceful enough to be able to dispense with your help. Such is the state of the case. You are responsible only for being a willing, zealous, industrious, servant of God. Intelligent withal according to the measure of your talent in capacity and opportunity.

"I've done refusing." These are the words of an aged Christian who had been unexpectedly asked by his pastor to lead a special meeting for the evening. In commencing the service, he stated that he had not expected to take charge of the meeting, and so was unprepared to make any remarks on the topic before them. "But," said he, "I have made up my mind that when I am asked to do anything in Christian work, even if I do not feel prepared, I will try to do it, I've done refusing." No better opening for prayer meeting that night was needed. What better keynote could be found? What a difference would be seen at once in our social meetings, and in every branch of church work, if every professing Christian would say, "I've done refusing."

To get to heaven is a worthy desire, but it does not cover the scope of Christianity, nor does it satisfy the demand of the Gospel, nor meet the soul's needs. Regardless of future rewards, godliness and holiness of heart and life are profitable in all things here in this world. The life that is governed by the principles of godliness gets the best and escapes the worst in this world. He

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

HEALING WATERS—Ezek. 47:1-9.

No need is more keenly felt than that of spiritual cleansing, and no material object more fittingly symbolizes that cleansing than water. And Jesus linked it inseparably with the act of regeneration which his church is set to proclaim.

TUESDAY

WELLS OF SALVATION—Isa. 12:1-6.

The prophet declares that Jehovah is become his salvation, and that one may joyfully "draw water out of the wells of salvation," implying that one is not to be satisfied with once drinking of these life-giving waters, but is to be sustained by continual drinking.

INVITATION TO THE WATERS—Isa. 55:1-11.

Every one who has a thirst for the water that gives life and enrichment to the soul may have it for the taking. That fountain of life that flows rich and free, and is sufficient for all, is the word that goes forth out of the mouth of the Lord God of Israel.

THURSDAY

THE FIVE THOUSAND FED—John 6:1-14.

He who had compassion on the multitudes who hungered for material bread, is even more concerned about the spiritual food of the distressed and scattered souls of men, and offers his own life as the bread which alone can satisfy.

FRIDAY

JESUS THE BREAD OF LIFE—John 6:41-51.

In the face of the murmuring Jews Jesus frankly declared himself to be the "bread of life," the "living bread," the bread that "cometh down out of heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die," even his own body which he offers "for the life of the world." That bread insures against death and may be had by merely believing on him.

SATURDAY

FEEDING ON ASHES—Isa. 44:12-20.

There are many deceived hearts today as well as in the time of the prophet of old, many who imagine that they can satisfy their life on the works of their own hands and have no need of the bread of life. It is as if they fed on ashes.

SUNDAY

A PROMISE OF BREAD—Psa. 132:11-18.

The psalmist records Jehovah's promise of bread and blessings in abundance "if thy children will keep my covenant." So are all the great and precious promises of God conditioned on obedience.—G. S. B. compassion.—G. S. B.

who follows after righteousness has everything to gain and nothing to lose in this life, and besides has the promise of the life to come. It is the promise of God to those who seek first the kingdom, all other necessary things shall be added. The Master said that those who would forsake all for his sake and the Gospel's should receive a hundred fold now at this time and in the world to come eternal life. But the emphasis of our godliness should be put where it belongs, and where Christ puts it, not in the hope and desire of future reward, but as he says, "For my sake and the Gospel's."

An aroused church membership will give us a redeemed continent. The world must be won man by man. The personal touch gives power. Only he who has felt the tongue of fire can speak the words that burn. "Chaplain McCabe had a brother who after forty years of strong drink, was finally, through the faith and love and perseverance of his hopeful brother, redeemed from the slavery. The chaplain used to say, when I get to heaven, I am going to take my brother by the hand and lead him up to mother, and say, Mother, here is George, I have brought him home." Nothing will save a vast multitude of people, unless we, in love and faith, help them to fight their battles through to victory.

Dr. Dixon says, the parable of the shepherd is rendered like this in the conduct of many a church. "A certain man, when he found that some of his sheep were lost, built a handsome shelter on the edge of the wilderness and over the door wrote these words; any lost sheep straying near this wilderness hard by, if he will present his credentials and give good reference to the committee in charge will be admitted to the shelter after due deliberations." If you do not care for men, you cannot speak the word with power. Before you can preach an evangelistic sermon you must have an evangelistic heart. The CROSS still conquers men and he who climbs to it with a love for the lost, will find a CROWN upon the RUGGED BARS. Did Isaiah ever regret the hour in which he answered the call of God, "Here am I, send me?" Surely not. Shall we not respond to the call of our Lord and Master while it is yet day with the words of Isaiah, "Here am I, send me?"

THE LORD'S PRAYER

Thou, to the mercy seat our souls would gather,
To do our duty unto Thee Our Father.
To whom all praise, all honor should be given.
For thou art the great God Who art in heaven.
Thou by thy wisdom rul'st the world's whole frame.
Forever therefore Hallowed be thy name.
Let never more delays divide us from
Thy glorious grace, but let Thy kingdom come.
Let thy commandments opposed be by none,
But thy good pleasure and Thy will be done.
And let our promptness to obey, be even
The ever same on earth as 'tis in heaven.
Then for our souls, O Lord, we also pray,
That thou would'st be pleased to Give us this day
The food of life, wherewith our souls are fed, Sufficient raiment and our daily bread.
With every needful thing do thou relieve us,

And of thy mercy, pity and forgive us.
All our misdeeds, for him, whom thou did'st please,
To make an offering for our trespasses.
And for as much, O Lord, as we believe
That thou wilt pardon us as we forgive.
Let that love, wherewith thou doest acquaint us,
To pardon all those who trespass against us.
And though, sometimes thou find'st we have forgot
This love to thee, yet help and lead us not Through soul or body's want to disposition,
Nor let earth's gain drive us into temptation.
Let not the soul of any true believer
Fall in time of trial but deliver
Yea, save them from the malice of the devil
And both in life and death keep us from evil.
Thus pray we, Lord, for that of thee from whom
This may be had For thine is the kingdom.
This world is of thy works, its wondrous story
To thee belongs the power and the glory.
And all thy wondrous works have ended never
But will remain forever and forever.
Thus we poor creatures would confess again,
And thus would say eternally Amen.
Charleston, South Carolina, 1823.

Is life monotonous to you? Every moment and every place should be eloquent to you of God. When you behold good, know that it is God's response to the call of man. When you see evil, know that God is there, calling you to service.—Richard Whitwell.

The forgiveness of sins has a place in all the creeds. It is not only an article of faith, it is a fact of experience. The consciousness of the church is the consciousness of sins forgiven. As Luther put it, the church is full of the forgiveness of sins; it is a community of forgiven men.—James Denney.

made. Because of the danger from propaganda for nullification and disregard of law the Committee was called upon to extend its work. Support for this program was given by the leaders of the great prohibition bodies and organizations of the country.

The Citizens Committee of One Thousand while not organized primarily for the support of prohibition, is devoting its efforts largely in this direction because these laws are under special attack. It is not an "organization" but rather a "voice" and movement to support existing groups already organized for such work.

Under the country-wide campaign launched at Washington, the efforts in behalf of law observance will not be confined to prohibition groups alone but will include the enlistment of existing organizations of all types to make law observance a prominent topic in their programs. Platform messages will be presented by officers and members of the Committee. Colonel Raymond Robins has promised to speak at a number of gatherings.

A limited number of conventions and conferences will be held. In addition there will be many group meetings of selected men and women throughout the country. Because the young people of high school and university age are unacquainted with the evils of the saloon, special attention will be directed to intensifying sentiment for law observance among them.

Religion in the Home

Rev. Fletcher D. Parker wrote for the "Congregationalist" a series of four articles on "Religion in the Home," which appeared in February, 1926. They were well worth reading and preserving. It is, of course, not possible to reproduce them here; but a few thoughts from them may well be given.

The first, "Marriage," is introduced by the sentence "The Christian home is the sure foundation for the best in American life." He states that there are "four elements, all necessary, which give a reasonable assurance of a happy, married life." These are, 1. Mutual respect. Without this marriage should not be considered. 2. Common purpose. 3. Common interests. 4. Religious unity. Human life is hard enough at its best, and it is difficult for two people to meet the trials of life successfully unless they "can meet around the Communion table of our Lord and feel together the sense of his sovereignty and his nearness." Whatever things may be desired in a marriage without these four essentials marriage should be avoided.

The second, "Grace at Table," takes up the question of the family table, in which there should be "a sacramental element. It should be a joyous time where father, mother and the children enter into very real fellowship. The joy is deepened and enriched when God is the unseen guest. He should be thanked at the beginning of every meal."

"Family Prayers" is taken as the subject of the third article. "Nothing so unites, beautifies, and inspires family life as the habit of prayer together. Silent prayer by husband and wife begins and closes the day with a sense of God that gives poise in time of strain and rest and refreshment when it is past. He recommends the observance of family prayers at the breakfast table, with the reading of appropriate passages which will give the children something of permanent value to remember; prayers which the children will understand and follow; and songs which express their feelings, or be an aid to them in their daily life. "Out of such homes come boys and girls of character fit to carry on in the great crises of life and also ready for the humble duties of the daily round."

In his fourth article the stress is on "Co-operation." The division of labor, and of responsibility, so far as it is possible, not only between the husband and the wife, but among the children, as they grow large enough to undertake small tasks about the home. "A Christian home is the result of joint endeavor on the part of the whole family. If one member fails to cooperate, the unity vanishes and the beauty is spoiled." "The Christian home is a cooperative enterprise, and should be the training ground and the inspiration for the larger fellowship in the Christian community."

A Code of Conduct for Parents

Don't show off your child. It is not the duty of the child to feed the parent's vanity, but the parent's task to forget self-pride in dealing with the child.

Don't hurry your child. Adulthood is not a station toward which the child should be rushed, but a product of growth, and the growing process is the important thing. You can't mold children; they have to grow.

Don't use your child as a means of riding yourself of emotions that you dare not express to equals.

Don't expect commands to function in place of fellowship. Children can be led but not driven in these days.

Don't lie to your child nor permit any one else to do so.

Don't use fear as a whip. Fear can only succeed in making slaves, and slaves, even when obedient, are poor substitutes for full human beings.

Don't stress the weaknesses of your child. He may take seriously what you point out to him and develop feelings of inferiority, or he may glue his attention on your own weaknesses and lose respect for you as a harping hypocrite.

Don't tell your child that he cannot reason. He can and will if you have the wit to help him.

Don't let your home crowd out your child; put the child first and adjust home life to his needs (That does not mean to pamper your child, however.)

Don't be a tyrant to your child even if you have power. Children are helpless and long-suffering and usually generous in their judgments of parents. Nevertheless a parent who drives his child from sheer love of dominance runs the risk of losing the child's love. The child will sometime be free, but the parent lonely.—Ernest R. Grover in The Christian Advocate.

Church School News

The church school is the church engaged in teaching and training the persons of its constituency to live a Christian life. This involves personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord and whole minded commitment to his way of life. This high and holy ministry requires consecrated and trained leaders.

Beaver City

Superintendents are discovering the necessity of having a training class in their school to qualify on our Standard of Excellence. Superintendent A. T. Nickerson of Beaver City, Nebraska, writes: "In order to have our school one hundred per cent on the Standard of Excellence we need a teacher training class and have organized one. Please send us literature and the necessary supplies."

Hagerstown

In September Dr. G. C. Carpenter, pastor of the Hagerstown, Maryland, church, enrolled a training class for his school. Recently he sent us papers from nineteen students, each of whom received a commendable grade. The membership appears to be pretty evenly divided between men and women.

Yellow Creek

This rural church, which is a part of the New Enterprise circuit, Pennsylvania, has a training class of twelve students. The work is being directed by the energetic pastor, Rev. W. S. Crick. He accompanied a first set of papers with a brief biographical statement relative to each member of the class. This was an aid to the examiner.

Likewise

The example of these schools may cause others to do likewise. Certainly this is not a part of our church school work that should go by default. If we do not train our own leaders, who will train them

Kansas Leader

A recent communication brought a program of the fiftythird annual convention of the Osborn County Sunday School Council of Religious Education. Rev. W. R. Deeter, pastor of our church at Portis, was reelected president of this organization. He reports a splendid convention and a very fine young peoples' conference during the year. Brother Deeter will be official representative of the county in the State Board meeting at Topeka next May.

It would be interesting to learn how many of our Brethren church school workers are leaders in the local city or county organization. Why not share this information with your fellow workers?

J. A. GARBER, General Secretary.

White Gift Offerings

Since our last report we have received some fine encouraging offerings, boosting the total to nearly $4,000.00. Sometime later when most of the reports are in we will have to get an Honor Roll fixed up. To date there are twelve gifts of over $100 as compared with a total number of large gifts last year of thirteen. However we feel as if we simply must say a little something about a church that gave $68.50 last year and this year heads them all with $223.11. Our hats are off to Nappanee!

We were very sorry when we learned that in the last report Sidney, Indiana had been credited with only one dollar. But we were glad you called our attention to the error. Cheer up, Brethren, your record in the Big Red Treasurer's Book was all right and we just got some type mixed up. Sidney gave nine dollars and we offer our sincere apology even as we make this correction.

The letters that accompany the checks continue to be salutatory and encouraging and we will take this opportunity to answer them all by praying a blessing upon your local work even as you have shown an interest in this Kingdom extension work. We must strengthen the home churches, Brethren; we must have strong, powerful, resourceful churches or else some of these days a Macedonian call from a far country

Christian Endeavor Week---January 30 to February 6

Christian Endeavor cabinets should begin at once to plan for the annual observance of Christian Endeavor Week. The program of Christian Endeavor is as big as ever and this year's observance ought to challenge everyone to do something in honor of Christian Endeavor.

The following suggestions for each day may be helpful if adapted to the local society:

Sunday: We suggest that the general theme for these next six months be used as a subject for a special sermon by your pastor; "Personal Acceptance and Allegiance to Jesus Christ."

Monday: Social evening for Seniors and Intermediates. Committee should make ample preparation for the best possible social evening.

Tuesday: Fellowship Night, emphasizing "C. E. and Missions," "International Good-will", or "Paper on Peace."

Wednesday: (or Thursday) Endeavorers to attend and have charge of the Mid-week services. The other of the two evenings, to be given over to the Juniors under proper supervision.

Friday: A Booster Program for The International Christian Endeavor Convention at Cleveland July 2-7, 1927. This can well be a Union banquet, city or county. Seek an enthusiastic speaker for this occasion.

Saturday: May be used for the Juniors or in any way that local conditions may dictate.

Sunday: Church Loyalty Night. Endeavorers may conduct a combination service.

The above schedule is merely suggestive, yet it is earnestly hoped that every society may plan at once to make Christian Endeavor Week, one of activity, inspiration and strength for the young people and children of the church. In so doing you are laying the true foundation for the future of your church.

Monthly Schedule of Suggestions for Brethren Christian Endeavorers

By Prof. J. A. Garber, President

The national officers of the National Christian Endeavor Union of the Brethren church have prepared and announced a monthly schedule of endeavor for the first part of 1927. A copy of this proposed program has been mailed to every society of the church. Local officers have been asked to acquaint themselves with the outline of endeavors for the purpose of presenting the program during Christian Endeavor Week, January 30th to February 6th. This demonstration program correlates with the Fidelity Campaign of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

GENERAL THEME: Personal Acceptance of and Allegiance to Jesus Christ.

JANUARY AND FEBRUARY

Theme: World Brotherhood Through World Fellowship.

1. Interdenominational, International, International fellowship.

2. Based upon confession of, loyalty to, and service for Christ.

3. Realized through the co-operative program of Christian Endeavor.

4. Projected during Christian Endeavor Week, January 30 to February 6.

5. Directed by the Executive Missionary, and Press Committees.

MARCH AND APRIL

Theme: Evangelism through Bible Study and Personal Work.

1. Enroll Quiet Hour Comrades on Sunday, March 6th.

2. Follow with Bible Study and personal work classes.

3. Climax with Win My Friend Week—April 3rd to 10th.

4. Directed by Executive, Prayer Meeting and Music Committees.

MAY AND JUNE

Theme: Recruiting Leaders for the Future Church.

1. Challenge youth with the choice of a worthy life work.

2. Guide them in the study of vocations within and without the church.

3. Encourage participation in the annual Essay Contest.

4. Observe Ashland College Night—May 29th or June 5th.

5. Directed by Executive and Stewardship Committees.

JULY AND AUGUST

Theme: Summer Activities in Union with Others.

1. With International Endeavorers in Cleveland July 2nd to 7th.

2. With Brethren Endeavorers at Shipshewana Lake, second week of July.

3. With Brethren Endeavorers at Winona Lake, August 15th to 21st.

4. With fellow endeavorers in summer outings and picnics.

5. Directed by Executive, Social, and Press Committees.

Christian Endeavor Comrades All over the World. John 17:20-23

"Billy and Marion come here," called the mother of these two children. "It is nearly time for Junior Christian Endeavor and I want to tell you about the lesson before you go."

When the children were seated close to their mother and quite ready to learn their lesson, she began, "The lesson for today is 'Christian Endeavor Comrades all over the World.'"

"Whew," said Billy, "I wish I could travel all around the world and have comrades everywhere. I'd stop and play with one a while and then I would go on and play with another for a while. That would be great."

Marion, who was smaller than Billy, did not quite know what the word comrade meant, so she asked, "Mother, what does comrade mean?"

"A comrade is someone with whom you work or play. You and Billy are comrades when you play together nicely."

"Say, mother," Billy had thought of something else that he wanted to say, "I don't see how anyone could have comrades all the way around the world. My teacher said that the world was awful, awful big and that there were so many people living that it would take a boy nearly all his life to count them if he counted them one by one. If there are that many people, how could anyone have comrades all around the world?"

"Now, that is just the thing we want to study about. First, Billy, who is Francis E. Clark?" asked mother.

"Francis E. Clark is the man that started Christian Endeavor," said Billy.

"Francis E. Clark has travelled all around the world several times and what do you think that he did on the way? He organized Christian Endeavor societies. He not only organized a lot of societies himself, but he encouraged other people to start them, until today there are Christian Endeavor Societies in every country of the world. Don't you think it is wonderful for one man to have done all of that?"

"Yes," said both of the children, "Now tell us about his trips and the things that he saw."

"I can not do that now for you remember that we want to find out about being comrades with people all over the world. Francis E. Clark has helped us to have comrades everywhere."

"Well," Billy interrupted her, "I don't see how his traveling around and making friends for himself would make us have any more comrades."

"What are comrades Marion?" mother asked her little daughter.

"Children who work together", said Marion.

"If a lot of people are working together for the same thing they are comrades. People who work together very hard for years and years become very good comrades. And that is the way with Christian Endeavor. The people in all of these Christian Endeavor societies all around the world are working together. That is they want the same things and they are trying to bring about the same results. You two children may be very good comrades of some little Chinese boys and girls, if you and the Chinese children are working for the same thing. I think that it is very nice to feel that we are working with other children and praying with other children, don't you?"

"Yes," replied the children, and Billy added, "Could we write to some of our Christian Endeavor Comrades in some other country?"

"Maybe we can," said mother. "I think that that would be a splendid idea and then we would feel more than ever that they were our very close comrades. We will try to get the addresses of some of our little Christian Endeavor Comrades."

Three Great Elements of Christian Endeavor

By Rev. John E. Pickens

"What Christian Endeavor Is" is clearly defined in the very first chapter of "Progressive Endeavor," by Amos R. Wells. There he mentions various "elements" of Christian Endeavor, such as the words that make up the name, the motto, and loyalty to church and denomination. When I speak of "elements" I do not refer to these elements, for I could add nothing to the presentation in that book, but I refer to the elements that make up the Christian Endeavor society.

As I see it, there are three great elements in the Christian Endeavor society; you can find more, but they will be included in these three. The first of these three elements is a programme. I do not mean the various programmes used for the prayer meeting, but the programme of activities of the society.

Programme is placed first, because no society, regardless of its size in the beginning, or the enthusiasm of its members, will get very far without a definite, aggressive, and progressive programme. Realizing this, the United Society of Christian Endeavor has given to us every two years a new programme. Now we have the Fidelity programme of the programme of Progressive Endeavor.

I heard one speaker refer to the programme as the track. That is exactly what it is. The most powerful locomotive in the world might puff and puff but get nowhere if were placed in a mud-puddle. So it is with the society; without a programme it will do nothing but perhaps stir up a little mud; give it a sound programme, and it will get somewhere and do a good work for Jesus Christ. A society with ten members given a clean-cut programme will do more and better work than a society of one hundred members without a programme; and the chances are that in a certain period of time the society of ten will become a much larger society, while the society of one hundred will probably die a natural (or unnatural) death. The programme is important, and it should be considered on the basis of not one month, but at least a year and preferably a longer period. Our best and most active churches today are working on programmes which will take from one to ten years to work out. Each separate monthly programme is made to conform to the programme at large.

The second element is members. Of course we want our society to grow in numbers; but if our programme is rightly balanced, the emphasis will not be placed on numbers. Rather if the emphasis is placed where it should be, on the development of character, the numbers will come in due season. There is nothing like a Christ-like life to lead others to Christ. "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me," said Jesus; and as we lift him up in our hearts and lives, we shall find his word is true.

Of course we want our society to serve more and more young people, and we shall, if our programme is right, go out after them, reaching out into far-distant fields to bring them in. The programme first but the programme first in order to do more effective work as laborers in the harvest-fields of God. Have you ever noticed how an intelligent farmer will operate his farmhands, say, for instance, in cutting corn? They will not be turned loose in various sections of the field, hit or miss, but will start in, two cutting, two binding and stacking, in an orderly programme. They will thus do more work and better in less time than they could do in a less orderly manner. So our second element, members, is very dependent upon the first element, programme. If your programme is definitely interested in members, the members will be interested in the programme; but that word "interested" has several meanings. To be truly interested in members, the programme must be interested in the things that will build up the members in a well-rounded life.

The third element is spirit. Programme, members, spirit. And now what is spirit in the society? It is more than either programme or members, for it makes both of them. Without the proper spirit your programme will be a failure and your members few. Spirit is that which makes the society what it is. Spirit gives you vision and ambition and courage. Spirit is morale. only more so. "The Spirit of '76," is pictured by two men and a boy, with fife, drum, and flag, going forth to secure liberty for us today. The spirit of a Christian Endeavor society, it seems to me, could be pictured by young men and women, with the cross, the Bible, and the pledge, singing "Onward Christian soldiers." To paraphrase Paul, we would say, "There abide these three; programme, members, and spirit; but the greatest of these is spirit."

Get the society thoroughly permeated with the spirit of Christian Endeavor, and you will see with your own eyes why Christian Endeavor has grown from a little group of young people unorganized, undeveloped, up there in Portland, Maine, to thousands upon thousands of young men and women well organized, developing themselves in the service of Jesus Christ in every land of the world.

And of what is spirit composed? Well, the element spirit has many elements itself; that is why it touches all the activities of Christian Endeavor.

S—Study. The spirit of Christian Endeavor is a spirit of study. Our book is the Bible, which we promise to study each day. As Paul advised young Timothy, Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." And we want to study other things, too, that will help us to become more efficient in the society.

P—Prayer. These two go hand in hand—Bible-study and prayer. Thus the Quiet Hour. We can't know just how many things are accomplished through prayer, but we do know that "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." So the spirit of Christian Endeavor says with Paul, "Pray without ceasing," and with Christ, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."

I—Interest. But more, intense interest. A compelling interest in programme, plans, methods, members. In the society, in the church, in the denomination, in all the world-wide work. And this interest is best cultivated by association and participation. The best way to interest yourself in the society is to enter into the spirit of it and participate in its activities.

R—Righteousness. Unless the spirit of Christian Endeavor promotes righteous living, of what avail is it? This "R" in "spirit" means to renounce the things of the world, resolve to "do whatever he would like to have you do," and thereafter radiate the Christ-like spirit of love as you go. The spirit of Christian Endeavor will help you to find by experience that the Christian life is practical, and the only life that is worth the while.

I—Industry. Another "I"—notice "spirit" has two eyes. They always remind me of Christ's words, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me." Jesus and I, yoked together with righteousness, working for "our Father, who art in heaven." Industry—ah! yes, that means work, and some folks don't like the sound of that word. But Jesus did. "My Father worketh and I work"; should we, then, be ashamed to work when God and Christ were not? And this industry means just this: you must have an appetite for work; you must like it. The programme of Christian Endeavor takes time and effort; if it did not it would not be worth much.

T—Tenacity. No spasms of energy and industry, but take up your cross daily. The jerker class is not much better than the shirker class, after all; but the worth-while class is the workers, who are keeping everlastingly at it. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again" is a good motto. If God had given up humanity as hopeless where would you and I be today? The spirit of Christian Endeavor says, "Stick to it, for Christ and his church." Trust in him for strength, and keep on moving ahead.

Study, prayer, interest, righteousness, industry, tenacity, make up the spirit of Christian Endeavor; and again let me say that when these elements enter into the programme and members of your society, you will not be "disobedient unto the heavenly vision."

Young people, you and I were put here for a definite purpose. We cannot know the whole programme of God, but we can know part of it; yes, we can know all that we need to know, and in that knowledge we must press on and on and up and up. As we have need of further knowledge of God's plan in our lives or his programme at large, he will give us that knowledge, but until then what we cannot see we must take by faith.

You are driving a car miles from home on a very dark night. You do not know the road very well, but you do know that it will lead eventually to your home and all that it means. You can't see the home, but you know it is there. You can't see very far ahead on the road, only just as far as your headlights throw their beams. A few feet ahead, and the way is bright; but all past that is darkness. Stop where you are, and daylight will find you there yet; you won't get home that day. Go ahead, and as you move ahead, so does your light; and before long you reach home, safe and sound. So it is with your life and mine; but, endeavoring Christians, let us go on, trusting in him for strength; and one day he who said, "I go to prepare a place for you" will also say to you, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

HUINCA RENANCO, ARGENTINE

We have now been one year at our Mission Station at Huinca Renanco.

I will try to give a short report of our work during that time. Of course, you understand that we were supposed to give our first year to the study of the language. We have tried to do this, and at the same time we have had charge of our mission station here as well as being Field Treasurer, and having charge of the work of the Bible Coach since last June.

We have had with us in our work here a consecrated young man, Adolfo Zeche, who has been one of our native workers for a number of years. He has proven to be a valuable man. Brother and Sister Sickel were with us during our first three months on the field. About three months after they started on their furlough I went to take charge of our Bible Coach work; however, I have been directing the work at Huinca Renanco also.

During the year we have started two Christian Endeavor societies, one for the Seniors and one for the Juniors. Our purpose in this is to train our members to be of more service to their Lord. The Christian Endeavorers have a very happy time at their socials which they hold each month. Last month there were eighty present at the Christian Endeavor Social.

We are trying to teach the people the grace of giving and we feel that we have made progress along this line. We take offerings in our two Sunday schools and in the Endeavor Society. Last Sunday the Sunday school offering amounted to more than $5.00. This is very good when we take into consideration the poverty that exists in this land. This year our Sunday school has been able to pay for all of its literature for the first time. The Christian Endeavor Society has purchased two new tires for the Bible Coach, which amounted to $100.00 and they have been able to do many other helpful things for their Lord.

During the year we have held one series of special meetings. Brother Yoder being the speaker. These meetings proved to be very helpful to our work. Fifteen souls have made a public confession for the first time, and the work shows signs of life and health.

We have started a work in Realico, a large town, just south of Huinca Renanco in the Pampa. This work is very encouraging and if given the proper attention should prove to be a strong mission point.

Dear folks in the homeland, continue to "hold the ropes." PERCY L. YETT.

THIRD BRETHREN, JOHNSTOWN

It is not long since a report was made from this particular congregation but we want to tell the Evangelist readers about what is going on here. We always are glad to read of the success of our fellow-workers elsewhere so thought a word from us might be also appreciated.

First, may we report the special evangelistic services conducted in November. The people felt that there was need of a revival to awaken and quicken the spiritual atmosphere of the church and launch out for lost souls. Rev. H. E. Eppley of Winona, Indiana, was secured as long leader. Mr. Eppley is no stranger in this community for he was a boy here and grew to manhood before moving elsewhere. This was our first experience as yoke-fellows in a campaign of this kind. As far as the evangelist is concerned our labors together for God were most congenial. The work of the song director needs much commendation and should be more in demand. Brother Eppley is a trained singer, he knows music, can sing and make others sing. These characteristics, it appears to the writer, are quite essential to any song director. His solos were effective, appropriate and appreciated. Besides his knowledge of music, the writer found that the pastoral experience of the song director is of no little value to any evangelist. God bless and use you, Elmer.

While the numerical result of the effort was not large, we are pleased to report that seven accessions were made to the church. The church was awakened to new life and began a further effort to shepherd the remaining souls who would not yield to their Redeemer. One praiseworthy feature was noticed, namely, the majority was at the service every night. The meetings closed with a large and impressive, as well as edifying, communion service. During the feet-washing service the pianist played very softly the old church hymns. This afforded much time for spiritual meditation.

In every particular the pastor experienced a willingness on the part of every member to cooperate for the advancement of the good of all. The pastor would rather see ten people work than do the work of ten people himself. At our regular business meetings each auxiliary reports a balance in their separate treasury. This indicates that they are all working. Like all true children these various organizations are working for the building up of the "Parent Church." The church has had two special services recently. One was in the nature of a public consecration of little children. Thirteen little children were brought to the altar, according to the Scripture, and were publicly consecrated to the Lord. This was the first service of its kind in most of our memory and experience. The service was most impressive and thought provoking, to say the least. Other mothers are waiting for the next service. The service will do at least two things. First, there is an inducement on the part of some mothers to bring their little children out to God's House who otherwise might delay, which is dangerous. Secondly, there is awakened anew in the heart of the parent a real responsibility for rearing the child correctly. A whole Gospel church cannot afford to omit this teaching. The other special service of the church was in the nature of an altruistic service. The pastor and choir were asked to hold service in the "Memorial Hospital" on a Sunday afternoon. Seven separate services were held in that many different parts of the Institution. The nurses, physicians and patients were very well pleased with the services. Each Protestant church takes turns in these services.

The Sunday school is breaking no records but is manifesting a splendid spirit. One thing for which our hearts are made to rejoice is to witness a young men's class of over twenty-five at Sunday school almost every Sunday. This class is fortunate in having a consecrated school teacher who is a natural born leader.

Our church was all smiles last Christmas season. A new baby was born to the congregation. What is it? A Junior S. M. M. This causes rejoicing among the girls for now all the girls are at work.

Yours in his Name,

J. L. GINGRICH, Pastor.

CAMPBELL CHURCH AT LAKE ODESSA, MICHIGAN

Some time has elapsed since our work was last reported from here. Nevertheless, we have been busy. We enjoy so much, our new pastor, Rev. R. I. Humbert, who came into our midst last October. He is very much in earnest in his work with us, and his messages are so plain and helpful.

A union service was held Thanksgiving day with the Thornapple Church of the Brethren. A splendid program was arranged for the day, Rev. Humberd preaching at the forenoon service. Our Thanksgiving offering was taken the following Sunday, which was a little better than one hundred dollars.

Our basement, which was started some time ago, was finished last October. The Women's Missionary Society held an all-day meeting at the church and gave the men a warm dinner, on October 23rd, which was the last day's work on the basement.

The Sisterhood of Mary and Martha is growing steadily. An all-day meeting was held, December 30th at the patronesses' home. Two boxes of bandages were made for the African work. Eighteen wide awake girls were present at the meeting.

Our pastor, just at present, is conducting Bible study, Sunday evenings, instead of the sermons. We are now studying the Book of John. These studies are proving to be very interesting as is manifested by the growing crowds.

Another interesting thing which our pastor has done, was to lend to the community some of his books. These books are splendid Christian stories and it seems that the people are hungry for this type of literature, as more than one hundred persons have read the books already.

Our prayers are that we may be found watching for our Lord's return.

DOROTHY DARBY,

tian Endeavor Societies, and the marked increase in attendance at our regular church services, and the added interest in our work in the various missions of the city, and we are fairly overwhelmed with the way God has so abundantly blessed this unworthy church!

And the year ahead already bids to oversweep all past years in the way it has begun with the blessing of God upon us. Forty-three have already come forward in the first two weeks of this year. Among these were six confessions, ten dedications of life, and the rest were yielding to a higher life in Christ. In view of the way God is present among us, it behooves every one of us to beware lest we should by some word or deed grieve the Spirit of God so that he could not continue working among us as he is now doing! With such a remarkable presence of the spirit of God among us, and our special meeting so near at hand, a great harvest of souls seems assured. The coming of Dr. E. J. Pace to conduct our Spring Bible Conference for us in April will under God prove a rich experience for all. Our Pennsylvania State Conference convenes here in October bringing its usual inspiration, and adding in all the blessings that come between now and then, it seems certain that 1927 will supersede all that has gone before, and all is to THE GLORY OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST!

Much credit is due to the fine unity, loyalty and sacrifice of the people of this congregation, and it has been the sincerest pleasure to be with you in this work. Leaving the details of all this account to the various officers to report, I gladly submit this for 1926. R. Paul Miller, Pastor.

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Conemaugh, Pennsylvania Church Gives to Ashland Endowment

Conemaugh is located on the famous Conemaugh river which was the deadly channel that brought devastation to the Conemaugh Valley and Johnstown in the historic flood. Conemaugh and Johnstown are built together and it is hard to tell the boundary lines.

The people here have a fine brick church and parsonage and are free from debt. The town is one of the terminals of the Pennsylvania Railroad and most of our men are employed by that company. The church during the past few years has suffered heavy losses in having its members move to Johnstown and by death. The foreign element is fast coming in and makes the field more limited for growth.

Brother Austin Staley is the pastor and is held in high esteem by his people. Brother Staley is another Ashland graduate and I did not have to impress the people of the need of supporting our school.

While they have no special wealth in the church, the people are liberal with what they have and gave cheerfully to the support of the endowment. WHILE THE COLLEGE MUST HAVE IN THIS CAMPAIGN SOME LARGE GIFTS TO REACH OUR OBJECTIVE, YET WE ARE JUST AS DEPENDENT UPON THE SMALLER GIFTS, AS IT IS THEIR TOTAL THAT IN THE FINAL END THAT WILL PUT US ACROSS. IT IS A CASE OF EVERYBODY DOING THEIR BEST AND "AS GOD HAS PROSPERED THEM." The total gift from Conemaugh was $2,561.05.

FIRST CHURCH OF PHILADELPHIA

Pastor's Report for 1926

Barring all qualifications, this past year has been the greatest in the work of this church since I became its pastor. Spiritually, numerically and financially, this church has been growing steadily to her present place.

During the past year, the last dollar of indebtedness was paid on our building; our largest offering to Foreign Missions was given; nearly $4,500.00 was raised for our College and Seminary; our church building has been thoroughly renovated and beautified at a cost of almost $5,000.00. The first of our annual Bible conferences was held with great success, with Dr. Werthermer leading us; our best summer Bible school was conducted; a total of fifty-six souls came forward during the year, of whom twenty-two were new members, twenty-five were rededications, and besides this are some who have not yet been received into the church; (note that this result was gained without any special revival meetings at all) we have had the fear of closing the year without sending forth a missionary removed, and turned into joy by the sailing of our Sister Ethel Fuss for China; add to this the growth of our Sunday school of about twenty per cent, and that also of our Junior, Intermediate and Senior Chris-church in its annual business session. It is a splendid resume of our last year's work.

MRS. H. RANDENBUSH, Correspondent.

FROM THE LOREE BRETHREN, INDIANA

On Sunday following Christmas our revival meetings began. C. A. Stewart, our pastor delivered the sermons. We were fortunate in securing Harry Richer and wife of Peru, who led the singing and played the piano. Every service we had one or more solos and an occasional duet and a great number of readings from our best poets and writers. Each day these were planned to fit the text and sermon.

The harmonious work of these artists together with harmony of the membership and the cooperation of neighboring churches and the prayers of all for the welfare of lost souls and the prosperity of his kingdom inspired our pastor to preach the Word with power. The results we will never know, nor can we—only eternity can tell. The invitations were given from that broad point of view—coming to Christ first and the selection of church relationship second. Twenty-eight came forward. Some of these will go to other churches and some are coming to us as a result of some other revivals. For the most part these were children and some young ladies and men. Two were mothers.

We all have new and greater vision and added responsibility and assurance of a larger future for the Brethren church at this place.

Baptismal services were set for January 13 at the pool of the Brethren church at Peru, but were postponed on account of the big snow.

The meetings lasted two weeks with the very best interest and large crowds. Often there were one or more visiting pastors. Once there were six.

Fraternally yours,
C. F. DAVIS.

ITINERATING WITH THE GOSPEL

I preached for the Third Brethren church over last Sunday, January 9. Brother Witter went to Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, to help dedicate their remodeled church.

On Monday, I went to Delaware and preached to a fair congregation in the home of Brother Lee Bailey. We had four confessions that night. Brother and Sister Baker, Brother Bailey's wife's brother and wife, also his mother and another talented young married lady. Brother and Sister Bailey were baptized in the stream on a very cold day. The other two will be baptized later.

On Tuesday night I preached in the home of Sister Virgil Conway, a splendidly godly woman. Her son and wife, excellent young people, promised to be baptized soon. This made six confessions. This service was about 12 miles from Brother Bailey's where we had meeting the night before.

On Wednesday night I preached about 25 miles from sister Conways, in Brother and Sister Evans in Ocean View, Delaware. These are Methodist people. She has been crippled with rheumatism for 16 years, unable to walk. I expected to preach also on Thursday night, but was called home suddenly because my day old chicks were shipped sooner than I expected.

Brother Witter and I expect to go to Delaware January 31 and stay three nights. Either he or I will report this trip.

BOLIVIA'S NEED OF THE GOSPEL

Under the auspices of the Canadian Baptist missionaries Rev. H. Strachan, accompanied by Juan Vareto, a famous Argentinian Baptist preacher, has been conducting an evangelistic campaign throughout all the large centers of population in Bolivia. "The Latin American Evangelist" says of the need for such work: "There are almost insurmountable material obstacles in Bolivia militating tremendously against the progress of the Gospel, not the least of them being a caste system which is almost as rigid and exclusive as that in India. ... Who can say which class has the greater soul need—the Indians, the degraded Cholo class, or the proud whites?"

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Pattie Gaines stood on one side of her mother's chair and Mattie Gaines stood on the other. They could not look over her shoulder to see, for that is not polite; but they did wonder what there was in Uncle Paul's letter to make mother smile so.

It seemed a long time before she put the letter back in its envelope and said:

"Did Uncle Paul ever promise you little girls anything?"

"Yes, a see-saw," answered Pattie promptly.

"But he made us that when he was here last," said Mattie, "and he promised us a real Maltese kitten, and he surely kept that promise." She gave the ball of gray fur in her arms a little squeeze.

"I know one promise he hasn't kept yet," Pattie said slowly. "He promised to show us the elephants in the Bronx Zoo!"

"I 'spect he wasn't thinking hard when he made that promise," Mattie answered.

"Uncle Paul doesn't make unthinking promises," said her mother. "He writes that he must be in New York in two weeks on business. Aunt Ellen will be with him, and if I can find a way to send you two children there he will keep a promise he made you two years ago which he never forgot."

"Oh, goody, goody!" cried Pattie and Mattie, in a joyous duet.

"They will bring you back themselves, and pay us a visit. But how shall I send you?" Mrs. Gaines wondered. "Father can't leave the office and I can't leave him. Perhaps we shall hear of some neighbor going that way, but don't set your hearts on it yet."

The little sisters tried very hard not to set their hearts on it. They went out into the garden and made holly-hock ladies and had a tea party for them. But when their mother's voice was heard calling them they raced to the house, "certain sure" that she had found a way to send them to New York.

"Miss Morrison has just been to call," mother explained, "and when I spoke of your trip she said she must go to New York too. Her nephew, who has been ill so long, is to be discharged from the hospital; Miss Morrison thinks it will be at just the time you want to get there, and she can take you and bring him back to her home for a rest."

What happy, hurried days followed! Pattie and Mattie flew about, running errands for their mother and Miss Pitts, who had come to sew for them.

At last everything was ready; dark blue capes and hats hung in the closet, ready to be put on over the pretty traveling dresses. Mrs. Gaines was putting the buttons on Mattie's rose-colored "dress-up" frock, while Pattie's blue one lay ready to be finished.

"Pattie, run down to Smith and Long's for another card of buttons," said her mother, "then I'll have both dresses done. There's a week to wait, but it is well to be ready in good time."

Pattie, dancing out, met Mattie dancing in with a letter in her hand.

"It's Uncle Paul's writing. I just know he's going to say, 'Be sure to send my girls!'" cried Mattie.

"I'll hurry for the buttons, so I can hear it," answered Pattie.

In just five minutes Pattie came slowly in the front door, with big tears just ready to fall from each blue eye. She went to her mother's room, and stopped at the sound she heard. It was a big, unmistakable sob. She looked in, to find Mattie with her head on her mother's shoulder and mother's arms around her.

"O Pattie!" sobbed her sister, "we can't go!"

"I know we can't," Pattie answered. And now her tears fell fast. "Miss Morrison just told me."

"Uncle Paul said—" sobbed Mattie.

"Miss Morrison said—" wailed Pattie.

"Wait, children!" mother could not help smiling, though she looked sorry too. "One story at a time. What did Miss Morrison say, Pattie?"

"That her nephew will be out of the hospital tomorrow," Pattie answered dolefully. "And she must start tonight."

"And Uncle Paul," added Mattie, says he must be there a week sooner than he thought."

The sorry look went from mother's face, and her eyes began to twinkle instead.

"Why, children! These two disappointments seem to fit together very well. If Miss Morrison will take you tonight, father will wire Uncle Paul to meet you tomorrow. I'll telephone Miss Morrison and then father—he can get your tickets and reservations for the sleeper, too."

On the little girls' faces sunshine was driving the clouds away.

"Oh, mother! I'll put on the buttons, so my blue dress will be ready!" Pattie cried, running for her thimble. And Mattie said she would bring all the things to be packed.

When she came back with her arms full her mother had the suitcases open to pack.

"Miss Morrison says she will be glad to take you, and father is going to have the tickets ready," said Mrs. Gaines.

"It's queer," Mattie said, with all her dimples showing. "One disappointment would have spoiled our trip, but two just made it happen sooner."

"I think," Pattie answered wisely, "we will always call those our good-luck disappointments!"—M. L. G., in Southern Churchman.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

THOMPSON-GARRETT—Tuesday afternoon, January the fourth, occurred the wedding of Mr. Emmett Thompson and Miss Ruby Garrett of Salem, at the Oak Hill Brethren Parsonage. These young people are both members of the Brethren church and are popular and well known in the community in which they live. The best wishes of their friends accompany them through life. Ceremony by, FREEMAN ANKRUM.

FONES-CAMPBELL—On the afternoon of Wednesday, December 1, 1926, Miss Pearl Campbell and Harvey Fones were united in marriage at the home of Brother and Sister E. J. Campbell, 108 East Phil-Elena Street, Germantown, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Miss Campbell has been a member of the First Brethren church of Philadelphia, for a couple of years and Mr. Fones is a frequent attendant. The couple have many friends who wish them a most happy life of multiplied joys and real usefulness. R. PAUL MILLER.

IN THE SHADOW

REPOGLE—Sister Frances Amanda, wife of Brother Geo. Z. Repogle, died January eleventh at her home at Woodbury, Pennsylvania, being in her seventy-sixth year. Sister Repogle was indeed a "mother in Israel" having reared a family of seven children, all of whom are grown, and all members of the Brethren church. Four children died in early childhood. While Mrs. Repogle was of a retiring nature, she and her loyal and godly husband maintained a Christian home. Brother Repogle is one of only three charter members still living, of the New Enterprise, Pennsylvania church, and is one of the deacons. During long years of suffering, Sister Repogle continued calm and serene in the faith, and in humble resignation to God's will. For half a century she had been a member of the church, her hospitality was well known, and her home a pillar of the church and a power for good in the community.

Funeral services were conducted from the Woodbury Methodist church by this writer, Rev. J. S. Cook of Martinsburg, and Rev. J. E. Rowland of the Woodbury Church of the Brethren. W. S. CRICK.

HORNER—Jackson G. Horner, son of Jackson and Julia (St. Clair) Horner, was born June 8, 1870 and departed this life July 18, 1926, aged 56 years, 1 month and 10 days. Death came very suddenly as a result of a fatal injury received Sunday morning while working for the mills.

Besides his companion, Mrs. Maude Horner, Mr. Horner is survived by the following brothers—Michael and Bert Robert; three sisters, Mrs. Geo. Shearer, Mrs. Emma Bagley and Mrs. Saddle Hunt; eight children, Harry, Eunice, Kathryn, Amos, Gladys, Ruby, Goldie May, and Ivy; one grandchild, besides a multitude of friends.

Deceased was a member of the Brethren church for many years. He was an employee in the local plant for 36 years. Brother Horner was conscious until the end came. He recognized the whole family. We commit all things into the Father's care. J. L. GINGRICH.

VICKROY—Elsie Mildred (Hillman) Vickroy was born December 13, 1892 and died November 10, 1926, aged 33 years, 10 months and 27 days. Death was due to a complication of diseases. Deceased is survived by her husband, Connie Vickroy; the parents, Elziver and Elizabeth Hillman; the following children—Jessie May, Laura Blanche, George LeRoy; six brothers—Frank, Henry, Harry, Norman, Blair, and Robert, and one sister—Laura Blanche. Sister Vickroy was a member of the Third Brethren church of Johnstown for twelve years. We submit all things unto him who doeth all things well. May we all anticipate a happy reunion in heaven. Services by the writer, assisted by the Rev. H. E. Epley. JOSEPH L. GINGRICH.

WALK—Myra Verna Walk, twenty-one month old daughter of Harry and Elta Walk, found relief from continuous suffering by death, due to pneumonia. The little child apparently never experienced a day of physical comfort. Little Myra Verna was a member of the Cradle Roll department but is now promoted to a higher class where God is the faithful Teacher. We are satisfied to yield to God who doeth all things well. Some day we'll understand. Services by writer, JOSEPH L. GINGRICH.

Aged Minister Reduced to two Meals Daily

While the average church with its automobile driven and radio entertained membership will be debating whether it can afford to give forty cents per member to the Brethren Home and forty cents to the Superannuated Ministers' Fund, on Benevolence Day, February 27th, there will be at least one aged Brethren minister deciding that he cannot afford more than two meals a day, and that of the cheapest kind of food. This is the actual situation right now with regard to one of those noble servants of God, who spent his life preaching the Gospel in home, school house and church, with scarcely a thought of recompense and never a stipulation, receiving only the pittance of an offering that the occasion chanced to provide. It is due to his own pride and unwillingness to further burden the Benevolence Board, as he considered it, that application has not till now been made for the stipulated pension allowable to such as he. It was by accident that we discovered his condition through a letter which he himself wrote. He wrote no complaint and made no appeal for himself. He wrote explaining why he was unable to respond to the Publication Day offering appeal as sent out to every subscriber of The Brethren Evangelist.

This enfeebled veteran of the cross is eighty-seven years old and without home or any means of livelihood or income except the small bits which sympathizing friends occasionally give him. He lives with a widowed daughter, who is in straightened circumstances and is almost an invalid. They "eat but two meals a day" and economize in other ways very carefully in their endeavor "to live within the daughter's means." She is kind to her aged father and shares with him all she has. Doubtless if the Benevolence Board had known of his case before now they would have investigated and granted such assistance as the case warranted. But he has apparently been so impressed by the strenuous efforts that it has seemed necessary to make to get the people to respond in the small way they have to the needs of the superannuated ministers that when his daughter suggested that he apply for aid of this Board, he replied, "I do not like to, as I believe they have more now than they can care for." And he did not apply, but we have been so impressed with his need and worthiness that we have referred his case to the Benevolence Board for investigation.

The suggestion of this uncomplaining old preacher does not sound good to those of us who are in the strength of our manhood, that we "have more now than we can care for." It was spoken in utter sincerity by him, but to us, as we face our luxuries—our extravagantly furnished homes, our radios, automobiles and what not—it becomes stinging sarcasm. Have we indeed "more now than we can care for?" We seem to have made it appear so. And that is the pity of it. We have given so reluctantly or indifferently to this cause that, at least one worthy veteran was made to feel that it was an imposition for him to seek the aid that the church owed him. And how many of those who are now on the pension list have been embarrassed or disappointed by the church's seeming unconcern, who can tell? It is unpleasant to think about, and it is unfortunate if there are any such.

Of course it is not exactly true that the church is really and deliberately ungrateful; she is not purposefully unconcerned. She is simply slow in being aroused to her responsibility in the matter. And it may be that some of us pastors and church leaders have not presented this need as facing us as a truly Scriptural and moral obligation, as indeed it is. Too often it is allowed to take the color of a mere "charity" appeal to which one may respond or not as he likes. We are wont to urge with burning zeal the giving of money to send missionaries to convert the heathen (which we truly ought to do), but sometimes we fail to stress the equally binding obligation, if Paul's words are to be taken at face value, when he says, "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." (1 Tim. 5:8). This is strong language, and we would not be so rude as to suggest that it applies to members of our church. But it certainly is not as it should be when we approach the task of caring for our own as one does a tooth-pulling operation. Our help to the aged ministers, widows and orphans, should be a service of love and of gratitude. Our funds should not be given reluctantly or grudgingly, but spontaneously and gladly.

The Church Still Leading

In almost any line of moral or spiritual interest that might be mentioned, the church is leading all other agencies or institutions, notwithstanding the oft-repeated criticisms of her. If she were failing, if indeed she were not leading, she would soon cease to be a profitable theme for discussion by her critics.

In the possession and cultivation of some of the most simple virtues, in the fostering of which certain worldly organizations are sometimes claimed to be sharp competitors, the church is many leagues ahead. In the matter of fellowship, for example, there is no place where that spirit is so widely prevailing and so genuine, and withal so contagious as in a congregation of God's people. Or take the matter of courtesy, or polite treatment of one another, where does that quality appear to such good advantage and with such lack of superficiality as in the house of divine worship? Where else do men show themselves so unselfish and so mutually considerate as among the followers of Christ? Where else is there such real kindness and such unpatronizing friendship? Where is there such sincere solicitation for the welfare of others and where is the spirit of helpfulness so ready and abundant as among the people of the church?

It is true that the church does not have an absolute monopoly on these virtues. She does not try to corner the market; she merely seeks to inspire and to lead the way. And many institutions are following in an admirable way. Social, fraternal, philanthropic, educational and business organizations are partaking in a measure of the spirit of the church, which bears witness to the church being good salt and true light to the world. Between capital and labor the spirit of brotherhood which the church is set to promote is beginning to take hold, and the prophets believe that, small though meates the whole lump. If it does, it will be through the leadership it may be at present, it is destined to spread as leaven till it pervades the church in cultivating the spirit of good will and of brotherhood. Even in so simple a matter as kind treatment, of which certain industries are wont to boast, it is the church that has made possible, and has inspired to the practice of, that spirit. A railway president was quoted in the Railway Age sometime ago as saying:

"There is no man within our organization who is too big to say 'If you please,' 'Good morning,' 'Thank you' or 'Good evening' to passengers on the train and to visitors in the offices. It gives a human touch—the atmosphere of personal relations which the road is trying to maintain and increase."

It is a good practice and a good omen, the accuracy of whose sign does not depend on the business motives which led to the projection of such a policy. The spirit of mutual consideration and of right regard one for another is destined to grow into the lives of people and manifest itself more and more in all human relations, because the church is leading on and bringing men in touch with that Teaching and Power that transforms life and inspires it with nobler ideals and directs it in holier ways. Let those who point with criticism to the inconsistencies of the church's membership consider that these are not indicative of the weakness of the church, but of her strength. They are ever falling short of attainment because the church is ever leading, like a good shepherd, her sheep on to greener pastures of character. There would be no lagging and complaining of the journey manifest if the church were staying with the crowd and not leading.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

A telegram from Brother R. Paul Miller of Philadelphia, reads: "Marcus Witter died here Monday morning (January 31), pneumonia. Pray for family." A noble servant of God has been suddenly taken from us. It is a great loss and a severe shock to the brotherhood. More details will appear later. May God comfort his loved ones.

Brother D. A. C. Teeter has begun a series of evangelistic services in the church of which he is pastor at Roann, Indiana. Brother Harley Zumbaugh is assisting as song leader.

Christian Endeavorers should turn to page 11 and read Brother F. C. Vanator's message, then before you forget it look up that pledge card the National Secretary sent you and do the courteous thing.

Not only the children (for whom it was written), but the adults as well, will enjoy the letter by Sister Orville Jobson in this issue. In a note to the editor, accompanying this letter, she says, "Many are accepting the Gospel here, for which we praise him. Truly the harvest is ripe and the laborers are few."

The splendid rural church of Berne, Indiana, is still pressing on in the Lord's work, the Sunday school especially making a good record, the average attendance for the year being 115. Brother Charles H. Ashman of Johnstown, is announced as their evangelist for a meeting to begin the middle of February, and prayer is requested in behalf of this campaign for souls. The pastor, Brother John Parr, has been retained for another year.

Brother N. W. Jennings, retiring pastor of the First church of Los Angeles, California, writes of his eight years of service for that church. During that time many members have been added to the church, a new house of worship and a new parsonage have been built and paid for, the Sunday school has been greatly enlarged and many other marks of progress have been in evidence. He speaks of gratitude to all, and especially to the leaders, who have cooperated with him in the splendid achievements of his administration. He purposes to engage in evangelism.

Mansfield and Fremont, Ohio, churches are both mission churches and their pastors are in the process of exchanging evangelistic meetings. Brother R. D. Barnard of Mansfield has returned from a meeting at Fremont (We shall hope to have a report of the results soon) and Brother S. C. Henderson of Fremont is expected to come to Mansfield to return the favor some time in February. During Brother Barnard's absence the Mansfield church was cared for by a Gospel Team from Ashland College with gratifying results.

It is from two of Pennsylvania's small country churches that Dr. W. S. Bell's report on behalf of the Ashland College Endowment campaign comes this week, and it is encouraging to note that these churches that have given so much of their life to the more populous centers are not only active and zealous, but are willing to give of their funds to the brotherhood's educational center. Brother J. L. Bowman is the pastor of these churches and has a real appreciation of the importance of supporting education. The gift of the two groups was $417.67, which added to the previous total reported gifts brings the Endowment Campaign fund up to $92,392.66.

The genial and competent pastor of the Elkhart, Indiana, congregation, Brother W. I. Duker, writes of splendid progress at that place. Recently an evangelistic campaign, with Brother H. F. Stuckman as preacher, resulted in eighteen being added to the church. Brother W. S. Bell, who is now working in Indiana, has visited the Elkhart church, and though he came for money, his visit was felt to be a contribution to the local church. Under the leadership of Brother Duker and his faithful aids, these people are still pushing their building program and we are given to understand that something is about to happen.

We are privileged to begin in this issue of the Evangelist a series of articles dealing with some high points in Brethren church history, written by Dr. G. W. Rench, than whom there is perhaps no other man more able to write with authority on such subjects. When Brother Rench speaks we are all wont to give respectful attention because of the universal high esteem in which he is held, and also because he speaks out of a wealth of information, breadth of experience and proven loyalty. Dr. Rench has entitled his series, "Mountain Peaks on the Horizon," and, as he confesses, he has the laymen particularly in mind as he writes, so that his messages will be appreciated by every reader. And you will want to read every one as it appears.

Brother Fred V. Kinzie, pastor of the mission at Krypton, Kentucky, gives us a report and a picture of some of his faithful Sunday school attendants. Those who made the records indicated certainly deserved the awards mentioned. We congratulate them all, and hope another year will show a larger number of perfect and near perfect records. According to Brother Kinzie's testimony irregularity of attendance on divine services is not confined to the automobile church, but is found also in the "roadless highland" of Kentucky. After all, it is primarily a matter of loyalty, of heart-interest, and whether one walks, or rides, or flies, he usually goes where his heart leads. The automobile merely facilitates the carrying out of one's desires; if he wants to go to church it will take him there, quicker and from a farther distance, and if he wants to go elsewhere it will take him farther away.

Notice—Brother W. A. Gearhart informs us that some of our readers are confused by the manner in which we are publishing his report of Home Mission receipts. He had the entire amount that each person or church contributed opposite the name. But that made several columns of figures which we were unable to get in the narrow measure of the Evangelist columns. So the various funds were separated and each person's gift for the "General Fund" was printed under that heading and later his gift for "Kentucky Fund" appears with his name under that heading, etc. The report being too long to publish in one issue, we found it necessary to distribute it through several issues. Moreover, the statement, "To be continued," was inadvertently omitted from one issue, so that some possibly thought the report was complete. You will find your entire offering for all purposes reported, if you will kindly wait till publication is completed, as it is in this issue, and look under the various fund headings.

Brother John Perry Horlacher, through whose aggressive leadership the church at Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, has been led to erect a greatly enlarged church plant, writes of the dedication, which occurred on January 9, 1927, on which occasion Dr. R. R. Teeter was the chief speaker. We are pleased to be able to present to our readers on the front page a likeness of the new church. An unusual feature of this project is that it was completed free of debt and dedication was not a money-raising event but a dedication day pure and simple. Of the $21,500, the total cost of the addition, $20,500 was in cash and the remainder in pledges. This is an accomplishment that reflects credit upon both pastor and people. Among the other speakers present was Dr. M. A. Witter, former pastor over a period of eleven years. A two weeks' evangelistic campaign that followed immediately upon dedication with Brother H. E. Eppley as evangelist resulted in eleven additions to the church. It is doubtless true, as Brother Horlacher suggests, that the church is at the beginning of a new era of expansion in its history. Surely its possibilities are greatly increased. We congratulate pastor and people on the victory and the vision.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Mountain Peaks on the Horizon.—I

By Elder G. W. Rench, D.D.

(First of a Series of Articles on High Points in Brethren Church History)

The first outstanding peak on the horizon of a handful of Brethren people looked like a "Shelter in Time of Storm." At least, "the wish was father to the thought."

The epoch-making Dayton Convention was held in June of 1883. Just two years after that date I was baptized in the river Mississinnewa by Elder W. W. Summers, then of North Manchester, Indiana, but now of sainted memory. By that rite I became associated with the movement in the community known as the "progressives," and I have been progressing ever since as best I could.

Many of my relatives and friends associated with the old order of things in church work, at once withdrew their friendship and turned coldly away. My father's life was made miserable by his church-leaders because he did not turn against us. If I have strong religious convictions, believe me, the foundations were laid in the excitement in the community occasioned by my stand with a lot of "out-laws", as they were called. But every time Elder Summers came he baptized more people, so the epithets hurled were of no avail. Other religious people encouraged us, and in various ways aided us, especially by offering the use of their church-houses. Becoming weary of church strife, even in our own defense, the Brethren grew hungry for better things. We discovered that the soul required sunshine, good will, fellowship. We earnestly sought "a shelter in the time of storm." The old way of thinking denied us the right to baptize, commune together, perform marriages; but our baptisms grew so numerous that we found good-will and fellowship in doing our own baptizing, and holding our own communions. This haven of rest was the mountain peak on our horizon vastly more important than a vision of Pike's Peak, Mt. Shasta, or St. Elias is to the average traveler. I tell you, the trials experienced by the effort to break down ecclesiasticisms will try any man's soul. Quite a few of our number had not the mental and moral fiber to go through it, and they submitted to a re-baptism at the hands of the order party. That's why, young gentlemen, some of us don't warm up to schemes calculated to build up one in our own ranks. But for one, I have had enough of the bitterness of ecclesiasticism for one life time. I will have no more of it. Some of you who are bewailing the weakness of congregationalism ought to have the trial of throwing off the yoke of human laws made a test of fellowship in the church. How would you like to be told that you and your wife must wear certain articles of clothing, or that you did not dare commune with your own mother because she was not a member of "our body"? Put on the yoke if you will, like some others have done; but don't you ask me to surrender my freedom in Christ, for I have paid the price of my liberty as the gospel has bestowed it. There is plenty of room to stand on a platform of gospel requirements without taking in all the humanisms from a robed clergy to close communion.

ELDER G. W. RENCH

Outstanding Church Leader and President, National Ministerial Association

Yes, the most reassuring element of peace in the soul is a complete turning to the mighty One. That was, and is, the satisfying portion "And his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (isa. 9:6). Why, the greatest UNIFYING FORCE in the world is THE MIGHTY NAME. And when walking here among men, this same Prince of Peace announced, "And upon this rock I will build my church" (Matt. 16:18). A great Bible teacher used to say, "Young men, you may tremble on the rock, but the Rock will never tremble under you." Debating and bickering over "pronouncements" will unsettle any soul. We have found it so. Men found it so in the 80's. Good men, great sacrificing spirits, because they could no longer subscribe to a long list of humanisms which looked perfectly harmless to them when they were young men, who were to be denied the fellowship of their former brethren—men like Brown, Swihart, Bashor, Yoder, Bauman, Mason, and Holsinger—held the torch high in those trying days. How they went up and down the land torn by dissensions, pointing troubled hearts and sinful men to "The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace, and to HIS CHURCH as a safe harbor for the storm-tossed soul. This reassuring plea satisfied men. Thousands found victory—men in every community who had believed for years in the Bible-elements of the Brethren plea, but who would not accept their humanisms. Under their leadership, there was a prayer meeting held in the schoolhouse near the cross roads in the vicinity where some of us lived, the first that was ever held by Dunker people, and the progressives held it. The heart and lives of men were to be filled with divine things. Peace, how beautiful! Fellowship, how sweet! Church government the least discussed. Knowing Jesus was uppermost in the desires of the heart.

As a further evidence of the unifying power of turning completely to the great Head of the church for guidance, many slogans were brought in use which seemed to rivet attention upon the unifying power of divine things. Such sayings as, "The One Unchanging Creed—Jesus." When Brother Harrison was editor of the Evangelist, he lifted this slogan: "more than the Bible is too much Less than the Bible is too little; The Bible itself is just right." At the schoolhouse meeting, 1882, this was given out: "It was further decided that our motto shall be, 'The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible.'" Holsinger's History, p. 529. Several years later this banner hung across the pulpit during a revival meeting: "The Bible is the end of all controversy. Its utterances are final. 'The Bible our only creed,' was used much. These 'calls' from the heights" were propositions which were powerful agencies in unifying a people face to face with relatives and old neighbors who were doing everything in their power to discredit the religious stand which had been taken. These mottos directed the discussions into dignified and worthwhile channels.

Do we desire power? It comes from God; but, as ever, power comes in obedience to law. Now, one of the conditions of power is unity with God's plan. The voice of inspiration says, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 2:5). Here, we not only see unity, but method, as well. When the mind is directed through New Testament teaching to Jesus, and the church which he built, and the ordinances which he placed in it, and the terms of admission he requires, and the officers he directed to be chosen, the prayer-life he has marked out for his followers, there will be unity of heart and soul among us. I bless God for the fellowship of the men who broke the spell in human enactments which were made tests of membership in a church in years gone by, for the direction they gave to my study and thinking; it has kept me on the main track, and kept me going—and I know where, too. I think I heard them say,

"To you, from feeble hands, we throw the torch of love,
Be yours to lift it high;
If you break faith in such a time as this,
Some precious souls will die."

Perchance, from their peaceful rest, they can hear out over the air quite as easily as we can. If so, my pledge in response, still is,

"The torch you threw to us we've caught;
And lift it high we will,
Till all mankind shall see his light,
And hear his 'Peace, be still.'"

If we should spend the remainder of our earthly careers studying, teaching, preaching the things God "hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son"—THESE THINGS; not our own deductions from them—then we would be able but to touch the fringe of heavenly things. And would not our souls be the richer for it? Why should we continue to obscure the main issue? Who has ever fathomed the eight aspects of the glorious person of Jesus as depicted and painted in the gospels and epistles? Who has even approached them—even one of them—in a thorough manner? Let us catch a glimpse of these portraits:

He is presented as the Eternal One, a high priest, after the order of Melchisedek, without beginning of days or end of life, "the same yesterday, today, and forever."

He is presented as the incarnate Christ, Immanuel, emptying himself, being made in the likeness of sinful men, tempted in all points as we are, he dies the just for the unjust that he might bring us to God.

He is presented on the cross, the atoning Christ, reconciling an estranged world to God.

He is presented unto us as the risen Christ, showing himself alive by many infallible proofs, not once, but for a period of forty days.

He is presented as the ascending Christ, "when he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men."

He is presented at the throne as our advocate with the Father, "who also maketh intercession for us," "the one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus."

He is presented as the indwelling Christ, "Christ in us, the hope of glory," that "we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world."

He is presented as the Coming One, in the clouds of heaven with great glory to set up his throne on this same old earth which put him to death, before whom the nations of earth shall gather in judgment, and, with those who have been caught up to meet him in the air, mete out justice and equity from pole to pole. In the study of these wonderful portraits the main issue will not be obscured, and unity will be secured as we "think on these things" (Phil. 4:8).

This Means You

By J. L. Kimmel, Treasurer Superannuated Ministers Fund

It is seldom that we read in public print anything about ourselves. And yet we might not object if our names were found on the front page of the daily at times.

This title means that the writer has you in mind, even if your name is not expressed. It seems to me that whenever there is anything printed in the Evangelist regarding the Superannuated Ministers' Fund that people think it means someone else, and either do not read it or else they forget it the same day and can never think of it again. Now perhaps it is a good thing at times to have a "good forgetter" but surely there are a few things in life that we ought to remember.

First, I wish, dear pastor, that you would remember that the Superannuated offering is taken the last Sunday in February. Then in the second place, you should remember that you should preach a sermon either Sunday before or on the day the offering is taken.

If you can't think of a text take the parable of the "Good Samaritan" and tell them about that preacher that saw the wounded, bleeding, half-dead man, lying by the wayside, but just as soon as he got a glimpse of his condition, turned his head the other way and got over on the other side of the road. Then came the assistant pastor and he had just a little more religion but not enough to do any good; and began to wend his way toward Jericho.

Then came a man who was supposed to have no religion and he gave to the world a concrete demonstration of what religion really consisted of. It sometimes takes a fellow that is supposed to have no religion to show the other fellow what pure and undefiled religion really is.

Then, remember that this Superannuated Fund needs forty cents from every member of your church. Forty cents is a very small item when it comes to anything of a secular nature, but it seems mighty big when you are to give it for the Lord's work.

Then again do not forget to send in the offering to J. J. Wolfe, North Manchester, Indiana, who is the secretary and the proper party to send it to. Do not send it to me, for I will get it from the secretary and it is all I care about to handle the money once. Frank Roscoe, New Paris, Indiana, is the president and I am the treasurer.

Now do not wait until it is too late to get your offering into the printed report for conference, like so many people do, but send it promptly and your reward shall be great and when you get old you may want to get on this pension list yourself.

We now have nine ministers, six widows and one orphan on the list, and we need four thousand dollars to supply their needs.

The Dance of Death

By C. F. Yoder

To the "Dance of Death" come one, come all,
Every Saturday night in the dancing hall.
All the ladies free to the public ball,
And it's Ho! to the "dance of death!"
And they go in the prime of their lusty youth,
Both the innocent maid and the lecherous sleuth,
All forgetful of God and of duty and truth,
For it's Ho! for the "dance of death."

Now the jazz band plays and the music thrills,
And the rhythmic touch of forms instils
Lurid dreams of delight in the ebriate wills
In this wonderful "dance of death."
In the hot embrace of the thrilling waltz
The dancing enchants till at last it halts,
And the drink then taken obscure all faults,
In this wonderful "dance of death."

Now the partners change and the time flies fast,
As they seek new thrills while the moments last,
But they little reflect on the end at last,
In this dangerous "dance of death."
For now from the prince of the air there parts
The seductive glance that the passion starts,
And it fills and thrills the lust-filled hearts
In this dangerous "dance of death."

Now the bodies are hot and the lights are low,
And the flushed cheeks tell of desires aglow,
And deceitful words from the false lips flow
In this terrible "dance of death."
And the fair young girl with handsome curl,
Is completely lost in the maddening whirl,
And she sees not the devil who seeks her pearl
In this terrible "dance of death."

But at last they depart from the sin-cursed hall,
Some to go to their homes and the others—to fall,
—O the horrible, horrible end of it all
In this devilish "dance of death."
So the brothels are filled and our youth are destroyed,
And the gapeing abyss of the lost souls is cloyed,
And the work of the Savior is rendered void,
In this devilish "dance of death."

Hark! the call comes clear, it is sounding near,
To the church of Christ, which the Lord holds dear,
To maintain her virtue, and in godly fear
Walk apart from the "Dance of Death."
Yea, the light must shine, and the things divine
Must replace the deceits of the deadly wine,
And the hates of hell and the harlot's shrine
In the lost souls "Dance of Death."

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Loneliness of Jesus

By S. C. Henderson

TEXT: Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered every man to his own, and shall leave me alone; and yet I am not alone because the Father is with me.—John 16:32.

There are two kinds of solitude. One is the isolation in space. The other is the isolation in spirit. We may be separated by distance, among strange people with strange habits and language. We may be homesick for the fellowship of our friends or fellow men. When we were children we read that fascinating tale of Robinson Crusoe. We felt a sad sympathy for poor old Crusoe during those years when he never heard a human voice or looked into a human face, with just his cats, dogs and goats for companions. We felt a sigh of relief when black Friday came to be his servant and companion.

A city girl said as she was passing through the countryside, "How lonesome it must be out here—no folks, no movies, no hustle." But not all the rural folks are lonesome, even if they are not in the bustle of the crowded cross-ways. There is no place more lonely than a great city, for those who are strangers and homeless. A man can be lonely in a crowd. There are many lonely hearted people that tramp the city streets, seeking a friendly word or a pleasant look. Not long ago a Toledo, Ohio paper told of a lad from the mountains of the south, who, hungry, jobless and inexperienced, had fainted for want of food and sleep in the streets of that city. I doubt not that his heart was as sad and lonely as his stomach was hungry.

Then a crowd may be of a far different type of folks than the man is. Their standards of life may be divergent their ideals may differ; their views and beliefs may be very unlike. There are great gulfs to be bridged. As long as a man has the social instinct, he seeks companionship. He loves his kind. This thirst for companionship has been a blessing to mankind, and often has been his curse. Many a boy or girl has found his or her making in a good crowd. On the other hand many failures and sins in young folks can be traced to the evil influence of bad companionship!

One of the base delusions in many minds is, "BE GOOD AND YOU WILL BE LONELY." But that depends on what your ideals and tastes in life are. The old colored sister said that the young generation of her church had just enough religion to make them miserable. Here are her words: "Just enough 'ligin to make them unhappy at a dance, and not enough to make them enjoy the prayer-meeting."

When we speak of the loneliness of Jesus, there are a series of pictures that immediately raise themselves before us. We think of that mysterious midnight he spent on Olive's brow and prayed alone. How soul hungry do his words reveal him to be when he says to the slumbering disciples: "COULDST THOU NOT HAVE WATCHED WITH ME BUT AN HOUR?"

Again we see the scene in Pilate's judgment hall. He stands silent, friendless, forsaken, deserted, betrayed. Or again, we see him in that supreme moment of his isolation. He hangs in loneliness and solitude on the cross, despised and rejected of men. The sweat of death is upon his brow. Pain and sorrow are sapping out his young life. He cries out, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

But after all, Calvary was not an episode in his career. It was an epitome of his whole life. After three years' companionship with his chosen disciples, he was compelled to say, "Have I been so long time with you and yet thou has not known me?" There was that element in his life, that even those who were nearest him could not know, or appreciate. How often their eyes were holden. Even with the passing centuries men cannot fathom his divinity. During his earthly life he often drew apart into some desert in solitude to pray. It was then he could say, "I am not alone, because the Father is with me."

Emerson once said, "To be great is to be misunderstood." Culture is ever lonely. Our greatest men when studied impartially have been lonely souls. We see the sad expression upon the face of Abraham Lincoln. The people of his day misunderstood and criticised him. The age criticized Washington so harshly that the great man said that he would rather be in his grave than be president. He was misunderstood. Jefferson was called wild and visionary and an atheist when he proposed to separate church and state. When Benjamin Franklin was sent to England during the Revolutionary days and the formation of the new republic, he was unjustly abused for villainy and theft of public funds. Woodrow Wilson said, "I want the people to love me but they never will." Our greatest inventors have been called lunatics, and heaven-sent reformers have been termed "crack-brained fanatics." That has ever been the crowd's attitude toward prophet and teacher from the days of Isaiah and Socrates to the present moment. It hates what it does not understand. It did that with Jesus in his day.

When Lloyd George was premier of Great Britain, he attended church back in his old home village in Wales on a Sunday morning. The pastor called upon him to speak after the morning sermon. He was referred to as the greatest living Welshman whom the whole world had come to honor—the greatest statesman in the empire." When Lloyd George arose to speak he said:

"Our pastor has told you that I have climbed the mountain of fame, responsibility and honor, and in one sense that is true, but dear friends, let me assure you that the mountain-top is not an ideal place for any of us—no real rest or comfort. The higher you climb the colder it becomes. On the mountain, a man feels very lonely, often thick mists envelope him, and he misses his way. He can hardly see a yard ahead. . . . The higher a man climbs the colder and lonelier you will find it."

The great statesman's thought is strikingly similar to Byron's stanza:

"He who ascends to mountain tops shall find
The loftiest peaks most wrapped in clouds and snow;
He who surpasses or subdues mankind
Must look down upon those below.
Though high above the sun of glory glów
Far beneath the earth and ocean spread,
Round him are icy rocks, and loudly blow
Contending tempests on his naked head
And thus reward the toils which those summits lead."

But solitude is the garden in which great souls are grown. It is true that the great have stood alone, the great in genius, in glory, or in goodness. If finite men have felt the chill on the mountain tops that have pinnaled above mankind, how infinitely more must have been the loneliness of Jesus.

Jesus was lonely because men misunderstood him. His age failed to appreciate him. Not long ago I saw an editorial that said, "The peaks of the race have been bathed in sunshine, but the valleys are yet dark." This is not more true today than it has been in any other part of the world's history. Moses went up into Mt. Horeb, while the hosts of Israel camped in the valley. He saw the glory of the Most High God—Jehovah of Hosts amid the thunderings and lightnings of the sacred mountain, while the people made themselves a calf of gold and bowed themselves down to it. The Hebrew prophets all lived far in advance of their age and generation. Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Amos and Micah were looked upon as crazy idealists and impractical preachers. Jesus went to the cross, when he came with the glad tidings of salvation which the people spurned and rejected. The mountains have been to the choice few who have seen the transfigured Lord. The rest were contented to abide in the valley where it was yet dark.

Think of the scribes and Pharisees living their days amid the musty rolls of the Talmud. They revered "dead hands" more than the living words of their Messiah who had come. They misunderstood Jesus. Their minds were so conformed that any truth he brought was hidden by prejudice. They called him the Deceiver. But they knew him not.

Here were his home folks, his fellow townsmen. They said, "Yes, we all know him. This is Jesus the carpenter. His own brothers and sisters, the sons and daughters of Mary, misunderstood. Why does he go away on these preaching tours?" They thought him demented. They misunderstood. Familiarity is the last to acknowledge genius. President Coolidge said, "many people cannot understand that I am president, and least of all my father." This was true of Jesus, "he came unto his own and they that were his own received him not, but to as many as received him to them he gave them the right to become children of God, even to them that believed on his name."

The misunderstood man is the lonely man. He longs for sympathy and companionship that understanding brings. But how can they understand that live in another world? Since dawn a man had been seated on a stone in the bottom of a ravine. Three peasant women on their way to the vineyard exchange "good day" with him as they passed to their work. At sunset they returned and saw seated upon the same stone the watcher, with his eyes fixed on the same spot. "A poor innocent," one whispered to the others. A poor innocent, and all three cross their breasts. The man on the stone was Faber, the great naturalist, patiently waiting to discover what is instinct and what is reason in insect life. To the poor French vintresses he was an object of supreme compassion, an imbecile whom they commended to God in pity. But Faber lived in another world than they—he was not understood. So the world misunderstood the Christ—it spurned him; it rejected him; it crucified him, because it could not of itself know him. They were of the world; he was from the Father.

Nineteen centuries have elapsed since his day, and even now men are calling the Gospel too ideal for practical life and conduct. What he said about the Golden Rule is for the millennium. What he said about loving enemies and going the second mile are poetic platitudes. What he said concerning war is not to be taken literally. My friends, then will mankind know and accept the Gospel truth as practical? When will men rise to Christ's altitude of living? Long ago an Indian tribe encamped at the foothills of a grand and inaccessible mountain. Again and again the chieftian sent his bravest warriors up the rugged steep. One by one they came back baffled, bruised and defeated. One came back with a hen that showed that he had been beyond the timber-line. Another had a stone from the glacier. The third came with an icicle from the snow-line. The bravest of the brave went on and finally returned after a long absence, staggering in more dead than alive, all spent, bleeding and dying. "What have you brought?" asked his chief. "Nothing," whispered the brave, and then raising himself, he shouted "I reached the summit, I saw the sea beyond." Yes, friends, we must rise to the summit of the lonely mountain, if we are to catch the inspiration of the Christ. Too many are merely content to dwell among the foothills.

Jesus lived in the grand sphere of moral loneliness. He was without sin. There was no unrighteousness found in him. He never accepted even the second good. Sidney Lainard rightly called him the "Good paragon, the crystal Christ without flaw or the shadow of defect." Even his enemies could find no moral fault in him. All the charges they made were false and had to be framed against him.

The peak of sinlessness is an inaccessible peak that men had been attempting to scale, but Christ alone has ascended to the very summit. How the existence of human sinfulness must have cut his sensitive soul. How its black and foul waters must have repelled a spirit that knew no sin to a sinful world. To him there would be a real sense of moral loneliness, for all flesh has sinned and come short of the glory of God. Men are selfish, lustful, greedy, jealous, filled with hate and prejudice.

Then man felt Christ's presence as a repulsion to his sins. Peter one day cried, "Lord depart from me, for lo I am a sinful man." How such a character condemned him as he stood in the Holy Presence! We see the Lord writing on the ground, when men had brought to him a sinful woman. They asked what they should do with her, for Moses had said that such as she should be stoned. Jesus said, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone." He convicted them of their own sins and quietly they slunk away from his perceiving eye.

Although we may feel like Peter, the shortage of moral grandeur and the weight of sin, this same Jesus came to bring mankind pardon and forgiveness of sins. That was his mission. That was the reason he chose to live with sinful and debased humanity and to die for them. Though because of him man feels the lack of moral grandeur and the awful blight of sin, though he feels condemned in his presence, yet, he alone can forgive and restore.

Finally Jesus said, "Yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me." In those all-night vigils he was in companionship with the Father. "Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage." Jesus, although alone—sinless, peerless, divine, still had companionship. The Father and he were one in deity, purity, love and purpose. So we in our loneliness and solitude can have that companionship from that which is from above. Think about John Huss burning at the stake! Think of all the martyrs and reformers who stood on the sunlit mountain tops and saw the approaching dawn of new day, while all the valleys were yet dark. Were they alone? An old Hebrew legend tells that when Moses returned from Midian and announced to his countrymen that he was sent as an emancipator to lead them out of slavery, the Hebrews asked, "Are you alone?" "No," was the reply of Moses, "We are two—God is with me." No man is ever alone who has God with him. Jesus said, "I am not alone, the Father is with me."

We need this divine companionship—the personal presence of our Lord. There are no heights too high, nor depths too deep for God's companionship. The Psalmist assures us of his ever present imminence:

"If I ascend up to heaven, thou art there;
If I make my bed in hell, thou art there;
If I take the wings of the morning and Fly to the uttermost parts of the earth
Thou art there to uphold me."

It was a stormy sea, his boat was old and its hulk rotten. His friends said, "Do not attempt to return to England, or you will be lost. But Sir Humphrey Gilbert said, 'I am as close heaven by sea as by land.' Jesus said, 'Lo I am with you alway, even to the end of the world.' So, 'fear not neither be afraid.'"

Prayer: Almighty God, we pray thee to reveal the majesty and beauty of thy Son to us. Help us to stand in his sunlit presence on the lonely mountain. Awake in us a vision of true beauty and holiness. Give us eyes to see and hearts to feel, that we may become like him. Amen.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

The Consciousness of His Presence

By Ada Zellner

OUR SCRIPTURE

I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but CHRIST LIVETH IN ME, and the life which I now live I live by faith in the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me (Gal. 2:20). For which cause I suffer also these things: yet I am not ashamed; for I know him whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day (2 Tim. 1:12). He that abideth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty (Psa. 91:1). But let those that put their trust in thee rejoice: let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them: let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee. For thou, Lord wilt bless the righteous; with favor wilt thou compass him as with a shield (Psa. 5:11, 12). The Lord will also be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble. And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, Lord, has not forsaken them that seek thee (Psa. 9:9, 10). The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation and my high tower (Psa. 18:2). I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit: for apart from me ye can do nothing (John 15:5). . . . teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world (Matt. 28:20).

OUR MEDITATION

"In the secret of his presence, how my soul delights to hide!

Oh, how precious are the lessons which I learn at Jesus' side!

Earthly cares can never vex me, neither trials lay me low;
For when Satan comes to tempt me, to the secret place
I go, to the secret place I go."

In meditating upon this subject, one is awed by the sacredness of it, and somewhat at a loss to know just how to explain that consciousness of the divine presence to others; and yet every true follower of Christ must of necessity be just as conscious of the presence of Christ, as he is of the presence of some friend who is speaking to him face to face. Why? Because he is our guide, our loving companion, without whose sweet fellowship and close communion the Christian life would be barren and meaningless; without whom we would have no access to the Father. "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." Without him we are as people groping in the dark for he is the light of the world. As in the physical world, light is necessary to life, so in the spiritual world the Christian cannot live apart from Christ who is our light.

How can we, as Christians today, know that Christ is with us? Of course the disciples had material evidence, for he was with them in the flesh. They could see him, associate with him, and listen to him as he gave them the words of eternal life. But how can we make him real in our own experience?

In the first place, if our lives are yielded to him, we will be conscious of a peace of mind and soul which passes all understanding. Out of this grow the consciousness of a strength far beyond our own, which will carry us victoriously through troublous times, through crises, through sorrows and distress.

ized the lives of the apostles? Let us go to Paul and hear his testimony. "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and the life which I now live, I live by faith in the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me." Probably none of the other apostles went through such a long, protracted ministry, so fraught with pain and suffering. He encountered opposition at every angle of his life's work, suffered ridicule and physical anguish of almost every kind at the hands of his cruel oppressors. Nevertheless this same Paul was able to say, "Who shall separate me from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or anguish or persecution—? Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Paul was so completely saturated with the Spirit of Christ that it was obviously manifest in all his life work.

In the second place, we will long for a closer companionship with him. We will be as eager to talk to him as children are to speak to their earthly fathers. We will not hesitate to go with him with our everyday problems for counsel and guidance. Neither will we forget to thank him for all the good things he has given us. Our prayer life will be rich, and full, and refreshing, and beautiful. Ellen Lakshmi Goreh, of India very beautifully expressed this sentiment in the poem of which I quoted the first stanza at the beginning of this meditation. Listen further:

When my soul is faint and thirsty, 'neath the shadow of his wing,

There is cool and pleasant shelter, and a fresh and crystal spring;

And my Savior rests beside me, as we hold communion sweet;

If I tried, I could not utter what he says when thus we meet, what he says when thus we meet.

Only this I know, I tell him all my doubts and griefs and fears;

Oh, how patiently he listens! and my drooping soul he cheers;

Do you think he ne'er reproves me? What a false friend he would be.

If he never never told me of the sins which we must see, of the sins which he must see!

Finally, if Christ is living in us, there will be an impulse or urge from within to get busy for the Master. We cannot help but tell others about him. We will be as Peter, bound by his convictions, when he said, "We cannot but speak the things which we saw and heard." Peter had a real experience and had a message to give to the world. No less should every Christian today be conscious of that duty, for Christ has said, "Ye are my witnesses." But he also said, "Go . . . and Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.

OUR PRAYER

Our dear heavenly Father, we thank thee for what Christ means to us. We thank thee for the assurance he has given us of his presence. We thank thee because we can come to thee with our problems and difficulties, knowing that we will receive the guidance which we seek. We thank thee for the joy that has come into our lives by letting Jesus take full possession of our hearts. We pray thee that thou wilt bless us and keep us strong in the faith. May we be even more zealous in our communion with thee, for we know that only as we keep in tune with thee can we make our lives count in bringing other lives into that same consciousness. May our lives be living epistles for thee. We pray these blessings in the name of Christ our Lord. Amen.

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

A PRAYER FOR BREAD—Matt. 6:5-15.

If we could feel that utter and complete dependence upon our heavenly Father, whatever be our material situation in life, that would enable us to pray sincerely for life's daily provision, as an earthly child looks to its father, how much more spiritually meaningful life would be!

TUESDAY

THE BROKEN BREAD—1 Cor. 11:23-29.

Break thou the bread of life, dear Lord, to me,
As thou didst break the loaves beside the sea;
Beyond the sacred page I seek thee, Lord;
My spirit pants for thee, O living Word!

PRAISE FOR PROVISION—Psa. 34:1-11.

If we appreciate the providence of God, we should tell him so with words of joy and gladness. But we are so very mum, we receive all the good things of life as a matter of course. We are pitifully wanting in gratitude; thanksgiving languishes on our lips.

THURSDAY

DELIGHT IN GOD'S WILL—Psa. 40:5-8.

When we contemplate the goodness of God we are moved to ask, What shall we do for him, how shall we show our gratitude unto him? And we hear the answer coming, Not mere lip praise, or recounting his mercies. Nor does he delight in sacrifice and offering, but in the doing of the will of God. And in this the Lord Jesus set us the supreme example.

FRIDAY

OUR RELATIONS TO OTHERS—1 Pet. 3:8-12.

If we were able to exercise a genuinely brotherly spirit toward all men there would be little occasion for discord. And the place where it is sometimes most difficult to show ourselves truly Christian in word and deed is in the home and among our intimates.

SATURDAY

LOVE FOR THE SINFUL—1 Pet. 4:8-10.

It is easy enough to love the good and kind, but to love those who are ugly and sinful and to be considerate of their conduct and to show sympathy for them, is a real test of the genuineness of our Christian character.

SUNDAY

THE ASPIRING SOUL—Phil. 3:8-14.

The record of every soul contains many disappointments and failures, but whatever be the past, the truly Christ-like soul will say with Paul, "forgetting the things that are behind, . . . I press on toward the goal." It is not so unfortunate that one falls as that he ceases to aspire. However bitter the struggle, keep the face sunward.—G. S. B.

LESSON LIGHTS

A Vital Contact

That is what is implied as the Christian's relation to the world when he is said to be the "salt of the earth", and it is for a purpose. In the first place (1) the Christian is to be by his spirit and influence, example and teaching, a counteracting force to the wickedness of the world; he is to be an anti-septic, so to speak, to "the unrighteousness which is the great destroyer of individuals and nations." "It is a commonplace of education that the greatest power of any teacher lies in his own personality. It is character that produces character in others. (2) Salt must get close to the thing it is to purify and be rubbed into it. 'In former days men built monasteries, and thought they could lay up in definite places a store of salt for the preservation of the world. We all know how soon the last lost its savor when it was removed from the actual corruption which it was meant to cure.'"—Dr. Mandell, Bishop of Peterborough. (3) 'Salt does its work silently, inconspicuously gradually.'

Reflectors of Light

It is the duty of Christians and members of the church to be reflectors of the light that cometh from Christ. Jesus said, Ye are the light of the world, but it is a borrowed light, a reflected light, that we show forth, for the Son of God is the source of all light.

"Whoever lives the Beatitudes shines with God's light. 'Right living is the only way of light giving.' 'The light of the sun which blesses our vision is the reflection of its rays from the clouds, the earth and chiefly from the particles in the air. Otherwise we could see only the sun, and in all other directions would be darkness. But by the dispersion of light every particle becomes a miniature sun, and the world is full of light even to those who do not live in the direct rays of the sun. It is this work which every Christian, and every Christian word and act, is to do for the moral world.'

"Distinguish between doing right in order to help others, as when one lights a beacon in order to guide the sailor; and doing right in order to be praised by others, as when one stands in the full blaze of a chandelier in order to display his own jewelry. It is one thing to shine for the sake of illuminating others, and so helping them; it is another thing to shine for the sake of illuminating ourselves, and be seen to advantage."

A Picture of the First Church

They were intelligent, continuing steadfastly under the instruction of the Apostles. The whole body attended the teaching services.

2. They were united in fellowship, like one loving family.

3. They joined in the ordinances of the church, baptism and the Lord's Supper.

4. They were a praying church; they went to the prayer meeting, and united in prayer. Of course they prayed in secret; but this doubtless refers to the meetings for prayer, "united prayer at fixed hours in some appointed place." No one can grow in grace without praying in secret, but there are helps and blessings which come from united prayer which the other cannot give.

5. They were reverent and devout.

6. There were special manifestations of God's power. The apostles did the same kind of deeds as their Master had done and by these wonders and signs they proved that they were true disciples of Jesus the Messiah, and that God indorsed them as belonging to him and to his kingdom.

7. They were a very benevolent church. Everything was for the good of all. No one claimed that his possessions were his own if others of the church were in real need of what he could give.

Practical beneficence will go far to convince any man that the religion back of it is true. Thus the rescue missions distribute rolls and coffee before their meetings on cold winter evenings. Christianity has brought into existence many noble and blessed institutions. But these can become cold and useless to win the world unless the church continue to fill them all with living, personal love, for then only will they testify of Christ. "Kindness has converted more sinners than either zeal, eloquence or learning; and these three never converted any one unless they were kind also."

8. They were a church-going people. They attended the regular services at the temple, for the Christians did not separate from Judaism until they were forced either to leave or renounce Christ.

9. The whole atmosphere of the church was one of joy and gladness.

10. As a result of their character they were a fruitful church, growing rapidly in numbers, with daily conversions. When our companions can see that the religion of Jesus Christ makes us much happier, and more ready to love and to help those around us, they are far more inclined to join us.

11. The lives of the members of this church were such that they gained the respect of all around them. This is always true of the Christian who keeps close to Christ, and patterns his life most clearly after the life and teachings of his Master.

The Church Today

The church is the school of Christ where men and women who wish to follow him come together to be trained by him in Christian character for Christian service. The building in which they meet is not a social clubroom; it is designed to be a spiritual "power house", where they shall be charged with the spirit of love, service, and sacrifice for all men and all society. It is perfectly true that this ideal is far from realization in most of our churches, but that is equally true of all human organizations, and it must be admitted by those who know the facts that more churches are striving towards their ideal today than ever before.

The church is the only institution on earth today that stands to affirm the existence, and insists on the culture of the human soul. As the spire lifts its finger to heaven, so the church points men to God; and cries, "What shall it profit a man though he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" It utters the words of Christ to men of this country. It says, "Ye cannot live by bread alone." "The life is more than meat." "The soul is greater than the body." It stands for eternal things and urges men to keep eternity values in view. With Browning it cries, "Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure."

The church is in a very special and peculiar sense the place of worship. Some men are, as Beecher said, "like the Southern pine, so full of rich, fire-loving substance, they can burn themselves, and act as a torch, but the great mass of mankind need to be treated like fuel in a fireplace, stick upon stick, many and many together, that in the common heat and the common flame they may all glow." The church is the place of special communion with God, where many hearts take fire and kindle each other in a flame of true worship.

The church is the great training-ground of moral character. It stands for the regeneration of the individual and society (Condensed from a sermon by A. E. Cooke.)

THE CALLING OF EVANGELISM

For the work of his spiritual Kingdom the Lord has given various gifts and endowments. He has called some to be pastors. These are the shepherds of the flock, to nourish the people of God, minister to the sick, bury the dead, comfort those in sorrow, and lead the lost to Christ.

Others he has called to be teachers of the Word. Paul gave very special instruction to Timothy "to rightly divide the Word of truth." How great is the need, especially in these modern days, for this exhortation.

Just as definite as the above has he called some to be evangelists, and given them special blessings of spiritual gifts. "Do the work of an evangelist." What a high calling to be an evangelist of Christ, to be a flaming torch of fervency, carrying through special gifts, the messages of life, stirring the busy souls of men in the cross roads of life, calling them to halt in their mad and selfish ways and pointing them to the blood-dripping Cross of Calvary. To what higher place can man be called, than to stand between a lost world and the Redeemer?

Evangelism is as wide as the kingdom. Some are endued for special platform evangelism, some evangelism of song and some the quiet evangelism of a daily spirit-filled Christian life.

Evangelists are human and liable to the mistakes of humanity, so are all mankind. His grace is sufficient for all. Abounding in this grace the evangelist shall hold high estate in the affairs of the church. Let such evangelists come to the aid of heavily burdened pastors who are appalled at the sudden flow of sin rushing into their churches and threatening the very life of the church.—John S. "Its Time to Pledge"

A little boy, arriving at the age of six, began his career as a student in a city not far distant from here in the following manner. The teacher, not being ready to assign the seats permanently to her new pupils, after inquiring the lad's name said pleasantly, "Now Willie, you sit here for the present." All went well throughout the day and then came dismissal time. All marched out but Willie. He remained steadfastly in his seat. The teacher wondering what the matter might be called him to her and said, "Well Willie what are you waiting for?" To which Willie replied in a half-sobbing, wavering tone, "I'm—I'm w-waiting for the PRESENT."

So is your Booster Committee waiting for the returns from the request blanks that were sent out ever so long ago from the National Secretary's office with a request that you make your pledge for the National Christian Endeavor work. Our National Secretary informs us that very few pledges have arrived.

If you have slipped this pledge card away somewhere, thinking that you would call this matter to the attention of the society at some future time, then get it out and send it in. Remember it is all addressed and stamped an' Ev'rything.

In the Canton McKinley High School they have what they call "The Booster Club." It is the duty of every member to Boost and at the athletic contests to "yell." And let me tell you that when they "yell" in concert it makes SOME noise. Let's have a Booster Club of our own. All together now! Let's Go.

WATCH THIS SPACE NEXT WEEK!

Fort Blunder

By Julia W. Wolfe

We fear that not many Americans can tell where Fort Blunder is located; but in the extreme northeastern corner of New York there stands this fort, with grizzled and frowning face, guarding its country as a watch-dog guards his master's house; and as the master many times procures his watch-dog after his house has been robbed, so Uncle Sam built this fort after the enemy had sailed up the waters of Lake Champlain only to meet their doom at the hands of the doughty McDonough.

This heap of gray stones has a past, but it is not of the kind that inspired contempt; it rather tends to cause an indulgent smile, because it was here that our Government in an absent-minded moment unwittingly built a fort on foreign territory. Not only was it built in Canada, but the place chosen for it was of strategic importance to the British. It was completed, too, quite a long time before it was known to be on the wrong side of the boundary line.

Then a problem arose..and, had it not been for the friendliness of England at the time, the complications might have assumed an undesirable aspect. As it came out, however, the fort was soon on this side of the boundary line, inside of the United States. This was brought about, not by moving the fort, but by moving the boundary line.

It is not recorded that the British boats encountered any resistance at this point when they began the conquest of the United States in 1814, by entering Lake Champlain from the north. So we may infer that no fort was there at the time. Soon afterward, however, the Government began the erection of a fort commanding the entrance to the lake. This stood for years, and was supposed to be on American soil; but the mistake was eventually discovered, whereupon the stronghold was named Fort Blunder.

The "blunder" was corrected by the Webster-Ashburton treaty of 1842, the United States granting to England a portion of Aroostook County, Me., and receiving in turn a strip of borderland which placed the boundary line farther north, thus locating the old fort in New York State.

In 1844 the construction of a new fort began on the site, and partially out of the materials of the old one. This was completed in 1870.

Making Sunday the Best Day Mark 3:1-4

It was Saturday afternoon and Catherine and Martha were just returning from a long hike. They had had a very nice afternoon and now they were sorry that their hike was all over and it was time to go home.

"Well, anyhow, I'm glad tomorrow is Sunday. I always enjoy Sunday," said Martha.

"Well, I am not glad. I don't like Sunday. I never know what to do. Mother won't let me play games or go hiking or anything on Sunday. Sunday is the longest day in the week I think," said Catherine.

"I tell you what we'll do," said Martha. "I'll go along with you to your house now and we will see if your mother will let you go along with me to my house for Sunday. I would like to show you what a nice time we have at our house."

So that is just what they did and in a very short time Catherine had together her Sunday clothes and they were ready to go over to Martha's house.

The girls had a lot of fun playing that evening. About eight o'clock Martha's mother called, "Come here, girls, it's time to study your Sunday school lesson."

"Mother never teaches me my Sunday school lesson," said Catherine. "We don't go to Sunday school very often."

After the lesson had been carefully studied, the girls were sent to bed for Martha's mother knew that it would take the little girls longer to go to sleep than usual. It nearly always takes two little girls longer to go to sleep than it does just one for one little girl is not apt to keep herself awake talking to herself.

They woke up early next morning and talked a little while. Then Martha decided it was time to get up. Soon they were dressed and down stairs. After breakfast, the children helped with the dishes. Soon it was time for Sunday school and everyone started off. Catherine went to Martha's class but she did not expect to enjoy being there. She was very much surprised when the teacher started the lesson. Every member of the class seemed to be interested. First, they had a contest answering questions. Everyone seemed to want to answer all of the questions, but they took turns. Martha came out second highest in answering. Another little girl won that morning. Catherine looked at her chum's happy face and decided that Martha won sometimes too.

As soon as the contest was over, the teacher told a story and Catherine soon found that she, too, was enjoying the story. It was such an interesting story but the most surprising thing to Catherine was that the teacher told them when she was through that the story was a Bible story. Catherine did not know that Bible stories were ever that interesting.

Catherine was quite surprised when Martha said, "We will go up near the front for church. I like to sit up there." Catherine had never stayed for church more than one or two Sundays in her life. Other girls and boys, too, came up to sit on the front seats and when the service started, all of them helped to sing the hymns. Then Catherine received another surprise. When he started the service, the preacher looked right at the children, as though he was going to preach to us, thought Catherine. But that's just what the preacher did. He preached a short sermon for the children before he did anything else. Then he preached interesting things that the children could understand all during his regular sermon.

After church, the girls went home and both of them helped get dinner so that they would not have to wait so long and so that Martha's mother would not have so much work.

Catherine wondered what they would do all afternoon and it was not long till she found out. Martha took her out in the kitchen and showed her a pie that she had baked all by herself and told her that her mother was going along with them to take the pie to some people. When they arrived at the home to which they were going, Catherine discovered that it was a family of poor people. They spent the afternoon cheering some sick children and the evening at Christian Endeavor and church. Then Catherine understood why Martha loved Sunday. It was a busy happy day.

Another Mission Letter for the Children

Mrs. Jobson Continues her Story of the Trip to the Field

Bassai, A. E. F.
 November 15, 1926.

Dear Children of the Evangelist Family:

Since writing you last on the river boat many things have happened, and I know you will be interested in hearing of our traveling on to the stations.

We left Bangui for Yaloki in a government automobile because Brother Hathaway could not cross the river with the Ford, as the water was very high at that time. We went about twenty miles in this car when we came to a river and found we could not cross. So all we could do was to find a place to stay as the rain was falling and it was getting dark.

There was a native hut near by, but when we looked inside we saw about six people in this hut, besides it happened to be the chicken and dog house combined. We asked them if they would give us their hut for the night and they kindly consented. So the four of us with all our baggage made quite a house full. Needless to say we were glad when morning came, and the chickens near our bed woke us up at an early hour.

How thankful we were that we did not have our little Kathryn and David with us, and many times along the way as we passed through hard places we praised God that he gave us grace to leave them behind as we serve him here in dark Africa.

Next morning we crossed the river in a small boat, then the natives carried us for several feet, as the mud and water was too deep to walk. We traveled all day in tepoy, push, push, bicycle and motorcycle until we reached the next river where we saw Brother Hathaway. Next day we left in the Ford for Yaloke, arriving there about 5 o'clock. It seemed so good to see our dear Missionaries and native Christians again! Wish you children could have seen the little black boys running after the Ford and trying to catch it! When they saw it went too fast they stood back and clapped their hands. They love to make the French salute when you pass them, and the little tots would say, "Matabice," which means, "give me some money."

How I wish you boys and girls could have seen the little black boys and girls coming to Sunday school! They come in large groups and love to hear about Jesus.

After the conference at Yaloke we left for Bassai. Several miles from the station we met some of our boys and girls coming to meet us. The first one I knew was Boko, our little girl; but now she has grown so tall. Maingleco, Kathryn's little nurse, came all the way to Bangui, 250 miles, to meet us. He said, "Tell Kafe (Kathryn) when she grows bigger to come and tell us, Belabai!" (The good news).

Many things have changed at Bassai since we have been away. There are nice brick houses, and Mr. Kennedy is building a dispensary for the sick. Also there are many new babies. Little Lester, Jr., is a nice big boy. The native Christians have many new babies. They all have Christian names, such as Samuel, Elizabeth, Miriam, etc.

Pray for these little children, that they may know Jesus too. I will tell you more about them next time. Lovingly,

MRS. ORVILLE JOBSON.

Krypton, Kentucky

Herewith is the first (at least for a long time) view of any of the Krypton scenes to appear in the Evangelist. Here are a dozen and a half of the "elect" of the Krypton Sunday school, the picture having been taken the first Sunday of January upon the occasion of Presentation of Awards for 1926. You will note two of the girls are

Sunday School Scholars at Krypton, Kentucky are given awards for "perfect" records

proud possessors of splendid new Bibles. These two girls hold the honor and distinction of making a "perfect" record for the year 1926, having (1) been present every Sunday during the year, (2) on time, (3) with a Bible or Testament, and (4) an offering. These four points were the standard, and the attained 208 points read 100 per cent. Six of the others whose likenesses are shown hold a record of over 85 per cent, and possess a silver star badge in consideration of their efforts. Most of them made more than 70 per cent, but the dead line was 55 per cent. Ten of them received a small blue badge as an appreciation for faithfulness.

These little mementos were not held up as prizes during the year, and indeed were not decided upon until late in December; so that the award earned is the more significant. Regular attendance here is secured only through extreme difficulties; so many agencies battle against the attainment of this goal. Some of you may think the automobile is the great modern enemy of church and Sunday school attendance, but the devil is just as busy here in a roadless highland as elsewhere. Consequently, when we see these boys and girls casting aside old customs and the really "modern temptation" of blatant desecration of the Lord's Day, it seems appropriate that proper recognition be given such worthwhile faithfulness.

The persons in the picture are as follows: Above, left to right, Mrs. Geneva Eversole (one of our long-time, ever-faithful Krypton members,) and Mrs. Kinzie. Next, below, two young ladies, Cleo Deaton and Lois Kinzie. Boy on extreme left (sitting), Henry Collins, (note his silver star pinned in cap). Next to Henry is his sister, Martha Collins, holding new-won treasure in her hand. Peeping over Martha's head, Gertrude Muncey. Next to right, Rebecca Deaton, then Lushion Muncey. The two boys on the right in the second row are Wornice Stout and Earl Whitaker (sitting). Front row, left to right, Ledford Muncey, Saul Campbell, Johnny Stout, Louise Whitaker, Elizabeth Kinzie (holding her Bible), Harold Whitaker, and Christine Begley. Of course, the one not in the picture because of duties at the other end of the camera, was present a goodly number of the various Sundays of 1926, with Bible, offering, etc.

We are glad to report a slight increase in average attendance for the year 1926 over 1925. Knowing the field as we do and knowing the conditions, the whole situation is very encouraging. A slow growth on a good foundation is far better, we deem, than the squash kind, fostered by such stimulants as ice cream festivals, pie suppers, contests, brass bands, and other witty devices for the securing of the crowds.

May it be the Lord's will that out of this little group gems for his crown may be found and that noble workers for his Kingdom might be the result of these records of faithful Sunday school attendance.

FRED V. KINZIE.

CAT AND MONKEY RELIGION

In some parts of the foreign mission field it is said that the natives divide the Christians into two classes, and call the religion of the one class the "monkey religion," and that of the other the "cat religion." There is a reason. The mother monkey carries her young as she jumps from tree to tree by having them hold on to her tail. If the little baby monkeys have sufficient strength to hold on tightly enough, all well and good. But if one through sickness or weakness should lose his hold, then good-bye for little baby monkey. Now with the mother cat it is different. She takes hold of her baby kittens with her teeth, and their safety depends not upon the hold of the baby kitten on its mother, but that of the mother cat on the kitten. This is much better. It is not our hold of him that makes us safe, but his hold of us. Says Jesus, "They shall never perish; neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them Me, is greater than all, and no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's hand."—Finest of the Wheat.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Pike and Vinco Churches

These are two country churches located a few miles from Conemaugh, and are served by our Brother J. L. Bowman, who himself is an educator, having taught the major portion of his life in the public schools and who is deeply interested in the future of our College and did all he could to give me aid.

Both of these churches are small in membership, but have been feeders for years to the churches in Johnstown and Conemaugh where many of their members are taking leading places in these churches. The days of their usefulness is not over and there is a tendency on the part of the people in Conemaugh to locate in these settlements away from the dirt and smoke of the city, to own their homes and enjoy the fresh country air. There are excellent transportation facilities as they are located on the main paved highways, with bus and interurban facilities. I believe in the next few years many more will be locating around these churches. Brother I. D. Bowman had just closed good meetings in both of these places.

Pike Church

Here we have a very comfortable church building and a promising group of young people, some of whom are looking toward Ashland for their education. The membership here is small. Brother Bowman is dividing his time with them and Vinco. The Pike church is only two miles from Nanty Glo, the home of the principal actor in the Canton tragedy, who at one time was a student in the school which Brother Bowman taught. They gave $338.54 to the endowment.

Vinco Church

This church is about six miles from Conemaugh and until recently has been without a pastor for a long time and naturally was the loser. Brother Bowman has now taken over the work and there is no reason, but what there will be progress in the future. They have a fine country church building, also a good parsonage. Brother Bowman lives a few miles from here at Echo, where he is serving as Principal of the school, but is looking forward to the near future when he shall be able to give his full time to the work and perhaps locate at Vinco. It is here that we can expect new families to locate from Conemaugh. Many new homes are being built and it seems to me, that Vinco gives promise of being a good field. The gift here was $70.13.

W. S. BELL.

ELKHART, INDIANA

To our Evangelist Readers:

Time soon slips around and away. We are quite sure that Elkhart has been tardy in reporting her activities. We are glad to be able to say, however, that our tardiness has not been the result of inactivity but rather the opposite. Our work for the present church year is well under way. Our attendance at services is good and our spirit is fine. Our revival, as it is related to a certain time and method is in the immediate past. Brother Stuckman was our evangelist and the number of our accessions was eighteen. While it is not necessary to introduce or recommend Brother Stuckman to our people, yet common courtesy leads us to say that a revival with Brother Stuckman as leader is surely a happy experience.

Brother Bell has also come and gone. We will allow Brother Bell to make his own financial report. We do wish to give, however, a statement of one of our Brethren who accompanied him in his trip about the town. Here it is: "Well, Brother Bell, did the local church at least fifty dollars more good than he received from us." According to that statement, Brother Bell gave us some fourteen hundred and fifty dollars. Now Brethren, figure it out. To the churches yet to receive him, let me assure you that Brother Bell is well versed in ministerial ethics and is also a perfect Christian gentleman. I am saying this because I realize his tremendous task and wish to help him in his task. While the church is praying for her missionaries, let us not forget the man upon whose shoulders we have placed a great task.

Our position and recognition in Elkhart has been strengthened during the past year by the fact that our Sunday school Superintendent, Brother Forry, has also served the city brotherhood very effectively as its president. Also our Moderator, Brother W. J. Sigerfoos as vice-president. Our position in the city has not alone been attained through these indicated positions but they may be used to suggest our "coming into our own."

Our building programme has been going on apace. Just now there is rumbling and an occasional lightning flash and we are expecting a deluge soon. You say that my figures of speech are not clear. Well, if you have ever had the pleasure of getting together sufficient funds to start building, you will understand. One hardly knows just when you are strong enough to start construction work but the anticipation is surely inspiring. Keep your ear to the ground, brotherhood, and you will soon hear the spade strike mother earth.

Were we to attempt to speak of our progress in each department our report would soon change from a report to a book. Suffice to say, Elkhart's folks are FAITHFUL. Those who have been in the church's activities are remaining faithful and many new members are adding strength to work. We wish to be remembered by all who have known us in the past and trust that as time goes on our sphere of influence will be enlarged.

W. I. DUKER, Pastor.

BERNE, INDIANA

Another report is due the readers of the Evangelist, I believe, from the little church of Berne, Indiana. We are still enjoying the services of him who gave himself for you and me on the Cross of Calvary. We are looking forward to an evangelistic campaign to be conducted at this place by Brother Charles H. Ashman of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. This meeting is to begin the middle of February. We solicit your prayerful support that this series of meetings may be to God's honor and glory, and that many souls may be born into the Kingdom.

We held our annual business meeting the last Friday of December. A fine report was given and all wished to retain our pastor, Rev. John Parr, who preaches the entire Gospel without the fear of criticism from the modernist.

Our Sunday school had an average attendance of 115 for the past year. We have prayer meeting and the teacher training class every Wednesday evening. While on Sunday evening besides the sermon the Christian Endeavor Society has an interesting service. We remain in the Lord's service.

CLARK SIPE.

WAYNESBORO, PENNSYLVANIA

The enlarged Waynesboro church was dedicated on Sunday, February 9. Dr. R. R. Teeter, Business Manager of the Brethren Publishing Co., was the principal speaker. The day's program included three major services, one in the morning, one in the evening, and one in the afternoon to which the community was invited. These services were well attended, the afternoon service taxing the enlarged auditorium space almost to its full capacity. No money was raised at any of these services.

This dedication day program is the culmination of efforts begun five years ago, at which time agitation for an enlarged building and a building fund were started. The actual construction of the addition was begun in the spring and completed in the fall of 1926. The last item in the completion of the project was accomplished with the installation of the pews the week prior to dedication day. The addition more than doubles the auditorium space of the old structure, and makes available 21 class rooms for Sunday school purposes, as well as a spacious basement for banquet and social uses. The total cost of the enlargement was $21,000, all of which was subscribed before the dedication took place. The subscriptions were in cash and pledges, $20,500 being in cash.

A special feature of the afternoon fellowship service, at which time the church was formally dedicated, was an address by Dr. Marcus A. Witter in which he recalled experiences in the life and history of the church during the more than eleven years of his pastorate. Dr. G. C. Carpenter, Dr. J. M. Tombaugh, Rev. Roy Long and others from the Hagerstown church were present at the afternoon service. The Waynesboro Ministerium was represented by its Vice-President, Rev. J. M. Moore, pastor of the Church of the Brethren, who made the afternoon prayer.

The membership of the church is unanimous in regarding this an outstanding day in the history of the congregation, the beginning of a new era of expansion and usefulness, for the church is now equipped to build the Kingdom of Christ in this world more effectively than ever before.

Evangelistic Services

Immediately following Dedication day a series of evangelistic services were begun with Rev. H. E. Eppley of Winona Lake acting in the double capacity of evangelist and singer. These services continued for two weeks, closing with a very well attended Sunday evening service on January 28. Eleven were baptized at this service as a result of the meetings. The work of Brother Eppley was well received, and in his brief stay he has made many friends in the Waynesboro church.

It is not to be doubted that the experience of Dedication Day, with the challenging addresses of Dr. Teeter and Dr. Witter, coupled with the commendable work of Brother Eppley, has infused new energy and spirit into the life of the church. Its conclusion was never better, its possibilities for service to Christ and His Kingdom never greater.

JOHN PERRY HORLACHER.

EIGHT YEARS

Eight years ago we were called to the pastorate of the First Brethren church of Los Angeles, California.

The eight years that it was my high privilege to be pastor of this people I have enjoyed more than words can express. Of course we have had days of gladness and days of sorrow, days of sunshine and days of disappointments, and some days of misunderstanding, but altogether they have been days of gladness and rejoicing.

At times we have all done and said things in the flesh that we would not have done and said in the calm of the Holy Spirit—God forgive us, each and all for all our blunders and mistakes, and may his wisdom guide us to be more careful in our words and conduct in the future, and may he make us more thoughtful and kind toward each other. The Golden Rule is good counsel: "Do unto all men as ye would that men should do to you (A free rendering). And if we do, we will never seek to harm any one.

While here I have seen sons and daughters grow into manhood and womanhood. I have baptized and received many of them into the church, married a number of them, and helped to lay some of their bodies in good old mother earth to rest until the breaking of that eternal morning, when God shall call all of his dear children to come forth with white robes washed in the blood of the Lamb.

The beautiful house of worship in itself is a monument of our labors together with the Lord Jesus—Outside of his mind and will it could never have been accomplished. And the souls that he has given us are a grand monument to the blessed Holy Spirit who wooed them to Calvary through the quickening word of God. To him, the Christ or God, be all the glory.

A Tribute

I wish to pay tribute to the Official Board. With the exception of one or two occasions I do not believe any official board in any church ever worked together with more harmony with each other and the pastor than has our boards. These eight years the board has sought to be a guide to the business affairs of the church and the church has trusted its official board and yielded to its leadership.

A tribute to the officers of the Bible School from the superintendent on down. We have worked together these eight years without a jar, or a hard thought, to my knowledge. Many of them in hard problems sought my little help and most gladly I did my best for them.

A tribute to our Elders. Brother Ross has gone from us but he was like a father to me and I tried to treat him accordingly, so I have no regrets. Brother A. P. Reed I knew in Ashland College before coming to the First church and the eight years that we have worked together have been years of heart and soul effort in the grand work of our great Master and never have I associated with any one man so long that has been such a blessing to my life—Brother Reed, I love you with all my soul and heart—I ever want your friendship. Brother Schishler also has been a great help to me in my ministry. Over three years we have worked together in the sweetest communion and fellowship without a break along any line. God bless these two Elders, worthy Elders, in the First Brethren church and make them still a greater blessing to the church as the days come and go. I have always tried to reverence God's word in 1 Timothy 5:1. "Rebuke not an elder, but entreat him as a father; and the younger men as brethren."

A tribute to our secretary and treasurer. They have had hard, thankless jobs, spending much time working for the church while others were happy in the fellowship of worship. They have been faithful, and I am sure that prayer would help more than criticism all who do that kind of work for the church of the living God. God bless you, Morris and Edna.

A tribute to our pianist. Perhaps no pianist has ever served a church with more faithfulness, which was untold help to the worship. God bless you, Lessie, and may his blessings rest upon our faithful choir.

A tribute to my wife. She has meant untold help to me these eight years of my work in the First church, as she has been at all places where we have worked together with our Lord Jesus.

For eight years we had a unanimous call each year to remain as pastor, but the last year the call was not unanimous so we prayed about the matter and felt perhaps it would be best to resign, and give someone else a chance.

Brother A. B. Cover has been called to follow us and we are praying that the Holy Spirit may lead both pastor and people to greater victory in the future and we will do our best to make it so. Brother Cover, you are coming to a church free of debt, a nice up-to-date church building and a parsonage free of debt.

Our eight years of ministry in this city has been blessed of God outside of our own church. We have preached each third Monday evening at The Union Rescue Mission and we have seen many souls coming home to God at almost each service.

And among our neighbors all around the church we are called upon to visit the sick, to bury the dead, and to marry the people, and so we have been kept busy. And I am glad to say that our crowds in the church have kept up all along the line.

A Question

Many are asking, "N. W., what are you going to do? Well, I am going to continue my work for Jesus. I have a lifetime job with him. But for a change and for rest we are going to do evangelistic work for a season in this city and adjoining towns, and if the Holy Spirit puts it upon the hearts of the pastors and people of our own brothererhood to call us for meetings, we will do our best.

The God of all grace be with all his believing children.
Future address, 3927 South San Pedro St., Los Angeles, California.

N. W. JENNINGS.

P. S.—A few Sundays ago we received five into the church by letter, Sister Ayers and her two children of Listie, Pennsylvania, and Brother Sylvester Lowman and his wife of Oakville, Indiana. Brother Lowman is an Elder, and I am sure he with his good wife will mean a blessing to the First church. Sister Ayers and her family are splendid workers.

I AM LIFE

Before the stars were, I am.

Before the mountains were formed, or the mists became seas, I dreamed my dream.

Out of the night came light and old void blossomed with wonder and beauty. In the waters fishes were bred and from the slime came forth reptiles. Forests grew and spread themselves and rivers threaded the land. Summer came, and Eden was fair.

And within all was I, brooding and dreaming.

Man lifted himself from the soil and walked. Men built for themselves huts to dwell in and temples for worship. There was I, in all and sharing all.

Clans became nations and kings were born and walls began to divide the land. And the sword was lord.

But I am Life, the foe of night and hate and war and death. Thus by me deaths come.

For old foundations and old walls are an abomination to me. My breath is the breath of spring. Better a living tree than heaped stones.

Therefore do I destroy. But fear not, I proclaim not death but dawn.

Before the stars were, I am. And after the stars have passed, then I shall be.

I am Life.—Thomas Curtis Clark, in Christian Century.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

When I Grow Up

Of all the kinds of folks I see,
What sort, I wonder, will I be?
Not cold and careless, full of scorn.
I'd be a sunbeam bright and warm.

So now I'll shine around my home,
With smiles and songs and kindness shown
Learn how to comfort them that mourn
Or how to lift some burden borne.

They most are loved who others bless,
They too most happiness possess;
A life in serving God and man
Finds pleasures which no other can.

Larkin's Rut

"Hello, Larkin," greeted the minister.
"Last week when I met you you were an automobile salesman, weren't you? What are you this week? Insurance or brush agent?" The minister's tone was bantering. He smiled as he spoke.

"Go ahead, Doctor, and soak it into me," replied Larkin, grinning. "Doesn't bother me a particle. It isn't any funeral for me, mixing up my jobs."

"Seems to me you have too many changes to get anywhere, Larkin."

"Not too many for me, Doctor. I'm piling up experience. I'm keeping out of a rut."

"Maybe that's why you haven't been at church for the last few Sundays," put in the minister. "Afraid of a rut?"

He knew how to say such things without being sarcastic. Larkin understood that.
He had scouted and promoted Sunday school work with Dr. Carr. These two knew each other.

"Frankly, I did begin to feel that I was getting in a rut at church," admitted Larkin. "Same old thing week after week.
Lessons over and over and over! Same old hymns! Same old faces! Routine stuff! It began to pall. I've been getting the services by radio for a change."

"Ought to settle down more, Larkin," advised the minister. But it was too cold to stand there on the street and talk. "By the way, Larkin," put in the minister, "have you time to try out my new runabout flivver? I'm going to give it a ride out into the country and see how it behaves. The church gave it to me last week. I have a call to make at a farmer's. You can have the first real ride in it."

Larkin was ready to go.

"This is certainly giving your driving ability a try out," declared Larkin when the two were in the light car and out on the still-frozen roughness of the country roads. But by grooving the wheels into the deep ruts made by other automobiles and wagons the passage from town to the farm was made quickly.

Then they started back. The light car was guided over the roughest part of the frozen road at a snail's pace. The minister avoided that rut with calm deliberation.
The car had to go in low speed and had to stop at bumps to avoid having the springs smashed.

"W-w-w-what's the idea, Doc?" chattered Larkin.

"O, just keeping out of the ruts, Larkin.
Getting experience for the car. That's all."

"You won't have much of a car to end up with, Doctor, unless you get it into that rut," advised Larkin.

Then as the minister headed the car into the ruts and put on the power and relaxed at the wheel, the little car hurried along toward town very efficiently.

"A middle-of-the-week sermon, eh, Doctor? Subject, 'Some Advantages of Ruts.'
But you'll have to give me the outline."

"Not liking ruts, Larkin, you've got out in the rough, and you're making slow going of it too, boy. O, I know. You started with a good job in that shoe store, with a chance to work up in the business; but not liking the steady, plodding ruts that get you somewhere, you quit. And people got to know you. You have got a few good jobs lately.

Noticed it? Agent and commission work, with nothing steady about it! The reason
I picked you up today was because of a talk Banker Swenson had with me yesterday. It was about you. He said that he had had you picked out for a good job in the bank, with opportunity for advancement. But he didn't like them. You were always changing, always going from a better job to a worse. Yet the banker had known your father and liked you. Do you know what else he said?"

Larkin shook his head.

"Mr. Swenson said: 'I haven't seen Larkin at his church work for some time now. The job I have for him demands a trained moral and religious character. It's going to be one of great trust. Larkin doesn't show that he cares.'"

There was a long silence as the little car shot out of the last end of the rut on to the paved city street. Larkin had been doing some serious thinking. He looked back in the direction of the frozen road. He recalled the jolting of the car out of the ruts.
He looked into the face of Dr. Carr, a man of commanding influence in the religious world, happy and enthusiastic.

"I guess I need to get into a real, first-class rut," admitted Larkin. "I'm going to wear grooves in the sidewalk from my house to the church, Doctor. And I'm going to tackle a real job and stick to it and get into a groove that will land me right in the bank. You watch me do it."

Dr. Carr did. He saw Larkin become regular in his habits. He saw the day when Larkin, because of his plodding reliability, made a path for himself into the bank. He became the most dependable worker Dr.
Carr had in his church.—F. K. Brown, in Forward.

EDITORIAL

Focal Points of a Preachers' Meeting

Nearly one thousand pastors representing the various denominations of Ohio met in Columbus recently in what was the Eighth Ohio Pastors' Convention. Brother O. C. Starn, one of the Brethren preachers present, writes briefly concerning the convention in another department of this paper. We wish to mention some of the points of emphasis of this great gathering—points which are of universal interest because they are so vital to Christians everywhere.

First, the ministers seemed motivated by a desire to know the will of God. That was the quest of the convention with regard to the various problems facing the churches and with which the pastors are being baffled in their local fields. To know the will of God was a sentiment expressed in song and prayer, in discussion and address. It was the first note sounded in the convention by the Moderator, and that proved to be the key to the convention spirit. The Moderator said, "As pastors of Ohio, we are assembled in convention not to legislate so much as to listen in the place of hearing so that we may the better know the will of God and how to do his work most effectively. We are here not to argue . . . , not to patch up some platform on which we may unite temporarily, but rather to seek to know the mind of Christ and yield to his spirit and leading in the larger things of the Kingdom." It was not to be expected, in so large a body of ministers and with such varied denominational slants, that all would arrive at the same conclusions with regard to what the will of God was in the various matters discussed, but it was inspiring to note the serious purpose everywhere prevailing. And many a pastor went to his home, not so much agreed with his fellows, perhaps, as to what the will of God was with regard to some particular problem, but resolved to seek more sincerely and persistently that sovereign will in all his tasks. What do we need more, as laymen and ministers alike, than just that high purpose? With that as our aim, with the Holy Scriptures to enlighten us and the Holy Spirit to guide us, we shall all make more worthy progress in accomplishing the commission of Christ.

A second outstanding note was the need of a revival of spirituality among church members—ministers and laity alike. Bishop Theodore S. Henderson said: "We are trying to evangelize our communities with an unevangelized church. I am more deeply concerned with the spiritual shallowness of the church membership than with the spiritual ignorance of the people outside the church." We certainly do need a church membership more set apart and consecrated, more fully devoted to the Lord Jesus, and to his standards of worship and of conduct. That spirit is one of the distinguishing marks of the truly Christian community and ought to be more widely manifest on the part of our churches today. But it seems sadly lacking sometimes even among the church's leadership. Bishop Henderson cited evidence out of his experience to show that "not five per cent of the office-bearers in Ohio Protestant churches pray regularly in their homes; Ninety-five per cent of our children are growing up in prayerless homes. And then," he said, "adults seem to feel it an indoor sport to criticise the religion of young people. The characteristic thing about the religion of youth is that it so much like the religion of the parents." If the bishop's observation is true, one of the most urgent needs of the cause of Christ today is a revival of religion in the hearts of vast numbers of church members.

Third, there was a call for a deeper passion for the lost. This naturally grows out of a revival of spirituality. The more sincerely men love their Lord, the more will they love and be concerned about the safety of their fellowmen, even those who are godless and given to sin. And until they develop that concern, that passion for the unsaved, they will not approach the fulfilment of their Lord's commission. And Bishop Henderson declared that "there is absent from the Protestant church today a deep spiritual concern for the salvation of other people." The urgency of a revival of this evangelistic fervor was one of the most frequently echoed notes in the convention. Rev. C. L. DeBow insisted that "We are not going to win the world by a program of legislation or by organization, but by the power of a new passion. When we get that we may have a new pentecost." But when this "redemptive passion" comes, he said, it is going to "be born in us when we are on our knees." He reminded his hearers of the passionate prayer of Moses in behalf of his people, and then urged: "Go into your study, close and lock the door and get down on your knees and talk with God about your own people as Moses did. Mention by name those who need your prayers." That passion must then be communicated to the entire membership and from among them select and instruct those who can go out into the homes and carry the message of saving grace to the people, most of whom never come to the church."

Fourth, it was strongly urged that the church should adopt a genuinely Christian attitude toward social problems, such as marriage and divorce, the morals of the home, sex hygiene, gambling, recreations, Sabbath observance, etc. Various voices were raised urging the importance of a more jealous guarding of the institutions of marriage and divorce. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman said, "The Catholic church has made marriage a sacrament; too often we Protestants have allowed it to be the sport of fools." And he insisted that "The Christian church can recognize no other cause for divorce than the scriptural one; if a divorced person comes to me to be married, I ask him if he is the innocent party and if he says 'yes,' I say, 'Show me the court decree.' Don't let the size of the fee influence you—it's dirty money."

The fifth point on which our interest was focused was the encouragement of fellowship in a great Christian brotherhood and loyalty to denominational groups. No one talked organic union, but many urged the necessity of interdenominational cooperation and fellowship; that gives the church power to combat organized evil. The place of denominations was recognized and loyalty was urged to one's own church. One feature that encouraged this loyalty was the denominational fellowship luncheon period, when each group called its members together at an appointed place for dinner and fellowship. On this occasion the ministers of the Church of the Brethren very kindly invited the ministers of the Brethren church, which invitation was accepted and highly enjoyed. The spirit of fraternity was so marked that no one could tell which had ever been "conservatives" or "progressives", for all were one in the bond of Christian fellowship and in loyalty to the ideals of Dunkerism, and all shared the feeling that the Dunker church has a mission in the world today. Such fellowship meetings ought to be promoted in other districts, as it is the purpose of some Ohio ministers to endeavor to have further fellowship gatherings in this state. This occurrence was to us one of the most significant single features of this notable convention.

This convention having been a distinctly Ohio affair, it may be that some in other parts of the brotherhood will not be particularly interested in the convention as such, but the focal points which we have mentioned are of vital interest to all Christians and need to be stressed in every Brethren church. Moreover it will be encouraging to learn that in a gathering of such varied types of ministers and of denominations, the most pronounced notes of the convention, notwithstanding an occasional minor note to the contrary, had such truly scriptural ring.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength" is the only way the Christian can have that sufficient-plus power that will give the sense of security in the midst of the storms of life.

Brother O. C. Starn has very kindly given the brotherhood a brief report of the recent Ohio Pastors' Convention held at Columbus, but inasmuch as the leading editorial deals with certain phases of it, we will not remark further about it.

Christian Endeavorers should not fail to read their page this week. Brother Riddle has two brief messages, and a report is given of the special Christian Anniversary program of the Ashland Endeavorers.

Dr. C. F. Yoder's informing letter tells of very successful Christmas services in our missions in Argentina. Nine baptisms were administered in Rio Cuarto over the holidays, and a ten days' revival was announced with a Mennonite missionary doing the preaching. They are also making use of the Vacation Bible School idea.

Brother G. E. Drushal, superintendent of the Riverside Institute and mission at Lost Creek, Kentucky, reports the Sunday services steadily increasing. The highest waters in years have recently visited the Lost Creek mission, inundating the campus and flooding the cellars. The electric light plant was fortunately saved.

Dr. G. W. Rench, president of the Board of Evangelists for the Indiana district writes a communication to the pastors and people of that conference, setting forth clearly and in a fine spirit the duties of this committee and the plans that have been adopted. Again, we say, it is evident that this committee purposes to function.

Brother A. E. Whitted writes of his work at Beaver City, Nebraska. Two have been added to the church since last report and the finances have kept up well in spite of the difficulties the farmers are having in that section. Aside from the various special features reported, he tells of a new Junior organization that has been added to the equipment of that church. Such always mean promise for the future church.

Sister Percy L. Yett writes a very interesting story for the children and is to be found on the Mission page. Parents should urge children to read or they should read to them, both the original stories appearing from time to time on the Mission page and those in the regular "Boys and Girls" column. If we are to have regular and interested readers of the Evangelist in the future, we must encourage children to start the habit of reading the Evangelist while they are in the habit-forming age. We ask the help of parents, teachers and pastors to this end.

Brother L. A. Myers writes from Morrill, Kansas, where he has been pastor for six months and has not only been well received but has begun reaping the harvest of souls, four having been baptized and three awaiting the rite. His closing of his five-year pastorate at Hudson, Iowa, was brought about suddenly, through the bank failure, which caused a severe financial loss to practically all the Brethren people of that community, including the preacher. He left amid many expressions of love and confidence in which he was held by the people of the church and community.

We are pleased to publish a notice, accompanied by a picture of the principals, of the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Brother and Sister Daniel Culp of Nappanee, Indiana. We pay our respects to these aged people who have successfully steered their bark together for so many years. When we learn of such occasions we are reassured by the thought that possibly not so many marriages after all are entered into on a short time basis, as newspaper records would lead us to believe, and that the many splendid people who remain companions throughout life are not the ones who fill the headlines of the daily press. We congratulate Brother and Sister Culp.

Brother Freeman Ankrum, pastor of the church at Oak Hill, West Virginia, writes that in spite of much sickness in the community which has hindered attendance, the church continues to make commendable progress. Two members have been added to the church by baptism, the finances were never better and a move has been launched for the building of a new house of worship. The congregation has outgrown the old structure, so that a new and adequate building is considered a necessity to the future of the church. From a clipping from the "Fayette Tribune" we learn that the proposed new building will be of a style of architecture that will immediately identify it as being a church building." We congratulate them on their high purpose. The blessing of God has been upon the Oak Hill church in a marked way because, as it seems, both pastor and people have had a mind to work. We appreciate also the interest Brother Ankrum has taken in extending the influence of the Brethren Evangelist in his parish.

February 27th is Benevolence Day, when you are asked to make an offering, or rather two offerings, one to the Brethren Home to be sent to Henry Rinehart, Flora, Indiana, and one for the Superannuated Ministers to be sent to J. J. Wolfe, North Manchester, Indiana. Every one should read the articles in this issue concerning the need and make an offering such as you can feel at ease about. We are sure Brethren people are responsive when we can get a message to their hearts. A good sister sent us a ten dollar check in response to our appeal in behalf of the "Aged Minister Reduced to Two Meals Daily", and asked us to fill in the brother's name and send it on to him. Of course we are glad to do this and thank this sister in behalf of the unnamed aged minister, but let all remember that this minister referred to is representative of a whole list of men who are largely dependent on the pension they receive from the Superannuated Ministers' Fund. Let us stand by them. And don't forget that splendid institution at Flora, Indiana; do for it the best you can.

WILL THEY BE GOOD?

"Some of the theaters in New York City have become so daring in the indecencies of some of their plays that Mayor Walker last week invited the managers of the most important theaters to a conference in which he made it plain to them that unless they themselves suppressed these excesses, the city would have to take rigid measures in doing so. The mayor declared that the idea of censorship was repugnant to him but that conditons had now grown so bad that relief must be had in some way. The theater managers promised to be good, and it will be interesting to watch to what extent they keep their promises."—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

That reminds us of the promises we used to get from the liquor interests before they were outlawed. Perhaps the movie as such is not exactly in the same class, but uncontrolled and uncensored, it poisons the mind with as disastrous results as the liquor traffic ever did the body. We can only hope the movie can correct its own evils. But can the leopard change his spots?

An interesting tribute to the worth of the Sunday school movement in Japan comes from an editorial in the "Japanese Times" of November 23, one of the great periodicals of that nation. The occasion that elicited this comment was the campaign for funds to erect a central Sunday school building in Tokyo. It is as follows:

"The instrument which the Sunday school children of Japan is using during these days is a humble one. They are selling pencils. But the ideal they strive for is a great one. No one questions but that the ideals of Christianity, pure and unscarred by denominational or historical controversy, are ideals which will better the life of any country. The precepts taught in the Bible particularly in the New Testament, are of an elevating character and adherence to them means happiness and prosperity to the people. This is not said at the expense of moral teachings of other religions. Parallel with Christianity in Japan are Shintoism and Buddhism. Both these religions have a code of moral teachings that are very high. But it must be admitted that it is the Christian faith which has always done and is now doing the most for the children; and it is through the children of today that the happiness of tomorrow is made or marred."

Benevolence Day Offering for Aged Ministers and the Brethren Home

The Superannuated Ministers

By B. H. Flora

I have been asked by the president of the Superannuated Ministers' Fund to write on this subject. But what shall I write? So much has been written, and so much has been said. The Scriptures are full of commands and suggestions.

Some say there is no need of a minister receiving aid these days. He should save his money. But the trouble is that he never got much, and he never can. The minister of Christ's church can not make a success of winning dollars and winning souls at the same time. The minister who cannot make the sacrifice of surrendering his opportunity of competing with the business world will lose out in his activity as a minister and pastor. If a minister has an inheritance he may succeed in keeping a portion of it for his old age. I do not say that a man who quits the ministry necessarily loses his religion, but he loses his high calling in Christ Jesus. I have in mind a minister who did that thing, a man who was a special friend of mine, and when he came to the end of the way, he told me he made the mistake of his life when he quit the active ministry. A minister may buy stocks and bonds, or deal in real estate and oil, and get legitimate gain, but he will lose in his competition with Satan for the souls of men. If the allurements of the big salary drives a man from field to field, or from one denomination to another, he may not lose his self-respect, but he will lose the power that comes to one wholly devoted to principle.

What has all this to do with my subject? Just this. The minister who loves his church better than anything else and has no inheritance, and gives all his time and energy to the work of the Gospel ministry, simply cannot lay up money enough to provide for a home and the necessities of life in his old age. I know a minister who in organizing a Brethren church borrowed the money to pay expenses, and worked on an old sawmill many days to pay back what he had borrowed. The same minister sold his comfortable home and spent every cent in preparing for the ministry. In his first charge he got the magnificent sum of $290. When traveling from church to church he carried his lunch and horse feed so that he might pay his rent upon his return home. The family never complained, but often longed for the day when they might have things like other people. The minister is old now; his race is nearly run. He is still holding his place in the church as a pastor. He has baptized many people; organized a number of churches and some of the best supporters of our college and other institutions came into the church under his ministry. But do you wonder that he has laid up no money for his old age?

Paul said in Acts 9:15, I have not written these things that it should be so done unto me; for it would be better for me to die, than that any man should make my glorying void.

But the above example can be duplicated, nay, rather, can be applied to many of our old ministers and their wives. We are being asked through the columns of the Evangelist to contribute to this worthy cause. In my judgment there is nothing that we can do that is more praiseworthy. These old people know how to appreciate our generosity, and they deserve it.

REMEMBER, ON FEBRUARY 27

When you are asked to give to the support of

The Superannuated Ministers

AND

The Home for the Aged and Infirm

of our household of faith

That request is based on Scriptural Grounds

"Thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase . . . and Levite (the minister), and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come and eat and be satisfied."—Deut. 14:28, 29.

"Contributing to the necessities of the saints; given to hospitality."—Rom. 12:13

"If any provide not for his own, and especially those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel."—I Tim. 5:8.

Our Bounden Duty

By H. F. Stuckman

The time has almost arrived in our church calendar, when we must make our contributions to the support of our aged ministers. In doing this let us remember, that all that we do is right in line with the spirit of the age. Every great corporation is paying pensions to its retired workers. Yet they say corporations are heartless. This spirit of wanting to help those who are unable to help themselves, after lives of usefulness, has reached out even into the animal kingdom, and here and there are institutions, erected and maintained to care for dumb animals who have served their day, and are no longer able to bear the burden and heat of the day. Are not men more valuable than many animals? Why not then recognize our bounden duty as Christians, and supply the necessities of life to those who have fed us so faithfully of spiritual manna?

While we do this, we are advancing no more rapidly than other denominations about us who are caring well for their retired ministry. We doled out to them very sparingly in the days of their active service, so much so that with the demand made upon them of travel, family and material with which to carry on their work, it was physically impossible to plan against the day of old age. It is a hard-hearted, cruel child who will in his own plenty deny his own flesh and blood the bare necessities of life, after they are worn out. How can a child turn aside his own parents who have given him life?

Here we are in a world of plenty, and if we are not denying, then we are grantly handicapping these men in their declining years in finding real happiness, because of our unwillingness to give them assistance. At the same time, these have given us spiritual birth. This neglect is not because of our meanness of soul, but because we do not know the real need of every person who receives help from this source.

Let us visualize ourselves in their place, and then from our abundance, separate that portion which we can easily spare, and put it to the disposal of our Superannuated Board for the making happy of men and women, who have served us so well in our ministry in days gone by. Goshen, Indiana.

The Brethren's Home

By A. V. Kimmell

When the Lord was upon the earth in the days of his flesh, his work of healing and helpfulness and even the raising of the dead seemed to be so distributed as to represent all ages of life, youth, middle age and old age. The Lord Jesus very especially blessed the children, he worked with and taught mostly with the class which we call the middle aged, and to old age he paid tribute, approaching reverence, which has made the later years of life a crowning benediction to those whose service has been a long time his.

The Brethren's Home has as its objective the creation of a place which can in every way be called a "Home." It is primarily for the purpose of contributing to the comfort and happiness of those who have spent their lives in the Christian Ministry, of which service there is none worthier. This aim has never for one moment ceased to be the plan and purpose of the Board of Directors and the blessing from the Heavenly Father upon this work has enabled its management to fully provide and splendidly equip an institution which is now ready to take within its doors any of the ministers of our denomination who are in need of the care and protection which it offers. If there is in the minds of any of the Brethren that this Home is in any sense a "Poor House" an open minded visit will change that attitude. Since the Home has been opened for business and not a sufficient number of ministers have come in to use its facilities, the Board has admitted older people not ministers nor minister's families but in every case those coming to the home are either paying their own way or are having it paid in some way for them. Therefore the thought of living on "Charity" never should be connected with this Home. True, the ministers or their wives shall never be charged a cent, but they have over and over again earned more than the Home has to offer. 1 Tim. 5:17 "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and in doctrine."

The present program is working toward making the Brethren's Home self supporting and the liberal gifts of the people are needed to bring this about. Remember that in a few years this place will be much more in demand than it is today and by getting everything in readiness now we will be in a position to take care of the growth that is bound to come. The gifts made now will multiply in value under the present system of investment so that real progress is being made from year to year.

Meeting Our Obligations

By W. I. Duker

A certain self-respect causes all people to take cognizance of their obligations as well as of their other material blessings. To the past do we owe many debts. The present, in which we live and move, is largely the result not of our own endeavors and struggles, but rather of the efforts of those who have lived and suffered in the past. He who reads no history of the past, who has no sense of what has gone before, lives a selfish life now and will bequeath but little to his posterity. The church of today is the result, not of our efforts but rather the work of those who have lived and struggled before we came upon the field.

We were speaking to a gentleman the other day and with a certain sense of pride he asserted that he bought only when he had the money to pay. That he had made it a plan in his life to owe no one. That all of his debts were paid and that he would make no debts in the future unless he was able at that time to discharge the same. All this sounds very fine. Too many of us undoubtedly acquire obligations with all too little thought as to their liquidation. But the one sobering thought that should not pass our serious consideration is the fact that many of our debts and obligations are not of our volition. Before we are able to speak the name "mother" we are so greatly indebted to her that all we may do in our lives will poorly repay our obligation to her. We speak of "father" as of one whom we owe much, but long before we can determine the face of our father as differing in the least from the face of another we are helplessly and hopelessly obligated to him for life. Yes, our obligations are not all of our own making, yet they are just the same our debts and should be met with the same sense of personal obligation as are our debts to the butcher and baker.

All this has been brought to our minds that we might not look upon our Superannuated fund as charity or privilege. In the place of charity, it is honest debt. In the place of privilege, it is honest obligation.

The church of today comes to us as a haven of refuge because men of yesterday toiled and struggled that men's sins might not separate them from the love of God. We speak much of the Brethren church. Of its distinctive doctrine. What may we ask, have many of us done to produce a Brethren church, to secure a distinctive doctrine? Many of us have done just the opposite. We have been mighty careless about this distinctive doctrine. Our sermons and our practice have torn down, rather than conserved this heritage of our fathers. It is high time that some consideration be given those who have given to us that which has cost so much and has blessed so many. Not charity but debt!

Now, brethren, we may grow eloquent with flights of oratory, we may praise our fathers with long perorations and with much display of intended support. But this is the time of the year in which coal, warm clothes and sustaining food, are more fitting. A merchant was telling us the other day that a questionnaire had been sent out by a wholesale house asking the retailer's desire in the disposition of certain goods. At the close of the series of questions was this rather striking suggestion: "If you vote, 'Yes,' say it with orders." So may we say, "If you feel that our responsibility to those who have labored before us is a just obligation to say it with 'dollars.'"

Goshen, Indiana.

"What seems to grow fairer to me as life goes by is the love and grace and tenderness of it; not its wit and cleverness and grandeur of knowledge—grand as knowledge is—but just the laughter of little children, and the friendship of friends, and the cosy talk by the fireside and the sight of flowers and the sound of music.—John Richard Green.

Mountain Tops on the Horizon---II

By Elder G. W. Rench

The plan of enforcing man-made rules in the church, such as wearing prescribed articles of dress, was a great source of distress in the 80's as well as the rules themselves. He who reads the history of the Brethren people of that period, and until this day, will have to keep that in mind, if he would read intelligently. One of the mountain peaks on the horizon of the Brethren people was that of "church government." The issue was clearly drawn in the discussions which followed the epoch-marking effort of the progressive leaders. At the Dayton Convention, a group of churches calling themselves "congregationalists" were received into the body because of similar views on church polity. To have attempted to agree on any other policy would have ended in hopeless confusion. Thus, by the several small groups of kindred thought and action coming together, our form of government was fixed without even much debate. See Hol-singer's History, p. 541.

Congregational church government, as adopted by the leaders, and conferences of our movement, was no new experiment. Many of our sister denominations are enjoying large growth under that form. There are no more and no worse "church troubles" under the congregational than under the Ecclesiastical plan. The reason is just this: "We have a PERFECT STANDARD of church life in the New Testament, but we do not have a perfect church." The Jerusalem church as portrayed by the Book of Acts is as nearly perfect as could be made out of imperfect human beings. It was under the guidance of divinely inspired men. But its membership was human, striving constantly toward that PERFECT STANDARD set forth in the Scriptures. "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking bread, and in prayers" (Acts 2:42). Herein are the major things of the Christian life. Many of the necessary things in church management are incidental, mere expedients, to be used as spirit-filled souls may have need of them.

As a church, our GOOD HOUSEKEEPING PROGRAM has had a rough road to travel. This is largely because we have never given ourselves to the task. We have given much concern to things the Lord and his chosen apostles have already fixed—items of belief, and as usual, with the same divisive results—instead of giving ourselves to our tasks, "taking care of the church of God." We would fain go to the religious hand-me-down establishments, stocked with fads and freaks in church management, from Quaker to Catholic, rather than get our lessons from the awful cost of breaking with ecclesiasticisms in the early 80's. How quickly we have forgotten the truism: "Like causes produce like results."

I submit a condition, and not a theological, hair-splitting theory. The local church's standing in the community, its reputation, if you please, demands a vast deal more of our attention than we have ever given it. A new church established in a community, like the new neighbor just moved in, must build up a reputation according to certain well established standards. Its reputation is its capital. It can not accomplish the Lord's work in that community without it has a good name. In this respect, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." The New Testament, in its teachings, has a wonderful concern about the congregation's reputation. I am chagrined that we have not given more attention to our task of GOOD HOUSEKEEPING. We have stood by and permitted a church's reputation to be swept away, a reputation which meant its capital, and which it took years to build up, without attempting to throw it the life-line as provided in the New Testament Scriptures. We are adepts at legislation, but how we limp, and falter when it comes to execution; and all because we have not trained ourselves in the latter. Look at the weak and struggling and dying congregations, all because their reputation has been shattered. Discipline among us is a lost art. We've bungled the effort in so many instances, that instead of it driving us to our New Testaments and our knees, we are content to stand aloof and bewail the weaknesses of congregational church government, when we ought to thank God that one congregation involved is enough, without asking and requiring neighboring churches to become involved in the difficulty. We are told that family discipline is all but gone: that whatever authority is found in the home is now vested in the child and not in the parents. Perhaps this has some bearing on the situation in good church management. It's so much more to our liking to stand by and see two or three quarrelsome people tear down the reputation of the church than for the proper parties to take the club out of their hands. The elders do not care to disarm the scrappers, because their friends will never tolerate disciplining the trouble-makers, if it does destroy the usefulness of the congregation. So they figure the only way out is to wait for the undertaker. But in the New Testament church IT WAS NOT SO. Among the many clear-cut passages read 1 Corinthians 5. There are some people who have no more business in a church than they have in a bank. Let them alone and they will wreck either, or both.

What is to be done? Why, RETURN TO NEW TESTAMENT TEACHING and ORDER.

First, Cease this harping in conferences and elsewhere that because of our congregational form of government we can do nothing. That's not true. Some of the greatest denominations, and those growing most rapidly, have that form of government. Congregationalism holds back no one. Of course it is not a machine to give some one a job whether he merits it or not. Any preacher has full reins to show what he can do, and that without other congregations interfering with his plans and ability to build up the largest church in the country. It says to every minister, "Come on, get in; the water is fine."

Secondly, inaugurate a teaching campaign showing from the Scriptures the SINFULNESS of harboring

"tearing-down" influences in a church whether that be a couple of quarreling members, or a full-fledged boss. In sermon and Bible reading, in prayer meeting, or missionary meetings let the truth be emphasized that the church's reputation in the community is at stake, and it is a sin, outstanding, and brazen, to permit the Lord's work to be torn down without the membership sharing in the sin. It may take years to combat an evil and destructive influence, especially if such destructive influence flaunts its money or social standing as an argument that it shall be tolerated. Keep on praying, and THEN TEACHING.

Thirdly, Untangle the badly mixed threads of church-administration by which the duties of various church officials lap and overlap, causing confusion and conflicts, until the wise official reaches the conclusion that the best way to have peace in the camp is to do nothing. We have spent but little time in our work pointing out the distinctive duties of the New Testament elder, and the New Testament deacon. We have tried to get rid of it all by electing a moderator. I have promised to do what I can in my next.

Shipshewana, Indiana.

How good a thing it is to be able quietly to wait! The thoughts of God come up from eternity and to eternity they stretch! It may be that not until I enter the world of light shall I know all that God is doing to me and for me now. Then he will tell me why the way was so long and hard; why I had to part with much I loved with all my love; why other men were rich and I was poor; why some seed never came to blade or ear to full corn in the ear. His thoughts are very deep, but his love is most tender. In thought I cannot follow him, but his love shines and sings and comforts on every hand.—Joseph Parker.

The Christian who prays to men will not get an answer from God.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Privilege of Prayer

By E. F. Byers

(Preached at the Union "Week of Prayer" Service in Great Bethel Baptist Church, Uniontown, Pa., January 5, 1927)

TEXT: Lord, teach us to pray, even as John also taught his disciples. Luke 11:1.

Everybody ought to regard it a great privilege to approach God in prayer. To pray to God is to intercede for one's own self and for others. It is a petition that evil may be averted and that good may be obtained.

In the 4th chapter of the Hebrews, at the 16th verse, the Apostle Paul, after describing Jesus as our High Priest, our Friend and Redeemer, says: "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

And Jesus, in his sermon on the mount says: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

A man, in order to be saved, must pray. A man may reach heaven without much school education, or books; or without a great amount of wealth or knowledge, but no man can reach heaven without prayer. Prayer is the life breath of a man's soul; without prayer no man can live a Christian life. It is said that Montgomery has given the most beautiful and perfect definition of prayer that we know anything about in the Hymn from which this verse is taken:

"Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice,
Returning from his ways;
While angels in their songs rejoice,
And cry, 'Behold, he prays!'"

In our Scripture lesson we read of two men who went up into the Temple to pray, and one of them made a prayer like this: "God be merciful unto me a sinner." That was a good prayer; that was a prayer, not of the lips but of the heart; that was worship, not of the bending of the knees but a bending of the soul in confession and repentance; that was going up into the courts of the Lord, not to be seen by the multitudes, but with an earnest desire to worship God in spirit and in truth.

In that prayer, bowing down and smiting his breast, he manifested a guilty conscience, a deep penitence, a profound humility, a sincere confession, and an earnest desire to be a better man.

The words that he uttered were few but in them he condensed the whole force and fervor of his soul. And I want to say to you this evening if there is a man or woman in this house that will make this prayer, "God be merciful unto me a sinner", he will go to his house with a pardon in his soul; the peace of God in his heart, and this home going will be the happiest homegoing he ever made.

My friends, if we want our souls saved, we must pray; if we are to resist the world, the flesh, and the devil, we must pray. Prayer is a mighty power. If we read the history of the world we will see that nearly all the great and noble men that ever lived were men of prayer.

Look at Moses, who by prayer, in the hardest trial of faith, saved Israel from the wrath of God. He pleaded and prayed until he had power to turn aside, as it were, Heaven's red hot thunderbolt, for God had said, "Let me alone that I may destroy them."

"But while justice heard him plead,
It could not seal the sinners' doom."

And so, after a mighty struggle, he obtained power with God; spanned his strong arms of faith around six hundred thousand people, and bound them to the altar, and God in mercy re-elected them and promised to go with them as before.

Look at Elijah; after long and powerful pleading he shut and opened heaven.

"O wondrous power of faithful prayer,
What tongue can tell the Almighty grace;
God's hands are bound or open are
As Moses or Elijah prays!"

Look at Richard Baxter, one of the greatest reformers that ever lived; a man who spent days and nights alone with God in prayer, and who, after the anointing of the Holy Spirit, sent a river of the water of salvation over a vast portion of England, converting hundreds and thousands, and instead of the places where he preached being a hell on earth, there was not a house where prayer and praise could not be heard.

Luther and his fellow workers were all mighty in prayer. They prayed and pleaded with God till they broke the spell of ages and laid thousands subdued at the feet of Jesus.

John Knox grasped in his strong arms of faith and prayer all Scotland. His prayers brought fear and trembling to the heart of the wicked Queen Mary. It is said that she dreaded his prayers more than she dreaded his prayers more than she dreaded an army of ten thousand men, and she had need to, for she knew that when John Knox undertook anything in the name of Jesus, it was either victory or death.

The very night that John Knox spent in prayer in his garden, praying and weeping on the cold damp ground, crying, "O God, give me Scotland or I die," deliverance had come. God heard his prayer and before the morning had dawned Queen Mary was dead, and then Scotland was free from papal tyranny.

John Smith, it is said, would come down to breakfast with his eyes red with weeping over lost men. God gave him such a vision of a lost world that he often exclaimed, "I am a heartbroken man."

Then look at pleading Stoner, Carvosso, Fletcher, and many others, each of them led thousands to Jesus.

It is said that John Vassa, with his one talent, sighed and wept, and fasted and prayer for sinners and visited from door to door, telling the story of Jesus and his Love, and hundreds and thousands were influenced to the cross by his prayerful life and consecration.

Look at the life of Finny and Moody whose faith, preaching and writings have stirred more than half of America and sent a wave of salvation over the British Isles!

These and many others that we could mention have left the print of their feet wherever God gave them a chance to live and labor.

And right in our own day and generation we have living exemplifications of the power of faith and prayer. Men and women who plead the power of God, who plead the love of God, who plead the mercy of God, who plead the life of Jesus, and the saving grace of the Holy Spirit. Men and women who put their strong arms of faith and prayer around sinners and bind them to the blood stained cross, and cry:

"Lord, hear my prayer, hide not thy face,
O let my cry come up to thee:
Lord, bend thine ear, I plead for grace,
O set the sinner free."

My friends, think of how Jesus prayed for you and for me; how he spent the night, or nights in strong pleadings and tears. When we think of the tears of Jesus we generally associate them with the raising of Lazarus, and with his weeping over Jerusalem, but fail to remember that his prayers were also bedewed with tears, not only with "Crying and tears", but with "Strong crying."

When on the Cross he prayed, it was with a loud voice that he cried, "My God, My God! why hast thou forsaken me?"

Look at his prayer in the garden of Gethsemane! Not only did he earnestly pray but it was so increased in intensity that his sweat was, as it were, great drops of blood. Can any imagination picture greater earnestness than is expressed in such language?

My friends, if Jesus thus earnestly prayed for us, for you and for me, why should we not pray for ourselves and for others? If he, the innocent, the sinless, the perfect one, prayed thus, why not we, the sinful ones who were born in sin and shapen in iniquity?"

Well, indeed, may we exclaim in contemplating the spirit of true prayer, "Lord, teach us to Pray!"

I suppose one of the most important conditions of effectual prayer is a sense of need. We are to feel our need of Divine blessing and ask, not for something we wanted yesterday or last week, but for grace to meet our present needs. To come to God without a definite end, without a deep heart-felt need, will gain for us no real, lasting benefit.

When we pray we ought to bring our burdens and lay them down at the cross. We ought to carry, in strong faith, in simple but comprehensive language, and in tenderness and earnestness of spirit, the very needs of both body and soul.

True prayer is feeling the burden of the soul's present

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

JESUS CURES BLINDNESS—John 9:1-12.

He would not share in the quibbling as to the cause of the man's blindness; it was sufficient for him that the man's presence and condition was an occasion for the manifestation of the function and mission of God in the world. Jesus, the Son of God, was the light of the world and in him was no darkness at all; not even physical darkness or blindness could persist in his presence.

TUESDAY

THE TESTIMONY OF EXPERIENCE—John 9:13-25.

The bitter attack of the Pharisees could not confuse the man nor cause him to doubt the fact that he had received his sight at the hands of Jesus. The man who rests his faith on his experience in Jesus Christ is unassailable.

GROWING FAITH—John 9:35-41.

The blind man both believed and defended his faith in Jesus as the healer. This led to a fuller revelation, which he readily accepted. It is ever true; the more we come in contact with the Lord Jesus, the richer our faith in him becomes.

THURSDAY

WALKING IN THE LIGHT—1 John 1:5-10.

It is not enough to recognize and acknowledge Jesus as the light of the world, we must obey the light. Only so will we appreciate and rejoice in the light, thus fellowshiping with God.

FRIDAY

THE LIGHT OF THE GOSPEL—2 Cor. 4:1-6.

The Gospel is a glorious light because it reveals God in the person of Jesus Christ, who comes into the hearts of those who believe in him.

SATURDAY

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD—John 8:12-20.

It seems strange that the Pharisees should have complained at Jesus witnessing to himself being the light of the world. It is the very nature of light to shine, to bear witness to the fact that it is light. Light that is not manifest is not light.

SUNDAY

CHRIST GIVES LIGHT—Isa. 42:1-7.

With prophetic eye Isaiah saw the mission of Christ, the chosen of God, as the light-giver to the Gentiles, the one who should spread the knowledge and judgment of God into every part of the world, as quietly, but as certain as light penetrates to every nook and corner.

need and carrying that burden to him who is all-powerful and all-gracious.

A few years before Dr. Chas. H. Spurgeon died, a poor woman came to him in deep distress. Her husband had fled the country. After she told the story, and a very sad one it was, Mr. Spurgeon said: "There is nothing we can do but to kneel down and cry to the Lord for the immediate conversion of your husband," and the two knelt down and prayed that the Lord would touch the heart and life of that man, and bring him back to his home. A few months later, she came to Mr. Spurgeon again with a man whom she introduced as her husband. He came back a converted man. On comparing notes they found the very day on which they prayed for his conversion he had picked up a stray copy of one of Mr. Spurgeon's sermons and read it, and the truth in that sermon went home to his heart and he at once cried to God, and God heard his prayer and saved him from his life of sin, and as soon as possible he returned to his wife.

That man and his wife were received into Mr. Spurgeon's church and were active Christian workers when Mr. Spurgeon died.

My friends, it matters not where a man may be, he can lift up his heart to God in prayer. Neither does it matter as to the attitude of the body. A man may stand like the penitent Publican, or kneel like the Godly Daniel, or prostrate himself like the devout Isaiah; the Lord cares not for the bodily attitude, if the spirit is sincere and the heart is honest. And yet, I think it wise, even in secret to kneel in prayer, for the fact is, "Reverence of attitude contributes to reverence of thought."

Every Christian ought to have a place to pray, and the best place is where one can be alone with God. Jesus says, Matt. 6:6. "When thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and when the door is shut, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."

My friends, it is a good thing to have a place where one can resort to for prayer; and it is important that we have a place where we can shut ourselves in alone for secret devotions. No one can live a Christian life without prayer.

"Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air,
The watchword at the gates of death;
He enters heaven with prayer."

Every Christian ought to have a time to pray, a set time. Habit is a thing of great importance. It makes duty easier and pleasanter, besides, it is the only safe way, because if we do not form habits we are almost sure to give up the practice of some duties through neglect. It is only by prayer and Christian service that we can live a life increasingly like our Master.

A young lady, the daughter of a very wealthy infidel in England, attended a religious service one Sunday evening. The preacher in his sermon unfolded the loving heart of Jesus. He told the story of the cross; and at the close of the service she went to the altar asking God's people to pray for her. God answered their prayers and she was made happy in the love of Jesus. The news of her conversion reached her father before she got home. The father ran out and met her at the gate, and what do you think that father did? He took her by the arm and with a horse whip he whipped her out of the gate and told her to be gone, and with many curses he forbade her to return. That young lady went out from her home weeping in the darkness of the night, but God was with her. A poor widow took her into her home. All night she prayed for her father, and her father spent the night in great fear and anguish. In the morning he could not stand it longer and he fell down before God and said, "O God, if there is a God, come and save me; this anguish of soul is more than I can bear." And God was merciful even to that infidel, and salvation came to his soul.

As soon as he could, he sent his servants out to seek and to find his daughter, and to invite her to come back. On her return he again met her at the gate but this time he threw his arms about her neck, and with tears streaming down over his cheeks he cried, "O daughter forgive me, forgive me; I'll go with you to heaven." And that is not all! for that same night her mother also decided to be a Christian, and through the power of prayer the three started on their way to heaven.

My friends, it is a glorious fact that God does answer prayer, not always directly, but always directly or indirectly.

Rev. Dr. Liefchild gives us the account of a mother who had prayed for her son for a great many years, but not until after her death did he yield his heart to God. While in tender years her son submitted to her directions, but as he grew in years she saw to her great sorrow, no fruit of all her anxiety and prayer. When the hope so long delayed began to make her heart faint, she formed a new purpose with the one end in view—the leading of her boy to Jesus. She fitted up a room for his own use and bestowed upon it all the care and taste she could employ to make it a place for his comfort and a suitable place for study. She furnished it with books of an instructive and lively description as well as with some of a decidedly religious character. On his taking possession of this apartment, as his own, she begged him to kneel down by her side, and there, with strong emotion, she poured forth a most fervent prayer for his best and truest welfare. He was not, however, overcome even with this exhibition of a mother's love, and only one part of her remarkable and touching prayer at all arrested his attention; it was, "that in this very room he might seek and find the God of his mother and give himself entirely to his service."

Years passed away in total disregard of his affectionate mother's concern for his salvation, and all recollections of her special and earnest prayer for him seemed to have faded from his mind.

A few weeks after his mother's death, his father found it necessary to take a house nearer to his place of business. On the day of removal, after superintending the transfer of the goods, the young man felt a strong desire to take a last look at the room so full of the associations of his past life, but now to be forsaken forever. He visited every room and silently took a long farewell of his mother's room where so many prayers for his soul had been made. At once the thought of the prayer she made for him, when she gave him the room, for his own use, came to his mind, and he said to himself, "Mother, Mother, is it possible that you can know how I have lived in forgetfulness of all this?" Then kneeling down he said, "O God, let that prayer of my mother's now be fulfilled," and he gave himself to God.

My friends, am I speaking to any this evening that are neglecting their duty? If so, I plead with you to give an answer before you go to sleep tonight. In the inner chamber of your heart decide to let Jesus come into your soul.

God, in his nature, is Love and love is a warrant, a pledge, that he will hear and answer and bless his people in answer to prayer.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for February 27)

Making the Community Christian

Explanatory Note—In the first issue of the "Evangelist" in the new year the lesson that should have been published in that issue was unwittingly omitted and the next lesson was published, thus putting the lesson two weeks in advance of the date for which it was to be used, which is generally considered too far ahead. However, since we have gotten started with this schedule, we will continue until such time as we find opportunity to drop back without further inconvenience to our readers. But we will correct the wrong date which has been carrying for several weeks above the lesson, and apologize for the error. This lesson is correctly dated, though it comes out two weeks in advance of the Sunday for which it is to be used.—EDITOR.

Scripture Lesson—Gal. 5:13-25.

Devotional Reading—Eph. 6:10-20.

Golden Text—Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather even reprove them.—Eph 5:11.

LESSON LIGHTS

Christian Freedom

Paul told the Galatians that they were free from the Law, but that they were not free to do just as they please. Liberty is not license. We are not to use our freedom as license to indulge our lower impulses, but to live in accordance with the law of love. Martin Luther once said, "A Christian man is the most free lord of all, and subject to none; a Christian man is the most dutiful servant of all, and subject to all." G. Campbell Morgan says, "The freedom of the gospel consists in slavery to the law of love. The emergence from bondage through Christ is a passing into a sphere of life in which all the power should act under the dominion of the true motive."

The Flesh versus the Spirit

No one needs to be convinced that there are two forces at work striving for the supremacy in man—the good and the bad. And when the good is re-inforced by the Holy Spirit, the conflict is all the more desperate, though the outcome is not in question, when the individual makes use of the power of the Spirit. "The Spirit strives to hinder you from obeying your evil nature, and your evil nature strives to hinder you from obeying the Spirit, for they are at warfare one with the other, and prevent your doing what you would." The flesh, the carnal nature, is in constant rebellion against restrictions. It would have a free rein. It cries "personal liberty" and chafes at laws that interfere with his "rights." But that sort of "liberty" leads to all sorts of excesses and wickedness. It injures self, tramples on the rights of others and flaunts the will of God. That is the occasion for all laws that have been enacted. The lower nature must be restrained, and he who feels that restraint irksome is the one who needs it, and he is indeed "under the law." He who is led by the Spirit, is not under the law, for he will not disobey it, and so does not feel its restraint.

An Illustration

J. N. Greene, in "The Portrait of the Prodigal", recalls the interesting account of the visit of Mr. Spurgeon to the Library at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he saw a fine statue of Lord Byron. All the world knows something of the tragically sad career into which Byron was hurled by sinful indulgence. He has well described his own condition in these words, written on his thirty-sixth birthday:

"My days are in the yellow leaf;

The flowers and fruits of love are gone;
The worm, the canker and the grief
Are mine alone!"

Mr. Spurgeon says the librarian instructed him to stand in a certain position and look upon the statue of Byron. He looked and said: "What a fine intellectual countenance! What a grand genius he was!" The librarian then led Spurgeon to a position on the other side and told him to look again. Then there seemed to be in the face of Byron such a scowl and dreadful leer as Milton would have painted into the face of Satan

THE OLD HYMNS

*There's lots of music in 'em—the hymns of long ago,
And when some gray-haired brother sings the ones I used to know
I sorter want to take a hand—I think of days gone by—
"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand and cast a wistful eye."*

*There's lots of music in 'em—those dear, sweet hymns of old,
With visions bright of lands of light and shining streets of gold.
And I hear 'em ringing—singing where Memory dreaming stands,
"From Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strands."*

*They seem to sing forever of holier, sweeter days,
When the lilies of the love of God bloomed white in all the ways;
And I want to hear their music from the old-time meetin's rise Till "I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies."*

*We never needed singin' books in them old days—we knew
The words, the tunes of every one—the dear old hymn book through!
We didn't have no trumpets then, no organs built for show,
We only sang to praise the Lord "from whom all blessings flow."*

*An' so I love the good old hymns; and when my time shall come—
Before the light has left me, and my singing lips are dumb—
If I can hear 'em sing them, I'll pass without a sigh
To "Canaan's fair and happy land, where my possessions lie."*

—Frank L. Stanton in the Atlanta Constitution.

when he said, "Better to reign in hell than to serve in heaven." "Do you think the artist designed this?" Spurgeon asked. The librarian answered: "Yes, he wished to picture two characters—the great, the almost superhuman genius, and yet the enormous mass of sin that was in his soul."

The Temperance Reform Movement

In these days of stiff conflict with the nullificationists it is enheartening and reassuring to take a backward glance and see how far we have come, for some are disputing about the progress we are making. The following quotation is from a Sunday school quarterly for 1910: "Are we aware how great was the task when the modern temperance reform began? Are we aware what an unheard of fanaticism was John Wesley's rule against 'buying, selling or drinking, except in cases of extreme necessity,' in 1743? Are we aware that it is not yet much more than a hundred years since the first effective modern temperance document, 'A medical inquiry into the effects of ardent spirits upon the body and mind,' was published by Dr. Rush, of Philadelphia, in 1794, and less than a hundred years since the first permanent temperance society was founded in Saratoga County, New York, and less than seventy years since the first great temperance movement—the Washington movement—in 1841-42? We must be aware of the history of the movement before we can tell whether it is making progress or not, and how much."

If the temperance reform movement has lost some of its momentum of late, it is because the people laid down on the job when Prohibition was enacted, and church people are primarily to blame. They said, the battle is won, and imagined enforcement would take care of itself. But when enforcement meant "pinching" some of the most prominent and influential people in the communities, it soon became unpopular and the howl was great. Moreover the memory of people is so short that they are even now forgetting much of the misery caused by the saloon, and the young people of the teen age, many of whom are being accused of widespread drinking, never knew the ravages of the traffic and are inclined to be indifferent—an attitude which will become more pronounced if it is not counteracted by education. We must return to intensive education and keep it up.

THE CHRISTIAN CONCEPTION OF EDUCATION

Education is a process the object of which is to direct aright all human thinking. Its realm includes two fields, one of fact, the other of appreciation.

When education is limited solely to the realm of fact it takes the form of imparting information. When education includes the realm of appreciation, then the knowledge of all facts, whatever may be their kind or character, is so imparted to the student as to make surer for him the meaning of the universe and to reveal more clearly to him the beauty and the harmony of nature and thus to quicken within him the conviction that every duty must be performed because he lives in a moral universe over which there ever reigns a holy and righteous God.—Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, in the Watchman-Examiner.

A Pressing Need

Endeavorers! during the Christian Endeavor Week, did you talk about the above theme, "The Pressing Need?" The imperative need at this hour is adequate pledges and payments made to care for the support of our teacher in Kentucky. This is our great objective. Our pledges have not been sufficient this year. This is a yearly task which we have assumed. Think! your committee is in need of your support and the fine folks in Kentucky who will come in contact with our teacher, need her influence and instruction. The need can be stressed from two angles.

Officers, present the need. Christian Endeavorers cannot fail. They will not fail. Help to relieve the need.

E. M. RIDDLE,
Member of Booster Committee.

Bring the World to Ohio

Ohio Endeavorers have been talking for at least four years of the possibility of entertaining the International Christian Endeavor convention. It has been understood for several years that this great convention would be held in Cleveland, with its magnificent Municipal Auditorium, seating a minimum of 12,500.

The date of this convention affords a fine opportunity. The Fourth of July presents an excellent time for a Civic-Religious demonstration. This convention will open on Saturday, July 2nd, hence it ought to be comparatively easy for young people to be in Cleveland over Sunday and Monday, which is the Fourth.

Memorize the dates July 2-7, 27, in Cleveland, Ohio.

Christian Endeavor Fellowship at Asnland

Christian Endeavor at Ashland is pressing forward in an encouraging and a promising manner. Two societies were organized at the beginning of the school year. The senior group consists of high school students; the president is Malcolm Miller. The young people's group is composed of college students and older young people; the president is Miss Dorcas Bame.

A happy social was enjoyed in the social rooms of the new church building on Thursday night of Christian Endeavor Week. Being a visitor in Ashland at that time Brother Geo. H. Jones of Muncie, Indiana, attended and briefly addressed the young people.

In the absence of Pastor Chas. A. Bame, who was conducting an evangelistic meeting in Philadelphia, the local Endeavorers volunteered to take charge of the regular Sunday evening service on February 6th. The program was planned and directed by Harry Gehman of Twelve Mile, Indiana. Miss Evelyn Coons of Long Beach led the congregational singing while Maynard Meader of the same church presided at the organ. A flute solo was given by Miss Mary Garrett of Muncie, Indiana.

Three talks were based upon John 15:1-16, which was read as the scripture lesson by Paul Bauman of Long Beach. Progressive fellowship with Christ was stressed in this order: As Servants by Paul Leslie Garber, representing the senior society; As Friends by Miss Mildred Furry of Johnstown; As Brethren by Anthony Peters of Sergeantsville, New Jersey. A quartet consisting of Bertram King, Philadelphia; Maynard Meader; Paul Bauman and Joseph Waters, Elyria, Ohio, sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought." The sermon was delivered by Frank Gehman, elder brother of the leader, his subject being "Fellowship with Christ in the Faith."

If other churches had as helpful a program Christian Endeavor will go forward and both young and older people will be the better.

*That day is best wherein we give
A thought of others' sorrows;
Forgetting self, we learn to live,
And blessings born of kindly deeds
Make golden our tomorrows.*

*O give me Samuel's ear
The open ear, O Lord,
Alive and quick to hear
Each whisper of thy word,
Like him to answer every call
And to obey thee first of all.*

Lessons from Great Americans Psalm 33:12-15

Just eighty years ago on the eleventh of this month, a little boy was born in Milan, Ohio. This little boy was named Thomas Alva Edison, but little did his mother guess that her little baby boy would become such a great American that he would be known by everyone.

When Thomas Edison was just a small boy, his father lost his money and became rather poor. Thomas could not go to school, even so his mother taught him at home. She did not have any trouble teaching her little boy, though. He loved to study and read, and when he was only ten years old he began to read very hard books, books that a lot of big folks do not understand. You see, even at that age Edison was showing that he loved to work.

When Edison was twelve years old he started earning money by selling papers. Guess what he did with his money. Do you think that he kept it all for himself? He surely did not. He began helping his folks by giving them a good part of the money he earned. Edison sold papers on a train. It did not take all of his time to sell the papers. Between stops of the train he found quite a bit of time for reading and studying. He even collected some chemicals and set up a little laboratory in a corner of the baggage car, and there he experimented. He liked to combine chemicals to see what would happen. That is really pretty dangerous business and got him in trouble several times in his life. So you see Edison was always busy working at something.

One time he had a bright idea. He decided that he would write a paper for himself. He talked to the editor of the paper that he was selling and the editor decided to help him. He gave Edison some old type and so Edison fixed up a small printing set in his corner of the baggage car and there he printed a paper of his own. He told the news of the train and sold his paper to the people who worked on the trains. He had quite a good business. One time his chemicals caused some trouble on the baggage car, so he had to stop working at selling papers.

That may have worried Edison but it did not stop him from work. He had gotten interested in watching people telegraph, so he decided to study all about telegraphing. He worked hard at this and experimented with a boy friend of his at setting up some telegraphing wires and a system of their own. One day Edison saved the life of the little daughter of the station master. The station master wanted to do something to repay the boy. Edison was then about sixteen years old, so he offered to teach him how to telegraph. Edison soon learned all about sending and receiving telegrams. He became very expert at this work. He traveled about to many places in the United States and was even in Canada once for a while working at this kind of work. He seemed to like it very well and he surprised folks at different places by being able to take messages faster than anyone else.

Edison was not satisfied to work just during the hours when he was on duty at the telegraph office in some place. Instead, he worked when he was off duty too. He studied the telegraphing system and soon he began discovering ways of improving it. He found several big improvements that could be made so that now telegraphing is very much more efficient than it used to be.

Later Edison invented the Victrola, although it was not called that when he invented it. Also he invented the moving picture machine, and many other things. Now this is one of the important things that all little boys and girls should remember about Edison. Edison has worked and worked hard. He was always doing things. He spent his time not trying to get out of work but trying to see how much he could do. He did not just happen to do things. He worked until he could do the things that he wanted to do.

Under the Southern Cross

The year 1927 begins with good prospects in our work in Argentina. The progress made in the year just past encourages us to expect still greater success in the year before us.

The Christmas season here as at home is the time of greatest animation as all the people, young and old, enjoy the Christmas "fiestas." In Alejandro this year the program was given in the open air with an attendance of about five hundred. Here in Rio Cuarto there were a few over three hundred, which is all that our hall will hold.

In addition to the Christmas program it is the custom in all our missions to have a Sunday school picnic which is also an enjoyable occasion. It is common also to have a watch night meeting on New Years eve. The Catholics have a midnight meeting and always have a manger scene. One of the Catholic churches in Rio Cuarto this year advertised a program of comedies and games for Christmas eve, accompanied by a raffle which all were urged to patronize. The worldly crowd advertised all night dances for several nights.

The closing days of the old year and the first of the new were joyful days here because of the baptism of nine more converts. We are now beginning a ten days' revival campaign with the help of the superintendent of the Mennonite missions in Argentina, Brother T. K. Hershey. That will be followed by our Vacation Bible School and then our Workers' Conference, and then I hope to hold meetings in some of our other missions.

Dear Little Folks of the Evangelist

By Mrs. Lora Yett

Perhaps you would like to hear something about our faithful dog in Huinca Renanco, South America. He is a shepherd dog, used very much in this country to care for sheep. His name is Sirio, which means "Dog-star." He is a very intelligent dog as you will know by the little story I am about to relate.

Here at our Mission Station we have a very large "patio" or enclosed porch or lattice work with doors which we lock at night and we keep the dog inside this. Every room of the house has a door opening into this large porch. When we are alone the dog sleeps against our door, and keeps very good watch over us.

Miss Nielsen, one of our Rio Cuarto Missionaries, has been a guest of ours for several days, and so Sirio has placed himself in front of her door every night, as though he felt a responsibility in protecting our guest. But a strange thing happened the other night, it was a night for a meeting, and one old lady a "Native", came quite early, and suddenly a great storm came up; no others could come out to the service, and she could not return to her home. So we had a prayer and praise service with our family, our Native Worker, the old lady and Miss Nielsen in attendance. Then we fixed the old lady a bed in the Mission Hall, as our other rooms were occupied. We do not always feel so sure about our Native guests, as they are so very much inclined to take things if they have a good chance, but we did not feel any fear with this old lady. However, Sirio was going to be on the safe side, so he forsook the door leading to Miss Nielsen's room, having decided that she was less questionable than the newer arrival; stationing himself at the old lady's door. Very early in the morning, the storm having somewhat abated, the old lady decided to leave before the rest of the household was awake, but Sirio would not permit her to leave that room until the "Master" of the house was up. Don't you think it fine for your missionaries to have such a faithful protector?

When Brother Yoder was with us holding special meetings, Sirio furnished the inspiration for the following poem:

Poor Sirio

I am a wretched canine
 And "Sirio" they call me
 But nothing could befall me
 Worse than the fate that is mine.

'Tis true I love my master
 And do all that he tells me,
 But love of truth impels me
 To tell of my disaster.

'Tis true, I'm kindly treated
 And suffer not from hunger,
 But O that I were younger
 And not so much depleted.

You know that dogs in talking
 Move head and tail together,
 And that no matter whether,
 They're standing still or walking.

They show appreciation
 Of any common blessing,
 Their wagging tails expressing
 The extent of their elation.

*But I am mutilated!
 I cannot talk with gesture,
 Because my tail investiture
 Was cruelly amputated!"

*P. S.—This was done before we arrived on the scene.
 Huinca Renanco, Argentina.

LOST CREEK, KENTUCKY

Attendance at services Sunday the 16th, was 125. One year ago it was 91. Attendance the 23rd, 94. One year ago it was 91. The 23rd was our coldest day for the winter, seven degrees above zero.

The worst flood which Riverside Institute has ever experienced came on us the first days of Christmas week. On the campus the water was from two to six feet deep, and four basements flooded, three of them completely. At the midnight hour the light plant had to be taken out of the basement to save it. Had it not been for a lot of boarding pupils with us, it would have been much injured, if not destroyed. With their help it was gotten out of the basement just in time.

You do not wonder then that there is a small building going up on the highest place on the campus and the machinery set above the highest high water mark known. This building is a real necessity, and is not coming any too soon.

Fortunately our foot bridge, and the county bridge were not injured any, though the water touched both of them. No bridges of importance were lost. Some small foot bridges were taken out by the flood.

Work on the new graded road is progressing as fast as the weather will allow. So much rain, freezing and thawing makes it difficult to get much done now.

Brother Early preached Sunday, the 23rd, to a full house. For some Sundays now, the chapel room where we hold our Sunday services has been full. There was one confession Sunday, a school boy.

Mrs. Early is kept busy these days nursing the sick. Colds and accompanying ills predominate. Fortunately we have not needed the services of a physician yet this year. The road work has broken our telephone line down, and we are just now in a very unfortunate condition for telephone service.

Mrs. Dye, our assistant matron, is not on the sick list. At this time she is improving.

If there are Christmas letters and packages that have not been acknowledged as soon as they should have been, the big waters will doubtless account for it. We had a hard time getting our mail in and out.

Mrs. Slack has been invited by one of Riverside's teachers, now teaching in a coal camp, to come to his place and give a series of lectures on the Bible. This is a splendid opportunity to spread the "Good News" of a real salvation, as provided for in a real supernatural revelation of that plan as recorded in that Book, the Bible. Pray for us that we may be kept in his will day by day.

A NOTE FROM ARGENTINA

An Endeavorer in Temperley, Argentina, writes that she has been able to get in touch with eight Christian Endeavor societies in the republic, two English-speaking societies and six Spanish. Several of the societies are in Buenos Aires, and one has been formed in a country town called Huinca Renanco. The society in the Scots Presbyterian church at Temperley has held joint meetings with some of the other societies with the idea of establishing a bond of fellowship between the groups. The societies have been working in an isolated way and suffer from the lack of Christian Endeavor helps of all kinds.

Whether they will or no, there is a true sense in which Christians are the world's Bible.—The Presbyterian.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

MORRILL, KANSAS

Dear Evangelist Readers:

It has been some time since we have given the Evangelist readers a letter of news concerning our place of work and activity. When we wrote our last letter we did not have any idea that the next one would be from Kansas. Our work was going well at Hudson at our last writing. There was some sickness which resulted in death, and these were hindering some of our most prominent workers from taking their places. Our plans were to remain with the Hudson church for the coming year, because this church is one of our small churches and we felt they were in need of all the help we could give them. But conditions arose in an instant that not only changed our plan, but changed conditions in the entire community. There had been reckless investing, and careless crediting together with many loose methods of doing business, all of which had their culmination in the closing of the Hudson Bank, which was the only community medium of exchange.

When this came only a few days after our salary had been received, we were left with fifty cents. The Lutheran Minister had to ask a friend to give him money to buy a two cent stamp. Iowa is a great state but these are some of the conditions which many people in that state have had to face within the last two years. For more than a month the people talked in terms of loss and no plans for the church could be considered. The Brethren who felt the burden that had fallen upon the church with all its funds tied up kindly reminded the pastor that he could be relieved if he so felt, for it looked impossible for the church to meet its obligations. Morrill, Kansas was looking for a pastor and we became the successor to their retreating servant of God, Rev. Staley.

The closing of our work September first brought to an end our pastorate of five years with the Hudson church. We received a number into the church during this time, also ministered to their needs in many cases of sickness and death, as well as officiating in their marriage solemnities. Our relation was of the most pleasant nature. The last days of our stay with Hudson made us feel more than ever that here is a people whose heart and interest is in the cause, through the way they revealed their fidelity to their pastor. We were presented with many gifts of appreciation and remembrance, besides the sum of $65.00 which were presented as expressions of friendship and appreciation by people in the church and out of the church, in the form of personal gifts. This was all in spite of the financial conditions which existed. The people of Hudson will be long remembered by us as we go through the varied expressions which shall make up the remainder of life.

We are now located in our new field. Since we have been here our time has been employed in getting acquainted, becoming adjusted to conditions and taking care of the work in general. The first seven Sundays were cloudy and rainy, with muddy streets and also muddy roads. When we came to Kansas, we found that this state was still in the mud. We hope she will get out by and by. But it seemed so long before we could get to the country and meet many of our people.

We will soon be entering upon the sixth month of our pastorate here. During this time we have received four into the church and have three to baptize which made the good confession in a ten-day service we held in November. We are finding a very kind and considerate people in Morrill. We have enjoyed our work here and hope that as we become better acquainted a larger fruitage will be the result of our service. We were very kindly remembered at Christmas time by many expressions of kindness through gifts and otherwise. The W. M. S. presented us with a set of dishes which were very highly appreciated. While many of the customs here are different from those with which we have been made familiar, yet we expect to enjoy the future and hope for the reaping of a large harvest here in this field.

HIGH LIGHTS FROM OAK HILL, WEST VIRGINIA

"The Switzerland of America"

Some time has elapsed since a report was forthcoming from this corner of the Lord's work. It is indeed fortunate that the progress of the work at large cannot be judged by the number of reports in the Evangelist. Should that be the case we are a decadent people. Since the last regular report from here we have received two by baptism. There are others that have indicated a desire to become members of the Brethren church, but we have come to the conclusion that there has been altogether too much haste in taking in members, which may only resolve itself into a haste in leaving in after days. Our aim here is "not the biggest, but the best." Our Thanksgiving offering this year was the largest since we have been on the field, and much interest was shown in the home work and the Kentucky work especially. The last Sunday night of November the Methodist and the Brethren people met in a union meeting in the large new Methodist church, when we gave the lecture on Evolution that had been given in the Brethren church several months before. The church was filled with the largest crowd since the church had been opened to services. This lecture has now been put in booklet form. Brother Sickles spent two days and a half with us here in November, speaking one night at Gatewood and one night at Oak Hill. A large audience listened to his lecture and viewed his pictures. His visit was very much appreciated and the fellowship was splendid. It was our privilege to take him back under the mountains for over two miles and a half for his first experience underground. He soon made himself at home with the pick and shovel at the face of the workings. He has a nice souvenir dug out from the depths to take with him to South America.

We have been able to increase the readers of the Evangelist here by a number of new subscriptions that have been sent in from Oak Hill.

A Christmas entertainment was given Christmas eve. The rains fell and the mud in the outlying districts became deeper and deeper but there was a large crowd out in spite of the inclement weather. The program was very much enjoyed by those who braved the elements. We were very well remembered during the Christmas season with numerous gifts and reminders of the seasons.

Our attendance this winter has been seriously handicapped by an epidemic of scarlet fever. This has been light but nevertheless has injured attendance in that there has not been a service but some were kept away by sickness. Many of the members live a considerable distance from the church and walking in the mud is not pleasant. For our Bible study this winter we have been studying the book of Romans. This is the third winter of Bible study. The work at Salem continues with a good Sunday school that is alive and active. Plans have been made for a meeting this fall in Oak Hill. In fact a man to hold the services was engaged last summer, and as he is not a stranger here the people not only of the church but of the town are commencing to look forward to his coming. We anticipate a great outpouring of blessings at this time under his leadership. Our finances are the best they have ever been in the history of the church, I am told by the treasurer, Brother Jim Duncan. This is indeed encouraging to both pastor and people. We are now contemplating one of the most advanced steps of recent years if not in the history of the organization. At a recent business meeting steps were taken to erect a new building. This will be erected upon the location where the present building now stands. We have as good a location as could be desired in the very heart of the city.

Our present building is inadequate for our needs, and we contemplate a modern brick building. This is a long way for these people to go in view of the fact that they are not wealthy but all working people. Five years ago they had been without a pastor for a year or more. We came on the field four years ago this fall and it was necessary to build a parsonage which was done and those who have had the opportunity to see it, know it is one to be proud of. From no services, to a pastor on the field, the erection of a parsonage, and now the contemplated new church building seems to me to be making commendable progress in four years of concentrated efforts. Our standing as a church and pastor in the city is all that could be desired. Personally we have conducted twenty-six funerals, the majority of whom were not members of the Brethren church and have been asked to conduct others that we were unable to take care of. Have officiated at thirty-one wedding ceremonies, and been asked to officiate at others that we were compelled to refuse. The majority of these couples were not members of the Brethren faith. We feel that the building proposition is a large undertaking but with the way the people are tackling the task the Giants of the land will be overcome. This willingness brings joy to the heart of a pastor. We ask your prayers in behalf of the work here that we may continue to merit the blessings of him who has promised never to forsake or to leave.

FREEMAN ANKRUM, Pastor.

DISTRICT SUPERVISION

Each district conference has planned to effect a closer union of its congregations. The object in view is a most worthy one. This is set forth in the Manual of Procedure, Chapter 2, Article 3, as follows. "The purpose of the district conference shall be the promotion and preservation of Brethren churches and missions within the limits of the district. To accomplish this purpose it shall render every aid possible by the consideration of all work pertaining to the church and her auxiliaries and the general interests of the church within the district." "THE PROMOTION AND PRESERVATION OF BRETHREN CHURCHES AND MISSIONS." Do you get it? Certainly, the NEED is apparent to all. In forty years of independent congregational action this need has not been approached, much less, met.

Making Plain the Issue

Is it not within the province of some of these Scripturally organized congregations to form a simple organization, as an expediency, to meet this need; and should not all the congregations in the district join in a good work like that? If not all, should not two or three unite their efforts in the "preservation of some church, or mission?" The question of Scriptural authority for such a union need not enter, any more than a verse of Scripture to warrant some one taking children from a burning building. The need is sufficient in both cases. The form of organization chosen by the co-operative churches is the "District Conference." Its authority is set forth in Chapter 2, Article 4. The key phrase therein stated is, "the several congregations forming such Conference and cooperating therewith." Churches wishing to cooperate may do so, but before they can be listed as cooperating, they must say so. The method of "saying so" is provided for in the "By-laws of Indiana Conference. See Article 1—Membership. The board of Evangelists elected by these cooperating churches to assist in executing their wishes are anxious that every church in the district shall put itself on record in this cooperative work, but no force measures will be used, and the evangelists will give you no embarrassments. The Indiana Conference, however, is made up only of such churches and ministers as wish to engage in their district objectives.

Duties of Your Chosen Evangelists

Our principal duties are to execute the wishes of the cooperating churches in their expressed objectives. We propose to do the best we can with our limited facilities to "carry on."

(1) An outline of local church efficiency in chart form is on the press, and our secretary, Rev. G. L. Maus, will mail a copy to each church, and each pastor, and secretary of the churches in the district. Now, the first step in the program of the churches is to hang these charts where they may be consulted frequently by every department of the church. The pastor is to keep his copy in his study, and the secretary paste his in his record-book of permanent documents. The pastor will need his in all the board meetings. Cooperating churches, will you co-operate? Of course, you will. Then, select one or two standards you will try to reach this year. Will you do that? Here's where we are going to find out: write your evangelist, brother pastor, on what standards you have set for yourselves, and if you feel the need of suggestions, ask for such help. Here's the rub. You preachers, how much of this "district supervision" talk we have been hearing for thirty years do you mean? If you don't mean enough to write your evangelist one letter, believe me, you will hear from me in no uncertain way when I make my report. It takes money to travel among the churches, and the Conference has no funds, but a lot of things may be accomplished by a few letters. At least, let us do what we can until funds are provided to do more.

(2) Let each preacher post himself on THE LINE OF MARCH of Chapters 1 and 2, of Manual. An agreeable surprise awaits you. Inform yourselves on the work of your own conference, and then help make that work effective. There is no excuse for ignorance of our own plans. Don't you love good order in the work of the church—the ordination of ministers, for example? Then post yourselves on the steps required, and let us quit our trifling with orderly procedure.

Keeping at It

(3) The standing committees, likewise should get busy. I have failed to see a line in the Evangelist about your work. It is not the editor's fault. For example, why should not the Ministerial Examining Board seek to secure attention to its work—TO COMPEL ATTENTION TO ITS title for the Evangelist on "The Call of Young Men to the Work of the Church"? What if no other Board has written, That famous "old stool of do nothing" some of us used to hear so much about in prayer meeting, ought to be kicked out by somebody. Can't you Brethren do it? Why should not the Mission Board get before the district with some constructive appeals for its work? Some sympathetic, heart-to-heart talks BEFORE CONFERENCE would make the work so much more pleasant in the Conference sessions. I know, for I have tried it. A healthy missionary spirit in the congregation in reference to our own district will help solve that quota problem, as nothing else will.

(4) What about our summer activities, with their various meetings? Will you count your work well done, if you get one announcement in the Evangelist, and that just prior to the meeting? It has been computed that it is 80 per cent more difficult to get the ear of the public on church matters than it was 40 years ago. Without a tremendous lot of noise is made about our summer meetings, what chance have they of succeeding? It's a changing world in business affairs, but we have met each chance as it comes in a creditable manner. Is not the work of God entitled to a fair share of our consideration? Brethren, BRETHREN, can, if they will.

Churches assigned me (Warsaw District) are Elkhart, Goshen, Brighton, New Paris, Milford, Warsaw, Dutchtown, Sidney, Roanoke, Ft. Wayne, Campbell, Michigan, Bethel, and New Troy. Let us hear from you concerning your problems. G. W. RENCH.

MR. and MRS. DANIEL CULP

CELEBRATE SIXTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Culp of Nappanee, Indiana, celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary, Monday (date omitted from local paper clipping which the Evangelist office received, but it was in the month of January). A family dinner at noon was followed by an informal reception in the afternoon and evening, with a number of relatives and friends present for a pot-luck supper at 7 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Culp received numerous floral gifts and other remembrances of the occasion. A delightful feature of the evening was a concert by the First Brethren Sunday school band, directed by James Gentzhorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Culp were born in Elkhart county. The former will be 80 years old April 22, and the latter 81, April 4. Mrs. Culp's maiden name was Anna Dell.

Mr. Culp is a Civil war veteran, having served in Company D, 142nd Indiana volunteers. Both he and his wife have always been active in the work of local patriotic organizations, being charter members of the G. A. R. Post and the Woman's Relief Corps respectively. Mr. Culp has served as commander of the local G. A. R. post. Both he and his wife were charter members of the First Brethren church of Nappanee, and he has served as an officer of the church since its organization. They have resided in Nappanee for forty-five years.

COLUMBUS FRATERNALISM

The Eighth Annual Ohio Pastors' Convention was held at Columbus on January 24-27 in Memorial Hall. This was the largest attended convention ever held, there being present 974 pastors from all parts of the state.

We were privileged to listen to some great churchmen such as Parkes Cadman, Bishop Henderson and Bishop McConnell. A fine spirit was fostered by these men in the inspiring and helpful addresses which they gave.

Wednesday noon the ministers of the different communions grouped together for the purpose of fellowship during the lunch hour. The Church of the Brethren pastors cordially invited Brethren pastors to fellowship with them which was very heartily accepted. We met in one of the private rooms of the City Y. M. C. A. After the luncheon hour greetings were exchanged. Dr. C. A. Bame was chosen as toastmaster and as usual very acceptably filled the position. The discussion seemingly moved towards the thought of cooperation between the two churches. A fine spirit prevailed in this discussion and the feeling was unanimous that such meetings would bring about a better understanding of one another. The group decided to have a union gathering next year at the Convention and an effort be made to have more pastors present next year from both churches.

The group was composed of three of our own pastors. Dr. G. S. Baer, Dr. C. A. Bame and the writer, and thirteen pastors from the Church of the Brethren. We trust that more of our own pastors will plan to be present next year as these meetings are without a doubt a wonderful help. Thanks to the Ohio Church of the Brethren pastors for their kindness.

O. C. STARN, Gratis, Ohio.

BEAVER CITY, NEBRASKA

I have had it in my mind to write a newsletter from the far Mid-West for some time, but like many of the other busy pastors have allowed other things, and perhaps sometimes things of lesser importance, to crush the impulse. Nevertheless we are kept busy through every month of the year in the Master's work.

Our regular services have kept up pretty well in spite of quite an exodus on account of financial difficulties. The church too has been able to meet creditably every demand, in the way of special offerings, that has been presented, and if you understood local conditions you would count this remarkable, I am sure. Since reporting last summer two have united with the church by letter coming to us from the Norton county church that has for some time been disorganized.

On October 24 we observed Rally and Homecoming with an all day meeting and every service of the day was well attended and proved to be a blessing to all. The day's program was full, beginning at 10 o'clock with a splendid Sunday school, followed by an appropriate address by the pastor. At the noon hour every one enjoyed the Basket Dinner in the basement. At 2:30 all gathered in the auditorium where a brief period was given to devotions and the reading of messages from isolated members, then followed a 40 minute sacred concert by our efficient orchestra. At the 7:30 hour the young women of the Christian Endeavor, assisted by the Orchestra, presented the Kentucky Mountain Impersonation entitled "Cindy's Chance," to a full house and the offering lifted amounted to more than $10.00 pledged to the Kentucky work. So the Endeavorers were more than pleased and the entire audience interested and enlightened in our Home Mission work.

Our Sunday school celebrated the Christmas season by giving two very good programs. One was given on Christmas Eve by the Children's Division of the school with the help of a few Intermediates. This program was a mixture of recitations and Christmas carols and the rendition of a beautiful little playlet, "A Christmas Gift for Mother." This service was rendered in honor of the parents of these little ones and enjoyed by a house full of proud fathers and mothers. On the following Sunday evening the young people of the church presented the dramatization, "Following the Star." This presentation required some 25 characters, who very vividly represented the more important personages at the time of Christ's birth. With the many calls for the time of the young people in their school work and other outside interests, we were almost persuaded to give up, but when the dramatization was given so well, we felt amply repaid for our extra effort and stick-to-itiveness. The "White Gift" offering was received during this service, the amount having been reported already in these columns. At this season the pastor and family were remembered very generously by the congregation, for which we feel grateful. These are the things that help make a pastor's labor pleasant.

We too have a baby organization in our congregation, as Brother Gingrich puts it, since the first of the year. Ours is a brand new Junior Christian Endeavor Society. With this and the other organizations lined up for work we see no reason why the work here in general ought not to prosper and grow. We want an interest in your prayers that such might be true. We rejoice as we learn of progress all over the brotherhood. May our reports for 1927 be the best of all.

A. E. WHITTED.

WHAT CIGARETTES DO

Here are some homely truths that should set cigarette users to thinking. They are not mere words; they tell facts, which can be demonstrated in every community. Here they are:

Cigarettes

Soften the Brain
Degenerate the Body
Weaken the Will Cause Crime
Wreck Homes
Kill Men
Damn Souls.

The cigarette is an enemy to society and every individual member of it except the man who profits from its sale. Let us treat it as such.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE LITTLE RED HEN

Once upon a time there was a little Red Hen who lived in a little house in the edge of the woods. Away off in the woods in another little house lived the old Mother Fox and the Young Fox. These Foxes were very fond of poultry, and had often tried to catch the little Red Hen, but they couldn't. But one day the Young Fox said, "Mother, I'm going to catch the little Red Hen today. You have a kettle of boiling water on when I come home tonight and we'll have her for supper." "All right," said his mother. "You catch the little Red Hen and I'll see that the water's hot." So the Young Fox threw a bag over his shoulder and started toward the little Red Hen's house.

When he got there and saw her at work in her garden he was so pleased that he sat down and laughed. When the little Red Hen heard him laugh she was so scared that she threw down her hoe and ran to the house as fast as she could, and shut and locked the door behind her. The Young Fox waited outside a long time, and finally went to the door and rapped. Now, there was living with the little Red Hen a Rat and a Cat. When they heard the knock the little Red Hen said, "Who will go to the door?" The Rat said, "I won't," and the Cat said, "I won't." "I will, then," said the little Red Hen; so she went to the door and opened it and there stood the Young Fox. She was too much frightened to shut the door, but turned and ran into the front room and flew up to a picture on the wall, and there she sat. The Young Fox tried to get her to come down. He told her how much he thought of her, how he wanted to show her a little looking-glass he had in his pocket, and still she would not move.

Then he ran round and round and round after his tail until the little Red Hen got so dizzy that she fell down plump, and he pounced on her, popped her into his bag, tied up the bag, and throwing it over his shoulder, started off for home.

The day was hot and the road was long and the Young Fox was tired. So when he came to a cool, shady place he thought he would lie down and take a nap. He threw the bag down beside him and was soon fast asleep. As soon as the little Red Hen heard him snore she took her little scissors out of her pocket, snipped a hole in the bag and crawled out. Then she found a stone about as big as she was. She put that into the bag, took out her needle and thread and sewed up the hole and then away she ran for home as fast as her little legs would carry her.

The Young Fox slept on and on. By and by he woke up rubbed his eyes and looked at the sun. "Why, it must be getting late! Mother will be worried about me. What a good sleep I did have!" he said. Picking up the bag he started off for home again. "How heavy this little Red Hen is! What a good supper we will have!" When he came in sight of his house he saw his mother standing in the door watching for him. "Hello, mother," he called "is the water hot?" "Quite hot, my son. Have you the little Red Hen?" "Right here in my bag," he said. So they went into the house, untied the neck of the bag, held it up over the hot water and down plumped the stone and up went the hot water and scalded them so badly that it was several days before they were well. After that, they never troubled the little Red Hen again.—Mrs. A. L. S. Aberdeen.

THE STORY OF HIAWATHA

Once there was a little Indian boy named Hiawatha. His mother was called away from this world almost as soon as he came into it, so his good old grandmother, Nokomis, took care of the baby boy. She lived in a wigwam by the shore of the Gitche Gume' ("the Shining Big Sea Water"). She made a cradle of the linden tree and lined it with soft moss and rushes—for Hiawatha had no little white bed. Nokomis sometimes carried the cradle on her back as she went about her work, but when she had other burdens to carry she hung the cradle with little Hiawatha in it, on a branch of a tree where the wind would rock it. But at night the baby would lie in the wigwam near his grandmother and listen to the sounds of the animals in the forest.

As Hiawatha grew older he went into the woods behind the wigwam to play with the pretty brown cones that fell from the big fir-trees. As he played he scattered about on the ground crumbs from his bread, and the birds and squirrels ate them, and they soon learned that Hiawatha would not hurt them and they would come at his call. Hiawatha called the birds his "chickens."

In the evenings Nokomis and Hiawatha would sit at the door of the wigwam and Nokomis would tell the little boy stories of the moon and stars. He liked to watch the fireflies lighting up the forest with their candles, and to hear about the beautiful rainbow which he believed was the heaven of the wild flowers.

One day, Iagoo, who was a friend of Nokomis, came to visit the wigwam. He said that Hiawatha should have a bow and arrows, and made them for him. As soon as they were made, Hiawatha ran into the forest to show them to his little friends there. When they saw the bow and arrows they were afraid, and hid, but Hiawatha called to them that he would not hurt them.

So he lived among them, and was their friend always, and he grew to be a strong, brave, and gentle man, and was ever good to the weak and helpless.—Mrs. A. B. Nebraska.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

KNOTTS-BLACK—Mr. Ralph Knotts of Vernon, Indiana, and Miss Dorothy Black of Roann, Indiana, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Black, Friday evening December 24th, 1926, at five thirty o'clock, by their pastor, D. A. C. Teeter. These highly respected young people will make their home in Wabash, Indiana. D. A. C. TEETER.

DICKEY-MILLER—Mr. Elmer Dickey of Beaver-Dam, Indiana, and Miss Elvauch Miller of Akron, Indiana, were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. C. Teeter, on Sunday evening, December 26th, 1926, at four o'clock, by the writer. These two fine young folk will reside on the farm near Beaver-Dam. D. A. C. TEETER.

IN THE SHADOW

YOCUM—Ira Elmer Yocum, eldest son of Miles and Katherine Yocum, was born in Kosciusko Co., Ind., near Yellow Creek Lake, on July 23, 1859, and died at his home near Roann, on November 19, 1926, aged 67 years, 3 months and 27 days. In his passing on with the promise of eternal rest in him through faith, he leaves his companion, three daughters, one son, two granddaughters, one great-granddaughter, one brother, one sister and a host of other relatives and friends. He united with the First Brethren church in 1887 under the pastorate of Elder J. H. Swihart and has since lived a true Christian life.

Funeral services held in the Roann Brethren church on November 22, 1926, with D. A. C. Teeter, the pastor, in charge, assisted by Elder George Swihart. D. A. C. TEETER.

SHILLINGER—Leander Shillinger, son of George and Lydia Shillinger, was born on January 10, 1862. He was united in marriage to Mary E. Anderson. Five children came to bless the home. Ethel, Mable, Hugh, Frank and Mildred. Eight years ago Ethel was called from them and their family was broken. Frank followed his sister ten weeks later, and now again, death has entered the home and on December 16, 1926, after four and one half years of patient suffering the spirit of the husband and father has wended its way heavenward, and mother, Mable, Hugh, Mildred, two brothers, one sister, and granddaughter survive him.

He was a member of the First Brethren church of Roann. Few people get more real joy out of the Christian hope than he did. His smiles and patience during these pain-filled months were symbols of that "peace which passeth all understanding," known only to the soul that is anchored in God.

Funeral services were conducted from the First Brethren church in Roann, Sunday, December 19th, 1926, the pastor, D. A. C. Teeter officiating. D. A. C. TEETER.

McCLANNAHAN—Samuel Z McClannahan, son of John and Sarah McClannahan, was born near Hagerstown, Maryland, April 13th, 1854, and died January 9, 1927, at the home of his son, Norman, in Dixon, Illinois. In his early manhood he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Elizabeth Nowell, who preceded him in death 21 years ago. He leaves to mourn his passing two sisters, Mrs. Tobias Haugh and Mrs. William Railing of Milledgeville, Illinois, and the following children: William, Samuel, Norman and Mrs. Ruth Emmert of Dixon and Mrs. Alice Shuck of Blue Earth, Minnesota, 23 grandchildren and one great grandchild and a host of other relatives and friends. Kindness was ever an outstanding characteristic of the deceased and his children have this precious memory to help assuage their grief. "Father was always kind to me." May this beatitude sustain the bereaved. "Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy."

Funeral was held January 12, at the Church of the Brethren, in Dixon and interment was made at the C. B. cemetery on the Lincoln highway, six miles east of Dixon. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by the Dixon Minister, Rev. David Roland. D. A. C. TEETER.

HOOVER—Mrs. Mary E. Hoover departed this life January 25, 1927, aged 82 years, 4 months and 28 days. Sister Hoover was a member of the Mt. Olive Brethren church for nearly 34 years, was faithful and present at services when able. She leaves three sons and four daughters and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

Funeral services at the Mt. Olive Brethren church, January 27, by the writer. N. D. WRIGHT.

WEAVER—Jacob Weaver, son of James and Lizzie Weaver, was born September 15, 1846 and departed this life January 28, 1927, at the age of 80 years, 4 months and 13 days.

Brother Weaver was twice married. His first wife who before her marriage was Miss Francis Wagner, preceded him in death several years, having died in 1896. To this union one child was born. He was married again in 1902 to Miss Emma Spitzer. He is survived by his wife, one son, Charles Weaver and two grandsons, besides other relatives. Brother Weaver had been a member of the Brethren church of Clayton for a number of years. Services conducted by the writer. WILLIS E. RONK.

KLEPINGER—Brother Daniel W. Klepinger, a highly respected and influential man in the church and in the community, passed away December 17th, after a very long and testing illness, at the age of a little more than 64 years. Brother Klepinger was possessed of a most stalwart, beautiful Christian faith which sustained him amid his long suffering and which enabled him to die in triumph. Medical skill and loving hands did everything possible to recover his health, but it was not to be so. He was for many years an outstanding, successful school man in Montgomery county. He also served his church in various responsible capacities, and was for many years the greatly beloved teacher of the Men's Bible class in the church School. By faithfulness, by consecrated service, and by a splendid ability, Brother Klepinger built for himself a most enviable record, which is left as a priceless heritage to his loved ones, and a sacred, inspiring memory to his many friends. His going from us has meant and will continue to mean for years to come a heavy loss to the Dayton church. A devoted wife and four Christian children are left to mourn the going home of husband and father. Brother Bell and the pastor together conducted the funeral service in the church in the presence of a large concourse of friends. WM. H. BEACHLER, Pastor.

HALL—Sister Mary Lou Hall came to Dayton from Boone's Mill, Virginia, eleven years ago. She was a member of the Brethren church at Roanoke, Virginia, for many years before coming to Dayton. On December 17th she passed away at the age of a little more than 71 years. Sister Hall was a woman of rare Christian pulse, splendid character, and a loving, gentle spirit. She was a consistent, loyal member of the Dayton church. She was the mother of twelve children, of whom seven lived to see their mother go home. She has left to her children the legacy of a godly example and true life. The funeral was conducted in the church by the pastor, assisted by R. A. Macher. WM. H. BEACHLER, Pastor.

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE IS YOUR MASTER AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN -

The Common Touch

By Edgar A. Guest

I would not be too wise—so very wise

*That I must sneer at simple songs and creeds,
And let the glare of wisdom blind my eyes
To humble people and their humble needs.*

I would not care to climb so high that I

*Could never hear the children at their play,
Could only see the people passing by,
Yet never hear the cheering words they say.*

I would not know too much—too much to smile

*At trivial errors of the heart and hand,
Nor be too proud to play the friend the while,
And cease to help and know and understand.*

I would not care to sit upon a throne,

*Or build my house upon a mountain-top,
Where I must dwell in glory all alone
And never friend come in or poor man stop.*

God grant that I may live upon this earth

*And face the tasks which every morning brings,
And never lose the glory and the worth
Of humble service and the simple things.*

The Lure of Big Money

If "money talks", then big money commands, and it seems that most men give prompt and unquestioning obedience. But it is refreshing to find that not all men are willing to sell their talents, no matter how big the salary, without regard to the kind of service demanded of them. Recently Senator George Wharton Pepper, defeated at the Pennsylvania primaries for the re-nomination by the wet Mr. Vare, declined an offer of the presidency of the American Baseball League, notwithstanding the $50,000 annual salary which the job carried with it. Apparently, and in the words of newspaper headlines, "Ban Johnson's job does not appeal to Pepper." The "Religious Telescope" comments, "We maintain the high appreciation in which we held Senator Pepper as a result of this decision." Involved though he is in politics of varied flavor, yet we are not surprised that the senator turned down such a job, considering the high leadership he has exercised in religious circles. We would hardly have expected that a man who was considered worthy and was able to lecture young theologs so effectively on preaching would be satisfied to devote his capable faculties to directing a baseball league.

However, people have been disappointed and surprised on previous occasions by seeing men in high station stepping down to a lower plane of service because of the lure of big money, and there is the general impression that all men have their price. It is not true, of course, as the continuance of many men, great and small, in noble callings at sacrificial considerations, bear witness. But there is abundant evidence that the voice of big money drowns all other appeals to vast numbers of men and women today. Our exchange adds: "There are a couple of other men of national capacity as leaders whom we could place a little higher if they had not cashed in on their reputations by yielding to the lure of a big salary for the kind of service that contributes nothing permanently to the advancement of civilization." Not only in high but in low station as well, are men demonstrating how universal and strong is the urge for big money. Money getting is the outstanding characteristic of our age. Big salaries are the supreme quest and by many are considered of highest worth. The money standard sets the scales of value and determines the measure of success in life.

Would that we could shift weights somehow and cause the giving rather than the getting standard to become the measure of life's values, and cause the worth of service to be of higher consideration than the size of one's pay envelope. But such a change would be too fundamental and too radical in its requirements to be brought about suddenly; it would involve a transformation that would overshadow the great Reformation of the 17th century for significance. It is coming, but it will only come as men, with renewed hearts, accept Jesus Christ as Lord and adopt his teachings as their standard of life. It is coming, but only as the voice of Christ falls upon new ears and finds entrance into new hearts. It is coming, not by mass movement, but by the response of individuals to the claims of Christ. That is a part of the gospel. It is therefore nothing more than is to be expected of those who have accepted the Christ and have professed allegiance to his will. When the Christian is thus actuated he is doing only what is his duty to do; he is merely measuring up to the standard that is set for him. He who fails in that, falls short of the standard and is disappointing both to his Lord and to his fellow Christians.

Big money as such has no taint, and may be sought and received by the Christian as well as by the non-Christian, if one is unselfishly motivated and if his effort is honestly and nobly exercised, if indeed money-getting does not possess his life and absorb his thought and energy. But money, large or small, hoarded and cherished, becomes a fagot to light the fires on the altar of idolatry and calls down divine wrath upon the head of the devotee. Only he who gets that he may give, or receives as an acknowledgment of service rendered, is blessed by what he possesses.

Whence Comes Crime?

That is the question many are asking these days. The Church Federation of San Francisco asked it a few months ago and proceeded to investigate with the thought that the discovery of the source of crime would point the way to the remedy. "Could it locate its origins", it said in a bulletin broadcasted at the time, it believed that "much human misery could be prevented." Of course, all the many sources of crime would be a task to discover, but it seems that the one key source that these preachers discovered was what most of us already knew, and what men throughout the country have been saying on every possible occasion. It was due, they discovered to a lack of personal knowledge of and experience with the Gospel of Christ. People are ignorant of the Word of God and of what it has to offer.

As suggested above, in a thoroughgoing investigation there are many avenues through which crime may enter that must be considered. The Washington Voice declares that crime appears in about forty per cent greater volume among aliens than among native-born Americans, and so it is suggested that to some extent crime prevention is a matter of immigration control. Granting the fact as asserted, yet the statement is merely an alibi, a mere passing of the buck. The basic fact is that they are without the Gospel. Another suggestion is that crime is due to an inferior type of people. Wiggam suggests that it comes from a comparatively small element of our population and that the proper control of the life and privileges of this small element would do away with much of crime. He says that "In Indiana nearly all crime is committed by about one hundred families." Therefore, he thinks a wider study of eugenics would disclose an important means of crime prevention. We may grant all they claim for the influence of bad breeding, and the benefit of a legitimate control of the privilege of marriage, but still it is all a mere excuse beside the fact that the vast majority of criminal cases arise from a lack of religious education of the thoroughgoing type that touches both heart and mind. The Church Federation statement says:

"Whatever light eugenists or experts in immigration restriction may throw upon the beginnings of crime, churchmen know of powerful factors working in crime-prevention. Captain Duncan Matheson of the San Francisco police recently said to the Commonwealth Club there: "In this country we have fallen down completely in the administration of justice. We are making criminals faster than we can take care of them. But," he added, "In all of my police experience I have seen but one boy who had graduated FROM BOTH HIGH SCHOOL AND SUNDAY SCHOOL COMBINED come into the hands of the police."

"In this day, when America holds the record for murderers, when our very Republic is being tested, as never before, by a minority advocating nullification of a Constitution they cannot amend, the churchman may well tell Captain Matheson's story to his unchurched neighbor. He can remind the latter the taxes paid for the cost of crime do not go for Sunday school graduates."

If the influence of the church and Sunday school is so salutary and uplifting, if it is effective in preventing crime by inhibiting criminal tendencies and suggest worthy thought and inspiring allegiance to holy idealism and conduct, the fact of such widespread crime is certainly a rebuke to the church's comparative indifference to the country's most needy elements of population—the foreign, the sub-normal and the religiously destitute classes. And any plan for crime prevention is a challenge to the church's best evangelists and educational efforts.

The Baptism of Jesus

There came to our notice in a recent issue of the "Christian Standard" certain reflections of Rev. James Black, the noted English preacher, on the baptism of Jesus. We take pleasure in passing these on to the Evangelist family. Mr. Black says:

How would a pure soul like Jesus treat the baptism of John?... Quietly, and yet with a note of authority, he asked to be baptized. ...

To John's shamed protest that he should presume to baptize, Jesus, our Lord made a reply that is now one of the great sentences of literature: "It becometh us to fulfil all righteousness."

Why did he do it?

1. At the outset, with serious purpose. He thereby aligned himself with everything he knew to be good. ... This baptism of John was the one thing in that age that stood out unmistakably for God and the good. So he publicly identified himself with this crusade for righteousness. He seemed to reason that even if he did not need this baptism of repentance, there were millions who did!

In all these things I love the way my Master did.

2. I said that he aligned himself with everything that was good and worthy. In as serious a sense, he now aligned himself with everything that was evil and worthless. The evil of the world—especially in that thing we call sin—is gathered up in us. When Jesus stepped into Jordan he ranged himself by our side; for he joined himself to the great company of the afflicted of his day. He entered into a glorious community with such broken and defeated souls as we are.

3. Again, in this act, I consider that Jesus linked himself definitely with all the honorable past.

John was the last of the prophets. He was of the order of Elijah and Amos. He was of their breed. ...

It is so easy, so tempting, sometimes so cheap, to condemn the past. ...

I like my Master's way in this. He set out to revolutionize life and religion. But I praise God that his first great act was to step into Jordan and link himself with John, the last of the prophets.

4. Still further, our Lord's act is a gracious benediction on every good convention, and a recognition of all customs or rites that exhibit God.

I can not help comparing the petty little ways of some human souls in revolt, with the way of my Lord. Though he was as original as the very breath of God, he said so simply, "It becometh us to fulfil all righteousness."

EDITORIAL REVIEW

We are glad to announce for the benefit of his many friends, some of whom have inquired about him, that Prof. A. J. McClain is recovered from his recent illness and is about his work again.

Brother H. E. Eppley writes of the evangelistic campaign which he recently conducted in the church at Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, following the dedication of the enlarged church building. He and Brother Horlacher, the pastor, evidently greatly enjoyed their work together, and the good attendance shows the people appreciated the services of the evangelist.

The president of the Hagerstown, Maryland, Christian Endeavor society tells of the activity of his young people and especially of their Christian Endeavor anniversary program. Aside from the wide-awakeness of these young people themselves, it is an illustration of the large place a Christian Endeavor pastor can have in directing and motivating the church's youth.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble supplies us with an original story, both interesting and inspiring, the missionary character in which our readers will not fail to recognize. I wonder if it would not be well for us all to be more constantly alert to opportunities to witness for our Master! Too often we hide our lights under the bushel measure of fear and cowardice.

From the letter of Brother S. C. Henderson, pastor at Fremont, Ohio, we learn that the spirit of progress is still possessing that church and they gave evidence early in January of their appreciation of the services of their pastor. Brother R. D. Barnard led them in an evangelistic campaign of two weeks that resulted in one baptism and four reconsecrations, notwithstanding the handicap of a sixteen-inch snow.

Our correspondent of the New Lebanon, Ohio, church reports progress in various phases of the church's activity. Brother Lester V. King, the industrious pastor, has found a large place in the hearts of these people and has been retained as pastor for an indefinite period. A Junior Endeavor society has been organized; the Sunday school is setting forward with new zeal under the leadership of Brother O. F. Brumbaugh, and the new pastor's study has been added to the church's equipment.

Brother C. C. Grisso, pastor at Warsaw, Indiana, tells us in his interesting letter of a substantial Christmas gift received from his parishioners, of a splendid averaged attendance of the Sunday school, of forty-two diplomas granted for "perfect attendance" and of a very creditable attendance of children at the church services. Thank God for the child-conserving churches! An evangelistic campaign was begun with the highly appreciated services of Brother J. R. Schutz of North Manchester, and concluded by the pastor, resulting in twenty-nine confessions, twenty-four of which have or will be added to the church. Warsaw is enjoying a County Bible school for Teacher Training, of which Brother Grisso is one of the directors.

Brother R. D. Barnard, pastor of the church at Mansfield, Ohio, reports that during the last six months the people of that mission point have caught the vision and have set their shoulders to the wheel to do things. The average Sunday school attendance of seventy-three is good and indicates progress. The splendid financial condition that obtains in the face of the debts they have paid and the repairs they have taken care of points to a fine spirit in this church. The Ohio churches especially will rejoice in this good word, and we believe that if the membership continues to stand by their pastor with the loyalty they have been showing, they are assured of still more encouraging progress. Brother Barnard also speaks of his appreciation of the Fremont church and pastor with whom he recently labored, and of the meetings he conducted for Brother W. E. Ronk's churches in the Miami Valley nearly a year ago.

The mission church at Fort Scott, Kansas, has experienced a real revival and the outlook seems much improved. It was under the evangelistic leadership of Brother A. V. Kimmell, the able pastor of the church of Whittier, California. Brother L. G. Wood, the hard-working and undiscourageable pastor at Fort Scott, reports eight additions to the church and believes the Brethren cause has been greatly advanced by the highly appreciated service of the evangelist, who in turn expresses his confidence in the leadership of Brother Wood in that field. We conclude that the Fort Scott mission is twice fortunate; first in having so indefatigable a worker as Brother Wood for pastor and second to have such a talented and consecrated evangelist as Brother Kimmell in their special meetings. It is encouraging and stimulating to the cause of Home Missions to see such a change begin to take place on so hard a field.

President E. E. Jacobs gives us an interesting miscellany of news this week. One outstanding feature is the item regarding the effort to get Ashland College recognized as a standard school, the only remaining requisite of which being the stipulated endowment. Certainly no more urgent and vital demand faces the church than that of adequately endowing her only school of higher learning. The success of Dr. Bell's mission is vitally related with the future of the denomination and the accomplishment of its mission in the world. It cannot go forward without a church school, and it cannot have such a school unless it is willing to have a first class school, and if it is to have a first class school—a standard school—it must itself furnish the money demanded, it cannot depend on others. Prof. Mason sets forth the situation in a frank and thorough manner in this issue, and it is hoped that every member of the Evangelist family will take the time to read the entire article. It is worth your while; it will help to lay the burden on your heart.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Ashland College---What?

By Prof. E. Glenn Mason, Acting Registrar

To a great many people, the future of Ashland College is extremely important. The future of the College, as to its existence, is not in question. As long as the Brethren church exists, Ashland College will very likely exist as the training school for its leaders. The doubtful part of her future lies in her standing with the educational institutions of higher learning supported by other church organizations with those under State control.

The proposition that Ashland College occupies a very important place in the Brethren church needs no support. But the recognition of this important place, by the brotherhood in general, has not yet been accomplished. Ever since the organization of the Progressive Conference in 1882, Ashland College has been the only institution of high-learning supported. The plant, at that time and since, until within the last ten years or so, was fully large enough to meet the demands made upon it. Until but a short time ago, twenty years or so, the educational demands of Society, the State, the School and the Church were not great. Today, the situation is entirely different. Society, in its business and economic relations is demanding a much broader educational equipment. As a result, our High Schools and Colleges are filled to overflowing by those who feel and know the rigidity of these newer educational demands. The factors that brought about these changes need not be mentioned here. The existence of the facts as they are found is sufficient to prove the contention.

As a result of these new demands, made by Society, the State, the School and the Church are striving to meet them satisfactorily. The State is striving to set up such conditions, by legislation, that shall provide means of meeting these demands. Compulsory school attendance and equal educational opportunities for all, higher qualifications of teachers, standardized school equipment in buildings and grounds, are examples of the efforts put forth by the State in order that the schools shall provide this newer and broader education. The School has, through its leaders, focused its attention upon the quality and effectiveness of its methods. It has applied the same methods in studying the results of educational practices as business has applied to the study of business practices. It took a long time for the educational leaders to awaken to the fact that the same research methods could be applied to both education and business. As a result, newer, greater and more exacting demands are being made upon the teacher. His educational equipment, both academic and professional, must be much better now than it has ever been before. Last, but not least by any means, the Church has raised her requirements to meet these new educational demands made by Society. The Church is now demanding that its leaders, both in the ministry and among the laity, shall have the educational training necessary for it to hold its own in Society's great forward going movement. The Brethren Church has not been among the earliest supporters of this educational movement. In other words, we have become so used to having Ashland

History

College meet all of our educational needs that we have marked time, so to speak, while the rest of the world marched on.

Until less than ten years ago, our College had a rather uncertain program. She was allowed to exist under the rather loose control of the Church, while little attention was paid, on the part of the Church, to a general program of improvement and advancement. Why? Simply because, Ashland College was meeting the immediate demands made by the Church upon her and was at the same time making some progress. Most of the credit for the progress made must be given to the Presidents and the Faculty members, who, sincere and faithful as they were, largely were responsible for supplying the College with its only forward looking program. For the simple reason that the Church in general has not had and does not now have a definite program for the future growth and expansion of the college, Ashland College is now facing the most critical period of her entire existence. True, our expansion program is now on and going forward nicely, but the Church, in general, does not recognize nor realize the importance of this campaign, and that is the reason for this article.

The Brethren Church is wide awake to her missionary opportunities and responsibilities, and the missionary program is a forward looking one, that is, its plans are being laid so that it will grow and expand as the years come and go. But the Brethren Church is not properly awake to her educational opportunities and responsibilities. The expansion program of the College is not widely known or supported. There are many in the church who now say, "Why bother us again with College Endowment when we were canvassed only seven or eight years ago?" "When will this constant call for money for the College cease?" The answers to these questions are obvious,—an educational institution is never self-supporting and will consequently always need more or less help. New and more expensive demands are constantly being made upon colleges. It is but little more self-supporting than our missionary activities. It is true that tuitions and fees are paid by the students while attending college but these never cover the costs of instruction. At Ashland College, the cost of instruction, computed at the lowest possible figures is $314 per year. The tuition paid is $120 per year. Who pays the other $194? It must be met from the incomes from endowments and gifts. The costs of instruction are very low because the faculty members are willing to work for small salaries. It is not possible to raise the tuition much higher, because then students will go to institutions whose reputation and recognition is better than that of Ashland College.

Ashland College has come through to the present time, not only maintaining her old standing but also establishing new records and gains from year to year. Her enrollment has been greatly increased, her entrance and graduation requirements have been bettered and standardized, her recognition and standing has been extended. All of these things have been accomplished without going into debt, that is the College has expanded and kept within its income. This accomplishment deserves the admiration and commendation of the entire brotherhood.

The accomplishment may be accredited to the following factors,—

(1) The careful and judicious management of the finances.

(2) The willingness, on the part of the faculty members to serve faithfully at a low salary. (In practically all cases, faculty members have refused positions offered them with salaries 50 to 100 per cent higher.)

(3) The impetus given the College by the addition of the new endowment of $160,000 raised by Dr. Beachler a few years ago, and the local gift of the new building.

(4) The absence of the enforcement of exacting standards for American Colleges.

But the influence of these factors has now been largely outlived. The time has come when (1) careful and judicious management is no longer able to supply the needs of the College. Newer and greater educational demands are being made upon the preparation of the faculty members. This necessitates the attendance of summer sessions in advanced study, or spending a year in advanced study on leave of absence or traveling abroad or extensive travel at home. This all costs so much money that the meager salaries paid at Ashland will not provide for it. No amount of careful and judicious management will provide the necessary funds with which salaries may be raised to the point where these things are possible. (2) There is need right now and there has been this need for several years to increase the size of the faculty. The maximum teaching load allowed teachers in Colleges belonging to the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is 16 hours per week. At Ashland the majority of the faculty members are carrying from 16 to 22 hours. It is the opinion of the North Central Association that a teacher who is teaching more than 16 hours per week is doing too much work to guarantee careful and efficient preparation. The teaching load at Ohio Wesleyan University is 12 hours which is about the load carried by all of the other North Central Colleges in Ohio.

The time has come when no amount of careful and judicious management of the finances of the school will supply the necessary funds to employ new teachers to relieve the load of the present faculty members. New funds must be supplied. Furthermore, it will be practically impossible to increase the faculty with men or women who will be willing to sacrifice in the future as the present faculty has done in the past. Considering the great amount of graduate work required of a College professor, it would seem that they should be paid better than a church pastor, but there are many pastors in the Brethren Church whose salaries exceed those of the faculty members. (3) The impetus given by the increased endowment raised by Dr. Beachler and the local gift of the new building has now spent itself. The College can no longer go forward on an expanding program without more endowment. (4) The time has come also, when the standardizing agencies are making their demands felt. Ashland College feels more and more, every day, the increasing pressure of these standards. The State Department of Education has set up new standards for Training of Teachers which are to go into effect in September, 1927. The North Central Association raised its minimum requirement for admission, January 1, 1927 for endowment from $400,000 to $500,000. These standards must be met if Ashland College expects to be able to even hold her place among educational institutions and render the service to the church that she is now rendering, let alone extending her service and influence. The new requirements of the State Department will necessitate a greatly increased budget, which will necessitate retrenchment somewhere else in the college work unless increased funds are available. The Teacher Training work of the college has become such an important part of the work that it is impossible to discontinue it now. In fact the extra pay received by the Faculty members for the Saturday and summer courses, help materially to make salaries better. Furthermore the publicity given the College by this work is no small matter. It is a distinct service to Ashland and vicinity. Gradually, the College has been able to extend its field of recognition among other colleges and universities, but she can no longer hold this recognition unless she meets the requirements set by the North Central Association. This Association is the standardizing agency of twenty-seven states lying between the Appalachian and Rocky mountains and is recognized by all other Associations. Ashland College should be a member of this Association. Membership in this Association would mean that all credits made at Ashland College would be accepted anywhere at their face value. Now we are accepted only, without question, by those institutions who know of our work by direct contact with us. How fine it would be that when our credits are presented to another institution, they would find Ashland College on the North Central list and thereby accept all credits at their face value! Ashland College will never be able to render her best service to the Church and to the State until that time comes. The endowment increased to $500,000 or more will do it.

Many of the Evangelist readers may not know that it is the desire of the State Universities to reduce all small denominational colleges to the rank of Junior Colleges. This means that only the first two years of the regular college courses are given. The Brethren Church should not and would not allow her only institution of higher learning to be reduced to the rank of a Junior College. In fact, that is just what will happen if Ashland College is not soon made a North Central College.

Ashland College now meets all the North Central Association requirements except those which an increased endowment will satisfy. In fact, the only serious lack is the lack of sufficient endowment for admission. The N. C. A. minimum endowment of $500,000 is based upon a student body of 200. For every increase of 100 students, there must be a corresponding increase of $50,000 in endowment. The N. C. A. gives as the reasons for this requirement, that in as much as no educational institution is self-supporting, and in order that its educational efficiency shall not be impaired, by being able to only pay small salaries, thus attracting only mediocre teachers, the income from endowment must be at least equal to the income from tuitions and fees. The latest financial statement published by Dr. Shively, Bursar of Ashland College, shows that the income from endowment for the year just passed was approximately $11,000, and from tuitions and fees $35,000. It can be plainly seen wherein we are lacking and it is toward this point that the present College drive is directed.

In answer to the question suggested by many of our Brethren, "When will this constant call for money for the College cease?" we say, NEVER ENTIRELY. Unless, of course, some exceedingly large gift would provide for an expansion program extending over a long period of years. Such a gift is not likely to come, so we must content ourselves with the inevitable,—Ashland College will always demand support from the Brethren Church.

Why shouldn't she do this? The very existence of the Brethren Church as a denomination, depends upon its leaders. Young men and women from Brethren homes trained in the colleges of other denominations, or in the godless State Universities, tend to lose their interest in and their responsibility to, the Brethren Church, and consequently, will not likely become our leaders. It is useless for us to deceive ourselves, we cannot hope to draw our educated leadership from other denominations. If the Brethren Church has worth while principles for which to stand, the unquestioned support of the College where these principles are stressed is of primal importance to the existence of the Brethren Church as an organization. The future existence of the Brethren Church depends upon the existence and recognition of Ashland College. If this be true, and it is, then the future of Ashland College should become a matter of grave concern to the Brethren Church.

There was a time, a number of years ago, when admission to the N. C. A. would have been a comparatively easy matter, but that time is passed and the Church is faced with the necessity of doing it now. The Brethren people can be relied upon to meet this responsibility, but have not yet fully recognized the gravity of the situation. President Jacobs, the Faculty, Dr. Bell, Campaign Secretary and the Board of Trustees are fully aware of the present situation, but they can do nothing without the liberal support of the Church at large.

The present campaign was launched with the hope of securing $150,000 from Ashland and vicinity. More than 50 per cent of the student body is made up from Ashland and vicinity and it was felt that it should liberally support this drive for endowment. On the eve of the local campaign, the gymnasium burned, requiring additional funds for its replacement. Following the fire, the Ashland quota was raised to $190,000. To date, about $100,-

Mountain Tops on the Horizon---III

By Elder G. W. Rench

We were compelled to answer the charge in the 80s that "you progressives have no church government." We usually answered the thrust by replying, "We've got all that God gave any man." If we wished to invite an argument, we started somewhat like this: "Where did you get yours?" And there on our horizon was one of the outstanding mountains. You needed no field glass to see it. At times, it looked like a storm-cloud in the distance. When the work of the shepherd was thrust upon us, we were compelled to study the subject. Some of us stayed close to our authoritative text-book, the New Testament. Outside helps were sought in the literature of other religious bodies which were congregational in church administration. To my way of thinking, measures and methods which have behind them an ecclesiasticism to enforce them, are failures when brought over into the polity of a "gospel alone" people. There are so many good things which have been worked out by people who are traveling the same road with us in church management that there is no use of wasting time on trying to wear the wrong armor. A monarchical form of church government does not approach the beauty and simplicity of that set forth in the New Testament, and I will not read the stuff. Living under the sunlight of the glorious American Republic, why should I waste my time in a form of church government built up under the influences of a monarchy like western Europe. And you church workers who are continually recommending, and foisting upon us, church periodicals created and published under the influence of a monarchical form of government, either don't know the genius of the Brethren movement, or you care less. If you do not care what Brethren people read, be honest enough to draw your salary elsewhere.

New Testament church government has to do with the congregation. There is no other body recognized in its teachings. Other bodies are mere expediences, useful or detrimental, as they may be conducted. I believe in expediences as long as they keep in their place. The great Head of the church had his divine and human side; and likewise the church has its divine and human side, with its corresponding necessities. To provide for these necessities, two sets of officers—elders and deacons—were appointed by the local congregation, by divine authority. The elders were to lead in the spiritual interests; the deacons were to guide the congregation in the material necessities. Elders deal with spiritual problems; deacons with material. Spirituality, and good business; what more does a church need to be successful than good, active leadership along these lines. Let us revert to our divine text-book on "good order in the churches." Here are some passages on the eldership.

1. "The elders which are among you I exhort . . . feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock" (1 Peter 5:1-3).

2. "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine" (1 Tim. 5:17).

3. "If any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church" (Jas. 5:14).

4. "Against an elder receive not an accusation, but before two or three witnesses" (1 Tim. 5:19).

5. "And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church. And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know." . . . (Acts 20:17, 18).

6. "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts 20:28).

7. "And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem" (Acts 16:4).

8. "Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judea; which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul" (Acts 11:29, 30).

9. "And when they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed" (Acts 15:23).

10. "For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldst set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee if any be blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children not accused of riot or unruly. For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre; but a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate; holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and convince the gainsayers" (Titus 1:5-9).

The Holy Spirit, through these writers of his truth, has certainly given attention to detail in church administration. The trouble is, we have not. My, what we find here! What is not covered by these scriptures—and all by divine authority!

Now, let us select out, itemize and emphasize a few facts in this limited study.

1. Notice, the term used in connection with the congregation is "elders"—plural number. Why, in the delicate situations arising in his program as mapped out for him, common sense would dictate that he should have some one associated with him. The Lord has answered this demand of reason and propriety. But what have we done about it? Nothing, scarcely at all. We've been busy saying "congregationalism won't work." Perhaps we would appear to a better advantage in the sight of our Lord, if we would, at least, try his plan. Let's face the issue: it's ELDERS, not "the elder." "IS any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church," says James. Does the inspired word mean what it says? We are so loose in our thinking that we say, "deacons or any one else will do as well." It will? How do you know? If anything else will do here, then, anything else will do elsewhere in the Book; and I challenge anyone to escape the conclusion. Away with your baptism in its triune form to meet the requirements of Matthew 28:19, if something else will do other than the gospel requirements in the anointing service. Let's cease this loose handling of the word of God, or instead of our familiar slogan "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible," throw to the breeze this, "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing OF the Bible."

2. The authority and field of labor of the elders was limited to the congregation of which they were members. The elders were called to feed, guide and protect the flock over which they were called to be bishops. The idea of a shepherd being away from his flock for months at a time plays havoc with the New Testament figure. And for the shepherds to leave their flock and go over to some other flock without being solicited to do so, and begin herding maneuvers in the presence of the flock's own shepherds, would be so far from New Testament standards as to become unusually laughable. And yet, before the Brethren turned to the New Testament ways in the 80's, that very condition prevailed, but it wasn't a bit laughable. It required tears, and the severance of family ties to break down "adjoining elder rule." The Lord has a better way "to set a church in order." The one requirement of "being ensamples to the flock" is enough to settle definitely his field of activity, for how could one be an example to people who did not know him?

3. Paul wrote, "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in word and doctrine" (1 Tim. 5:17). There are some elders who are to preach and teach the Word. This may be the modern pastor; but in my humble judgment minus a lot of modern foolishness expected of him. In the first

Remembering Our Aged Brethren

By C. C. Grisso

If I were to take a text from which to preach a sermon in the interests of our superannuated brethren it would be this: "I sent you to reap that whereon ye have not labored: others have labored, and ye are entered into their labors."—John 4:38. How true are these words with reference to the subject before us. We boast of being greater and better and bigger in many ways than our forefathers. We enjoy much that they did not enjoy. But it was their toil and sacrifice that brought us here.

My! how magnificent is the heritage you and I fell heir to when we entered this world. Our fathers thought, and toiled, and bled and suffered, that they might start a movement for the restoration of primitive Christianity, that movement with which it is your privilege and mine to be identified. In those days it was necessary for some heroic sacrifices to be made and they were willing to make them, for they had a cause at heart, a cause that was dearer to them than life. For the most part the pioneers of our movement were not possessed with this world's goods, but they were rich in faith. They were without a church building or college or publishing house to their credit, but like Abraham of old they saw beyond their day, they saw a day when the church they loved would have these things, thus they labored on and we are reaping from their labors.

I am raising the question. Do we appreciate such unparalleled sacrifice and such heroic service? When we do understand this ministry as we should there will awaken in our hearts the spirit of gratitude and we shall begin to serve after the pattern of love that has served us.

Shall the church of Jesus Christ do less for her heroes than the nation does for her's? She will see to it that they are provided for as long as they live. We dare not do less for the heroes of our faith.

Talk about fighting for freedom! They were lovers of freedom. They declared that "Christ has made men free." Their ringing cry was, "The Word of God is sufficient." They allowed nothing to be added or subtracted from it. It alone was their rule of faith and practice. So firmly did they believe in this course that they would not yield before persecution. How we rejoice today that they did not yield, for much that we are today has come because they stood firm in that day.

But poverty and age has placed many of these at the mercy of the church. What is our answer? What shall be our answer to him who said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me?" If we have been faithful, if we have been true to our trust and commission, I know that when we shall see him, the victor of many battles, marked with his suffering for a lost and ruined world, we shall fall at his feet, and receive our crown from his hand, and hear him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Well done!

Just to hear those two words will repay for all the effort and sacrifice that we have ever made. Shall we answer the call that comes from these our aged Brethren once more, before they are called home, or shall we very indifferently pass by on the other side and leave it to another? Our response to our benevolent secretary will be our answer.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

A Shrinking World

By J. F. Garber

TEXT: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."—Daniel 12:4.

From the time this prophecy was written, down to the present, there has never been a time when it was so nearly fulfilled as now.

Never has there been a time when there were so many people running to and fro; traveling from place to place, and from country to country; and it seems that there is no limit to their speed.

Knowledge is increased. There has never been a time when everybody, everywhere, was so anxious to acquire all knowledge on every subject. Men everywhere are delving into the hidden mysteries of the universe, physical and spiritual; testing the so-called sciences by the acid test of true logic, and they are untiring in their zeal, searching for new evidence to substantiate or contradict the theories long considered settled by sages of past ages. From this untiring effort of the people of the last generation, have come great inventions, and accomplishments, that have revolutionized the world; and in it all, I see three facts.

The First Fact

The first fact is, "the earth is shrinking."

Abraham's caravans were fortunate to be able to travel two miles an hour. For centuries the horse was the swiftest means of travel. In my childhood days it took twenty-five days to travel from here to Chicago, driving a good team of horses. Now you can eat your supper at six in the evening at Leon, and breakfast in Chicago at six the next morning, and you don't have to use an aeroplane to do it either.

Yes, knowledge has harnessed steam; gasoline is speeding us on our way; and electricity, that unseen power, helps to quicken our pace. A few years ago we took two days to go from Leon to Des Moines, our state Capital. Now we can make it in two hours on the public highway and do our own driving.

The seas have been conquered, mountains tunneled, and the air is an open road. All barriers fall before the power of knowledge, and knowledge has increased. A century ago it took ten months to encircle the globe; it will soon be done in ten days. It is a fact that through the power of knowledge backed up by courage, and the love of money and honor, this old world has been made to shrink, not by tapeline measurements, or as the crow flies, but in comparison to man's ability then, and now.

Second Fact

"All men everywhere are sharing their ideas with one another." News flashes from land to land, over the wires, under the seas, and on the wings of the air. What happens today in London or Paris, is heralded tomorrow to the ends of the earth. ("That which ye have spoken in the ear in closets, shall be proclaimed upon the housetop.") Books that are published today in New York, in a few weeks are read in Calcutta, Capetown, Constantinople, Tokio, and Pekin. All the world is an open forum for the free flowing of men's thoughts, and beliefs, whether they be good or evil.

You may read anything you wish, but it takes a wise head to judge between the good and evil. Both are accessible at any time. The time has come that what is thought anywhere, by anyone, may soon be thought everywhere, by everyone. All that is needed to sway the thoughts and beliefs of mankind, is forceful writers, who can write their thoughts in a logical, convincing, manner; and thousands and we might say, millions of minds will be turned to their way of thinking.

Third Fact

"What happens anywhere makes a difference everywhere." The nations of the world have become neighbors to each other; in fact the world is just one great big neighborhood; and we all know that if two neighbors get into a quarrel, sooner or later, even the most conservative of the whole neighborhood will be drawn into it. DAILY SCRIPTURE READING AND COMMENT

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

MONDAY

JESUS THE GOOD SHEPHERD—John 10:1-11.

The great test which Jesus sets for a good shepherd is fidelity to his sheep to the point of death, and it was by that sort of a test that he proved himself to be indeed the good Shepherd of the distressed human sheep.

TUESDAY

JESUS THE GREAT SHEPHERD—Heb. 13:12-21.

It was not merely a good shepherd that Jesus proved to be, but a great shepherd; he was not only willing to die for his sheep, but was able to conquer death in their behalf. He not only was faithful, but powerful also. He not only went down into the grave, but was exalted at the right hand of God in heaven. That is the kind of a shepherd that frail humanity needs.

JESUS THE CHIEF SHEPHERD—1 Pet. 5:1-11.

To those who are shepherds of God's flocks in this world the admonition comes to exercise their function worthily and fittingly, not as overlords but as true shepherds, remembering that Jesus Christ is the great Chief shepherd and that he will appear and will crown with glory those who are faithful.

THURSDAY

THE GOOD SHEPHERD GUIDES—Luke 1:68-79.

It is the way of good shepherds to guide, not drive; and he who is our great and good shepherd guides our feet in the way of peace. When we are not in peace, it is a pretty good sign that we are not following our Guide.

FRIDAY

HE CARES FOR HIS SHEEP—Ezek. 34:11-16.

Jehovah, the true shepherd that he is does not sit idly by and leave his sheep to look to their own welfare, but diligently cares for their every need. He who is lost, or hungry, or bruised by the roughness of the way, is so in spite of the searching care of the Father's love.

SATURDAY

A REDEEMED FLOCK—Acts 20:28-35.

That means that we belong to the Lord Jesus, that once we were sold into slavery, but that he bought us back, redeemed us, with his own blood. We should therefore live as befits those who belong to the Lord.

SUNDAY

THE SHEPHERD PSALM—Psalm 23.

If the Lord is my Shepherd, then I shall not want any good thing, nor fear any evil, for with his Presence to guide, I can trust him implicitly, and all I need to do is to follow—close up and not afar off.—G. S. B.

it is today, the sin of one nation may plunge the whole world into a ruinous war. We have had the experience, and know this to be true. We know that what happens in Russia, or Mexico, in China, or Africa, is of interest to all of us; for the acts of some nation, though small it may be, may cost us the lives of our boys in war.

Little did we think when that young Austrian Prince was slain, that our boys would be called upon to cross the briny deep, to help settle the trouble. No thoughtful man can any more be careless of the thoughts, the faiths and actions of any race, or nation anywhere on earth; for we are neighbors to all of them.

In summing up the foregoing facts, we draw these conclusions:

First Conclusion

"That world where men are coming so close together physically, must be made into a Christian brotherhood, or else the last state of it will be worse than the first." To be physically close together and spiritually far apart will bring humanity to ruin. What would happen if you put a wild, vicious cat and a bulldog in an enclosure where they could not escape? Yet when properly educated (trained) they will eat together, out of the same dish. When we live but a few days' travel from semi-barbarians, what may we expect for the future if they are left in that state, or condition?

Oh! says one, just leave them alone, don't worry your brain about them. From a worldly viewpoint that might do, if they would leave us alone; but they won't.

If you live next door neighbor to a thief, you could leave him alone, but he won't leave you alone. You may leave a slanderer alone, but your reputation is jeopardized as long as he remains in the community, unless he becomes a changed man. Convert that thief, and slanderer to the religion of the Lord Jesus, and you may live in peace and harmony with them. Carry the words of Jesus to our neighbors across the sea, and they will become good neighbors.

Second Conclusion

"We either must Christianize the world or the world will paganize us." There are three great faiths now that struggle for the souls of men. Buddhism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity—three great contestants to conquer the world. The whole world is now the field for all of them. They face each other in Africa, India and Japan, and in London, New York and San Francisco. Dear friends, no power on earth can keep them apart, for all barriers have been removed—the former barrier was distance; that has been wiped out. Their followers now overflow the earth, and more, and more, are touching elbows in every center of population among men.

The bitter contest will come when they begin to contend for supremacy in the control of the public schools, and the affairs of government in the nations. When the time comes, then if the world is not conquered by Christian ideas, it will be conquered by ideas that are not Christian. If we ever expect to conquer the world for Jesus, it must be done soon.

Third Conclusion

"All men everywhere are made of one blood." They are able to think the same thoughts; share the same faiths, and love the same Lord, whether they be of darkest Africa in their semi-barbarous condition, or of the highest civilization.

While men are unlike on the surface, their hearts are burdened by the same sin, crushed by the same woes, and are in need of the same salvation. We must not be selfish: Jesus does not belong to us more than men of yellow, black or brown ancestry; and the last words that he spoke before he ascended to the Father were: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." We have not been given any choice in this matter; the command is to go to all nations. If we obey, the promise is ours.

And my dear friends, this command has not been obeyed until every nation has heard the gospel, and every person has been given an opportunity to accept our Master's offer of salvation. Every generation has its own responsibility in the matter. Are we of this generation willing to accept the challenge? If we are and do our part, then the responsibility rests with the other fellow.

The Home Base

In our eagerness to carry the good news to every creature, let us not forget that to be strong enough to cope with the world-wide situation, we must keep the home base intact.

If you are to build a house, if you are wise, you first lay a good foundation, without which the house could not stand. Then you keep that foundation in good repair.

The home work is the foundation on which the foreign effort must rest; and without which it must surely fail. Our present home mission points must be made self-supporting, and new ones launched. The Thanksgiving offerings we give from time to time are used for strengthening the home base. So also are our payments to district missions. The more we give the stronger can the home base be made, and the better able will we be to carry the glad tidings of salvation to every nation, kindred, and tongue. God bless the Brethren church.

division of apostolic labor (Acts 6) the apostles said, "But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word" (Acts 6:4). There was the secret of their power! When congregations insist that the prayer-life and study of the Word shall be the prominent features of their elders' time, there will be more glow and warmth in the pulpit. No wonder many churches are worldly and are growing more so. Nine out of ten of their programs are built around fun. With apologies to Patrick Henry, the modern cry is "Give me fun, or give me death." Any church and any pastor can be spiritual, if given over to the task.

Elders are to lead in the spiritual development of the local church. Then there is the material side of the church's development. The collecting and disbursements of funds—good business; sound methods of conducting the church's material affairs. Good order requires high-grade, spiritual men to handle this great task, men "whom we may appoint over this business" (Acts 6:3). The Lord's plan provides deacons to care for this phase of his church. We haven't been fair to these good men. We've done nothing to train them for their work. We ordain them and turn them loose to shift as best they can. We parcel their work out among committees as though they were utterly incompetent. We confuse their work with everything else in the church, until becoming confused themselves they know not what to do. No wonder the church's work looks like a checker-board. Who is to blame?

The Persecution

Following the death of Stephen a persecution set in which caused the Christians to flee from Jerusalem. They apparently had not yet felt the responsibility of witnessing for their departed Lord; it took persecution to pry them loose from the comforts and ties of home. Forced to flee into the surrounding country for safety, they were required by the circumstances to explain why they had left Jerusalem and were seeking shelter in the towns and villages surrounding. That involved telling the story of Jesus and of their faith in him, for which they were being persecuted. Their story excited the sympathy of some and won the faith of some, while others were prejudiced and added to the persecution. But it advertised the church, intensified its piety, and increased the zeal and contagion of its enthusiasm for the Gospel. They had faith before, but this made it stronger. They had vision, but this enlarged it. They had a measure of devotion, but this sifted it of its carelessness and inactivity. They were a noble band, but this persecution freed them largely of insincerity and hypocrisy. Persecution does that,—it clarifies and purifies worthy motives and exposes and expels the false.

Patriotism Demands It

Patriotism demands Home Missions—and this means missions in our own homes, our own city or town. It means missions to the companions we meet in all our work and play, in school, shop, factory or social club. This nation, like any other past or present, can prosper only through righteousness. You cannot make a city of God out of Calibans; you cannot make "a golden age out of leaden people"; you cannot build a marble palace out of bricks of mud; you cannot make a good country except out of good citizens. We have a distinct and pressing duty to preach the gospel to those outside our own church community, in our town, our state and our country, to whatever race or social condition, natives or foreigners, rich or poor. Preaching need not always be formal speeches or even regular conversation. We often preach better by our lives than we could through our words. Emerson once said to another man, "What you are speaks so loud I cannot hear what you say."—Illustrated Quarterly.

"So absolutely did these, his followers, believe that all power had been given to Christ, in heaven and earth; so fully did they accept his word for it that they preached, not only Christ the Redeemer, but Christ the Creator and Upholder of the Universe. . . . Wherever these men of the Spirit went there was clear, courageous speech, wise and far-sighted policy, righteous and terrible rebuke, patient and sympathetic teaching. In the Spirit they became statesmen, physicians, orators, theologians, organizers and good citizens and neighbors. And that same Spirit is eternal, available for every age, every climate, every circumstance."—P. Whitwell Wilson.

Christian Evangelism

"Our Savior found lost souls wherever he went—by the wayside well, on the seashore, among the tombs, up a tree, and even on the cross. Nineteen times it is recorded that he stopped to talk with a single person, and if we will adopt the habit of watching for opportunities we shall be surprised to see how often they will come. Matthew was converted in a custom-house, Moody in a shoe-shop, and Peter and John while mending their nets."—Rev. Howard W. Pope, D.D.

"Not only are the priceless results of the saving power of God hindered, but the individual believer has suffered unmeasured loss in his possible reward, when the prayer of intercession has for any reason ceased; for prayer presents the greatest opportunity for soul-winning, and there is precious reward promised to those who bring souls to Christ and are found to be suffering with him in his burden for the lost."—Lewis Sperry Chafer.

"I would not begin with the non-believer by discussing mysteries with him, only to answer his objections; or miracles, unless the matter is brought up by him; not even the theory of the atonement, though I have my idea regarding it. I asked why I think the plan of salvation was adopted by God, I should tell him that it is not necessary I should understand the reason why it was adopted, but only necessary that I should accept it as it is. Yet, if any reason is needed, I have one which satisfies me; namely, that love is the greatest thing in the world, and sacrifice is the language of love; and that Christ could not have found a better plan of reaching human hearts than this of expressing his love in sacrifice, being willing to die for the world, and thus giving the best evidence of his love for the world; and that thus he has touched the hearts of the

Adult Responsibilities

The Laymen's View

By E. A. Meyer, Flora, Indiana

It is quite evident that adults have many responsibilities in the Sunday school. First of all they are responsible for the maintenance of the school. No adult department can do a better piece of work for its school, than assuming the maintenance of that school.

From the adults must come practically all of the money used in the school and happy that school where the adults assume this responsibility. It has been said that America spends on an average of $28 on her children for secular education in the grades and at the same time only 48c for religious education, and yet you hear adults complaining about what it costs to maintain the Sunday school.

Then the adults must supply the teachers for the school and again lucky is that school where the adults take the matter of teachers seriously and sees that they are qualified and trained as much as possible.

Then the matter of proper equipment is another responsibility of the adults. Too many times the adults are not informed or rather not in sympathy with the needs of school, especially with the needs of the children's departments. Adults should realize that the children of today are the adults of tomorrow and should give them every help that they can so they may be fitted for the tasks that will confront them.

Then the spirit of worship and reverence is an adult responsibility. You cannot expect the children to be quiet and reverent in the school if they see some of the adults who are not. Too many times the children will put the adults to shame by their spirit of reverence.

These are only a few of the responsibilities of the adults to their school and if these will cause the adults to think more seriously of their responsibilities this article will have performed its mission.

The Pastor's View

By Dr. G. C. Carpenter, Hagerstown, Md.

The church or Sunday school that has a large body of strong, spiritual, consecrated adults pressing on the upward way in loyal sacrificing service for the King of kings will have also a large and proportionate body of boys and girls and young people following in their steps.

The day is past, if it ever was, when parents can unnecessarily stay at home from church and Sunday school and at the same time entertain a clear conscience. Parents must take and not send the children. They must not say "Go" but rather "Come with us." Parents cannot dance and play cards and be movie fans and smoke cigarettes with the world and expect their children to be separate from the world.

America would be a new nation in quick order if all parents would be the exemplary

Christians they ought to be. Then the youth of America, walking in adult steps, would become a righteousness-loving generation. Then the crime problem would be solved and along with it many other problems. Then a new era would dawn in the work of the church in evangelizing a lost world, and the Lord Jesus would come quickly.

It seems that the logic of the above cannot be refuted. Hence all adult workers, teachers, officers, class and church members ought to take courage and work harder than ever to bring in the adults and keep them in, for their own sake and for childhood's sake.

Adults are the leaders. Adults are the examples. Children are the followers. Children are the imitators. Come on, adults, let us lead the way.

C. E. Activities at Hagerstown, Md.

Sunday, January thirtieth, was observed as Young People's Day in the First Brethren church, Hagerstown. In the morning our beloved pastor, Rev. G. C. Carpenter, D.D., delivered a very forceful message taking as his theme, "Three Great Imperatives."

At the Christian Endeavor hour in the evening a luncheon was served to eighty per cent of our membership. After the supper hour a very instructive and interesting program was rendered by the Endeavorers in which every person had a part and gave that part well.

Vocal and instrumental music contributed to the evening's program. A short address by our own pastor on the subject, "Loyal to the Church," in which he emphasized the fact that the young people of today are the future church and if they do not prove loyal to the church and its activities and be in preparedness for the work ahead the future church must fail in its mission of salvation.

The climax of the day was reached when after the Endeavor meeting our pastor brought to us a stirring message on the subject, "The Young Man Hiding Among the Baggage."

In his discourse he sent a challenge to the young people of the church to be in readiness for the work that lies before them.

It seemed as though our pastor was at his very best when he delivered the evening's message. It gave us young people food for careful thought and study and also flung a challenge for us to consider very thoughtfully in choosing our life work.

Just a brief message about our activities in general. I might say that we are increasing slowly but we are not discouraged, but are determined to push ahead for Christ and the church.

We have gained one new member since this last October first, and also have gotten back into our ranks again five of the delinquent members.

Every young person who is called upon to give a part in our society meeting or serve on some committee has not failed to do so.

Just a few figures to show our attendance record:

Month	Year	Av. per Sunday
October, 1926		23
November, 1926		19
December, 1926		21
January, 1927		25

Our aim is to have a hundred per cent attendance each Sunday evening unless prevented by serious illness or other unavoidable accidents.

Also a word to let you know that we are back of our National Officers and looking forward with great anticipation for the best year yet in the history of the National Association of Christian Endeavor of the Brethren church. A. H. WILLIAMS.

Prayer is an acknowledgment of faith; worry is a denial of faith. Prayer is putting my hand in God's trusting to his loving guidance; worry is withdrawing my hand, and denying his power to lead me. Prayer leads through the door of faith into the presence of God; worry leads through the door of anxiety into the darkness of loneliness and discouragement. If prayer does not cancel worry, worry will cancel prayer.—Selected.

CHILEAN TITHERS

Rev. Jesse S. Smith, American Presbyterian missionary in Santiago, Chile, tells of a small group of believers, who, he says, "about four years ago organized themselves into what they called the First National Evangelical church. There were only about a dozen of them in the first place, but they kept faithfully together. Some of them had been enthusiastic over the idea of a National Chilean Evangelical church and they thought that this was the way to start it. There were several choice spirits among them and one of the principles they laid down was that each member should be a tither, so they all gave to the work with open hand and heart. In this way they were able to begin the purchase of a piece of ground on the installment plan and even to begin a building of which they have three sides enclosed with cement walls. . . . They now wish their property to be registered under the Union Evangelica (the corporate name of the Presbyterian Mission in Chile), and ask that we undertake the direction of the work that they have undertaken to do alone for so long a time."

A View of Mountain Missions Acts 16:9, 10

Ralph and Harry were brothers. They lived in a little log house away up on the side of a mountain. Ralph and Harry were not the only children who lived in that house. There were Mary and Kate and George and Jim who were the older children of the family. Then there were Bob and Frances who were the babies of the family and were not old enough to come to the table and eat with the rest of the family.

It was Sunday dinner and so the table was spread with the best that could be found. It was not a very big dinner at that though. They had two rabbits that dad had brought home the day before. Then there was a great big dish of potatoes and some bread and that was about all. Mother and dad sat at the two ends of the table and the children sat on benches along the two sides.

"Dad, tell us about the city," said Ralph. "When I was in the city," said dad, "there were so many people that I could hardly find my way around. The houses are all big and painted nice colors, and they are so close together that I do not see how the people keep from getting mixed up and going in the wrong house. The women all dress up in shiny silk dresses. The children play together out in places they call parks. Parks are just nice grassy places that look like our meadow and have nice big shade trees on it."

"Now, tell us about your Sunday in town," said Harry.

"On Sunday I went to church. The church was a beautiful stone building. It was much bigger than any building you children have ever seen. On top of it was a tower that pointed toward heaven just like the slender graceful cedars in the wood yonder. And the inside of the church was so wonderful. Everything was so silent and still. The people all sit on long comfortable benches with backs to them and after everyone is seated and quiet, the choir comes in up in front of them and then the preacher comes in too. While the choir of singers and the preacher come in there is soft music played on a pipe organ. Soon everyone stands up and the church service begins with a song."

"Did you see any little boys and girls at church, dad?" asked Harry.

"I surely did, and there was one little boy who helped with the service. He was about your age, Harry, and he sang a beautiful song just before the sermon. He had a voice that was so clear and pretty that everyone seemed to understand the words and be listening just as much as if he had been the preacher."

When dinner was over dad said, "Now let's all go out on the steps and sit in the nice warm sunshine. I have something that I want to tell all of you."

Soon they were all out on the steps, even the babies. Mother and one of the older children were holding them. Dad began, "One of the reasons that I went to the city was to see what I could do there for my children. I want you children to grow up to be strong men and women and I would like for you to be Christian and educated. When I was a boy my dad sent me to the city for a few years, but I have not money enough to send all of you. There are lots of other children up here in the mountains who are just like you. They have never been to church or to school. Well, after church was over, I went to the preacher and told him about the folks up here. At first he did not seem to think that he could do anything for us. But after a while, he called to some young people and let me talk to them. Now here is the good news. One of these young men is coming up here during the summer. He is going to have school classes for all of the boys and girls of the community. Then on Sundays he is going to help us to have church services. I want everyone of you to take part in this work."

"My, but I am glad," said Harry, "now we can start saving money to build a church up here in the mountains."

"I am sure we will love school," said Ralph.

Every one of the children was happy as could be over their father's news, even the babies joined in the happiness and the mother was too happy to even say anything.

Shall We Meet?

By Florence N. Gribble, M.D.

A True Story

CHAPTER I.

It was a long, weary day. The missionary had traveled since early morning. Reaching Antwerp shortly afternoon she found to her consternation that a strike prevented her from crossing to England that night, where important items of business must be attended to upon the following day. Back to the station of her arrival, after many hours of business in Antwerp, she was forced then to go, and thence to embark upon a night train for Zeebrugge. Changing late that evening at Bruxelles for the final stage of her train journey, she entered wearily into a second-class carriage, thankful to find herself alone, and with the hopes of snatching a little sleep, for there was no chance of embarking upon her boat before midnight.

No sooner had she settled herself in a comfortable corner seat than the compartment was overrun with a set of rowdies, much the worse for drink. Crowding against her, and piling on top of each other, they closely scrutinized her face for signs of annoyance, invitation, or displeasure, it being their evident hope that she would remove to another compartment and permit them to have the carriage to themselves. And indeed the missionary was tempted to do this very thing. But lifting her heart in prayer for guidance, she believed it to be the Lord's will that she remain where she was. Seeing that she had no intention of moving, one of the group opened conversation by saying, "We've had a long trip, lady, but we're happy, because we're due home tomorrow!" An answer was expected. It must be an answer which would show her colors, not alone for the sake of these godless men, not alone for the sake of her own protection in their midst, but above all for the sake of the Lord Jesus. "And your Heavenly Home," she responded quickly, "you may be due there also at any moment. Are you prepared to enter?" A look of surprise swept over the countenances of the group. Some of them laughed. None deigned to answer for a moment. Then one of them, the most refined of all in appearance, said in surprisingly good English, "I have heard of it." "My mother asked me to meet her there," said another in a tone more subdued than he had used before. "I once heard the gospel preached," said another.

"Why did you come into this carriage tonight?" asked the missionary, having in mind the Providence of God which was opening to them this new opportunity to hear the Word. But her motive in asking was misunderstood. Truly "the wicked flee when no man pursueth." "Lady," responded one of them bluntly, "we'll pay the difference." Then for the first time it dawned upon the missionary that these were third class passengers, trying to steal a second class ride. "Certainly you'll pay the difference," she responded with a sort of "double-enterdre," knowing they would be forced to do so. They evinced a childish pleasure in her evident confidence in them. "But I did not allude to that, I meant to ask Whose hand guided you here?" "Lady," responded the leader quickly, "if you had been wearing your uniform, we never would have troubled you." What an unconscious declaration of their evident intention! For a moment the missionary was puzzled. "But you have not troubled me," she replied gently. "But to what uniform do you refer?"

"Oh, surely," replied one, "you belong to the Salvation Army, do you not?" "No," replied the missionary, "I am from a foreign land, enroute to my homeland, America, via Belgium and England. But it is well that I wear no uniform." "Why?" asked one. "Because," she replied, "did you not say that had I worn a uniform you would not have entered here? And you would have missed my sermon!" Then beginning at Acts 16:31, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," the missionary related briefly the story of her own conversion, and felt herself overflowing with joy as she gave the gospel message to these hungry souls. Weariness forgotten, lassitude overcome, she preached on until midnight. Others of the same party in adjoining carriages, came to hear, standing in the corridor, or exchanging seats with members of the original group. The train was late, but at last it drew into Zeebrugge harbor. Five minutes only to make the boat to England! Not one of the men had professed conversion. One of them had said that he had been often conscious of the restraining and delivering hand of Providence in his life, especially on one occasion when responsible for the safety of a ship, and he had been marvellously exonerated from blame, and the whole course of his life changed. Another said, as he carried the missionary's suit case from the train, "Many a night, lady, at seven bells, alone on the watch, will I think of the gospel story I have so fully heard tonight." For they were English sailors on a boat plying in South American waters, and sailing to and from Antwerp.

In the rush and scramble for the boat, the missionary lost sight of her companions of travel. The next morning, hurrying, on debarkation at Harwich to get her train for London, she caught sight of one or two of them. They bade her a respectful good morning.

CHAPTER II.

Several months had elapsed and the missionary was returning from America, now accompanied by her little daughter, for an indefinite stay in Europe.

On the steamship Berengaria, in the second class dining room, seated at a table next to her were four men, all perfect strangers to her, three of them young men, officer apprentices, the other a steward, recently disabled. Before the end of the voyage she learned their remarkable story. They had embarked from Antwerp on a steamer sailing in South American waters.

Suddenly one night at "seven bells" the boat had "turned turtle." They found themselves suddenly precipitated into the sea.

The steward had had his leg crushed in the accident. The four of them, the only survivors of the ship, had managed to escape in a life boat which they had fortunately secured. They had been picked up by a passing vessel and taken to New York, from thence they were being returned to their English homes. "What port did your boat sail from?" the missionary asked thoughtfully. "Antwerp," they replied. "And on returning, where were you accustomed to disembark?" "Antwerp," again.

"How did you then reach your homes?" "By Harwich boat." "Were no other lives saved?" "None, except some colored sailors who are now being carried third class." "What was the name of your boat?" "The Eastlake." The name sounded familiar. Yet the missionary could not be sure. She had not paid sufficient attention either to the names of the men or the name of their boat. Were those brave sailors who met death so suddenly at "seven bells,"—were they the ones to whom she had delivered that midnight sermon? Did some of them indeed remember, had some of them indeed accepted—before or during that last dread hour—accepted him whom to know aright is life eternal? If so, it was indeed his hand—if not, it was no less his Providence that led together the missionary with the message, and souls hungering for the Bread of Life.

"Shall we meet beyond the river.

Where the surges cease to roll,
 Where in all the bright forever,
 Sorrow ne'er shall press the soul?

"Shall we meet in that blest harbor
 When our stormy voyage is o'er,
 Shall we meet and cast the anchor
 By the fair celestial shore?

"Shall we meet in yonder city
 Where the towers of crystal shine
 Where the walls are all of jasper,
 Built of workmanship divine!

"Shall we meet with Christ our Savior
 When he comes to claim his own,
 Shall we know his blessed favor,
 And sit down upon his throne?"

INCREASING LIGHT IN DARK AFRICA

In the Doleib Hill District, Sudan, remarkable Sunday school growth is still taking place. Three months ago it was reported that the attendance had reached 1350 in the village Sunday schools. Now there are 4300 attending in the 25 Bible schools there and Sunday is not a long enough day in which to teach all who come at the various stations. The problem is met by holding "Sunday school" on other days of the week.

One hundred miles a week is the distance walked by a recent convert as he goes from place to place that he may teach in a series of these Bible schools. The man can neither read nor write. He brings in a small stalk of grass for every ten people he reaches. His account is fairly accurate as is known from other Christians who have visited these villages and know the number to expect in the tally.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

FORT SCOTT, KANSAS

The first meeting held in a new state is always interesting to the preacher. This is the first time it has been possible for me to hold a meeting in the great state of Kansas, and as the church at Fort Scott is of interest to several Boards of the church, I will give a brief account of the work there.

Fort Scott is a nicely situated city of some fifteen or eighteen thousand people. At one time it was quite a railroad town, but the removal of the railroad shops has left the city with about the ordinary factories, stores, shops and business houses found in a city surrounded with a farming community. Unsettled business conditions caused by many railroad men leaving town, have about returned to normal.

Our church at Fort Scott is in a most favorable location. Just a few blocks from the center of town. There are two main streets in the city running in opposite directions and at the corner where these streets cross the church is located. It is a brick building with outside measurements of something like forty-five by ninety feet. The main auditorium is at the front with two smaller rooms at the back. By spending a few hundred dollars for repairs this building can be made a most attractive place to worship. It is very comfortable and pleasant as it is, and the need of the Message the Brethren church has to give is so apparent that it would be folly to turn this property into other hands.

When Brother L. G. Wood returned to this field over a year ago he found the sheep scattered and the church in disrepute. A number of reasons for this situation could be given but the one that stands out above all others is that this work for the most time has been entrusted to men who were not qualified for leadership. This one example is all the proof the church needs for insisting that the Mission Boards continue their present policy and put only such men as have been tried and proven into the places under their care. The more difficult the field the more care should be exercised.

Brother Wood is a man of the right type for a field like Fort Scott. He has succeeded in getting a few of the scattered flock together. Some of these have stood by through all the difficult days. He has the confidence of the people and the community is vice-president of the Ministerial Union of the city. He is a good preacher and a fine pastor. I am for Fort Scott as long as a man like L. G. Wood is kept on the field. He has a great big faith in the final outcome. Brethren, we ought to help him pray it to a successful, permanent work.

It was a real joy to preach to this faithful band. Their appreciation of the great Bible doctrines was a joy to the heart. Their determination to win out is commendable. Those who were enlisted to take a place in the work again are more certainly needed. Those who came as new members are putting courage into both the pastor and members.

The city has been lulled to carelessness by Modernism in high places. The meetings in which the great Fundamental Doctrines of the Bible were stressed had the effect of bringing some of the hypocrites from under cover. The whole Gospel message of the Brethren church was never more needed and we believe that the Lord has brought Brother Wood and the church before the people again for a time like this.

Our home while at Fort Scott was with E. E. Otto, who from the first offered us the best at his command. The family sought in every way possible to make our stay with them comfortable and pleasant. We are sure the Lord will not let their sacrifice go unrewarded. Frequent visits in the home of the pastor also advanced the fellowship which we so much enjoyed together.

A. V. KIMMELL, Whittier, California.

FORT SCOTT, KANSAS

We have not been reporting from our work here very often, but this does not indicate that we have not been busy, for we have been as busy as we ever were in our lives. There has been but little of general interest to report, however things have been moving as well as could have been expected. Our evangelistic campaign, under the able leadership of Rev. A. V. Kimmell of Whittier, California, is now in the past, but its influence is still with us and we expect it to remain as a mile-stone in the progress of this work. The immediate results in numbers were seven confessions, of persons who confessed their Lord for the first time, one who had made a confession at another church some time before was received by baptism, which made eight, four have been baptized and four await baptism in the near future. In this group of eight two new families were reached. Others were personally interested in the meeting, which we hope and expect to reach ere long, by a follow-up campaign.

Knowing the field as I do, I consider this a very successful campaign, and am now telling our people that we must conserve the interest inspired by this meeting.

The small working membership of the congregation, publicly reconsecrated their lives to the service of the Lord; and this I consider no small thing, in the progress of this work. When we learned that we could have Brother Kimmell for a campaign, the time was a little short for advertising, but we got busy and tried to let everybody in the city and community know that we were going to have a great meeting, and it was very well known. Brother Kimmell came to us on January 8th and opened the campaign Sunday, the 9th, and continued with us for three full weeks including three Sundays.

Brother Kimmell was at his best and seemed to grow better until the end of the campaign. His great messages and pleasing personality, as well known to the brotherhood, was of the highest type, and were greatly appreciated by all who heard him.

He preached every evening except Saturday, from two to four times on Sundays and gave four great Bible studies, of afternoons each week, addressed the Junior high school assembly and the Religious Luncheon Club, and made many visits with the pastor in the interest of the campaign. Rev. Kimmell and his wonderful messages were much talked of throughout the city, even by many who did not attend any of the services, for those who did attend carried the news to them. Still many favorable comments are being heard from various sources, which is very encouraging to members of the congregation, as well as to the pastor. The attendance was not what we desired, but the fine thing was, the evidence of an increasing interest to the last day. And the last afternoon and evening service witnessed the largest attendance of the campaign. Of course the Modernists were stirred, and begun their usual "whine" but what were they, before the sickle of truth? They could not even cast a shadow upon the simplicity of the Word as presented by Brother Kimmell. Some who are not Brethren were heard to say: "It does not matter whether you want to believe it or not, Rev. Kimmell proves what he says by the Bible." Personally I never enjoyed a finer type of fellowship than I had with Brother Kimmell. He is a true yoke-fellow and has a keen insight into a pastor's problems, and last but not least, he is a man of the BOOK. I had especially glad for the opportunity of his personal acquaintance with this field, and esteem his council very highly. Brother Kimmell left no doubts in the mind of the public, as to his estimation of the future of this Mission church and this will continue to bear fruit.

The readers of the Evangelist will understand that it is impossible to describe all of the benefits of a revival campaign on paper, for many are the spiritual uplifts that can not be touched by words or figures, and we received our portion of these.

Now, in behalf of my local people, the District Mission Board, the Missionary Board, of the Brethren church, the National Woman's Missionary Society, I desire to extend the thanks and deepest appreciation to the Evangelistic Bible Study League, for making it possible for us to have the able leadership of its worthy President, Rev. A. V. Kimmell, for this campaign. And personally I desire to express my own sincere thanks to the members of all of the above mentioned Boards for their liberal support of this work by prayer and finances. We are fully persuaded that by the Grace of God, patience, perseverance, and a good measure of stick-to-it-iveness, God will honor his Word, and abundantly bless our united efforts in this field, as elsewhere.

We are so glad to know that so many are praying for this work, this enables us to feel the touch of an unseen hand and the presence of him, though we see him not, yet "believing we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of Glory." L. G. WOOD.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Dr. L. S. Bauman, member of the Foreign Board and also a Trustee of the College, spent a day or two with us recently, speaking at the Chapel hour and preaching morning and evening at the church.

The second semester has opened with some 20 new students added to the roll. Some withdrew at the end of the first semester and some could not re-enter on account of low grades.

The Summer school announcements are out and will be mailed to any who inquire about summer work.

The copy for the annual catalogue is about ready and ought to be issued in April.

Professor Mason and the writer appeared before the state Senate Committee on Universities and Colleges recently at Columbus where we argued in favor of the passage of a bill designed to give state aid to such colleges as Ashland which are now recognized for the training of teachers. Since, I have had several conferences with some of the political leaders of this district relative to it, urging its passage. If we were to receive State aid, as I think we are entitled to, it would materially help with our work here.

Professor Anspach, at Michigan University, writes of his year there as very profitable.

The local canvass is not wholly over here and I am pushing the Alumni canvass as fast as possible. I am being agreeably surprised by the response from our Alumni, for compared with the generality of schools, we are somewhat above the average in our responses. One very rich and old college reports the average gift to be less than $25.00 per alumnus, and the percent replying at all, to be less than 25 per cent.

Rev. Dr. Baer, our worthy Editor, preached a very able sermon last Sunday in the absence of our pastor who is engaged in revival work in Philadelphia.

Professor Puterbaugh reports two gifts of $100.00 apiece for the Chemical laboratories. They are much appreciated. He proposes to buy an electric furnace which we have long needed in that department.

Blue prints of the proposed gymnasium are now ready and will be submitted to the Board at its spring meeting. Bids are also being received.

The itinerary for the Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs are now being arranged. Dean J. A. Garber has charge and those interested in getting these young people should write to him. The girls will this year all be dressed alike and the boys have already gotten tuxedos and both clubs will present a correct appearance. No one need to be ashamed of this group of young people. Their programs will be equally as good.

Your continued interest is earnestly desired both for the work here and for the arduous work of Brother Bell now in Indiana. We are certainly at a crisis time now and it will take our united effort in order to make the school go. I realized as never before when I was at Columbus that money is the standard of many things, schools and colleges being among them. I have already approached the North Central Association and the American Association of Colleges for recognition, pending the outcome of the campaign now on and I await their replies with much anxiety. The answer, if permanent, will have very grave results on the work of the College unless favorable. We are now within striking distance of our goal and much past it in every one of the 15 points set by these associations except the endowment. THIS MUST BE MET. I am personally and even intimately acquainted with several of the members of these associations, but personal pull has small value in the face of inadequate endowment.

Yet the outlook is encouraging. I have been consulted about several wills and a recent local will from a person in no way connected with either the church or school, gives us $1,000. Also, some even write in and ask about such matters. I recently have had an inquiry about an Annuity, perhaps something over $6,000. Such things ought to increase with time but the present need is very urgent.

We all here appreciate your interest and your prayers in behalf of the work at the College which is bound to mean so much to the church which we all love and desire to serve.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

MANSFIELD, OHIO

We are still laboring in the Master's vineyard. Our reports, we agree, have not been frequent. Probably we are at fault in this, especially so when we consider that the people of Ohio have a definite interest here. So many times the glowing pictures given to the Evangelist family from other parts of the vineyard, make the pictures we would paint seem shadowed. But to us in the smaller places, our pictures are glowing too.

We have been at Mansfield almost three and a half years. There have been some hard situations, and perplexing problems of course. It seems fair to the readers, and to the local church to say that only in the last six months have the people caught the vision of what we can be and do, trusting Christ. During this period of time we have erased all local indebtedness, made extensive necessary repairs in the plant, and through it all maintained the finest spirit of fellowship and service. During the last quarter, of the year the Sunday school attendance averaged 75 with the highest attendance 100. This is higher than any quarter in recent years by at least 10. The membership of the church has not increased above its losses during the year. One reason is the evangelistic meetings last winter were in 1925 and this winter are planned for this month, 1927. Pray for us, for PRAYER CHANGES THINGS.

We enjoy living at Mansfield very much. The people are very fine and very loyal. If we might criticize at all it would be that they are more loyal to us even, than to their church.

Will write again when the special evangelistic services are over. Brother S. C. Henderson will be our evangelist. He and I arranged for an exchange service. I was at Fremont January 10-24, and he will be in Mansfield February 14-28. Again, may I say, Pray for us in this service.

Fremont, Ohio

I suppose the pastor will report the meeting at Fremont, but I want to give just a few words expressing my joy at the services there. We had the average difficulties of the smaller place—members faithful, but hard to get others to attend. Besides we had about the most beautiful snow I ever saw—16 inches on the level. I thought of Whittier's "Snow Bound" many times, but that didn't help any. We will not report numbers but we believe the Lord's work was profited by our stay there and the laboring with those fine folks. I see a very bright outlook for Fremont. They have as beautiful a little church as I have seen for a long while. It is equipped for service. They have a membership which in their very attitude seems to say, "We Will." And they have many interested families who will surely in the course of time cast their lot with the church. Our church is the only Protestant Immersing church in the city and that helps. Brother Henderson has surely done and is doing a fine work, and from the many friendly expressions I heard I am sure his people know it and are grateful for it. We enjoyed every day of our stay there. Thank you, folks, and God bless You.

Salem—West Alexandria

To write, or not to write,—that has been the question for some time. January 18—February, 1926 we accepted the invitation of pastor and people for an evangelistic meeting at the Salem church, Clayton, Ohio. March 22—April 5, 1926 we accepted a similar invitation and were at the church at West Alexandria, Ohio. As soon as we returned home we entered into the busiest summer we have ever had, and somehow failed to report these services. After we had waited so long, the question became urgent, to write or not to write. We have decided to "come clean," confess our neglect and write.

Since these churches are in a circuit, with Rev. Willis E. Ronk as pastor of both, we are writing under one heading. Both fields were well prepared for the services, and there were fine audiences from the first. Brother Ronk, although taking full time work in the Seminary at Dayton, led a most strenuous life and we spent each afternoon in visiting at Salem and during the first week at West Alexandria. Illness prevented Brother Ronk from being present at the latter part of the West Alexandria meeting, but some of the good brethren went with me and we continued our visiting each afternoon. We shall not give numbers but suffice it to say our labors together were blessed richly of God, at both places.

We want to recognize each of the fine friendships developed while there, and to thank pastor and people for this privileged fellowship. May you take of God's best, Brethren.

R. D. BARNARD.

FREMONT, OHIO

This church had the rare privilege of entertaining the Ohio State Conference of Brethren churches in October. We feel that the local church was greatly benefited by the inspiration and fellowship that the conference brought to us. Ohio has a fine group of ministers, and we were glad to give the people of Fremont an opportunity to hear and know them. We have heard many complimentary remarks about our conference from outside the church. The impression made by both ministers and laity will mean a larger place for the Brethren church in this city.

Not long ago Dr. Chas. Bame spoke before the Kiwanis club and was later recalled to speak before the High School. Brother Bame gave a good account of himself according to the reports we have heard of both addresses.

December 15th, Brother Clarence Sickie visited us and gave a very interesting illustrated account of our mission work in South America.

Our Christmas program was set for the Sunday following Christmas, but when we awoke that Sunday morning we found that one of the deepest snows that has been known for years, had fallen. The roads and streets were impassable, so we postponed the program to the first Sunday of the New Year. It was a white gift service and was enjoyed by a good sized audience.

Not long ago we had a cottage prayer meeting at the parsonage preparatory to our coming series of meetings. It turned out to be the largest prayer meeting in attendance we have had at Fremont. In fact we felt that something was going to happen—and it did. After the prayer service some of the brethren retired and when they returned they carried baskets and packages that they put in the parsonage pantry. A nice gift of money was also handed to the pastor. Thanks, brethren. We will have prayer meeting at the parsonage again some day.

On January 10th, Brother R. D. Barnard of Mansfield came to us for a two weeks' meeting. We looked forward with a great deal of pleasure of having him with us. We happened to be the pastor of his home church when he started to Ashland College to study for the ministry. Brother Barnard preached strong forceful Gospel messages that went home to the heart and consciences of his hearers. (Let me whisper this, that any of our churches wishing for an evangelist will do well to seek his services.) The services were the best attended of any we have had during our pastorate in Fremont, the only thing lacking was the unconverted folks to hear them. We had a fine attendance and cooperation from the other city churches. Some of our country and out of town members were kept away from the meetings by the snow blockaded condition of the highways. There was quite a bit of sickness. We feel that the meetings should have been planned for a longer period. The meetings were a success even though the visible immediate results were not large. We baptized a man for whom we had been hoping for a long time and who will be of much help to the church. Four reconsecrated their lives to the service of the Master and the church. The spiritual tone of the church has been raised, and good seed has been sown that will bear its fruit in due season. Whenever Brother Barnard returns to Fremont, he will be made welcome by the many friends he won during his stay among us. Fremont needs your prayers.

PASTORAL AND EVANGELISTIC SKETCHES

We are writing these few lines from this part of our Lord's vineyard with the hope that our editor will not tire with our oft coming. As we close the records of the old year and launch into the new, we find no reasons to be discouraged, but many for rejoicing, and such that would cause us to take new courage and press the battle yet a bit harder. At Christmas time the church remembered the pastor and family with a very beautiful and costly set of wicker chairs. For this remembrance we are grateful. Not merely for the gift, but for the fine spirit that prompted it. Our Christmas program was commendable and a generous white gift offering was received. Our Bible School year showed a very marked improvement over recent years. Our school is awarding the "Robert Raikes" diplomas for perfect attendance, and forty-two received such recognition for 1926. Our school is keeping around the 200 mark each Lord's day. Our hope for the future here is in our fine group of young people. They are for the most part loyal to the church as well as to the Bible school. Many strangers who come are made to remark concerning the number of children and young people in the public worship. No, we have not been caught as yet into the drift of a "childless church," Brother Editor, for we can count from twenty-five to fifty in our worship services. Our recent evangelistic meeting was not just quite carried out as originally planned. We had hoped to have Brother J. R. Schultz the greater part of the meeting. But Brother Schultz is a real busy man. We all wonder how he does the work that he really does. So he was with us only six services out of the sixteen, the writer preaching at the other times. Brother Schultz always brings us great messages, and we have learned to love him and testify that he lives the gospel he preaches. In spite of the deep snow and then a week of ice, our interest and attendance was very commendable. There were confessions from the very start and when we closed there had twenty-nine come forward at the various invitations. Twenty-two of these have been added to the church. Several were hindered by parents, and two will be baptized later. The converts for the most part were young folks, but several were substantial heads of families. The church has been quickened unto a new life, and a very fine spirit is prevailing throughout the church. The writer spent just five nights with the North Manchester church and received four confessions. It was my privilege to speak to the college students in their chapel services. It was a real delight to return to my Alma Mater after twenty-two years and note her wonderful achievements. This week finds us in the midst of a county Bible School for Teacher Training. Quite a number from the Brethren school are attending. We rejoice in the victories for Christ throughout the church. May we all be true and diligent and faithful in our high calling, until he comes. C. C. GRISSO.

NEW LEBANON, OHIO

"Greetings" to all the Brethren from the Brethren at New Lebanon, Ohio.

Teh work here is going along nicely. We are earnestly at work "Planning Our Doings" and "Doing Our Plans," Lester W. King has been hired as our pastor for an indefinite period with an increase in salary. He is a "live wire" and a "willing worker." Therefore, with his leadership I am sure we shall have a successful year here.

Our Sunday school work is progressing rapidly through the efforts of our newly elected superintendent, O. F. Brumbaugh, who is putting his shoulder to the wheel and pushing. The attendance has been very good. As one incentive, a member of the Mens' Bible Class has offered a prize for the person who brings the most new members during the quarter. An orchestra has been organized, only six members now, but expect to increase that number soon.

The Men's Bible Class has purchased a Bulletin Board. With this board and with the aid of the Rota Speed, which was purchased some time ago, we will be able to do much publicity work.

Improvements at the parsonage have been made by the financial aid of the Women's Missionary Society. Water has been piped in the kitchen and a study room added.

Our last quarterly business meeting was well attended and the reports were splendid. A statement was made by the financial secretary to the effect that the church is in better standing now financially than it has ever been. This is due to the use of the envelope system. We do no soliciting for pledges. This is all free will offering.

A Junior Endeavor has been organized recently. They meet each Sunday afternoon. The attendance has been gratifying.

Recently we have had with us Clarence Sickie, our returned missionary, and Rev. Beachler, pastor of the Dayton church. Mighty glad for the inspiration these brethren brought us.

Our revival meeting will begin March 18th, under the leadership of Russell Barnard from Mansfield, Ohio. We are hoping, working and praying for a great and successful meeting. Remember us in your prayers.

NORA C. ECK,
Corresponding Secretary.

Evangelism and Joy

"He that winneth souls is wise." No work on earth is so dear to the heart of the Master, so rich in its compensations, so productive of spiritual fruitage in the life of the worker. Face to face with souls he catches the best visions of God; fathoms the laws, processes and mysteries of the human spirit; discovers the secret of revealed truth; and becomes immovably confident of the eternal verities of the gospel."—Rev. Dwight Mallory Pratt, D.D.

WAYNESBORO, PENNSYLVANIA

Many times I had read the news from Waynesboro, but not until January 8 was it my privilege to see the town. I was anticipating much and there were three reasons for the anticipation. I will name them in the order of their occurrence.

First, it was my privilege while pastor at Philadelphia to go to the depot and to see depart for Ashland College to prepare for the ministry the one who is now pastor of the Waynesboro congregation. He was then just one of our boys. At Waynesboro I was to associate with him as a fellow minister and pastor. And the association was not disappointing. We had many pleasant hours together in his home.

Second, I was to see dedicated the fine new addition erected to the church building. It is a magnificent piece of work. They showed fine wisdom in building for the Sunday school and for the future. This improvement cost $21,000.00, and this was all provided for before the day of dedication. It was a great achievement, and we must say, Hurrah for Waynesboro.

Third, I was to be the leader, following the dedication, in an evangelistic campaign in the church. From the very first service throughout the two weeks the attendance was very good. On the first Sunday night of the meeting the new Sunday School auditorium was nearly filled in addition to the church auditorium. The interest was very good. The closing day was a test. In the morning with the rain coming down the Sunday school attendance exceeded that of dedication day by just a few. By evening the rain had frozen and the sidewalks were very slippery but they came and filled both auditoriums again. At the close of this service the pastor baptized every one who had made confession. He will report the number. The hospitality of these good people will not soon be forgotten. A good crowd journeyed to the depot to say farewell and to wish me well in my work. Thank you, Waynesboro, for every kindness and good wish.

I am now in a meeting in Jones Mills, Pennsylvania, which will close February 6.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE LITTLE PIG

In a nice, clean pen with a warm little house lived old Mrs. Pig and her little pink pig family. Every little pink pig had a little curly tail and a sharp little nose, but one little pink pig had a small black spot just back of his ear. He was called Spotty.

Mother Pig found Spotty a difficult child to manage. When she called, "Come, children, Farmer Brown is bringing the pail of nice warm milk," the four other little pigs trotted up to the trough and poked their noses in and drink as little pigs should. But Spotty pushed and shoved and squealed and put his foot in, which was very bad manners indeed.

When dinner was over, Mrs. Pig said: "Come, children, it is time to lie down in the nice clean straw and take a nap, for little pigs grow when they are asleep." But Spotty lagged behind and was the very last one in. Then he walked over his little pink brothers and sisters to get close to his mother's big warm side.

One day he refused to take a nap at all, but went up and down beside the fence, poking his sharp little nose into cracks and holes. At last he found a place where he could see under the fence. Then he found that by pushing and scrambling he made the hole larger. He wriggled and squeezed and pushed until his fat little body slid through.

How lovely it was out in the world! The sunshine was warmer and the breezes softer than he had known. The clover blossoms were sweet along the lane, and down at the foot of the hill he saw—what did he see? It looked like a patch of the sky. He trotted right down to find out about it.

When he came to the edge he looked in and saw a little pig about his own size. He walked right in to be with that other little pig, but for some queer reason that other little pig was gone. He found himself all cool and wet, so he came out and went on up the hill. I am thinking he must have looked like a mud pie on four little fat legs.

At the top of the hill he came to another fence with a hole under it. Once more he pushed until his fat little body slid, wriggled, and squeezed through.

This time he was in the orchard. The sun peeped through the wide-spreading trees, the bees hummed, and the butterflies sailed overhead. Altogether it was a wonderful place for a little pig to venture in. After a time he came to the old yellow harvest apple tree. Do you know how yellow harvest apples smell when they are just ripe enough to fall? Anyway, it is a very special smell and very delicious. Spotty tried one. It tasted better than it smelled. He ate another and another and ever so many others.

Then he began to feel very full and very, very sleepy. "Well, I have had a beautiful time, but I think I had better go back now." When he came to the fence, he had some trouble finding the hole; and when he found it, that hole looked much smaller than it did before. He put his nose in, and he wriggled and squeezed and pushed, but his fat little body would not go through. So he squeaked and squealed, "Wee! Wee!" until he had no breath. Then he rested some, and then he began again. So it went through the long summer afternoon.

When Farmer Brown came up from the fields at night, he stood at the barn door and said: "I think I hear a pig squealing." Then he took care of the big, tired horses and came out again. "I'm sure I hear a pig squealing," he said, so he visited Mother Pig and found that Spotty was missing.

When Farmer Brown found the little runaway pig squeaking and squealing under the orchard fence, he pulled him out by the tail and carried him home and dropped him into the pen. Poor Spotty was too tired to complain of his tummy ache, so he snuggled into his straw and slept till morning. When he got up he ran right out to his hole under the fence, but Farmer Brown had found it too. He had filled it with a good-sized stone much too hard and heavy for little pink noses, and Spotty had to content himself with one adventure.—Christian Observer.

000 has been raised. It does not now appear that the local drive will produce much more than the $100,000, thus leaving that much more for the Church to raise. Since there are no other fields from which endowment may be drawn, it is now up to the Brethren churches to respond to Dr. Bell's appeal in such a way that there shall be enough to replace the gymnasium and increase the endowment to at least $550,000.

Some may say, "Why not leave the gymnasium go?" This is impossible. A College without a well-equipped gymnasium is as impossible as a family without an automobile, one could get along without it, but . . . Athletics has become such an important item in modern College life that a college without its athletic program is not attractive to the modern prospective student. Ashland College does not stress athletics but recognizes the place that they hold in the young life of today. The gymnasium must be replaced and that by September, 1927.

The writing of this article was prompted by the conviction that the Church at large simply takes the college situation as a matter of course and does not consider it vitally important. The writer's early college work was done at Ashland. Through a continuous interest in the College, he has always kept in close touch with it, serving for a number of years on the Board of Trustees and for the last two years as a member of the Faculty. In graduate work, a special study was made of Colleges and their requirements and as a result of this study and a deep interest in Ashland College and the Brethren Church, this conviction of the vital importance of Ashland College to the Brethren Church has grown. Never as a student, or worker in the field, or as a member of the Board of Trustees did the force of this conviction fall until he became a member of the faculty and a student of college conditions in a great state university. As a member of the Board of Trustees, he thought of Ashland College seriously for only about two days in the year, as a member of the Faculty, he is concerned with the College 365 days in the year, and thus the importance of the College to the Church has been realized.

In conclusion, it should be repeated, that meeting the requirements laid down by the N. C. A. is the biggest and most important work of the Brethren Church at the present time. THE VERY EXISTENCE OF THE CHURCH DEPENDS UPON THE SUPPORT OF THE COLLEGE.

To think about it, to pray about it and to be interested in the campaign is good, but not enough. You must give until you feel that you have done your utmost for your beloved Church.

The BRETHREN EVANGELIST

- ONE IS YOUR MASTER AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN -

The Heart's Wish

By Margaret Sangster

*I wish that tenderness might grow like flowers,
Until the earth were all a garden place;
Till gentleness filled even weary hours,
And kindness showed on every face.*

*I wish that every pair of eyes showed laughter,
I wish that every mouth might dare to sing;
I wish that all the earth, forever after,
Might show the blessed beauty of the spring. . .*

*I wish that hunted animals might trust us,
I wish that little frightened city strays,
Might know that it was love, not hate, that thrust us
Across their crowded and bewildered ways.*

*I wish that the darkness of misgiving,
Might vanish as slim storm clouds sweep away;
And that we might put loveliness in living,
Not once a year—but on each golden day!*

The Rights of Every Child

Some children have special rights, but there is an irreducible minimum of rights to which every child is entitled. Among these are a sound body, a healthy mind and a nurtured spirit. It is only within recent years that we have been thinking these things. We have not long thought of the child as having any rights, at least nothing very fundamental or of universal application. In fact, there was until comparatively recently very little thought given to the child and his needs. We were content to let him grow to maturity and then attempt to correct whatever evils and handicaps he had acquired. But for some time now we have been conscious of the fact that the child has certain inalienable and sacred rights, requiring all the more careful protection on the part of organized society because of his inability to assert and defend them.

The child has a right to be born with a sound body and to be permitted to grow up with the blessing of normal health and physical development. This idea and understanding of the child's welfare has grown upon the hearts of men in proportion as they have grasped the social significance of the teachings of Jesus. So severely does the enlightened Christian mind react against those forces and individuals that tend to fetter the child's body and foredoom him to a life of physical affliction and disease that it would be almost willing to actually execute the penalty suggested in the statement of Jesus, which may be applied to the physical as well as to the spiritual well-being, wherein he says, "It were well for him if a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were thrown into the sea, rather than that he should cause one of these little ones to stumble" (Luke 17:2. See Matthew 18:6; Mark 9:42). And concern is invoked not merely for the child's own sake, but because of fear of what may be the influence of the child's physical handicaps on the public welfare. "The physical wholeness of the child has been acclaimed as one of the great national hopes." But over and above this selfish viewpoint, the child has a right to the enjoyment of a sound physical body, a right that is so sacred and so inherent that it cannot be ignored and conscience remain what it is.

The child has also a right to a normal and healthy mind. This has both a physical and a social relation. A normal mind is fundamentally dependent on the invaluable heritage of a good birth. Men and women whose bodies are scourged with disease or poisoned with intoxicating liquors or narcotic drugs cannot bequeath to their offspring a true birthright. Then normalcy of mind continues dependent upon a healthy body, upon its hygienic care, strength and purity. And a healthy mind is dependent also upon what the child hears and sees and receives by way of suggestion; upon what it is permitted to feed on. Not mere physical health is enough, however; in fact, physical health cannot be long maintained apart from moral health; the mind must be both morally and physically well, or it will not long be either.

But it requires more than a sound body and a healthy mind to make a "perfect child", which is the slogan on the banner of those who are engaged in the worthy work of promoting the health of children. Spiritual nurture and training are a part of the child's right and are as essential, or rather more so, to his success and happiness in time and eternity as any other element of his being. But no one of the three elements is unessential. As has been said, "without the triune harmony of body, mind and spirit, there can be no whole or perfect child." And the American Child Health Association, which has inaugurated, and for the past four years has promoted, the idea of a May Day celebration throughout the country in the interest of child health, turns this year to the churches and asks that "to the mental and physical ideal which has already been built up be added the spiritual ideal."

This triad of interests, this minimum of rights, deserves the church's attention and effort in a very serious manner. And the church, if it is awake to its opportunity and consequent responsibility, will do what it can to guarantee to the child its rights and to protect it against unscrupulous and indifferent men and women and vicious interests. Dr. Worth M. Tippy has said, "The right of the child to good birth, to gentle rearing and to a fair chance at life has assumed poignant interest with the breaking down of the family and the pressure to utilize the as yet undeveloped child. These are sacrificing the child. Therefore the Child's Bill of Rights demands that our nation shall put the child first in all its thinking, and his spiritual unfolding as the supreme achievement." In line with this ideal is the remarkable statement of "The Child's Bill of Rights" by Herbert Hoover:

"The ideal to which we should strive is that there shall be no child in America that has not been born under proper conditions, that does not live in hygienic surroundings, that ever suffers from undernutrition, that does not have prompt and efficient medical attention and inspection, that does not receive primary instruction in the elements of hygiene and good health; that there shall be no child that has not the complete birthright of a sound mind in a sound body and the encouragement to express in fullest measure the spirit within which is the final endowment of every human being."

May the church enlarge its appreciation of the worth of the child and set itself with greater consecration to combat the forces that make for degeneracy and disease, criminality and irreligion. May it seize upon this opportunity to assert its leadership in clearer and more definite fashion than ever before in giving to children the spiritual ideals and training that is their rightful heritage and to fix this purpose firmly in the nation's thinking, and not only so, but to add its voice and influence to the sum total of all effort to secure for and guarantee to every child what are its essential and irrevocable rights.

According to a statement made some time since by Lawrence H. Baker in "The Atlantic Monthly" a committee of the American Chemical Society has estimated that the annual drug bill of the nation is $500,000,000, of which amount $300,000,000 is spent for so-called patent medicines. Thirty years ago the report of the committee says, 2,699 drug items were reported to be upon the market, whereas today they are held to number 45,000. The increase is beyond all proportion to scientific research. The elimination of ineffective drugs cannot but carry with it better health-investment and less exploitation for those who pay this $500,000,000.

Soul growth comes not by trying, but as the natural and inevitable result of proper spiritual nourishment and exercise.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Send check and order to Rev. O. C. Starn, Gratis, Ohio, for your "Annuals."

A man may impress his audience with the greatness of his sermon and yet not be a great preacher.

Brother W. C. Benshoff informs us that he will be open to calls for evangelistic meetings beginning April first. Write him at Berlin, Pennsylvania.

Endeavorers, Brother R. D. Barnard is wondering if you are going to leave your task in Kentucky unfinished. What do you say about it? Read his statement on Christian Endeavor page.

It is hard for the preacher to maintain his spiritual passion when the members have banked the fires of their spiritual fervor, and yet it is possible, and he will, if he has entered into the fellowship of the sufferings of Christ.

We are glad to note that our Brighton, Indiana, correspondent's appreciation of the "Evangelist" news department has inspired her to write, and she tells of encouraging conditions in the work at that place under the pastoral care of Brother J. W. Brower. They have a new Christian Endeavor society, a flourishing Sunday school and a larger W. M. S.

Our correspondent from the Second church of Los Angeles, California, writes encouragingly of the condition of the work. Brother T. H. Broad is the supply pastor and under his leadership, with the assistance of Rev. Britton Ross as evangelist, and Brother Leo Polman as song leader, a campaign was begun January 23. Brother E. L. Miller has been engaged as pastor to take charge in the summer.

Brother Thomas F. Howell reports the closing of his pastorate at New Highland, Pennsylvania, and his taking up the work at Grafton, West Virginia, where he believes a splendid opportunity for Brethrenism awaits us. After conducting a revival meeting there last fall he was later called to accept the pastorate. He has been well received by the Brethren there and is hard at work as is his custom.

Evangelist H. E. Eppley tells of his campaign at Jones Mille, Pennsylvania, where, lone-handed, he conducted a successful meeting. The pastor, Brother W. S. Baker, could be with him only on the last Sunday. The weather was favorable, the interest rife and the results are said to be quite satisfactory, though we are not informed what they are. We shall hope to have the pastor report this feature in the near future.

Brother M. L. Sands, pastor of the Sterling-Smithville congregation writes an encouraging letter concerning the work in that part of the Lord's vineyard. Attendance at the regular services is good and the departments are active. Effort is being made to clear the Smithville church of debt and the prospects are bright for victory. The membership showed their appreciation of the leadership of Brother and Sister Sands in very practical ways at the Christmas season.

Our correspondent from North Vandergrift, Pennsylvania, reports a very enjoyable and profitable season during the recent campaign in which Brother Thomas Presnell, a graduate of Ashland College last spring, did the preaching and Sister Jessie Coons of Ashland conducted Bible studies and her daughter, Evelyn, gave harp solos and led in the singing. One confession and two reconsecrations are reported. On a later date two others were baptized. Since our correspondent's letter was written, we are informed that Brother Hubert Hammond, recently ordained to the ministry and graduated from Ashland Seminary last spring, has accepted a call to the pastorate of this church.

A most interesting series of news items is supplied in the Sunday school page by Prof. J. A. Garber, General Secretary of the National Sunday School Association. It is evident that the instruction side of church work is more nearly receiving the emphasis that is its due than has formerly been the case. The Association has exercised a great leadership in this field. We join the secretary in extending heartiest congratulations to Treasurer Milton Puterbaugh and his good wife on being the happy parents of a little son, who is to wear the name, John Franklin, and who made his debut on February 12th.

It is a most encouraging report that Brother C. F. Yoder gives of the work at Rio Cuarto, Argentina, where as a result of the recent evangelistic effort fifty souls made the good confession, and previous to these meetings twelve had been baptized. Brother Hershey, superintendent of the Mennonite mission in the Argentine, was the evangelist in this campaign, in exchange for which Dr. Yoder had already held a meeting at the Mennonite mission in which fifty-two souls yielded to the Lord. This should lead men to thank God for answered prayer and continue to intercede in behalf of the workers, the new converts and others who have not accepted Christ.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble, in addition to giving an interesting little poetic venture of Marguerite, relays some interesting news from the African field. The French government will not permit the establishment of the proposed leper asylum until a physician is resident on the field, which fact makes Dr. Gribble unusually anxious to return to Africa at the earliest possible moment. Would that that same eagerness for the conflict were manifest on the part of all the workers in the cause of Christ in the homeland! for then what might not the church accomplish for the coming kingdom? We are sorry to learn of illness among the missionaries, both in France and on the African field. A remarkable deliverance from a disastrous fire at Bassai is reported. The Sunday school attendance at Yalouke continues to increase, having reached the figure of 604, a mark that doubtless challenges the largest school among the Brethren in the homeland.

The Business Manager steps into his "Corner" this week and he has a very nice speech to make, one that we wish he were able to make every week for a period of twenty weeks or more without repeating the name of any church. We are sure our readers would like to "hear" his voice more often, and we are sure also that there are enough churches not now on the Honor Roll to keep him talking for many weeks, if they would get busy and send him a check and a long list of names. The veteran churches on the Honor Roll and all the Evangelist family for that matter, would welcome with open arms any of the other churches who have not yet made the venture, and we are willing to point any hesitant churches or pastors to any of these veteran churches for reference as to how the plan works. We welcome Dr. J. C. Beal and his loyal co-laborers of Sunnyside, Washington, into the Honor class of churches, and hope they will thoroughly enjoy the Evangelist's weekly visits, and will make full use of its columns by sending us frequent newsletters.

We have the first report from Dr. W. S. Bell on his College Endowment campaign work in Indiana, and it comes from the dependable Goshen church, which, notwithstanding its proposed building campaign, made a total gift of $3,734.86, which brings the total Endowment Fund for this drive up to $96,127.52. Brother Stuckman and his good people are to be congratulated. It is worthy of note that there was received at Goshen a one thousand dollar gift. It would be fine if such gifts could pile up a little faster. They are not a few men in the Brethren church whom God has blessed with considerable of this world's goods, and not all of these have begun to learn the meaning of stewardship. When they do, we will have a different story to tell about the financing of the church's activities. It is true that the college must forever be largely dependent on the small gifts of the brotherhood to make possible the steady growth which we expect of her, and yet if she is ever to have her nose lifted off the grindstone, our men of means must begin pretty soon to give in large amounts, and Brethren people in making disposal of their accumulations in anticipation of death, must begin to make generous provision for our college. We are not a church of millionaires, but neither are we a church of poor people in the large, and we must begin soon to demonstrate that fact by our gifts.

VII. Stephen H. Bashor, L.L.D.

By Martin Shively, D.D.

DR. MARTIN SHIVELY, Writer of Serials in Pioneer Preachers

Elder S. H. Bashor was one of the most striking men, in his general appearance, whom it has ever been my lot to meet. He was not at all unusual either in height or weight, but with a head above average size, a shaggy crop of hair, and an eye that seemed to pierce through the object of his gaze, he did not fail to make a deep impression. He was born in Washington County, Tennessee, in 1853, dying only a few years ago at his home in Waterloo, Iowa, where he had resided for some years before his death. He was called to the ministry near Whitesville, Missouri, in 1875, only a few years after having united with the then known German Baptist church. His election to that high office, for he was elected, was only another instance of the weakness of that method of securing men for the pulpits of the church, for as I recall his story of the event, in a congregation of several hundred members, practically every man in it received some votes, and he with seven votes to his credit, was announced as the choice of the church. It was a most unusual thing for men so young to be chosen to such a position, for he was but 22 years of age at the time. What there may have been about him then to single him out from the group, I do not know, but I suspect that to at least a few, he must have given promise of power. At any rate he preached his first sermon two weeks after his call to the ministry, though not in his home church. He had come over to Indiana to visit his cousin, Brother J. B. Lair, strikingly like him in appearance, and on a Sunday morning during that visit, attended the services held in a country church, near Mexico, Indiana. In those days all the ministers present, sat together, behind a long table, with the Elder in charge at the head, and the youngest in the group at the foot of the line. I remember well his story of the event, as the elder invited the man who sat next to him to bring the message of the morning, but since he was not prepared, he passed the invitation down the line, even to its very foot. Since none seemed to be prepared, the elder in charge looked down the line, and noting the presence of the beardless stranger, asked if he were a member, and upon being assured that he was, he said, "Well, he does not look like one." So I am certain that he was not garbed as was generally thought proper. But nevertheless, he was pressed to bring the sermon, and at last ashamed to refuse any longer, he rose to his feet with trembling, but with a prayer in his heart. While the sermon was brief, before it was finished, practically every one in the church was weeping, and this was particularly true among the young folks in the congregation. Before dismissing the people the elder announced, "The young brother will preach again this evening." But at the evening service, he failed lamentably, and though the elder announced "The young brother will preach tomorrow evening," he said to himself, "never." But he did, and after a day spent pretty largely upon his knees, he told me that he thought he preached the best sermon of his life. An invitation was extended to the unsaved that night, and a number made the good confession. There were six meeting houses in that congregation, and the services were continued, with three sermons at each, and 35 persons were baptized. From this time on for a number of years, the "young preacher" was in almost constant demand, and during the first two years, 2400 souls were added to the church in his meetings. And among the peculiarities attending this ministry, was the fact that the spirit of revival did not die when the special services closed, and in many congregations, baptism was administered almost every Sunday for a year, following the visit of the evangelist. It has been estimated that not less than 12000 souls were led to confess their Lord through his ministry. Eternity alone will reveal the measure of the influence of these years of service. He attended Ashland College for one year, and graduated later from the National School of Oratory, in Philadelphia, in 1883, but nature, and nature's God, endowed him richly, while the training of the schools, polished his unusual gifts. He had gifts as a writer also, having been associate Editor of the Brethren at Work, and the Progressive Christian. He was also the promoter and editor of the Gospel Preacher, a paper which reached a circulation of 4000 during its first year. During the later years of his life, he wrote and published a book entitled The Under Pup, being an attack upon extreme socialist propaganda. The style of this book was peculiar, since it was assumed to be the lectures of a down-an-outer, to his dog, but its arguments went home to the mark aimed at. All who knew him, and especially those who were so greatly helped by his ministry, will never cease to regret that he did not continue in the active service of the church, and all such dream dreams as to what might have happened if he had done so. No, he never renounced the ministry, and in fact he continued to preach as opportunity offered until near the end. But his entrance into commercial pursuits, both at home and abroad, and also his entrance into the political field, greatly interfered with the resolutions of his younger days, and too late he found that such things cannot be mixed with exercise in the Christian ministry. I know that if he had had the opportunity to live his life again, it would have been a life devoted to the preaching of the Word and its associated activities. "No man goeth a warfare, and entangleth himself with the affairs of this world," if he is to cherish the hope of success, and this great truth has been demonstrated so continuously in human experience, that it is a wonder that any one yet should make such a mistake, but alas, they do.

As a boy, in a Tunker home, I heard no name more frequently, than the name of Brother Bashor, but it was not my privilege to see him until the conference of 1887, and then only at a distance, because he was one of the big men, and I was an unknown boy in the ministry. A few years later, to be exact, in 1889, immediately following the disastrous Johnstown flood, he told the story of what he saw there, to the state conference at Pleasant Hill, for he had come directly from Johnstown to the conference, when the waters had hardly subsided enough to begin the work of rescue. The details of his story were terrible, and he could tell them so faithfully, as to almost permit his hearers to see the awful wreck. I met him for the first time at this meeting, and the acquaintance there begun, ripened into a friendship which grew in warmth until it was terminated by his death. He spent many days in my home, and I feel that I knew him as intimately as any man could know him. The incidents mentioned in this brief paper were gathered from the conversations I had with him, and might be multiplied many times in number. It is because I knew his great strength as well as his weaknesses, that I regret the more deeply that all his life was not devoted exclusively to the propagation of the cause which had gripped him so powerfully during the earlier years of his relation with the church, and all the more so because I believe that the world would have been richer in the things which make for real riches, for a ministry such as he would have exercised. What I have said in this vein is not to be construed as a criticism of him, for I knew him too well, and loved him too deeply to even think unkindly of the man who has gone to be with the Father who "remembereth that we are dust," and who forgiveth the blunders of his children. Through those who were led to Christ by his word, he will continue to speak, and in this sense he is not dead. For "To live in hearts we leave behind, is not to die."

That Big Item of Church Expense

By Elder G. W. Rensch, D.D.

(Dr. Rensch's Series on "Mountain Peaks on the Horizon" will be continued next week.—Editor.)

What is the thing that "costs so much" in the church? I think I can tell you. It is not the coal bill. It is not the music. It is not the printing. It is not the preacher's salary. It is not the evangelistic meeting with the paid song-leader. It is the empty pew. The empty pew stops the flow of money into the Lord's treasury. But it stops other things besides.

No preacher can be at his best with empty pews staring him in the face. It kills his warmth and glow; it robs him of his power. Looking at the bare backs of empty seats takes the smile out of his face and chills his soul. No orator has ever grown eloquent facing so much varnished wood.

The empty pew discourages the faithful attendants. Everybody likes to go where there is a crowd—even at church. It's the stay-at-homes who hurt. The singers, the teachers, the parents, the janitor, are, in turn, hurt. The empty pew—your empty pew—discourages the real builders of the Lord's work in the community. What business have you making the work of your company more difficult? Pay day is coming. There's to be a settlement. You'll be there then; think now of the One whom you will face. "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" (Heb. 2:3). Yes, "HOW?" says one, "I can hear a better sermon over the radio." I doubt it; but I will not argue that question now. The trouble with you is, you have been taking in, and taking in, until you have grown so thin that you can not see the difference between an argument and an excuse. What about that example you are setting for your family, or that weak Christian whose pew is empty, like your own? What about that warm hand-shake your pastor, and that old acquaintance who has driven miles, will miss? What about that smile of fellowship some one will miss? What about that opportunity to invite some weak-kneed neighbor to the house of God by saying, "Say, John, you ought to have heard our minister yesterday; it was one of the best sermons I have heard in a long time?" But your pew was empty, and your silent argument was, all pews may be empty for ought I care. When all are empty, then what?

The empty pew discourages the visitor. He happened to drop into the service. He notes the empty pews—and, your empty pew. Here was material that the church—your church—needed. Did what he saw encourage him to return? Return, what for? To get another "grin" from the empty pew? Had the house been well filled with earnest, attentive listeners, he might have returned to the next service, and with a larger offering.

The church which is faithfully attended by its own membership (whether that membership be large or small) will attract the stranger. The community will be sure to take notice. Ask one of the merchants where there is a good church to attend, and almost always, he will point to the church where the people go. As a stockholder in the bank, quit this everlasting talking against—and working against—your bank! Get other people interested in its soundness. Think more about "cashing in." All observing neighbors have your measure anyhow. On the back of every empty pew—and your empty pew—they have read the cause of the empty church. Here it is: indifference. And the great Master has waited, and waited through the long night until his locks are wet with the falling dew, just to get an opportunity to say, "son, daughter, come home. For where you treasure is, there will your heart be also." And that's the truth of it all.

The Social Gospel

By President Edwin E. Jacobs, Ph.D.

In reading my New Testament the other day, I found several modifying phrases relative to the Gospel, e. g., the Gospel of God, the Gospel of Christ, or of Jesus Christ, or of the Son, and the Gospel of Peace, but I found nothing about the Social Gospel; hence I have been brought to wonder whether there is such a Gospel, or whether it has been overlooked.

I take the so-called Social Gospel to mean the teaching relative to social betterment and social service and the classical example to illustrate it is taken from Matthew 25, in which Jesus so splendidly points out the way of social service. Here we are told that the Judge of all the earth is pleased when we stop to give the cup of water, to visit the unfortunate, or to help them in their distresses. Those who so do, are to ascend to his right hand, while those who do not, are to go to his left hand.

With this thought in mind, some have identified personal and social salvation and have made them one, or at least have made the former dependant upon the latter, i. e., have made personal salvation depend upon social service. There have been enthusiastic persons who planted their whole stake upon the value of eutherics, thinking thereby to reform the world. Give the people bread, a clean and wholesome house, good clothes, and a job, and we shall be well on the way to glory, was the doctrine. At the same time both the eugenicist and the believer in true personal repentance, stood back in extreme doubt. That people ought to have bread, a home, good clothing and a job, neither one doubted, but just what the permanent effect would be, was not so evident. It now transpires that changes must be more deep-seated than the coat, if lasting good is to be wrought.

Of hasty reformers, we have had enough,—those who would go to sleep one night and wake up the next day to find the whole world saved. Those who have made any fundamental study of the human personality know that human dispositions, predispositions and predilections are pretty deep-seated and hard to change. Washing the face and donning new clothes do not necessarily connote any real change of heart, ideals, or intentions.

Real reforms are generally hard to effect. Social customs are old and in most cases have been brought forward from beginnings long ago. So personal qualities of heart are not gotten together in a day or in one set of parents and to make any real change in them demands a dynamic commensurate with their stubborn nature.

In teaching a class some time ago, I suggested that one could account for the individual in terms of (a) heredity, and (b) environment. This is the usual category,—parentage and surroundings, "nature and nurture," to quote Galton. Much to my astonishment, a Senior held up his hand to ask if that were all and the majority of the class thought it was, that they had completed the list of influences which could be said in any way to effect the individual. But this young man, non-church member that he was, said that he could think of another influence. Can you?

So he said, "What about the new birth? Can that not be said to enter in as an influence thrust in wholly from WITHOUT, and not included in the usual formula, viz., heredity and environment?" My own judgment is, that the young man had found the essence of a very deep seated truth and one that Science can not pass over lightly.

Why is that not the most fundamental of all reforms? Is that not the one that is all too often overlooked when we speak so glibly of social salvation? Is that not a factor in human life that is being slighted today? Is it not true that the doctrine of the Holy Spirit is pushed back today? And yet the very heart of the Gospel is not so much human betterment, ALTHOUGH THAT IS ESSENTIAL, as it is to have the heart re-made so that the well of living water, promised at the Samaritan well, may be in the personal possession of all believers.

Now, there are those who are very skittish of anything that smatters of social. They scare at the word. This, I think, comes from two sources, a profound misunderstanding of what is meant by anything being social on the one hand, and of its cure-all properties on the other. In other words, those who read misunderstand and those who put forward the social gospel attribute entirely too much to it. For whatever else may be said of it, it can never take the place of personal repentance, personal consecration, and personal salvation. People are not won to Christ en mass, in blocks, by cities or neighborhoods. The Holy Spirit works upon the individual personality alone and in its quietude.

That the majority of people in the world should have it better in the here and now than they have, no person will deny. Too many are wretched and miserable and sick, all of which makes against the best development of the human personality but on the other hand correct all of these and you have not then contributed to the heart's deepest need,—God and his abiding presence in the life

Social salvation, apart and separated from the Gospel of Jesus Christ with his doctrine of personal repentance and the new birth, is a delusion and a snare, but associated with it, it may be made to serve the Kingdom. "Seek ye first the Kingdom," rings down through the centuries since his day. The body is more than its meat and the life is more than raiment. Sparrows may not fall unnoticed, and ye are of more value than many sparrows.

A man in a high-priced automobile, a tailor-made suit, with his pockets bulging with stocks and bonds, may yet be poor and miserable and blind and naked. And yet on the other hand, he may use these things to help bind up the broken hearted and to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. Social salvation aside and apart from personal righteousness and salvation is only an attractive will-o-the-wisp, not new today, but put forward today as an alluring substitute for the rigid self-denial which Jesus so much desired and which he demands on the part of those who would follow him.

Challenge to Political Parties

By Senator Morris Sheppard, Father of the Prohibition Amendment

(First of a Series of Articles on Prohibition by Men of Distinguished National Repute)

Guiltier than the professional criminals with whom they indirectly or directly deal are the purchasers and drinkers who move in social and business circles, without whom the boot leg market would disappear; guiltier because opportunity, education, and position make their conduct all the more without excuse; guiltier because they cover their contempt of government and law with a cloak of so-called respectability. When they break one law, they invite the violation of all other laws.

Since they make the existence of the bootlegger possible today they cannot be heard to complain, they cannot consistently invoke the protection of society when the burglar, the rapist, or the murderer invades their homes tomorrow. With their property, their liberties, and their lives safeguarded by the Constitution they become ingrates as well as law breakers when they disregard it.

Law breakers in high places do more to undermine the foundations of order and progress, to encourage communism, bolshevism, anarchy, crime, and red activities in general, than all the denizens of the underworld. Their example is the chief cause of dissipation and lawlessness among younger people.

The exuberance of youth, however, are soon exhausted. The realities and necessities connected with the earning of a livelihood nearly always form a sufficient antidote for them.

It is the older "flapper" among the women and the older "flopper" among the men who constitute the incorrigible and noisy minority and who are the main source of whatever trouble there is.

Nothing is more certain and more gratifying, however, than the fact that the great majority of the American people have adhered to the pronouncements of Washington and have maintained to this hour an unchanging and unchangeable loyalty to the Constitution and to the system it prescribes for its own alteration. Equally loyal have they been to the laws enacted to carry out its principles and provisions, because they have understood and still understand that the Constitution without statutes to carry it into execution is a dead and empty thing.

Accurately may it be said that no statute in the history of the American Congress has been subjected to severer analysis and attack than the Volstead Act. The wets well understand that whereas it takes two-thirds of both Houses to submit and three-fourths of the states to ratify a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, the federal statute which enforces it, namely, the Volstead Act, may be changed at any time by mere majorities in both Houses.

An illustration of the inbred lawlessness of the liquor traffic, of its leprous effect even on those who support its return to a legalized status, is found in the fact that if the wets at any time should obtain majorities in both Houses of Congress they would not hesitate to destroy the Eighteenth Amendment by the changes they would make under the guise of amendments to the Act enforcing it. This is shown in the constant efforts of the wets to amend the Volstead Act so as to secure light wine and beer.

There is but one straightforward, honest, American way to endeavor to bring back wine and beer and other liquids that intoxicate, and that is an appeal by discussion and persuasion to the American electorate to send representatives to House and Senate who will submit to the states the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, followed by a similar appeal to the states to vote for that repeal. Prohibitionists took that course in securing national prohibition.

There is no greater tribute to the Volstead Act and the logic behind its provisions than the fact that after the election of four Congresses since its passage it retains the support of a tremendous majority in both Houses. Prohibition is a fixture in the national household. This fact no political party may disregard without seriously impairing its influence in the nation.

The Volstead Act was based upon the experience of the United States government in endeavoring to run down bootleggers and illicit distillers for fifty years in connection with the license system which prevailed before nationwide prohibition. It will be seen, therefore, that the bootlegger and the moonshiner were here long before the Eighteenth Amendment.

The final test of the efficiency of the Constitution lies in its adequate enforcement. If it is to remain a living factor in our civilization the vigorous and vigilant application of the laws enacted to carry out its provisions is essential. The supremacy of the Constitution and the law is the cause of every true American, wet or dry. In this connection let it be said that enforcement officials in state and nation of undoubted courage, pronounced ability, and unassailable integrity should be persistently and imperatively demanded. All others should be rejected, discredited and condemned.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

A Preacher's Widow and Her Oil

By D. F. Eikenberry

TEXT: "And there cried a certain woman of the wives of the Sons of the prophets unto Elisha."

II Kings 4:1.

This widow of an ancient preacher found herself in the same position common to the widows of many preachers of more modern times, namely—material poverty; a heavy debt and a dependent family of small children. Indeed, this was no cheerful prospect for her, for this unhappy circumstance afforded no comforting thrill or hope of a near future vacation.

Her God fearing husband is dead. She could no more be comforted by his protection, his support and loving devotion. No more could the strong arm of his might raise itself between her and danger. She now finds herself in a hard, cruel, threatening, circumstance.

She had two boys. She loved them as profoundly as all true mothers love their children. They were as dear to her as life itself, but the heartless "creditor" is come to take unto him, . . . these loved jewels of her heart. They are the offsprings of her own flesh and devotions. Indeed, a hard circumstance.

By way of application, did you ever consider what a terrible, heartless, cruel, debasing, consuming creditor sin is, when once a soul becomes involved in the meshes of its subtle influence and power? The evil one never cancels the mortgage or releases his grips, until his victim pays the full measure of penalty, unless his deathly power is conquered and crushed by the never failing regeneration of God through faith in Jesus Christ our Lord.

As this creditor sought to tear from this helpless widow her boys, so Satan, the evil one, is reaching to grab the best we have. He wants your boy, that he might blast his future life. He wants your daughter, that he might besmirch her pure white soul. He would blacken your good name; steal your virtue; ruin your character, and strangle your self respect. He wants our love, our service, our devotions. He wants to close the mortgage. But thanks be to the Father, Jesus said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, and no one shall snatch them out of my hand. My Father, who hath given them unto me, is greater than all; and no one is able to snatch them out of the Father's hand." (John 10:27-29).

But this woman was wise. She did not sit down and surrender to the impending doom, for she had an idea. A great truth filled her soul. A commanding urge deepened the throbbings of her heart and made fleet of foot her steps. She must see Elisha, the man of God. How different from many people, who today, when trouble and threatening disasters approach, made the fatal mistake of surrender, just for want of an ideal, a compelling faith, a mastering assurance. They forget Jesus said to the stammering and embarrassed disciples on the occasion of their failure in the healing of the epileptic boy, "For verily I say unto you, if ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you" (Matt. 17:20-21). They forget the gripping words of the mighty St. Paul as he declares, "I can do all things in him that strengtheneth me" (Phil. 4:13). Let us therefore, as Christians, be fully alert to our spiritual heritage, and meet the problems of life with heaven's assurance.

What did this woman do? She went to Elisha the man of God and related to him the unfortunate circumstances of her unhappy life. Indeed a wise act on her part. She went to Elisha the Prophet of God, the man who knew God. Elisha could tell her what to do. He said, "What shall I do for thee? Tell me." How much that sounds just like the refreshing invitation coming out of Heaven: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:23). Just plain, comforting rest! How the world of men is hungering for rest! There is indeed a note of sadness in the thought of the stupendous endeavor, the marvelous enterprises, the incalculable energy, put forth by the world of men in order to find rest. But alas! How often they fail. For when the full course has been run, and the last balance is struck; the last examination of the last semester has been made, and the final grades and awards rendered; alas! how often men are then made to bemoan, like King Saul, as he wailed at the time of his humiliation in his cowardly pursuit of the young man David, "I have sinned, . . . Behold, I have played the fool, and have erred exceedingly."

Then Elisha said to her, "What hast thou in the house?" And she said, "Thy handmaid hath not anything in the house, save a pot of oil." Not very much wealth indeed. Just a little oil. But a little oil on earth, poured by the hand of faith, and God in heaven, is sufficient. Nothing more is needed but a lot of empty vessels in which to put the oil. Then he said, "Go borrow these vessels abroad of all thy neighbors, even empty vessels. Borrow not a few. And thou shalt go in, and shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and pour out into all these vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full."

Now this woman did not take time to intellectualize over this proposed plan of her salvation. Neither did she say, "Now, Dr. Elisha, that is fine sentiment. But in this age we want practical principles and instructions. Your mysterious, mystical suggestions would have been accepted during the age of ignorance and general superstition. But that stuff for this scientific age is not accepted. Don't you know there is no historical basis for such interpretations of the way of Life? Besides, it is altogether unscientific and minus authentic authority." May we hasten to say, such was not the standard of her reasoning. She was too wise, for she interpreted life from the God side standpoint. She looked at the world of sense from the Divine and Spiritual point of view. Hence she saw spiritual forces at work in the affairs of man. Therefore in full obedience, she proceeded to borrow vessels, not a few. She obeyed and God marvelously gave the increase; it is ours to be faithful, but it is God's to give the reward."

The world of unregenerated men has not yet taken

God at his word. Men have not yet caught up with God will in Spiritual and Moral revelation. They are eager to listen to God's will in every secret of discovery and inventions in the physical world. Men call that natural. They forget that all nature, all scientific truth is but expression of God's will in the realm of the physical.

The world of men is selfish, reactionary, materialist; despises discipline and lives largely for self and sense. Hence, when the forces of the great eternal unseen spiritual realm are offered, unregenerated man at once proceeds to throw over his head the cloak of doubt, obscuring his vision of the possibilities of God in human life. But the Christian need not be confused or hesitate over the stumblings and blunderings of unregenerated intellectuality and so called reason. For long ago Jesus and St. Paul answered them in their dilemma. Jesus said, "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may be with you for ever, even

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

THE DEATH OF LAZARUS—John 1:1-16.

We would be amazed at the apparent indifference of Jesus at the announced sickness and death of Lazarus if we did not keep in mind who he is; but it is not surprising that the Lord of life should not be disturbed about the havoc of the pale horse and his rider. Not even death need cause us to shrink when he is near.

TUESDAY

JESUS COMFORTS THE SISTERS—John 11:17-37.

And that comforting message is to all the world and it is just the answer that the human heart has been seeking to its deepest longing through the ages. And this assurance which Jesus gives is the strongest motive to right conduct that moves upon the hearts of men.

THE DEAD RAISED—John 11:38-44.

They marvelled that the dead was raised; the greater marvel was the Lord Jesus in whom was all the power of God the Father and the wisdom of God. But many had not eyes to see more than the material presence of a man. How much we miss by our blindness.

THURSDAY

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS—1 Cor. 15:1-8.

The resurrection of Jesus is one of the most faithfully attested facts in history, and it gives guarantee to one of the most earnestly longed-for hopes that the heart of man has laid hold on—life after death.

FRIDAY

PROOF OF THE RESURRECTION—1 Cor. 15:12-23.

Paul's argument is indisputable, that the Christian's resurrection is as certain as the resurrection of Jesus. He could have based it no more firmly. And if this central fact is doubted, the whole fabric of the Gospel is undermined.

SATURDAY

NATURE OF THE RESURRECTION—1 Cor. 15:35-43.

The resurrection is as certain as death and follows naturally as the next step according to the divine order. To this all nature bears witness, and the appearance of the resurrection body is in contrast to the natural body as dishonor and weakness are in contrast to glory and power.

SUNDAY

SPIRITUALITY OF THE RESURRECTION BODY—1 Cor. 15:44-58.

The resurrection body is to be a spiritual body—"flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God"—but the body is to be no less real because it is to be spiritual. The change is a great mystery. But why should we worry or doubt; cannot he who created life, accomplish the resurrection which he has promised? Verily he shall do it!—G. S. B.

the spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive; for it beholdeth him not, neither knoweth him, for he abideth with you and shall be in you" (John 14:16-17). While St. Paul in 1 Corinthians 2:14 declares, "Now the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; and he cannot know them, because they are spiritually judged." In order to know God, men must be spiritually minded, and willing to take God at his word.

Well, in compliance with Elisha's command this woman borrowed vessels in which to pour the oil. There are some beautiful lessons clustering around these empty vessels. Let us briefly notice some of them.

First, these empty vessels measured the strength of her faith. Her faith extended all the way from the first one borrowed unto and including the last one borrowed. Now God worked in her life just as far as extended the empty capacity of her unfilled vessels. What a cheerful thought! How God will work in your life and mine to the full extent of our endeavors and persistence; our obedience, our prayers and love. These measure the strength of our faith. For in this we go no farther than the length and breadth, height and depth of our faith.

Then again these empty vessels measure the bigness of her opportunity. Her opportunity was empty vessels to receive oil, with which to pay the debt to save her sons from a life of slavery. Did you ever stop to think the great needs of our life are but big opportunities for God to demonstrate the full measure of his power and grace? It is so. For therein experience answers back to revelations in full satisfaction to reason. And, as the loving Father fills to overflowing every empty vessel in our lives, by heralding back heaven's answer to our hungering, thirsting souls; by bringing rest to every trembling emotion, by clarifying every perplexing and heart breaking experience; it is then faith becomes reality, and God in the life a never doubting assurance. Then it is we cry, "Abba, Father," and exclaim in the words of St. Paul, "For I know him whom I have believed."

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Striving For the Heights

By Mrs. Arthur P. Petit

OUR SCRIPTURE

Being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; through whom also we have had our access by faith into this grace wherein we stand; and we rejoice in hope of the glory of God. And not only so, but we also rejoice in our tribulations: knowing that tribulation, worketh steadfastness; and steadfastness, approvedness; and approvedness, hope; and hope putteth not to shame; because the love of God hath been shed abroad in our hearts through the Holy Spirit which was given unto us. For while we were yet weak, in due season Christ died for the ungodly. For scarcely for a righteous man will, one die: for peradventure for the good man some one would even dare to die. But God commendeth his own love towards us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us. Much more then, being now justified by his blood, shall we be saved from the wrath of God through him. For if, while we were enemies, we were reconciled to God through the death of his Son much more, being reconciled shall we be saved by his life, and not only so, but we also rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received the reconciliation (Romans 5:1-12).

OUR MEDITATION

In the struggle and strife for worldly gain we too often lose sight of the real goal in life: we forget Jesus. We glory in the bank account of swelling figures. We boast of property accumulations. We gloat over social achievement, but we are stoic concerning Jesus Christ. We forget to be "zealous for spiritual" things.

Christ has made us joint heirs with him, but do we deserve that name? If we knew we had been named as part heir of a certain relative what would in all probability be our attitude toward that kin? No day would be too busy to perform a task, no matter how menial, for that consanguinity, if that be their wish. But what do we do for Christ? Nothing!

And, yet, how much more desirable are the things which we are to receive as "joint heirs with Christ." We are to have riches such as can never be obtained here on earth. We are to have mansions far grander than any earthly dwellings. We are to belong to his family and live eternally. All these and many other gifts are promised us if—if we but "take up our cross and follow him."

Yes, we must follow him. Not in a half hearted manner but zealously seeking to do his Will. A child must learn the wishes of his parents before he can follow them. A Christian must learn the wishes of his Lord before he can obey them. Just as a driver makes slow progress over a strange road after dark, a Christian makes little or no progress along the Narrow Way without the Light from God's Word. So we must STUDY the Book of Books.

And then PRAY: "Speak oft with thy Lord."

"Take time to be holy

The world rushes on,

Spend much time in secret

With Jesus alone."

In this work-a-day world our brows become furrowed and our minds dull trying to solve the many worldly problems with which we must cope. We turn expectantly to some true friend but receive little or no aid and we struggle on, alone. But these problems concern only passing things. If we seek so perseveringly for a solution of them, how much harder should we seek to solve the problems which confront every Christian every moment of their lives in Christ. But we have one to whom we can turn and who can help us more than earthly friends. It is to him we can bare our hearts and feel that he can and will help us.

After a practice of prayer and meditation has been established by the Christian, his attitude towards his fellowmen will be changed. He will lose self in service for others, as Christ died for us. He shall be called "blessed" because

"By looking to Jesus,

Like him thou shalt be.

Thy friends in thy conduct

His likeness shall see."

OUR PRAYER

Holy Jesus, our Savior and Helper, who lived and suffered temptations even as we suffer today, make us more humble in thy sight. Help us to be strong in temptation. Make us more worthy of thy great sacrifices for us. Lord, help us to strive more diligently to be like the example set for us years ago. Give us a stronger desire for the Heavenly things. Make us more forgetful of self that we might more exemplify our Lord and Master. Amen.

Making the World Christian

Scripture Lesson — Matthew 28:16-20; Acts 16:6-15.

Devotional Reading—Isaiah 60:1-5.

Golden Text—Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations. Matthew 28:19.

LESSON LIGHTS

Missions the Duty of the Church

This was to make disciples, Christians, of all the world. This is the missionary duty of the church. (1) This is the command of Christ. The church cannot be obedient and let one nation be without the gospel. (2) This command includes home missions as well as foreign; our own neighborhood as well as more distant places. But missionary effort must not be confined to the home field. Every nation needs the gospel as much as ours needs it. (3) It is the nature of a living Christianity to be missionary. That church is dead which is not anxious to preach the gospel to every creature. (4) This is the only way the church will keep pure. Nothing without this can keep the doctrine or life pure; organizations, creeds, persecutions—all have failed. But any church which seeks to save souls will keep pure, because it cannot do its work without the great main doctrines of Christianity. (5) The true broad church cares for the salvation of the world; the narrow church is the one that cares chiefly for itself and for temporal things. (6) The church at home is built up faster by working for the heathen than for themselves alone.—Illustrated Quarterly.

Command of Christ

It is the command of Christ that we preach the gospel to all nations. And even if we could not see results yet it would be our duty to obey. The church cannot be obedient and let one nation be without the gospel. The duty is obligatory, not only on ministers and missionaries alone, but upon the whole church. This commission was given, not to the apostles only, but to the whole body of disciples. And they obeyed the command. Within one generation they preached to every nation in the then known world.

If the church has often faltered in her world-wide task, it is not her Master's fault. He gave the universal vision, the inalienable endowment. He pledged himself to the world-wide and age-long tasks.—R. C. Gillie.

Our Disappointments God's Appointments

Our Bithynias. Had Paul's desire been granted and he suffered to go to Bithynia he might "never have landed on the shores of Europe; never have lifted up his voice in Athens; never have preached the riches of his Savior beside the Roman palace of the Caesars. He was thwarted, and it led him to his crown."

What to others are disappointments, are to believers intimations of the way and will of God.—John Newton.

You may have the door shut in your face with a slam. And it may be done to turn your mind away from petty, meagre success into some thing that has dimensions and content. You can afford to let Bithynia go, if God is granting you instead a great section of Europe.—Tarbell.

Every Man's Influence—What?

"Every man is a missionary, now and forever, for good or for evil, whether he intends it or not. He may be a blot, radiating his dark influence outward to the very circumference of society; or he may be a blessing, spreading benediction over the length and breadth of the world; but a blank he cannot be. There are no moral blanks; there are no neutral characters. Being dead or alive, every man speaks."—Thomas Chalmers.

The Man with the Heart of God

"How would you like to be described as 'the man with the heart of God?' This characterization came unsought to a New England manufacturer, still living, because he sent ten Chinese pastors into Northern Shensi, where no missionary work had ever been done. Within two years, ten walled cities were entered, ten churches were started, nearly one thousand converts were gathered, mostly of the upper classes, and the work was spreading on every side. Then it was that a group of converts, 680 in number, sent a message of love and appreciation to him in the form of a beautiful silk banner, with this inscription: 'You, sir, have the heart of God. We owe it to you that the grace of God has come to us here in Shensi. How can we thank you? We are utterly unable to do so. Words completely fail.' Was ever a more beautiful testimonial received?"—Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D. D.

Go forth in the great endeavor to make the mind of the world a Christian mind, the heart of the world a Christian heart, the creative will of the world a Christian will; and behold, from your mighty associated labors, coming forth like a sunrise after a night of horror, a Christian civilization. Be thou in mind, in heart, in will, in experience, in gifts, thyself a foreign missionary,

Church School News

By Prof. J. A. Garber

Our effort to get the Standard of Excellence before Brethren church schools during the month of January appears to be bearing fruit. School superintendents have been inquiring relative to the way to attain certain points on the Standard.

Flora and Warsaw

Brother Lee Myer of Flora, Indiana, is making an effort to start a teacher training class in his school. Brother F. E. Robbins of Warsaw, Indiana, is checking up on the books required under Point Ten. These are important considerations. Schools failing to give attention to them will probably find themselves unable to qualify when the reports are asked for about April 1st. The National Association decided that the schools would be required to add seven books to their libraries during this year.

The Educator

One leading pastor asked if we really think the people of our church schools know the value of the Brethren Educator. He says that he has been comparing it with similar publications, and finds his best help in The Educator. This pastor believes that the magazine would be prized by people of other churches if they had a chance to discover its value. The February issue deals with Rural Church and Young People's Work. The March Educator will stress Evangelism and Missions. A post card request will bring you a sample copy without cost.

Altoona

Our program of church school evangelism leading up to Easter includes pastor's instruction classes. Thoughtful ministers regard classes of instruction in Christian living an inescapable part of their pastoral work. Our National Association tried to help ministers render this service by publishing the booklet entitled "Studies in the Way of Life." A number of our pastors have used this study text with rewarding results. A letter from Dr. A. D. Gnagey, formerly Sunday school editor, now pastor at Altoona, informs us that he has two such classes again this year. A similar effort last year enabled him to receive a fine group of young people into his church at Easter.

Gratis

Readers who have been following the reports from Gratis, Ohio, have been impressed with the pastoral leadership of Brother O. C. Starn in that rural community. He has been teaching "The Life of Christ" to high school students. His latest move is the organization of a "Religious Education Association", apparently the first organization of the kind in a local rural community. The purpose is to create a community religious spirit, to promote religious education work and to lead, especially the young, to Christ. The organization provides for a director of religious education who will have general supervision of teacher training, vacation school and week-day school work. Brother Starn is the director, has already started a community training class and planning for the vacation school.

NEW ASSISTANT TREASURER

This new assistant in the treasurer's office will use this signature: John Franklin Puterbaugh. He entered into his present position in the early morning of Lincoln's latest birthday anniversary. If recent remittances to the National Sunday School Association are not promptly acknowledged readers of this item of great importance will understand that Treasurer Milton P. Puterbaugh is busily engaged learning to play the part of "father." Heartiest congratulations to the happy parents and best wishes for the son. "Like father and mother" is a very good wish for John Franklin.

The Unfinished Task

In one of the great art galleries of the world, it is said, there stands a large block of marble, unshapely, unfinished. One wonders why such a lump of stone, comparatively untooled should be here among the works of beauty. On looking more closely one sees that the work of shaping was begun but never finished. On a plate below is the explanation of the mystery. "At this stage of the work the artist died." A vivid picture of an unfinished task!

Endeavorers began a task only a few years ago.—The support of a teacher in Kentucky. This is a yearly obligation, and our pledges have not been sufficient for this year! Endeavorers, shall we leave it an unfinished task? Yes or No? Surely we will answer an eternal NO.

AT WORK IN HIS VINEYARD

In early manhood Donald Hankey, widely known as the "Student in Arms," passed through years of mental and spiritual perplexity. God seemed unreal to him. "Oh, that I knew where I might find him!" was the cry of his heart.

One day he remembered a saying once heard in childhood: "If you would behold Christ, he is at work in his vineyard."

Hankey set out on the quest. Resigning his commission in the army, he began to work among boys in the East End of London. That was the vineyard, the crowded, ragged life of city slums, where he looked to find the Master. Nor was he disappointed. At the bedside of a boy who was dying of consumption he suddenly felt the reality of Christ. The Master was there at work in his vineyard. God in a slum? Yes, as surely as God in a garden!

"We have a religion," said Scott Holland, "that finds in humanity the special expression of God's life. God is to be felt in the movement of human multitudes in a more tingling intimacy than can ever be won out of running rivers and silent stars. Something ought to emerge through the city and its throngs that carries nearer to God's heart than woods or water, hills or sun or moon."

Fellowship in city slums and such lowly places of the plain is sacramental. After long and fruitless quest Sir Launfal found the Holy Grail at last as he shared his crust and cup of cold water with the beggar at his gate. Something emerged out of that fellowship; the two became three. So the vision came to Hankey, the young knight of our day, as he shared his love with the dying boy. He learned more in that sodid room than in a whole library of theology.

To many a perplexed soul the word that helped Hankey may prove a kindly light. "If you would behold Christ, he is at work in his vineyard." To find him you must go down into the vineyard, not as a visitor, but as a worker.—Youth's Companion.

In almost all cases where wrong deeds are done the defeat of goodness has taken place first in the heart.—Dean Inge.

LEARNING

By William L. Stidger

I have learned laughter from living
And leaping young mountain streams;
Friendship and courage from oak trees;
And—from the arching sky, dreams.

I have learned love from the whisper
Of winds through the wistful hours;
I have learned hope from refreshing
And friendly mid-afternoon showers.

I have learned patience from rivers;
Poise from the cliffs and the peak;
I have learned, always, to listen
For whispers when beauty speaks.

I have learned wisdom from watching
The beavers and birds and bees;
I have learned music and rhythm
From swaying of wind-swept trees.

I have learned faith through some flowers
That dare to a further height
Even than timberline dareth—
In crimson and Alpine White.

I have learned peace and its beauty
Deep in the heart of the night,
Up where the full moon is sailing
The skies in a silver flight.

I have learned prayer through the subtle
Soft lights of the afterglow;

I have found God and his dreaming
In the sea where the star-streams flow.

JUNIOR ENDEAVOR

By Virginia Haun

A Good Turn Daily. Mark 10:43-45

Many, many years ago there lived a woman whose name was Dorcas. This woman was a very kind woman and she had many friends. She lived at a very wonderful time in those countries far across the sea where Jesus spent his life, and she lived during the time that Jesus preached and the time when Peter and John and Paul and others were telling about Jesus.

I am not just sure about the exact things that Dorcas did while she was living but she is sometimes called the good-turn woman, so I am going to try to imagine with you some of the things that might have happened.

One day when Dorcas was just in the midst of her work, there came to her door a little girl. The little girl said, "Please, come with me. Mother is sick and I don't know what to do."

Dorcas knew that the little girl was a child of one of her neighbors but she did not know her very well at all. Nevertheless Dorcas left her work and went immediately with the child. Soon she was helping to make the sick mother comfortable. She cooled the aching head of the sick mother and fixed some herbs for her to take. Finally when the mother was quite comfortable Dorcas said to the little girl, "Now I must go home. Come to see me real soon and if ever I can help you, be sure to come and tell me."

Dorcas felt very happy because she had been able to help these neighbors of hers. On the very next day as Dorcas was going to do her shopping, she passed some children who were playing in the street. She noticed that there was one little boy among the group who seemed quite unhappy, so she asked what was the matter. The little boy said, "Mother told me that I must stay right here close to our home all day because my clothes are so ragged that I am not nice enough to go away and everybody is fixing to go away and leave me. No one will stay and play with me."

"Well, we will see about that," said Dorcas. "Where is your mother? Let's go and talk to her."

When Dorcas had talked to the boy's mother, she found that she was a poor widow woman and could hardly find money enough to get food and clothes for her children. Then Dorcas asked if she might take the little boy home with her. Guess what Dorcas did for the little boy that day. She made him a play suit so that he could go with the other children whenever he wanted to and she told him that some other day she would make him a nice Sunday suit.

In the evening Dorcas was again very happy because she had been able to help someone. She went along with the little boy to his home that evening and again talked to his mother. She asked her if she would be willing to have some help with her sewing and the poor mother was very much pleased. She thanked Dorcas as well as she could. Now you see why Dorcas was called the good-turn woman. She was always helping someone. There were many other poor mothers and other poor people who needed help. Very often she made them clothing when they were in great need.

Then one day, a very terrible thing happened. Dorcas fell sick and soon died. All these good friends who loved her gathered round her and wept. And they showed each other the clothes that she had made and they said, "Oh, how can we ever get along without Dorcas? She has been so good to us."

Then suddenly someone said, "Maybe Peter, the Apostle can help us."

Soon Peter was there and they showed him the things that Dorcas had made and told him how much they all loved Dorcas. Then Peter prayed and the most wonderful thing that you can think of happened. When Peter took the hand of Dorcas, she opened her eyes and then stood up all alive and well. So the good-turn woman was well to do good turns again and everyone was happy.

Dr. Gribble Writes from France

18 Rue Nationale, 18 Montpellier France.
 January 26, 1927.

Dear Evangelist readers:

I have indeed neglected writing to you, the chief reason being that I have not found it easy to put aside school, hospital or dispensary duties.

Marguerite's journey, now that her travels are finished and she has settled down to being a little school girl in France does not afford enough of interest for your perusal. She has difficulties of various kinds, and if you read between the lines of her crude little poem you will discover the feelings of a little American school girl in France.

Home and France

"There is a land,
 Where once my hand,
 Was held by Mamma May,
 She said, "My dear, you cannot stay,
 For you must help your mother,
 And be her darling lover."

Children at school, they treat me rough,
 And seem to think I'm naught but stuff,
 Of course you know that this is France,
 Where very few have had the chance
 To take the test,
 And show they're not just like the rest.

Mamma May and Mother,
 Daddy John and Brother,*
 They're all so nice to me,
 Just as nice as can be
 And I hope that this rhyme,
 May repay them sometime!

So I will be French,
 Sitting on a bench,
 And the children who are rough,
 Will think I'm more than stuff,
 And it may be,
 They will play with me."

There is a little more to this first effort on her part to be poetical, but doubtless this will suffice.

Montpellier has passed through a terrible epidemic of grippe, having been in this respect the storm center for all Europe. Marguerite and I have both had attacks, and are grateful to the Lord for the preservation of our lives for the percentage of mortality has been very great.

News has recently been received from the field. I venture to transcribe from some of the letters.

"Mr. and Mrs. Jobson have been returned to their former field of labor, Bassai."

"Mr. and Mrs. Foster have been appointed by the Field Council to work at Yaloke."

"Different stations, from time to time will supply workers to assist at the Bassango station until such time as present workers can be relieved permanently of their duties, or new missionaries come to fill the need."

One of the items from the report of the field council meeting is pathetic.

"Owing to the fact that the government will not permit the proposed leper asylum until there is a doctor resident on the field, (*Vernon Bishop, for whom Mrs. Weed is caring).

we, in the interim, take the following action:

"(1) Set apart a portion of the church for the use of those infected.

"(2) Discourage natives frequenting mission verandas and houses.

"(3) Employ no lepers as workmen except in special cases where special tools are provided.

"(4) Provide for these special cases—huts apart from the regular workmen: the aforesaid submitting themselves for treatment.

"(5) Adopt a program of teaching to instruct natives in the prevention and spread of this disease.

Different missionaries have been asked what has been the hardest thing in their missionary careers. Personally, I would answer this question thus, "To stay away from the field for the time necessary for the recuperation of the body." Will you not pray, in view of the great need on the field not alone concerning the leper asylum, but along other lines as well, for instance, shortage of workers at the new station, that my return to the field may not be delayed beyond the contemplated month, August." Pray also for the speedy equipment of the Messers Taber and other volunteers for the medical work, that they may be enabled to take and complete their courses in a manner pleasing to God? Then we need to pray also for Miss Deeter, that her return to the field may not be hindered by health reasons, for Ernest and Ethel Myers and other candidates in waiting, that their hindrances may be removed, and for an increase of volunteers.

One of the letters from Mr. Hathaway describes the joy at the arrival of the missionaries. October 24th, Brother Foster came in with a temperature of over a hundred—so he was put to bed immediately—therefore the big dinner we had planned was spoiled for the time being. We took the Jobsons home with us, and Brother and Sister Foster stayed with Miss Emmert and Miss Tyson. This is Wednesday (they arrived on Sunday). As Brother Foster's temperature is normal, we presume he will be getting up for a while today. Brother Kennedy has not yet (October 27) arrived from Bassai, but Mr. Hathaway will be starting out to meet him soon. He cannot go all the way to Bozoum as a bridge is out near Yimbili. When he arrives (D. V.) we will have our season of prayer and conference."

The last news from Bassai was that "Miss Myers had gone to Bossangoa to nurse Mrs. Sheldon as she was reported very ill. She has had much recent illness. She had a severe attack of malaria a few days after the wedding. Brother Sheldon had an attack on his way from Bassai to Bossangoa. Mrs. Sheldon's continued low temperature seems to indicate sun as well as malaria. They are living in the rest house. Permission for building has not yet been received. We are anxiously awaiting news from them. Mrs. Kennedy and Miss Bickel were alone at Bassai (with Lester Junior) during the Conference at Yaloke."

"Must not forget to tell you," writes Mrs. Hathaway, "that tires and tubes bought in January at Kinshassa have at last arrived at Bangui! We are so glad the auto can again be used. The Fosters have brought a "push-push" which will be fine for village work, and Brother Jobson's motorcycle surely is great. It seems so good to have Brother and Sister Jobson with us again. We like the Fosters so much, too, and know they will be a great blessing to the work."

Brother Hathaway, in referring to the fire at Bassai in May says, "God's hand was with the missionaries even though he permitted that dark hour to come. Whoever heard of a grass roof being saved from fire? The fire would not travel even in the dried grass and with knives the grass was cut from the roof and pitched to the ground. ... The Lord never allows anything to come to his own which is not for their good and his glory. Out of the last fire came Yama, the preacher, in many respects like Paul. ... A blessing both to missionaries and to the work. From the fire, instead of seeing Christians backsliding, we see the church crowded as never before.

"Paper could not tell of the way the Lord has been blessing, the joys in his service, and the fellowship we are having with one another as missionaries. "Just one thing," continues Brother Hathaway, and I must close: "The chiefs are now beginning to attend Sunday school. Yaloke is almost a regular attendant as well as many others who are following his example. The attendance of the last two Sundays was large, this being due, first of all, because the chiefs are coming, and secondly, because of the new missionaries being here. 564 was our attendance of two weeks ago, while last Sunday we had 604, 256 men in my class forced us to abandon the veranda and take to open air quarters."

Beloved readers, "the fervent effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Will you not then continue to pray and to praise?

Faithfully yours in him,
 FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE.

MEXICAN CHURCH AND WOMEN

Miss Rebecca J. Parker, of the American Friends Mission in Mexico, reports: "We hear very little of any religious strife in Tamaulipas. It is mostly Catholic women who are missing the opportunity to attend mass. The great majority of the men are indifferent or frankly opposed to the Catholic priests. The money collected in fees before abandoning their churches was enormous. The civil marriage ceremony is the only one recognized by law and the cost is slight, and in some states is free. But the church does not recognize the civil ceremony as valid and discourages their members from complying with it, at the same time refusing to lower their fees for the poorer classes, with the result that many simply dispense with any ceremony at all. The Government has seen to it that the churches remain open in charge of a citizen's committee, so that the people may go and worship, even if there is no priest to say mass and hear confessions. Our own services and those of all other Protestant churches have continued without interruption or molestation."

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Goshen Opens the Indiana Campaign for Ashland College Endowment

The Endowment Campaign has shifted from Pennsylvania to Indiana. Every church in Pennsylvania has been canvassed except Waynesboro and this was passed up purposely on account of remodeling their church and dedication. This church will be visited when Maryland and Virginia are. A few of the small churches in the Pennsylvania District that are located in West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware will be canvassed in connection with the work in Virginia and Maryland.

Pennsylvania came across for the College in fine shape and if the other districts do as well the Endowment will go beyond our goal. I want to thank the pastors and members for their fine spirit of cooperation and aid given.

Indiana

Indiana is located geographically in the center of our church activity in America and was first visited in the former campaign. We anticipate a pleasant time with our pastors and people in this work which is none too easy at the best. We shall visit the churches in this district as fast as we can and do the job. I FEEL THAT THIS TASK SHOULD REST WITH AS MUCH CONCERN ON THE PASTORS AND OUR MEMBERS AS ON ME IT IS OUR COLLEGE AND OUR JOB TO PUT IT ACROSS. SO ALTOGETHER LET US PULL AND PUT IT OVER. INDIANA HAS NEVER FAILED TO DO HER PART.

Goshen

Jacob and his sons when in need went to Goshen for help and were not disappointed. Following this famous precedent we decided to open the Indiana campaign in Goshen AND WE WERE NOT DISAPPOINTED.

This church is well known to the brotherhood. It is one of our ranking churches, possesses a fine spirit and always anxious to do their best to promote the work of the church.

Brother Stuckman is the pastor, an Ashland graduate as well as his wife, and it is needless to say that every aid and encouragement was given to me in the work here. The church is planning on a building program and have purchased two adjoining properties and expect in the near future to erect an annex to the church. They are very much in need of additional room for their large and growing Sunday school. Just a few days after I finished my work there, a fire was caused in the church by a cook stove which did considerable damage to the building and may hasten the building program.

While the church had recently raised money for the purchase of additional property and anticipating a financial drive for a building, yet with this, they did not excuse themselves from helping the endowment.

I received in Goshen the first $1,000.00 gift for Indiana in the campaign and the people as a whole did their part. The total gift of the church to date for the endowment was $3,734.86.

It was a pleasure to work here with Brother Stuckman, who is one of the Trustees of the College and I trust that Goshen will be but a sample of what I will find in all the Indiana churches.

W. S. BELL.

JONES MILLS, PENNSYLVANIA

The church known as Jones Mills is a rural church located a short distance from the town of Jones Mills which is on the pike between Somerset and Mt. Pleasant. The church is surrounded by hills and from these come forth the finest spring water in the country.

The meeting here began on Monday night following the close of the meeting at Waynesboro. The writer acted in the capacity of song director and evangelist. Brother W. S. Baker is the pastor here and could only be present at the services on the closing Sunday. This of course we felt to be somewhat of a handicap. There was one in our favor throughout the two weeks and that was the weather man. Fear was entertained that a heavy snow and wind would bring the meeting to a close. The very worst we had was rain and a majority of the days it rained it stopped before the hour for the meeting to begin and waited to begin again until the meeting closed. If these good people are able to influence the weather man I would like to know how it is done.

The attendance throughout the meeting was very good and well sustained. Once I was told that some had walked a distance requiring an hour going to church and an hour to return home. And that was over pretty muddy roads, too. The interest was very good and the results seemed to be satisfying to the membership and the pastor.

This church should have a pastor on the field. No man can do his best and drive fifty miles to preach. An almost ideal arrangement could be worked out between Mt. Pleasant and Jones Mills if they had a mind to do it. The two churches should go together and purchase a parsonage on the pike about midway between the two points and then together call a man for full time. He could drive his own car or take the buss which runs between the two points every day. This plan would place the pastor within easy reach of both churches and be no burden upon him. Come on, Mt. Pleasant and Jones Mills, and get your heads and hearts together in the interest of greater things for the Kingdom. You can do it and solve the most perplexing problem of both churches.

H. E. EPPLEY,

Song Director and Evangelist,
Winona Lake, Indiana.

SECOND CHURCH, LOS ANGELES

Our Evangelist friends have not heard from the Second Brethren church of Los Angeles, but we are very much alive.

At the beginning of this new year we feel that we have much to thank and praise his Holy Name for.

A large representation of the church was present at our annual church meeting, after which was held a prayer and praise service. Then, as the bells were ringing out the old and in the New Year we adjourned to the lower auditorium where light refreshments were served. All must have gone to their homes with renewed fervor in the Lord's work and we are trusting that many more may be brought to know him, whom to know is everlasting life. We feel that every department of the church is in good working condition as we enter into a soul winning campaign, January 23rd, with Rev. Britton Ross, as evangelist, Lev. Polman as song leader and Rev. T. H. Broad acting as supply pastor, until the coming of our new pastor, E. L. Miller of Virginia, during the summer.

We praise his holy name for the many blessings showered upon us during the past and pray that the Second Brethren church of Los Angeles may mean more in his vineyard this year than ever before.

MRS. G. M. MONROE, Reporter.

THE STERLING-SMITHVILLE CHURCH

The above name may sound strange to many of the readers of the Evangelist, but it is fairly well known to members of the Ohio District Conference. It is the name adopted by the old Zion Hill congregation when they moved in from the country, buying a church building in Sterling and later building a new brick church in Smithville. This occurred above five years ago and the work has been carried on ever since that time at both places.

The services are held every other Sunday at each place. A Sunday school is maintained at each place. The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, alternates their services between the two places. And the W. M. S. does the same thing.

The membership is scattered over a large territory. Some folks live at Sterling, some in Medina county, some in Smithville and some in the surrounding towns. This makes the task of the pastor more complicated but with the kind of people we have here, it is more productive of results than one would think possible under the circumstances. The membership is about 175 all told.

Our regular Sunday services are keeping up well in interest and attendance. We do not have the difficulty of non-attendance of Sunday school scholars to contend with at either point of our work. The folks, young and old, that attend our Sunday schools always stay for preaching service. The pastor is given fine support in this respect and he appreciates it and tries to preach just a little better and make the services more helpful.

Two prayer and Bible study services are conducted by the pastor each week. The first of these was started three years ago in Smithville. The other is conducted in Wooster for the benefit of our own members and the members of other Brethren churches who have moved into Wooster from surrounding country. Another may be started at Sterling in the near future. We are studying the Book of Romans at Smithville and St. John at Wooster. The attendance and interest are good at both places.

We have a fine group of young people here. They are fully organized as a Y. P. S. C. E. and carry on some very interesting and helpful meetings each Sunday evening. Their monthly business and social meetings are replete with fine fellowships and helpful associations. The last one was held at the home of Brother Howard King and a weiner and marshmallow roast followed the regular business of the evening. Needless to say a good time was had by all present.

The members of the W. M. S. are a splendid group of hard working women. They have always stood nobly by the pastor and have had a hand in all the good work of the church. They hold their regular monthly all-day meetings in homes of different members during which they sew and quilt and conduct their devotional and business meetings. They also hold pastry sales, dinners at Wooster, and sell hot lunch at country sales. Their treasurer reported a balance recently of $1700 or more in the treasury. They voted, however, to pay $1500 of this into the Building Fund to help pay off the remaining debt on the Smithville church. We wonder sometimes what our churches would do without the women. But we have a fine group of men too in this congregation.

This brings me to the last item of this report, namely, the debt on the Smithville church building. When the new church was built four years ago at a cost of some $20,000, provision was made through pledges and cash to cover all the debt but about $4500. About two years ago we discovered that the amount was nearer $6500 than the smaller amount but we did not get discouraged. We kept stirring up those that had pledged and hacking away at the debt until we got it reduced to the original amount. Then the Building Committee had a meeting to see what could be done toward cleaning up the entire debt. The good women said they would give $1500 of it. A good brother said I will give a third of the remaining amount if the church raises the rest.

We immediately started a canvass of the entire membership for the amount needed and it looks at this writing as if we are going to have a rejoicing time about the first Sunday in April.

I came near forgetting to mention an event that occurred at Christmas time. On Christmas eve there was a knock at the front door, but when the door was opened there was nobody there. But there was something on the porch: sacks of sugar, flour, apples, canned goods, etc. On Christmas morning they were still leaving things on the porch, such as cans of motor oil, chicken feed, flour and money. Then through the mail and on next Sunday after Christmas we received money and more good things to eat. It was a fine present from a splendid group of folks and we thank them again for their kindness and love.

In closing we would say that the prospects are good for some additions to the church. Strangers are to be seen in all our services. Several new families are being interested and some have said, we will get our letters and join your church. May the Lord bless and prosper our church everywhere.

M. L. SANDS, Pastor.

GRAFTON, WEST VIRGINIA

It was through the influence of Rev. J. B. Shaffer, and by the aid of the District Mission Board of Pennsylvania, that we are here. We will not attempt to describe the entire surroundings. The meeting held in November has already been reported by the secretary. Well, the meeting was a success, considering all connected with it. We found royal treatment and brotherly love in every home. The call by the people and the urge by the Board appealed to us. And it seems that the Holy Spirit was back of it all. This undoubtedly was God's call. So the twenty-first of December, the Howell family arrived in Grafton. We have found many things of interest as well as some of sorrow. The typhoid epidemic has claimed many victims in this city in the last few weeks, but none of our congregation was taken. The neat little chapel site on the high hill above the city among a fine lot of folks who seem to be vitally interested in the cause. We began our pastorate December the twenty-sixth, after the fine Christmas program was rendered on Thursday evening before. This was inspiring and things started off in fine shape. The Sunday school has taken on new life with A. D. Hovatter as superintendent. The Christian Endeavor has been reorganized with Sherman Reed president. All new officers are taking hold with vigor and willing minds to work. The writer went out after the boys and now after five weeks has a promising class from ten to sixteen years of age. We go to the Y. M. C. A. and play basketball, go on hikes to the woods and are making good in the Sunday school class.

We are sure that one of the biggest jobs in the U. S. A. is here in and around Grafton. We have the material and that of Brethren parentage. Yes, there are giants here, but let's go up and possess the land. This is Brethren territory, and why not a Brethren church here as great as any in the land? If in the coming five years there is not a self-supporting church here, it will be because the Brethren conference turns a deaf ear to the cry.

It is an interesting story as to how this Mission came about. It is directly from the Conservative Brethren. Three pastors have preceded the writer, all from the mother church. Everything has not been sunshine with these good folk, but it is certain we have a foundation on which to build. But now is the time, by delay many brethren have been lost, and many more stand a chance of going. We have some twelve or fifteen thousand people to work with, and an opportunity to do in this city what has been done in others. This is a railroad town with two glass houses, and a pottery, as well as other small manufactures. The people are energetic working people, and we believe with a chance, they will find their place in the church and do their part. Finance at the present is the material need, But above all we covet your prayers.

We are planning for passion week services, hoping to make Easter Sunday Brethren day with the largest attendance ever, and the greatest service for this church.

When making up your prayer list, don't forget the Mission in Grafton.

THOS. F. HOWELL, Pastor.

BRETHREN CHURCH, BRIGHTON, INDIANA

We cannot express in words how much we enjoy hearing from our Brethren at the different churches through the Evangelist, and for this reason we will endeavor to help in the Lord's work by sending in a few news items that may be of interest to some of the Evangelist readers.

We are pleased to state that our pastor, Rev. J. W. Brower from Milford, Indiana, after one successful year with us here at Brighton, will continue to preach for us through this year.

We can say with Rev. Brower that we have cause to thank the Lord for the many blessings that he has bestowed upon us during the past year.

Through the help of our faithful pastor we organized a Christian Endeavor Society; last October, with a membership of over thirty. There are still a great many young people whom we expect, with the Lord's help, to win "For Christ and the Church." We feel that the Lord has truly been with us as there has been no Christian Endeavor Society at Brighton for a long time; nevertheless the interest, attendance and cooperation are fine. Ruth Hendricks is president.

Members of the Christian Endeavor have organized a good orchestra and we find that this adds much to both the Christian Endeavor and Sunday school.

There was a very good Sunday school report given at the end of the year as a result of the faithful service of our superintendent Mr. H. C. Plank. Mr. Plank was pleased with the good attendance through the summer months. We are very glad for our large class of young people.

We have a fine well organized Ladies' Missionary Society here at Brighton, consisting of over fifty members. Mrs. Elias Horner is president. This society is very active in the Lord's work and has done much to help the church.

A large number of the young people did their part on Christmas Eve by singing Christmas carols for the sick and shut-ins.

Mrs. W. E. Harmon from Angola, Indiana, was here on Sunday evening of January 9, and delivered a very impressive sermon.

Dr. Bell from Ashland College was with us a week ago last Sunday. We enjoyed his lectures which were very interesting to all.

Plans are being made for the Rev. N. V. Leatherman of the South Bend church to hold revival meetings here at Brighton about the last of February or the first of March. Our pastor, Rev. Brower, will be glad to send in a report at the close of these meetings. In the meantime we will ask an interest in your prayers as we enter in this Spring Drive on Sin!

LETHA GROVE.

HIGHLAND, PENNSYLVANIA TO GRAFTON, WEST VIRGINIA

Dear Editor and Evangelist Family,
Greetings in the Lord.

After some delay we will ask for space to report, but we hope to bring facts which will inspire the hearts of the readers as well as to fill space in the paper. It seems that Dean Miller's item should awaken a keen interest since regarding the reports from the field. We should work and report about our Father's business in such a way as to inspire the whole church. Enthusiasm is what the church needs today, a baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire. So with such consideration we need your sympathy, your prayers, and your cooperation.

After serving the Highland congregation a second term we now find ourselves busily engaged in the great mission at Grafton, West Virginia. It is very true that three moves is equal to a fire, in many ways. It is very hard on the minister and his family to move, changing homes, pastorates, and people is some problem that the average lay member cannot understand. It means broken hearts, friends left behind and new ones to make; it means a real sacrifice financially and a new beginning.

We are sure that we have found no better people than the ones we left, only a larger field in which to labor. While at Highland many good things transpired, as well as some that were not so good, and well pleasing.

The brethren there are having a fight to keep the little church going. There are many things to hinder, as well as some to encourage. Last June, our Brother Zumbach of Tiosa, Indiana, assisted us in our revival effort. There is no use saying that Harley can sing. You who have heard him, know that, but we are glad that he will not have to ask for a place to sing. There are many places in Pennsylvania for him. The results in the meeting were two fine young ladies baptized and received into the church. We organized the Christian Endeavor society and got a very good start, but the weather and roads interfered. The county and township has had a steam shovel on the main road for more than a year making mud holes with a promise of concrete some day. This made it almost impossible to get to the church during the fall, winter and spring. In the last eighteen months the writer assisted and officiated in fourteen funerals, and one wedding.

Highland has some of the finest people ever and we believe they will remain true unto the end, but they need a pastor and the man who can build a rural congregation. We hope he will be found. We can never forget the good deeds and favors of this people.

More than a year ago Sister Emma Garrett was stricken with apoplexy, her chance seemed short for this world. The physician was called, loving hands ministered to her need but seemed of little avail. She was a lifelong member of the Highland church, and loyal to the Master's call. While life was but faint, her memory was clear. According to James 5; the anointing service was administered with great faith, after many months Sister Garrett is yet able to sit in a wheel chair and witness for her Lord and Master. Let us praise God.

NORTH VANDERGRIFT, PA.

It is with pleasure we again report the work of the Lord at this place. Although without a regular pastor for more than half a year, the regular services have gone on with but few interruptions. With the assistance of our District Mission Board we hope to have a resident pastor soon. Beginning December 19, 1926, with our Christmas service, a two weeks' campaign was led by Brother Thomas Presnell of Chicago, and Sister Jessie M. Coons and her daughter Evelyn of Ashland, Ohio. Despite the Holiday season the attendance was good. Miss Evelyn as song leader and with her harp and vocal solos contributed much to the effectiveness of the services. Sister Coons' Bible studies were not nearly so well attended as they merited and would have been at any other than the busy holiday season.

Brother Presnell certainly brings a message true to the Word of God and the Savior it reveals. As he intends to do more of this kind of work as the Lord shall lead, we would recommend him to any church in need of a leader for a soul winning campaign. He can be reached in care of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. The visible results of his all-too-short meeting were three precious souls to come forward. One to accept Christ as Savior and two reconsecrations and an increased interest and attendance at the regular services.

On Sunday evening, February 6, 1927, Elder Samuel H. Buzard baptized two precious souls.

We expect during the coming summer to have a newly paved street passing the location of our church building, which will add materially to our location.

We would request the prayers of all God's people for the work here at this place.

B. F. BUZARD,

and an endless and ample supporter of the religion that claims all men for God as his children in the dear, happy helpful life of love—George A. Gordon.

Missions Essential to the Church's Life

Christian Missions a Necessity. "This is Christ's ideal: a radiating gospel; a kingdom of overflowing, conquering love; a church that is elected to be a means of blessing to the human race. This ideal is the very nerve of Christian missions at home and abroad; the effort to preach the Gospel to every creature, not merely because the world needs to receive it, but because the church will be rejected and lost unless he gives it. It is not so much a question for us whether any of our fellow-men can be saved without Christianity, the question is whether we can be saved if we are willing to keep our Christianity to ourselves."—Henry Van Dyke.

Christian the Supreme Religion

Christianity as a World-Religion. Note (1) that we have compared our religion with all the other religions of the world.

(2) There is good in the great non-Christian religions; but we find that there is no good in any other religion that is not found also, and in purer and completer form, in Christianity.

(3) Only Christianity gathers up into itself all the good of all the religions of the world.

(4) There is good in Christianity that is not to be found in any of the non-Christian religions.—Robert E. Speer.

When Napoleon, Alexander and Caesar sent forth their armies to seize many nations, they sent them to take what did not belong to them and what they had no right to take save the brutal right of the stronger; but when Christ sends his missionaries to win the world to himself, he sends them to regain kingdoms which are his from of old, since he created and formed them, and which are doubly his by the infinite purchase of the cross. Every missionary is "a man under authority."—Illustrated Quarterly.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

LAW-PRATHER—Wednesday evening, February the second, 1927, that notable Ground Hog day, Mr. Eldredge D. Law and Miss Wenda L. Prather, both of Lawford, West Virginia, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the home of the writer. Best wishes and success greet the young couple by their many friends.

Hoping that their journey through life may be pleasant and that they may continue to be worthy of the blessings of the Lord, they have our best wishes.

N. D. WRIGHT.

CARNELL-CARBERRY—On Saturday evening, January 29th, 1927, at the home of this writer in New Enterprise, Pennsylvania, occurred the marriage of Clayton S. Carnell and Miss Virginia Pearle Carberry. Both are estimable young people and members of the Raystown congregation, near Saxton, Pennsylvania. The bride is Bible School secretary, and the bridegroom only recently was baptized and received into the church. The best wishes of a host of friends go with them, and may the Heavenly Father's choicest blessings ever be upon them.

W. S. CRICK.

IN THE SHADOW

PRICE—On January 23rd, 1927 occurred the death of Joseph Nathaniel Price, which was the result of an injury to his brain sustained while coasting ten days before. Nathan would have been ten years old on April 2nd, and was one of the bright and promising juniors of the Yellow Creek, Pa., Bible School. His death was unexpected, as it was believed he was recovering from the effects of the accident. He was the second son of Brother and Sister James D. Price. May the bereaved parents and relatives hide their sorrow in submission to the will of a loving Heavenly Father, who will some day reveal his purposes, which "now we know in part and understand in part."

W. S. CRICK.

WEAVER—Jacob Weaver, son of James and Lizzie Weaver was born near West Milton, Ohio, September 15, 1846, and departed this life January 28, 1927, at the age of 80 years, four months, and 13 days.

Brother Weaver was twice married. His first wife before her marriage was Francis Wagner of Fidelity, Ohio. To this union one child, Charles, was born. She died in 1896. Brother Weaver was again married in 1902 to Emma Spitzer of Phillipsburg, Ohio. He leaves to mourn his departure his wife, his son, Charles, two grandsons, besides other near relatives. He was a member of the Clayton Brethren church and remained faithful until death. Services were held in the church, conducted by the writer.

WILLIS E. RONK.

DICKERHOFF—John Dickerhoff was born in Stark County, Ohio, February 25, 1853, and departed this life at his home near Akron, Indiana, January 28, 1927, aged 73 years, 11 months and 3 days.

He was united in marriage to Katherine Price, November 15, 1877. To this union was born nine children, eight of whom are living. One boy died in infancy.

He leaves to mourn his departure his wife, three boys and five girls, one brother and two sisters, sixteen grandchildren, four great grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends.

Brother Dickerhoff united with the Brethren church and was baptized June 13, 1926. A few days before he was called to rest, he asked to be anointed. This was done according to James 5, 13, 15. Funeral services were held at the New Highland church, conducted by Rev. George E. Swihart, assisted by Rev. D. A. C. Teeter.

GEORGE E. SWIHART.

EAKLE—Miss Laura Eakle, aged 74 years, was called home to glory January 25, 1927. She was for many years a most faithful member of the First Brethren church of Hagerstown. She was a good Christian woman. Funeral service conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. G. I. Rider.

G. C. CARPENTER.

DEETER—John S. Deeter, a life long resident and highly respected Christian gentleman of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, passed away at his home, south of the village on the evening of October 14, 1926. After four and one-half months illness, death took him just ten days after his seventy-first birthday.

Brother Deeter was known and loved for his meek and kindly disposition toward his family and toward those who worked for him and all who were associated with him in any way. He was born and reared in a home of Dunker parentage and for about thirty-five years was a devoted and active member of the Pleasant Hill Brethren church. A wife, three children, seven grandchildren and one great grandchild are left to miss his earthly presence.

Funeral was held at the house and at the above named church and interment made at Memorial Park Cemetery, Dayton, Ohio. Services were conducted by Rev. Hugh Martin, pastor of the Pleasant Hill Brethren church, and assisted by Rev. A. Macher, pastor's assistant of the First Brethren church of Dayton, Ohio.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ANTI-CIGARETTE LITERATURE

We are furnishing upon request, thousands of people annually the most complete and concise scientific information available about the cigarette and its injurious effects upon the human system; also, the cigarette treatment prescription.

Believing there are many people who would be glad to secure the above information if they knew where it could be obtained, we are announcing through the columns of "The Brethren Evangelist" that such literature may be secured without charge, as we are incorporated "not for profit", and our work is supported wholly by free will contributions. Mention this paper when you address:

Business Manager's Corner

THAT HONOR ROLL

Yes, we still maintain an Honor Roll of churches that have reached certain established goals in the matter of subscriptions to The Brethren Evangelist; but as we publish this Honor Roll on this page of our church paper only when a new church has been added to it, there are times when it seems like a "long dry spell" between the dates of its publication.

It is true that new churches are not being added to the Honor Roll as frequently as we feel they should be, but there is a rather constant stream of renewals from those churches that have tried out the plan and have found it good.

However we are glad to be able to report a new recruit to our ranks this week and to emphasize the announcement with the statement that it is one of the most worthwhile additions to our ranks we have received for some time. This is the Sunnyside, Washington church where brother J. C. Beal is the energetic pastor. Brother Beal wrote us some time ago for particulars of the plan and stated he was working toward that end. The Business Manager roomed with Brother Beal one year in college many, many years ago, and we know, if he still has the same head he had at that time, when he sets it to do something his nature is to hang on until it is done. We wish we had more pastors with the same spirit of perseverance.

The old list of subscribers from Sunnyside was not up to standard, as is the case with a good many churches, but when they included the cost of the paper in their yearly budget and decided to send it to every family in the church it added one hundred ten new names to their list, which brings their total up to about fourth place among all the churches of the brotherhood. It was a worthy achievement, and we wish to compliment both the church and its pastor.

It may be a matter of some interest to our readers to learn that this list of subscriptions from Sunnyside is distributed among just twenty post offices. It makes some work for us, but we have been familiar with work for many years and are not at all afraid of a little extra now and then. In fact we would like to designate about twenty more churches that would do well to emulate the example of Sunnyside.

The Renewals

The following churches have renewed their Honor Roll lists since our last report, and we wish to invite our readers to note the veterans that still answer "here" at the roll call.

Pleasant Grove, Iowa, fourth year; Ashland, Ohio, ninth year; Berne, Indiana, seventh year; Elkhart, Indiana, eighth year; Waterloo, Iowa, ninth year; Oakville, Indiana, ninth year; Long Beach California, ninth year; Martinsburg, Pennsylvania, seventh year; North Liberty, Indiana, seventh year; Third Brethren church, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, sixth year; Allentown, Pennsylvania, eighth year; Sterling, Ohio, seventh year; Fairhaven, Ohio, ninth year; Hagerstown, Maryland, seventh year; Washington, D. C., second year; Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, fourth year; Buckeye City, Ohio, seventh year; Mexico, Indiana, eighth year.

Will our readers please note the seven, eight and nine year churches in the above list? Where can you find a more worthy testimonial to the advantages of the Honor Roll system for the church paper? In about two months from now we expect to have the first church in the brotherhood that won a place on the Honor Roll to renew its list for the TENTH year. Think of it. A full decade on the Honor Roll, the church paper in every family in the church for ten long years, and yet there are both pastors and churches that do not have the courage to try it out. Come on brethren. It has been done and it can be done again. What others have done you can do also. Will you do it?

Dr. M. A. Witter---Nobleman

Of the many splendid men it has been our privilege to know, we esteem none more worthy to be designated as a true nobleman than our lamented brother, Dr. Marcus A. Witter. He possessed in a unique degree the high and fine qualities of God's own noble men. He had a gentleness and sweetness of spirit that few possessed, and his life seemed to be animated by a passionate love for his fellowmen. He loved everybody and treated them accordingly. We never saw him greet any one but what his heart seemed to leap forth with unrestrained kindness and good will. And it was as genuine as it was spontaneous, as unfeigned as it was expressive, as impartial as it was free. He was no respecter of persons so far as his kindness and disinterested love was concerned; everybody seemed to come within the pale of his consideration and concern. He had his intimates, of course, but he had enough of the love of Christ for everyone that no one seemed to feel any lack.

He was noble in his treatment of his fellow ministers. They were his brothers and fellow-workers and he loved them. He had strong convictions, but he was not bitter towards those who held different opinions. He would speak what he believed to be right when it was proper to do so, but he was never sarcastic or unkind. He was always willing to do any service possible, but he was never designing or self-seeking. He was humble and without guile, without envy or malice. He was a truly generous and noble soul, on whom the spirit of the Lord rested, and by whose influence he was led.

He was noble as a workman for the Lord Jesus. He never sought the high place, but the place where he might be in the will of God. He was willing to work in the hard fields, the places where no one else wanted to go, the places which required sacrifice and were fraught with knotty problems. He was a quiet, unostentatious worker, but he was efficient. He depended much on prayer, but his faith was accompanied by hard work. He was zealous for the preaching of the Word from the pulpit, but he was also strongly convinced of the importance of the pastor among his people, and few were more skillful at this point than he. He loved lost souls, and their salvation was his chief concern. He had great faith in the power of the Gospel and to it his life and work bore faithful witness. He was a workman who in a high degree had no need to be ashamed, as he sought to divide aright the Word of truth. Truly did he let his light shine and men saw his good works and glorified the Father who is in heaven. May God bless the memory of this nobleman to our good.

"The Fellowship of Prayer"

"The Fellowship of Prayer" is a program of personal and home worship leading up to Easter, in which all Christians are invited to participate. A remarkable growth has marked its use since it was inaugurated eight years ago. The "Fellowship" pamphlet is an inter-denominational manual for daily devotions throughout the Lenten season. Each year an entirely new volume is issued. And we are now in receipt of the 1927 manual which was prepared under the direction of a committee representing nearly all the leading Protestant communions, the chairman being Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, D.D. "This 'Fellowship'," Dr. Burton states in a foreword, "is issued to aid us in sharing the thoughts, feelings and purposes of God by definitely exposing our minds, hearts and wills to spiritual realities as they are revealed in the Scripture, and especially as they appear in the mind, in the heart, in the life and death of Jesus Christ."

Approximately half a million copies of the manual were distributed last year. This year it appears probably that copies will be placed in nearly a million homes. Any pastor or church worker who desires a sample copy may receive it free on request to the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City; or on request to the headquarters of his denomination's department or commission of evangelism. Beginning this week, we will publish in the Evangelist the daily topics, scripture references and devotional suggestions. But space will not permit printing the whole of the very helpful daily devotional suggestions. We advise those interested in having these suggestions to write to the above address.

This year as in the past the daily sections of the "Fellowship" will be a Lenten feature in many newspapers, and day by day it will be used by powerful broadcasting stations to lead hundreds of thousands in worship. It has also been sent to missionaries around the world and the globe will be encircled by a great host of the disciples of our Lord Jesus daily reading or listening to the same passages of the Bible, thinking together the same fruitful thoughts and uniting their prayers to the same great ends. The very thought of such universal cooperation in prayer and Bible reading is inspiring, and if there is power in united prayer, sincere participation in this program ought to have far-reaching results.

The general theme for the "Fellowship" this year is "The Spiritual Life." The separate weekly themes are: "God is a Spirit;" "Man is a Spirit;" "Christ is a Spirit;" "Spiritual Discernment;" "Spiritual Intercourse;" "Spiritual Struggle," and "The Triumphant Spirit." Obviously the program is designed to enrich and vitalize the spiritual life. Nothing is more important or more urgently needed today than this.

The daily themes for the last week, Passion or Holy Week, beginning with Palm Sunday and continuing to Easter Sunday, are: "Love Incarnate Resists Temptation;" "Love Detects Subtle Sins;" "Love Rises Above Treachery;" "Love Finds Peace in the Midst of Anguish;" "Love Triumphs Over Hatred;" "Love Conquers Agony;" "Love Reconciles God and Man;" "Love Victorious Over Death."

A Bible passage on the theme for each day is printed in full and references are given to other passages. The Scripture is followed by a brief comment or meditation; then a hymn is indicated. In concluding, objects for personal prayer are mentioned here and there is a printed prayer or collect.

Suggestions for the use of "The Fellowship of Prayer," include that, in case of an individual, he should definitely set aside a few minutes each day when without interruption he cannot only read but will be able also to pray and meditate upon the matter presented for that day. Every life needs its "Quiet Hour" every day in the year. He who has not such a period will find this an opportune time to get started, and he who has the habit may well put forth special effort to intensify his devotional life during the Lenten season. When the "Fellowship" is used by a family or a group, the father, mother or other leader should note the subject for the day and call attention to its position in the theme of the week and in the theme for the season. This is a good time to begin family worship in Christian homes where it is not now practiced. By all means some program or plan should be adopted to utilize this sacred season to the deepening of the spiritual life of the individual and the home.

Suggestions on the Divorce Evil

At a time when a divorce seems almost as easily secured as a marriage license and when such decrees are increasing more rapidly than marriage pronouncements, it is encouraging to learn of judges here and there who are inclined to make divorces harder to secure and desertion of family more costly, and that, in places where it might be least expected. "The Presbyterian Advance" remarks:

"Some people are disposed in these days to ask whether any good thing can come out of Chicago, but we have quite frequent reminders that there are yet many good things there. Recently a Chicago judge was reported as ruling that a man who deserts his family and seeks immunity outside of the state may have his property confiscated. It would be an excellent thing if other states had similar laws and enforced them. Later, Judge Kavanaugh, taking over his assignment as Judge of the divorce Court of Chicago, said that in hearing divorce cases he would make it a rule that the cause must be proved and residence in Chicago established. It would be most wholesome if all courts were similarly strict in divorce proceedings. He also expressed his belief that the lack of a home was behind most separations, and said that there were few divorces among people who owned their own homes. He might have said that one great need for Chicago and for the country at large was fewer automobiles and more homes."

And he might also have said that one great need of the American home is more home-life. For too many, home is just a place to eat and sleep, to keep their clothes and to park their cars. Everything of enjoyment and profit they seek elsewhere. Then again, the judge might have said that one great need of the average American home is more religion. That is the most urgent essential of permanent and happy home building, and would prove one of the most effective deterrents to the divorce evil. Indeed, it would be more than a deterrent, it would be a sure preventive. Genuine religion in the home would do away with the causes of divorce.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother Ashman writes that good crowds are in attendance at his meeting at Berne, Indiana during the first week and that two confessions have been received.

News reached us of a splendid victory in an evangelistic campaign at Mansfield, Ohio, where Brother S. C. Henderson was assisting the pastor, Brother R. D. Barnard. More than a score of souls were saved. Full report is promised soon.

Brother W. A. Gearhart's report of Home Mission receipts is only begun in this issue, and if you do not find your contribution in this issue, perhaps it will appear next week. If it does not, then perhaps you have not sent it to our Home Mission Secretary. Give him and this work your faithful support.

President J. A. Garber calls the attention of Christian Endeavorers to several important items—the essay contest, Endeavor evangelism and the great Christian Endeavor convention to be held in Cleveland this summer. Young people who are eligible should get into the essay contest and make plans for the observance of Brethren Day.

Brother H. M. Oberholtzer and his little flock at Fostoria, Ohio, are much encouraged because of the blessing of God upon their labors. During a revival recently conducted by the pastor seven souls made the good confession and four have been baptized. Twenty-six have been converted and twenty-two added to the church within a year. May the Lord continue to bless them with numbers and strength.

Sister Leah K. Bell, wife of Dr. W. S. Bell, whose home is 303 Grafton Avenue, Dayton, Ohio, makes the following request: "Will all believers who so kindly and effectually prayed for my restoration last August, please pray again that I may have complete victory and healing, in the name of Jesus, in the power of the Holy Spirit and in accordance with the will of God."

Endeavorers! you will apparently be given no peace until you step to the front and pledge yourselves for a certain amount for the support of your high school teacher at Lost Creek. Brother Vanator comes at you again this week. And even if this "Booster's Committee" were not so persistent in their boosting, it is vain to think to get peace of conscience except in the discharge of duty. So for your own sake, come across.

Brother Thoburn C. Lyon, pastor of the large parish at Lydia, Maryland, reports commendable progress in regularity of attendance, in increased in the business affairs of the church and in willingness to shoulder the financial responsibilities of the church. Recently Brother Robert F. Porte, of Louisville, Ohio, led in a revival and evangelistic campaign which resulted in five confessions and in deepening the spirituality of the membership, one evidence of which is the increased prayer meeting attendance.

Dr. W. S. Bell reports his success in the College Endowment campaign at Elkhart, Indiana, where Prof. W. I. Duker is the capable pastor. Notwithstanding Elkhart's new church building program, these loyal people gave generously to the College. Their gift was $1,613.11, which, added to the amount previously reported, makes a total to date of $96,740.63. Though Brother Duker is principal of a school, yet he has proven himself able to serve in a most efficient manner as preacher and leader of the Elkhart Brethren, and ere long we are expecting to hear of a new church being in process of erection.

Brother F. G. Coleman, pastor of the splendid church at Flora, Indiana, writes of a success in evangelism secured against great weather handicaps. The Lord was with them, and they were blessed with seventeen confessions. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richer were with them to conduct the music. On a later date another confession was received and Brother Coleman says the revival spirit is still on. The Sunday school continues over the two hundred mark, without "contests" or "drives", but it is evident, not without special effort, for it seems that special effort is being put forth continually. And that, plus consecration, always wins.

The report from Fort Wayne, Indiana sounds good, and Brother J. L. Kimmel and his faithful band have reason to be encouraged. In fact, people who are working as hard as they seem to be, could not be other than happy, and victory encamps in the pathway of the busy and faithful. Fourteen additions to the church roll are reported, since Fort Wayne's last letter to the Evangelist. And the Women's Missionary Society is stepping forward in fine shape in its money raising. Brother Kimmel's seventy-first birthday occurred in February and it was an occasion which his good parishioners seized to do him honor. But we never saw a cake large enough for seventy-one candles; they must surely have some great cake bakers there. That number, however, does not indicate the age of Brother Kimmel. He is still one of our young and active pastors, as is evidenced by the zeal and vigor of his work. We congratulate him on his youth and energy at the age of seventy-one.

Brother Homer A. Kent, pastor at Washington, D. C., tells of the great victory the Lord has given them in recent weeks. The occasion was the dedication of the basement of their new church building, but it made more than a dedication; it was a real revival and season of instruction. Dr. L. S. Bauman was the speaker for the occasion, giving a week preceding the dedication to Bible lectures and conducting a ten days' revival following, during which time thirty-nine souls confessed Christ. The dedication was a time of reconsecration which resulted in the giving of money in amounts that were surprising to the members themselves. The building at its present stage has cost twenty-five thousand, and while not adequate, yet affords opportunity for considerable growth until the church feels able to complete the structure. The architectural design as shown on front page is beautiful and when completed will be a credit to the brotherhood. We congratulate Brother Kent and his splendid people for the great work they are accomplishing in our Capitol City.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Our Duties as Christians

By G. L. Maus

Truth is in order to goodness; and the great touchstone of truth, is its tendency to promote a Christian's duty, according to the Savior's rule—"By their fruits they shall know them."

Good works are such as the law of God requires to be performed by all persons, according to the relations in which they stand, and the positive precepts which he has enjoined, and which are in force at the time. They have been commonly divided into three classes, the duties which we owe to God, to our fellowmen, and to ourselves; but in the strict propriety of speech, all our duties, whoever may be the object, are due to God. He is our instructor, and we are under the moral government of no other.

Though Christ fulfilled the preceptive part of the law of God's chosen people, yet he did not thereby free them from the obligation of obedience to the moral law. Such a release from moral obligation is inconceivable; for it is impossible that a creature should not be under obligations to love and honor his Creator; but if such exemption from it were possible, it would be no blessing but a curse; for our happiness consists in conformity to the law of God. "In keeping thy commandments, there is a great reward."

As the obligation to obedience cannot be removed, so neither can the requisitions of the law, as some suppose, be lowered. Man must ever be as much bound to love God with the whole heart, as to love him at all. If a man fulfilled the condition of the first covenant, he would not be free from moral obligation to obedience, in consequence of his justification. Angels, who are supposed to be now confirmed in happiness, are as much under obligation to love God as ever. The Holy Scriptures abound in exhortations to Christians to be diligent, zealous, and persevering in the performance of the respective duties of their stations; in the performance of which, divine aid may be asked, and confidently expected.

Some duties are incumbent on all classes of people; such as the worship of God, doing good to men, and abstaining from everything which would have a tendency to dishonor Christ, to injure our neighbors, or hinder our own usefulness and improvement. Two things especially are incumbent on all, in relation to their fellow-creatures residing on the earth with them. The first is, the communication of saving knowledge to such as are so unfortunate as to be destitute of this precious treasure. This is the duty of universal obligation, though the means proper to be used by different persons will vary, according to the variety of the circumstances in which they are placed. It is the duty of all Christians to "let their conversation be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that it may minister grace to the hearers." It is also made their duty to exhort and admonish one another, and that daily, lest any be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin. All Christians are bound also to teach by example as well as by precept, by exhibiting to the view of all who see them a clean life. "Let," says Paul, "your conversation be such as becometh the gospel." And our blessed Lord in his sermon on the mount, commands: "Let your light so shine, that others seeing your good works, may glorify your Father who is in heaven." It is evident from the very nature of this duty, which arises from our obligation to love our neighbor as ourselves, that all Christians are bound to help send the gospel to those who are destitute of this necessary means of salvation; for, "how can they hear without a preacher, and how can they preach except they be sent?" All, therefore, according to their ability, should contribute towards this object, by supporting missionaries, aiding in the printing and circulation of Bibles and tracts, and maintaining institutions of learning for the training of ministers.

ELDER GILBERT L. MAUS

But the duty of diffusing abroad the precious seed of divine truth, devolves especially on those who have been called to the holy ministry, who have been ordained for this very purpose, to publish to every creature the gospel of the grace of God. When a dispensation of the gospel is committed to any one, he will incur a fearful load of guilt if he turn aside to any secular employment. This may be learned from the many things left on record by the apostle Paul. He calls God to witness that he was free from the blood of all men at Ephesus, because he had not ceased to declare unto them repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ; evidently intimating, that if he had not been thus faithful and diligent, he would have incurred the guilt of their destruction; which is exactly in accordance with what is said respecting the faithful watchman in Ezekiel (Ezek. 33:1-9). The duty of preaching, to those who are called and have undertaken the office, is not optional, which is evident from what Paul says, in another place, "Woe is me, if I preach not the gospel."

Others, who have the instruction of youth committed unto them, are under peculiar obligations to instill into their opening minds the doctrines of God's holy word. Parents, guardians of orphans, masters of servants or apprentices, and teachers of schools of every kind, are bound by this obligation, from which no human laws can exempt them.

Another duty of obligation is, to pray to God for his blessing on all the earth; and especially on all those who are in authority, not only that they may obtain salvation, but that Christians under a wise and equitable administration of law, "may lead quiet and peaceable lives in all godliness and honesty." All are bound to join cordially and fervently in the public prayers of the church, and not to neglect the assembling themselves together, as the manner of some is. We have encouragement also to agree together in smaller associations for prayer; and are assured that Christ will be present in such meetings, and that the concordant prayers there offered, will be graciously answered. And who can doubt, that, as we are commanded "to pray without ceasing," and "to pray everywhere, lifting up clean hands," family prayer is an incumbent duty? But in addition to all these, "we should enter into our closets, and shut the door, and pray to our Father in secret; and our Father who seeth in secret will reward us openly."

Among the prescribed duties as Christians, there is none which is more solemnly and emphatically inculcated than a compassionate regard to the poor and afflicted. Indeed, the phrase "good works" is most commonly employed in Scripture, in relation to this single thing. In this we follow the example of Christ, "who went about doing good," by preaching the gospel to the poor, and by relieving the distresses of the afflicted. And it is the assiduous performance of this duty which recommends the gospel to the judgment and conscience of men, more than anything else. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep oneself unspotted from the world." Nothing is more necessary to convince us of the importance of this duty, than the representation given by our Savior, of the process of the judgment recorded in Matthew 25, where the destiny of the assembled race of men is made to turn upon the kindness shown to the disciples of Christ. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." And, in answer to their inquiry, when they had done any of these things to him? he said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." And to the wicked, the neglect of this duty is alone mentioned as the ground of condemnation.

Among the good works which Christians are required to perform, relative duties hold a very conspicuous place. These, indeed, in number greatly exceed all other Christian duties, and no day passes in which every one has not duties of this kind to perform. One is a parent, another a child; one is a pastor, another a member of his flock; one a husband, another a wife.

Besides these, there are particular professions and occupations in life; or offices in the church, all which relations give rise to duties, which are incumbent on all who sustain these various relations. It behooves us as Christians to be conscientious and faithful in the discharge of all our duties. And, as there is a necessity for intercourse and commerce among men, the virtues of justice should be constantly practiced, "doing unto others as we would have them do unto us." And, in social relations, to promote good fellowship, there should be real kindness, respectfulness, candor, and courtesy cultivated. The standing rule should be, to do nothing and say nothing which would tend to the injury of our fellowmen; but continually to seek to promote his best interest.

Man is utterly unable to perform works of supererogation. When he has done all that is commanded, he must acknowledge himself to be an unprofitable servant; having done no more than it was his duty to do.

Mountain Tops on the Horizon.—IV

By Elder G. W. Rench, D.D.

A friend would ask, "Where are you going so early in the evening?" It being a week-day evening his curiosity was aroused. I replied, our communion service is on. This mountain top on the horizon of the church's work was outstanding, and we always viewed it with delight. At that time in our progress but few Brethren lived in the towns and cities. Meeting each other, and those from other congregations, in a good place was always a source of joy. But the urge to this service had several leads. Members from a distance were expected to be present, some of whom we had not seen since the last communion. The "strange minister," the "first" communicants, those from other faiths at the table, the visitors who had come "to see for themselves", made this service the much discussed event for weeks to come. The reports from the congregations, always a source of strength and joy, to the church paper stressed above all things this service. No wonder it was a powerful factor in the growth of the congregation, for the church MADE MUCH OF IT, and here is the secret of the beauty of our mountain top. If we have "ears to hear" what the Lord hath spoken, we will have eyes to see its splashes of color and its inviting shade.

I have recently read of a great church leader who said, "Not until a church is conscious of its mission, and has measured accurately its task, may it expect that fulness of faith and courage which will enlarge its spirit and force its growth." I think that is true. Have we turned it over in our minds and given it any serious consideration? Is our people to have a future, or are we a "disappearing brotherhood?" What are the angles of our strength? Have we "measured accurately our task?" We've spent a lot of time in the last fifteen years in trying to become like other churches. Do you think the nearer we become like them the grater our influence will be as a separate people? Is it not apparent that the nearer we become like others in the things we emphasize that the Scriptures teach, the less use we are in the world? What does the Lord want with us as a separate people unless our task is to become the heralds of some of his neglected truths? We have all but quarreled among ourselves in the past about the need of teaching some angles of Scripture, which will be taught whether we teach them or not. I maintain that at that particular place in the battle-line we are not needed. Why not "go in" where our great Captain has need of us? Our three-fold communion service is different—different as our Lord instituted it, and different as the early church practiced it—therefore our task is different, honorably different. More credit must be given this service than any other in producing some of the greatest characters, in the past two hundred years of Brethren history. It would pay some people to acquaint themselves with this fact. If they did, some folks with "a world-vision" would get a glimpse of a "task-vision", and the job will take care of itself.

I have reasons to believe, however, that the hold the communion service had on the Brethren in the 80's is slipping. Its tremendous spiritual value in holding the young people to the church of their fathers, is no longer felt, as it once was. We don't make much ado over it.

Pulpit and pew passes it by as any ordinary affair. Many of our preachers have no convictions as to its real worth to the soul and to the future of the church. Jesus, our living Creed, has been accepted, and perhaps, as such; and there he stands with towel in his hands and basin filled with water, but so many never see him. He is talking about foot-washing, warning the unwilling, adding his blessing to those who submit; but, alas, many never hear him! What is the cause of this don't-care attitude among us, and who is responsible for it? I think I could answer both questions. Space will permit of but a few considerations.

First, there is this same indifferent attitude toward all specific teachings of Holy Writ. It steals over us in the atmosphere created by other religious teachers and writers. Instead of reading literature which will meet this poison, we take in the poison until we are "taken in" by it. Some never go to the Scriptures for safe guidance, because, like their religious neighbors, they don't care what THE GREAT GOD OF HEAVEN AND EARTH SAYS!

Then, there is the failure of our church leaders to place this service in the best possible light. They expect young men and young ladies, graduates of schools and colleges, to be satisfied with the surroundings which has been "good enough for them for 40 years"; and you could not get them away from the sooty furnace room with block and tackle. They forget that young people very often put the emphasis on the service as shown by the surroundings.

Then, there is the service as carried to the sick. Again and again have I found nothing but the communion of the bread and wine administered in the sick room. Who is responsible for this half-loaf custom? Who can measure the effect of such abbreviated service on the officials, the children and parents of the home, to say nothing about the sick one? Why should two items of the service our Lord instituted be omitted in the sick-room? Isn't it but natural for children to reach the inevitable conclusion that if the bread and wine was all-sufficient for the sick, it would answer the same purpose for the well? And who dares say it will not? That's another reason why this Scriptural service is slipping. And who is to blame?

Again, there is the loose teaching held by many in the church that there is nothing binding the soul in the communion service, as taught by the Scriptures; that there is no penalty attached in its non-observance. This is perhaps, the underlying cause of much of the indifference observed today. If there is nothing binding on man in the Lord's instructions concerning his Holy ordinances, and the teaching of the inspired apostles, then, sir, these writers have been perpetrating jokes on credulous people. If man is as sure of his eternal destiny without following his Lord in this his divine ordinances as he is if he does not do so, I am anxious to have the proof. You say you have been taught that the three-fold communion service is not a saving ordinance. Saving from what? If you mean salvation from original sin, why, of course not. The blood of Jesus atones there. But do you mean that after past sins have been wiped out by his blood, that from that point on through life none of the Lord's commands are binding? that he can go through life ignoring his Lord's commands, refusing to follow "The Way", and yet be saved eternally? Refusing to bare his feet, Peter was to be separated from his Master here on this earth. Paul's instruction to Timothy was to the effect that poor widows were to be separated from the care of the church, if she had not "washed the saints' feet" (1 Tim. 5:9, 10). "But what has that to do with the widow's eternal salvation", says one? I answer, "Of course, nothing, from the standpoint of the liberalist, who will have men saved in spite of themselves. Peter, separated from his Master, and the widow separated from her church, are just as well off, you say!"

These are some of the reasons why we have lost the URGE, if we would see the church true to her task. It takes an URGE to give a church a future. Ugly insinuations of some of our own preachers on the service of the towel and basin; using this ordinance as a comparison that in other duties we are negligent, and thus leaving the impression that it, too, was of no more consequence than some ordinary duty, has certainly destroyed our URGE. It's a serious thing for one to lose his urge, especially in the ordinances. Shipshewana Lake, Indiana.

Forty Reasons for "Washing the Saints' Feet"

By L. G. Wood

The Elements of the Ordinance are Love, Purity, Grace, Humility, Service.

1. Jesus did it and said we OUGHT to do the same.
2. He said he had given us an example (pattern) and that we SHOULD do as he had done.
3. The OUGHT and SHOULD of the Lord can not mean just their opposites.
4. He told Peter that without it he could have no part with him.
5. He gave it as a memorial of spiritual cleansing, and we will need it as long as we are mortal.
6. He said there was happiness and joy in knowing and doing his will.
7. It foreshadows humility and teaches service and we are his servants.
8. It destroys "class distinction" by furnishing a common level for all of his servants.
9. He commanded his Apostles to teach their converts, to "observe all things whatsoever he had commanded them."
10. The Apostles did so teach and the early Christians did so observe.
11. By it we acknowledge our constant need of spiritual cleansing.
12. By it we express our love for him: "If ye love me, keep my commandments."
13. By it we increase the joy of obedience and service.
14. It is a spiritual means of letting our "light shine" out and his light shine into our lives.
15. By it we acknowledge him as our Lord and also express our subjection to him.
16. It being his word, it is a special means of grace.
17. To neglect it would offend him and endanger our relation to him: "If a man love me he will keep my word."
18. Our Lord is pleased, when we honor ALL of his Words by loving obedience.
19. It is prerequisite to the Supper and the Communion, being the FIRST part in the golden chain of symbols: Cleansing, Fellowship and Communion.

20. It was instituted by our Lord at the same time and place, with the Communion service.

21. We will never be condemned for doing what the Lord said we OUGHT and SHOULD do.

22. DOING it expresses more faith and love than NOT DOING it: "This is the love of God that we keep his commandments!"

23. It expresses our friendship with Christ: "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you.

24. The first person we hope to meet in glory (Jesus) will be a foot-washer.

25. The "beloved disciple" said, "He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in him."

26. This service has no resemblance to any Jewish custom.

27. "If she have washed the saints' feet" identifies this service with the church and qualifies this woman for a special recognition by the church.

28. The same principle that would annul this command, should annul every command of the Lord.

29. The spirit that cries "nonessential" and "unnecessary" to the Words of Christ is not Christian.

30. The TIME, PLACE and CIRCUMSTANCES of its institution, clothe it with a religious and sacred character.

31. It was the crowning act of his exemplified servitude.

32. The opinion of some men, who do not believe that Jesus meant just what he said, can not annul what he did say.

33. One case of Feet-Washing has already gone to glory and cannot be recalled.

34. Jesus said: "The words I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life," regardless of any man's attitude toward them.

35. The OUGHT of feet-washing is just as binding as the OUGHT of love: "If I have loved you ye also OUGHT to love one another"—"If I have washed your feet ye also OUGHT to wash one another's feet."

36. Love always seeks to serve: "By love serve one another."

37. We can never live too close to the teachings and example of our Lord.

38. It is a means of ABIDING in his love: "If ye keep my commandments ye shall ABIDE in my love."

39. Cleansing is the basis of Christian Fellowship and Communion.

40. Feet-washing is the emblem of the purity of the Bride; while the Supper represents the Marriage Feast, and the Eucharist betokens the Marital relation of the Bride (Church) and the Groom (Christ).

A Strong Testimony

Francis Greenwood Peabody, Professor of Christian Morals in Harvard University, in his "Afternoons in the College Chapel," pages 143-145:

"The Lord's Supper is the sacrament of power derived from Jesus; the washing of feet is the sacrament of service inspired by Jesus. You cannot separate the two sacraments. It is vain to partake of the body and the blood of Christ unless they stir in one the works of Christ. . . .

I do not know anything which more completely distinguishes the Christlike life from the life of average morality than this stooping to the sacrament of service."

Efficacy of the Blood of Christ

By Samuel Kiehl

Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ. . . in whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace (Eph. 1:3, 7). Christ is the head of the body, the church (Col. 1:18), which he hath purchased with his own blood (Acts 20:28). Faithful members of the body of Christ, which is the church (Col. 1:24), were (are) not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, . . but with the precious blood of Christ (1 Pet. 1:18, 19).

First John 3:16, Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us, is a misnomer. The phrase of God is not in the original. According to 1 Peter 1:19 the phrase of Christ should be there. Being there the verse reads, Hereby perceive we the love of Christ, because he laid down his life for us; agreeing with 1 Corinthians 15:3, Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures.

God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. . . If we walk in the light as he is in the light, . . the blood (not of God, but) of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin (1 John 1:5-7). "There is power in the blood."

The Lord through grace and mercy in our behalf enable us ever to gratefully say, Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father to him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen. (Rev. 1:5, 6).

The Eyes of Jesus

By Hamilton B. Williams

I found the Man talking quietly with village-folk . . . and each one's weal and woe lay in his eyes. . . His eyes were crystal lakes in a purple twilight.

I found the Man watching little children play. They'd hedged him in a charmed circle; a flower-wreath crowned his brow. His eyes were a jeweled May-dawn.

I found the Man walking with a lame man. They were a-weary of the heavy way. But their eyes were lighted of a light upon star-pillared roads.

I found the Man weeping by his friend's grave-side. . . he sleeps, surely he sleeps . . I wonder what he who had been in the Shadow saw in his Friend's eyes.

I found the Man bending very low as if shame drew him down. And only she beheld the glory of the light of the morning star in his eyes.

I found the Man at a temple door. 'Twas not the whips that drove the merchants forth. The eyes of the Man were terrible with flame, terrible with tears. . .

I found the Man making clay. The look in his eyes was that which brooded upon the multitudes who groped in darkness at noontide and thought it light.

I found the Man climbing his last hill. 'Twas evening and the world was growing dark. But in his eyes was dawn-light's glory . . from beyond the hill.

I beheld upon the streets today certain ones who looked upon the crowds as comrades look. . . Perhaps they remembered an ancient Dreamer and his Dream.

Well, comrades of the Roads, this world needs nothing quite so much as his Dream.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Our Task

By Claud Studebaker

(Excerpts from Moderator's Address before Illiokota District Conference at Des Moines, Iowa.)

Our task, is, and has been a common task with all protestant denominations, and yet, we in the fulness of our denominational plea, save some things that tend to differentiate us and give us a distinctive plea that God has intrusted to us and without it, we have no reason for a separate organization. We have taught that man was not permitted to change the commands of God. Therefore it is not for us to choose, only to do, and earnestly contend for the faith once and for all delivered unto the saints.

Going out to do our part to redeem the world from sin, through the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ with a big heart of charity and grace to all who love our Lord in sincerity. Of course we have a special program, we are to formulate and execute. God holds us responsible not alone for what we do, but for what we may do, and I think a full realization of our possibilities should stir us to greater diligence. I believe there has never been a greater need in the world for strong men of ability and training, called of God and under the power of the Holy Spirit to declare the whole Bible as the infallible Word of God. No amount of organizing and social program can take the place of the true prophet of God to cry out against sin and preach the gospel of the redeeming Christ. Therefore, the first important consideration for us as a church, after we have defined our position on the integrity of the Scripture and her vital doctrines, the person and work of the Christ and the functioning of his living body the church, is the men who are called and ordained to bear the sacred insignia as ambassadors of the Christ. The Brethren church and the church out of which she had her origin, have never yet fully appreciated the value of their ministers, and that they, the ministers are the key to the situation. No church has ever grown, nor will it, with incapable and inadequate leadership in the ministry. A minister may make or break a church. Of course, I am not unmindful of the power of the Holy Spirit, but with the same Holy Spirit and the same personnel in the church and the same opportunity one minister leads on to building a strong church while another wrecks and leaves a blasted cause, discouraged workers and hopeless ruin. "Woe be to the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture saith the Lord." In our history with the background of a gratuitous ministry we have limited ourselves to thousands when we should be numbered in millions. If the church had laid her hands on those young men of ability who would hear the call of God and educated and supported them while they preached, so that they might have given their time continually to the ministry of the Word and prayer, my honest conviction is that we would have had hundreds of churches where we now have a very few. We have always had able men in the ministry and today the Brethren ministry does not need to hang their heads in shame when placed beside the ministry of larger communions, but to the irreparable loss of the church she has failed to occupy the fields that were her obligation under God because she failed to place the responsibility on an able minister and make his support possible so he might give his time continually to the work of the church.

And now in our work the very sparsity of our churches is a handicap to our organization and growth. We lose many members because they move into communities where there is no Brethren church and rightly find their place and give their support to the church in the community in which they live. Only a very few, even if they leave their membership in a Brethren church and because they do not wish to go to another, are loyal enough to take any interest in the growth of the church, and they make their isolated location an excuse for doing nothing, not giving support to any church. This thing I wish to make plain—that if in the colonizing and building of cities and taking up claims and building territories and states our church had sent out her ministers and supported them as they preached and ministered to the spiritual need and physical ailments of the settlers, we today would have thousands of churches where we have hundreds, but we failed and I regret it. But it is no use for us to grieve but to retrieve the loss as far as possible. And in the retrieving, the minister is again the crux of the situation.

We need more men in the ministry. Men of vision, tact, ability, judgment, education, conservation, industry and I think I might use some other qualifying words but because a man cannot make anything else go is no recommendation for the ministry or evidence that God has called him. We need the men who can go into a place and build a church, where one is needed. We have churches already builded and strong enough to support a man for full time, without pastors, and men are not available. Churches suffering for want of a pastor, plenty of places where the faithful minister can go and build new churches, and our home mission board is always confronted with the proposition of finding the man who can put over the work. Not men of genius but men of big hearts and willing hands and trained minds, and if we can have them, and the church will do her part in supporting them, the first big need of our beloved church will be met. And I call and recommend to the young men of our church, those big brained, big hearted leaders out of which doctors and lawyers and educators are wrought, to present themselves to the church of Jesus Christ for call and ordination to her ministry, that the greatest institution in this world may have a strong compelling leadership.

A next important consideration and bearing directly on the question of her ministry is her educational institution. A School for the prophets is certainly an urgent need. The very fact that we are a young church in our physical organization means that we have to concentrate our efforts and build up one good creditable school, where our leaders may graduate and be given equal standing with graduates from other institutions. And with proper support and guidance from the church Ashland College can easily become all that we hope for her, and our leaders coming from her halls of training may take their places, beside others who may come from larger schools, with good standing and prestige because of their ability to teach and preach and lead in the great work of the church. The endowment for Ashland College should meet with a willing response on the part of both pastor and people and give as we are able that the educational work of our church may be put on a sound basis and may be recognized as a worthy effort of a great church to educate her people.

Our program of church extension should ever be a challenge to the church and the building of new churches in new fields should be taken up in a most wholehearted way. Our home base must be strengthened. Some of our large churches could well take up the building of a mission church and stand by for a few years until it is self-supporting and then take up a new point. Our district is not large and this splendid church in which we hold this conference is possible through our united effort, and we expect that this place may soon grow to a self-supporting unit and we shall take up another point. And we have some good prospects when we have the financial support in hand and the man to take up the work.

Our home mission work must be carefully undertaken and solidly built for all the future growth of every division of the church work, whether it be educational, foreign or home missions, publishing our message, or any other service we may be to the world, will be effective only as we have strong churches and an increasing number of them.

Again, the whole gospel message of our church is the world's greatest need and today when so many of the denominations are diluting the message, it is only a stronger reason why we should hold steady and press the claim of our Lord. If it makes no difference how men are baptized the next logical step is that it makes no difference whether they are baptized at all or not, and that very thing is coming to many churches. Who has the authority to say baptism is not an essential part of every conversion when Christ said to teach and to baptize. I insist on baptism and I would call our church to a reaffirmation of our historic stand on the importance of Christian baptism, not because some man says it, but because Christ himself placed it there and the very commission that charges me to preach, enjoins me to baptize. Whoever takes the authority to say it is unimportant is becoming rather presumptuous, especially when they at the same time claim to follow Christ.

The same is true of washing the saints' feet—if Christ enjoins it, who will have the authority to change it? Here is the real situation,—with the breakdown in simple obedience to the commands of Christ there has come that inevitable breakdown in Christian conduct, and it will increase and become a real menace to the church. Our fathers who carefully and zealously observed the holy sacraments of the Scripture, also were known far and wide for their godly lives and charity to all men. Christian life is the inevitable result of regard for the Word of God and disregard for the Word of God will inevitably result in a compromising with sin in the life.

Our historic position on peace, non-resistance, non-swearing and nonconformity should be taken seriously by our church, for God calls his people to be a separate people. We should stand and teach and live against the popular sins of dancing, card playing and the amusement crazed jazz age in which we are living. Because other churches wink at these things is only a strong argument for the Brethren church to stand true to her Lord and abstain from everything that has an appearance of evil. We can never convince the world that our message has redeeming power unless we preach it and live it with a zeal and earnestness that forces conviction to those who see and hear. I have often repeated, the only way to build Brethren churches is to preach Brethren doctrine and live Brethren lives. And I call you in this conference to a reaffirming, to re-energizing, rededication to the cause we represent, and pray God's guidance in this year of labor.

Our Worship Program

OUTLINE OF "THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER"

(The Fellowship) program begins with Wednesday)

GOD IS A SPIRIT

SUNDAY—God is all-powerful. Jer. 32:17-21; Matt. 19:26; Luke 1:37; Rev. 19:6. God has all power, ability and resources. He is not dependent on outward circumstances. He is limited only by his own righteous will. "Although we have seen but part of his ways (Job 26:14), yet our constantly extending experience is ever revealing to us new and more astonishing evidences of his power, which always indicate an inexhaustible reserve.

MONDAY—God is all-wise. Dan. 2:20-22; Isa. 46:9, 10; Prov. 2:6; 3:19, 20; Acts 2:23; 15:18. God's knowledge is not limited by time or space. He is able to discern all things, everywhere, for he made them. There is nothing hid to the light of his understanding. He knows what is man and needs not that any one should tell him; and he is able to direct our steps aright.

TUESDAY—God is holy. Lev. 11:44, 45; Psa. 22:3, 4; 145:17; Isa. 6:3-7; Rev. 4:8. Infinite moral perfection crowns the infinite intelligence and power of God. That attribute is "the crown of the Godhead." And he requires holiness of his children. "Take time to be holy; Speak oft with thy Lord; Abide in him always, And feed on his Word."

WEDNESDAY—God is Spiritual. Isa. 40:18-31; John 4:24; Gal. 5:22, 23; 1 John 4:8. We think of God as creator, manufacturer, mechanic; but we think inadequately until we think of him as spirit, person, father. Love and all the fine graces—whence come they? Just as fruit from the plant and reveals its nature, so these testify that God is spiritual.

THURSDAY—God is invisible. Job 23:1-12; John 1:18; Mark 11:22; Heb. 11:6. We are troubled because we never see, hear or touch God. But why should we see him? These senses are material, and God is spiritual. We do not see our friends; we sense simply their bodies. Pray that we may follow on, as seeing him who is invisible.

FRIDAY—God is Imminent. Psa. 139; Acts 17:28; Gen. 28:16. We can find God in all the things of this world and in all the experiences of life, if we have eyes to see him. "Be it mine to detect thy hiding place . . . to discover thy beauty sleeping in the grass, thy glory in the dust . . . to see thy presence in struggle and sorrow . . . in Galilee and in Gethsemane."

SATURDAY—God is Personal. Ps. 42; Mt. 23:9; Ps. 103: 13; 139:17. One does not deal with his father or friend as with electricity; nor should I relate myself to the great "World-Ground" (God) as to a machine—rather as to a friend. "My God, . . . let me start again on the path of existence, no longer in search of thee, but with thee."—G. S. B.

LESSON LIGHTS

Introduction

Jesus discovers to his disciples an unfailing refuge from trouble. 1. The refuge of Faith. "Believe in God; believe also in me," etc. Here are the three grand truths which are at the basis of Christianity: God, Christ, Immortality. They are the antidotes to atheism, the helplessness of guilt and the hopelessness of death. 2 The Refuge of Love; a personal relation to Christ. He is the Way of God to man and of man to God. The Truth about all that the soul needs to know and for which natural theology fails to give answer; and the Life eternal and blissful. 3. The Refuge of Hope. Here was a personal bereavement. He was about to withdraw, and the loss was the more inconsolable because he was the object of faith and love. But he compensates this loss by the promise of the Holy Ghost, through whom they should do greater works, in whom the God-head dwells in the church as a body, by whom God is manifest in the believer, and who should abide with them forever. And he promises that he will personally intercede for believers above, while the Spirit intercedes in them below. And so he who goes away actually does not leave them orphans, but comes to them, dwells in them, manifests himself to them and is seen by them. And so this part of the discourse ends as it began with peace. Peace for the mind harassed with unsatisfied cravings, by establishing it upon God.—Pierson.

My Father's House

The Father's House is the place where God is. Christ as a boy of twelve referred thus (according to one translation) to the temple in Jerusalem). Here he refers to heaven, the place where God is to be seen clearly, where our emancipated spirits shall dwell with the Father consciously, blessedly and forever. The word "mansion" comes from the Latin verb meaning "to remain, abide," and so "an abiding place." The Greek noun in exactly the same way comes from the Greek verb, "to remain." Our eternal home in heaven is a permanent abode, not a moving tent, not rented by the year, not subject to eviction, not threatened by fire or earthquake or tornado, not eaten by slow decay—a homestead indeed. "The image is derived from those vast oriental palaces in which there is an abode not only for the sovereign and the heir to the throne, but also for all the sons of the king, however numerous they may be." "Heaven is the Land of Room Enough."—Illustrated Quarterly.

Preparing Us for the Place

It is quite as essential that we should be prepared for heaven as that heaven should be prepared for us. The same double process is going on with reference to that part of our Father's home in which we may dwell in this life. He is opening doors of opportunity, and preparing a sphere, a place for us on earth, and also preparing us for the sphere he would have us fill, and the work he would have us do. And the work we do here, and our preparation for it, are fitting us the more for our eternal future, in whatever place God puts us.

The Other World

"Why is that other world so vague? Why is it so uncertain? ... It is vague not because it is unreal, but because our faculties

"Let not your heart be troubled;"

These precious words, divine,
Comes like a balm of healing
To this poor heart of mine;
When anxious for the morrow,
Or crushed with sudden grief.
This saying of the Master Brings sure and sweet relief.

"Let not your heart be troubled;"

The loving Savior's voice
Bids me in gloom and sorrow
To hope, and e'en rejoice;
In tenderness he's saying:
"I seek a place for thee;
While ye in God believing
Believe also in me."

And, trusting in his promise,
With all my fears allayed,
Through each day's round of duties,
My soul on peace is stayed;
And, looking toward the mansions
In heaven prepared for me,
I answer, "Blessed Jesus,
I do believe in thee."

do not enable us to grasp it. ... What can we know of that world of pure spirit, where God dwells? We are not fitted to know ... And so we use symbols. The uncertainty should not dismay us, but should appeal to character. ... When God gives me the dim, vague, unsure world of the future, he appeals to me to live by my conception of duty, by my faith in him."

"The child of a king is sent to an obscure village that he may be educated. He must keep in mind two things: First, that he is not a peasant, but a king's son. He must bear himself like a prince, and commit no act unworthy of his station. Then, second, he must not forget that his father occupies the throne, and that he will sometime be called to the enjoyment of his inheritance. That thought will lift him above his poor surroundings."—George H. Hepworth.

Our Life in Heaven

"There must be different degrees of glory, reward and blessedness in the heavenly life. There is a lower and a higher with innumerable gradations between. Heaven will have room for many conditions, with varying powers, attainments, activities and satisfactions, continually increasing as by the Spirit of the Lord. We may be certain, too, that the heavenly life will be full of noble ministries, of elevated work that never ceases and yet never tires. This work will be unfailing joy, as to do the Father's will was meat and drink to Christ. The true and honest friendships which we have formed on earth will be continued with unabated, nay, with increased and purer affection in the upper sphere. We shall know God, whom we have so often mistrusted, and with the perfect image of his beauty we shall be forever satisfied. We shall know our own poor hearts, of which we have been so ignorant, and understand the full meaning of our life's strange story. We shall know each other, and we shall understand what the perfect love means, which has no torment of suspicion or fear."—Rev. J. G. Greenhough.

"A city surpassing glorious, whether we view it as it still lives by faith in the fleeting course of time and sojourns as a stranger in the midst of the ungodly, or as it shall dwell in the fixed stability of its eternal seat, which it now with patience waits for, expecting until 'Righteousness shall return unto judgment' and it obtain, by virtue of its excellence, final victory and perfect peace."—Augustine.

"The Bible is pervaded with the conception of the unseen land being not far away, but being near to us, so that if only an acuter sense of perception were given to us we should understand. As one grows older one gets to think that perhaps we are wrong in imagining the journey of the dying believer to be a long journey, and wrong in thinking of heaven as very, very far away."—John M'Murtrie.

OF INTEREST TO OHIO

Workers in Religious Education

The seventh annual Ohio Educational Conference, to be held at the Ohio State University April 7, 8 and 9, will again provide in its program for a sectional meeting on religious education.

Charles M. Brunson, supervisor of the weekday Bible schools under the direction of the Toledo Council of Churches and the Toledo Board of Education, is announced as the presiding officer for this session.

He addressed the same sectional meeting last year, giving "Practical Suggestions for a Program of Religious Education," based on the Toledo experience.

Miss Blanche Carrier, supervisor of the Dayton and Montgomery County weekday classes in religious education, was also a speaker last year.

This year the speakers on that section program will be J. E. Bradford, secretary of the board of education of the United Presbyterian church of North America, Chicago, and F. L. Kinley, principal of the high school at Findlay.

Last year there was a large attendance of school superintendents at the religious education section, indicative of a growing interest in religious subjects.

"Still on the Job"

Have you been reading the little paragraphs that have been appearing in this space the past three weeks? If so, what have they meant to you?

Note the title at the head of this little article. The first word is "Still." That usually means, when taken by itself, "without noise or quiet." It is just another word for "Mum." Someone once asked "If mum means quiet, what does mummy mean?" The answer is "Dead quiet." We wonder if some of our Christian Endeavor Societies have gotten past the "mum" stage? We hope not. But the Booster Committee feels that with regard to the pledges that should be coming in for the National Work, we might say with those of the late Civil War, "All is extremely quiet on the Potomac."

But the word as used in our title does not mean quiet. It means "YET." And the other word means "Work." So the gist of the thought that we want to leave is this: Let us be busy at the task that has been apportioned us. Let us do our full duty to the National work. Ours is not a position; ours is a JOB.

COME ON with that PLEDGE, Endeavorers. Yes, it is getting along toward the time when we want more than just the pledge; we will want the CASH.

But listen now. In a more serious vein. We really need the cooperation of all the Societies to put the work across. Won't you get busy and do your part?

Christian Endeavorly yours,
FRED C. VANATOR,
Chairman Booster Committee.

Remarkable Reminders

By Prof. J. A. Garber

That is there are some reminders concerning which we should remark in these columns in order that important opportunities may be kept alive in the mind of our Endeavorers.

Essay Contest

About the first of the calendar year we sent to the president of each of our societies an outlined monthly service schedule. The first emphasis was Christian Endeavor Week, which appears to have been helpfully observed in various churches. A distinctive Brethren emphasis is the Essay Contest, which is open to all Brethren young people of high school rank. The winners receive worthwhile scholarship aid in Ashland College. Contestants should keep busy in their preparation if the manuscript is to reach the Committee at Ashland by May 1st.

Endeavor Evangelism

Another emphasis was personal evangelism by Endeavorers during the Lenten period leading up to Easter. Here follows an example of the plan with its consequent results, as carried out by the Shaw Union:

First: to have the young people make a survey of their own church or parish list and discover the names of eligible young people for society, church, or Sunday school membership, either in the families already on the church roll or in families in the neighborhood.

Second: to form prayer lists of the young people whose names were secured in this survey.

Third: to have the Christian Endeavor members take a course in personal work under a competent instructor.

Fourth: to go out and put into practice the things learned in the class.

Fifth: to have the pastors conduct training classes for all prospective new members of their churches.

The plan has increased the membership of the societies, and strengthened them in many ways so far, and it is not nearly complete as yet. At one meeting of the class the members were asked to report on the increase in attendance for the previous Sunday. One reported 100 per cent, another 50 per cent, and another 25 per cent, and all reported some increase.

Honor Recognition

The United Society of Christian Endeavor will award International Honor pennants to societies sending in five or more registrations for the Cleveland convention and International Honor Society banners will be given to societies sending in ten or more registrations. The International Society also offers awards to unions that secure twenty-five, fifty, one hundred or more registrations. We desire to have Brethren societies "endeavor" for Honor Recognition. JUNIOR ENDEAVOR

Esther, a Girl Who Helped Her People. Esther 4:11-17

Once upon a time there lived in a certain far away country a little girl named Esther. The father and mother of this little girl died and her cousin took her to his house to live. This cousin loved the little girl very much and he did many things for her trying to make her happy. So just like little boys and girls should do when older folks love them and do things for them, Esther loved her cousin Mordecai very much. Now as Esther grew up she became more and more beautiful and Mordecai was proud of her.

One day Mordecai heard that the king of the country was going to choose a queen from the beautiful girls of the country. When Mordecai heard that he said to himself, "Now is the time for me to let people see what a beautiful girl my Esther is. I will let her go to the palace with the other pretty girls of the land. I believe that the king may choose her."

When Mordecai told Esther about his plan, she was surprised and said, "But surely there are other girls in the land who are much more beautiful than I am. It does not seem to me that there is any use in my going when there will be so many to choose from."

However Esther went and the king thought her so beautiful that he chose her for Queen and so you have the story of Esther becoming queen.

Not very long after Esther became queen, she was looking out of her window one day and saw her cousin Mordecai at the gate and she could tell by the way he looked and the clothes that he was wearing that he was extremely unhappy. It was a custom in those days to wear a special kind of clothes when one was unhappy and so Esther knew that something was worrying Mordecai. Now she was not supposed to go out to the street, so she sent a messenger out to Mordecai to find out what was wrong. Then Mordecai sent this message to Esther, "Someone in the country hates you and me and our people, the Jews, and so they have persuaded the king to send out word that all Jews are to be killed. The king is not a Jew and he does not know that you are a Jewess so when this wicked person came to him and wanted to have the Jews killed the king consented."

Now this message made Esther sad. Oh so sad, but she did not know what to do, so she just sent some of the kind of clothes that were worn by people when they were happy out to the gate to Mordecai. But Mordecai did not accept the gift, for clothes could not make him happy.

Finally he sent this message to Esther, "Go in and talk to the king. Maybe you can persuade him not to have our people killed."

But Esther was afraid and said, "Yes, but I am not supposed to speak to the king unless he sends for me to come to the Palace. Unless he decides to receive me, I will be killed for daring to go to the palace without being invited."

But Mordecai sent back the message, "You had better go. You will probably be killed anyhow."

Then Esther decided to risk her own life and try to save her people, the Jews. She dressed up in the most beautiful clothes that she had and then went and stood a short distance from the king. He looked up and saw her standing there and she was so beautiful that he called to her to come and tell him her message.

Esther was very happy because the king had received her kindly, so she went to him and said, "I wish that you would have a feast and have Haman, your friend, come and let me come too."

The king agreed to do this.

Then when they had the feast Esther said to the king, "Please, Oh, King, allow me to live." The king was surprised so she told him that she was a Jewess and that she and all her people were to be killed, and that it was Haman that had made the decree. Then the king changed things entirely. He had Haman killed and all the Jews were allowed to live. Thus Queen Esther saved her people and she and Mordecai and all the Jews were happy.

"He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing the precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him." It is not every time that we write that we have the pleasure of reporting conversions. The farmer spends months in preparing the soil, in sowing and in cultivating and a few days in harvesting. So also the pastor must labor patiently without seeing results, but in due time the harvest ripens.

It is our pleasure this time to write of our reaping time. In October I spent ten days holding meetings for Brother T. K. Hershey superintendent of the work of the Mennonite Brethren and pastor at Pehuajo. The meetings were widely advertised and crowds of new people came to hear the Gospel and 52 made confession of conversion. As most of these were new not all will persevere, but the church was strengthened and the believers were much interested in the addresses on prophecy.

We have now had Brother Hershey's return visit in a meeting in Rio Cuarto for which we prepared with special prayer meetings and teachings. The meetings only lasted eight days but from the first Brother Hershey captivated the hearts of the people and the house was well filled at every meeting. Prayer lists were made and after a short prayer meeting each evening we had a half hour of Bible study on the "Victorious Life." These studies were specially helpful to the members. The sermons were also interesting and much appreciated, and many responded to the appeals to accept Christ. Twelve had been baptized shortly before the meetings began but more than fifty made the good confession during the meeting or a few days after and still more are about ready to do so. Of these all but six have been learning the Gospel in the Sunday school and church services and are therefore fairly well prepared for baptism. However additional special meetings will be held for their instruction and we believe that nearly all will persevere in the Christian life. Pray that they may do so.

Among the members at Rio Cuarto we have one who claims to be a lineal descendant of Marco Polo and another of Christopher Columbus, but they are both now on our absent list, which is the largest list of all. Among the converts one man is chief of the internal revenue department for the district, but the vast majority are as usual from the working class.

We opened our vacation Bible school today and will continue three weeks. As the attendance is larger than last year we will have separate classes for boys and girls. After that comes our Workers' Conference and then campaigns in the branch missions.

The Bible Coach is now here. It had a hard year for work on account of the unusual amount of rain. After seven years of faithful service the motor needed extensive repairs and the body needs painting. Brother Siccardi will make a thorough canvass of Rio Cuarto with Bibles before going out again. We hope to finish the canvass of our district during the year.

We are still the only evangelical denomination at work in a district as large as the state of Ohio. We pray that the church in the home land may feel the pull of this challenge as we cannot help but feel it here.

Rio Cuarto, January 24, 1927.

MORE TEACHER TRAINING IN EGYPT

Sunday school teachers who have had special training for their work are needed abroad as well as in the homeland. Very particular attention is given to such preparation by the representatives of the World's Sunday School Association in charge of the Sunday school work in Egypt. During the past year Sheikh Metry S. Dewairy, field worker, met more than 400 Sunday school teachers in various conferences and gave at least 50 addresses. These proved very useful. The subjects emphasized in the conferences have been Training Classes for Teachers, the Cradle Roll Department, Children's Day and the Sunday Schools for Street Children. An aim for the coming year has been chosen: "Where there are two teachers or more, there must be a class for them." The number of such training classes is now about 120. Many parents who had never come to church have been attracted and won by means of the Cradle Roll. A special order of service was published for Children's Day and the pastors are enthusiastic at the interest which has been aroused. In Alexandria, Sheikh Metry addressed 700 children. In Assiut, where 2,000 were present, he asked how many remembered the subject of his message a year ago. Several hundred shouted in response, "The Tongue."

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

FOSTORIA, OHIO

I am glad to be able again to report progress and victory for this part of our Lord's vineyard. Our revival and evangelistic effort closed Sunday night, February 12, with a love feast. Thirty members participated in the observance of these holy ordinances, which is perhaps equal to the average percentage of attendance among our churches. We now have a membership of seventy-two, but very much scattered, even to distant towns and cities. Our love feast was a most inspiring climax to our revival campaign.

We were hindered very much by icy streets and severe cold during the forepart of our revival effort, but the interest of our membership and of the members of other churches did not wane. However, it was hard to get the unsaved out to the meetings. Yet God graciously blessed our feeble efforts and seven came forward during the meetings and publicly accepted Christ. Four of them were baptized and received into the church. The other three were not ready and their baptism was postponed until a later date. Others seemed interested but did not take the definite stand. Some of them may be reached in our follow-up work.

God's blessing has been upon us. Surely our efforts have been worthwhile. Within a year and four days twenty-six have been converted, of whom twenty-two have been baptized. The little flock of the faithful of the Fostoria Brethren seem very much encouraged. Our Sunday school is progressing. The improvements on the property have been begun and will go forward as funds are procured for the purpose, but we have resolved not to go into debt. Let prayer continue to be offered in our behalf.

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

It is still less than a year, that the writer took charge of the work at this place. We had a mission here for several years but no regular pastor.

Under such circumstances nothing of great importance could be accomplished. And yet the mission undoubtedly did much good. It had a tendency to fan the glowing embers that were burning in the hearts of the people, into a flame, and create an interest among the people in this city and throughout the entire brotherhood.

Much credit must be given to the people who had the faith and the tenacity to carry on the work here for a number of years under very trying circumstances.

But those who have faith in the living God shall surely have their reward, and those devoted people are now beginning to reap what they sowed.

Our work here is certainly encouraging just now. Since our last report fourteen names have been added to the church roll. Six have been baptized and we have prospects for a number more.

The Sunday school is growing rapidly and the Woman's Missionary Society is doing great things. This society pledged on dedication day three hundred dollars to be paid in two years. Six months have passed and they have raised over four hundred dollars.

At their "apron and socks" social more than fifty people were present and all seemed to enjoy themselves hugely. Suddenly the lights were turned out and a huge cake appeared with seventy-one candles burning. Then it began to dawn on the parson that his birthday was close at hand. There is one distinguishing feature about the parson's birthday and that is that it is so closely associated with Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays.

And while that has no special significance I know; but it is rather consoling, and you do not feel quite so lonely, when you remember that these two great Americans were born in the same month you were.

At any rate the work here is coming good and strong and if our Lord who must have all the praise at last, will continue to bless us in the future as he has in the past a great work will be accomplished here.

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

ELKHART, INDIANA

Elkhart is located twelve miles west of Goshen on the Lincoln Highway. It is a city of about 40,000 and a manufacturing center of band instruments. The well known Conn instruments are made here.

Our church has outgrown its present building and has purchased a fine building site. All are anxiously looking forward to a new building.

Brother W. I. Duker is the pastor and has served these people faithfully for the past four years. Due to his energetic and earnest leadership the work has grown and a fund of several thousand dollars has been accumulated for the new building.

Brother Duker is principal of one of the schools in Goshen, so that with the double duty of teacher and pastor he has a very busy life. It was impossible for him to visit with us, but he was given aid by one of the Brethren who was well acquainted with the city and our people, so that we got along nicely.

Our membership is made up almost entirely of laboring people with families to support, so that we got no large gifts, however the members responded well and nearly all did something. The Elkhart church is interested in the college and anxious to see it go forward.

I think our church here has a splendid opportunity for growth. They have secured a fine new location for their building in a community that is not over-churched. With the fine spirit of sacrifice and the mind to work and do things, we expect Elkhart to go forward.

The total gift of the church to the endowment was $1613.11. W. S. BELL.

FLORA, INDIANA

We are glad to share with the readers of the Evangelist some of the more important happenings in the church at Flora. Our last report was given during mid-summer last year. Last fall the church granted the writer a leave of absence for a period of six weeks to hold evangelistic meetings. These meetings have been reported by the pastors of the Berlin and Hagerstown churches. We need not take space to repeat these reports.

Upon our arrival home we began to plan for our own meeting which was scheduled to begin January ninth. We found that the holidays prevented our making as complete preparation as was desired. We found the church planning for the Christmas program. We departed somewhat from the usual Christmas program in that we used the stereopticon slides giving the Christmas story in detail. At the close of the program colored slides were used to light up a great white cross at the foot of which was laid the White Gift for the King. This service was a very effective one and sent the audience away in the very finest spirit.

We began our meeting on January ninth in a snow storm and enjoyed the experience of having all roads blocked for the first week with a temperature hanging around zero and for several days going twenty below. At no time during the entire three weeks was the weather suitable for meetings. However, in spite of this handicap the crowds were good when they could possibly get out. We were assisted by H. E. Richer and wife of Peru, Indiana. Brother and Sister Richer had charge of the music and proved themselves capable leaders. The results were 17 coming forward. Two of these were by relation. Only three children, the rest being adults. We are happy indeed over the outcome as we reached the heads of several families. The church was greatly benefited by the meeting. The revival spirit is still with us evidenced by the fact that two weeks after the meeting another elderly lady came forward to confess her Lord.

The Sunday school is well organized and under the able leadership of Lee F. Myer is forging ahead. We are now running well over the two hundred mark. No contests, no special drives, we have tried all of these only to find that after they are over the slump sets in. We meet with our workers once a month for the purpose of studying together the situation and adoption of methods to bring the largest results. At this meeting we have both devotional and topical leaders. Then the problems of the

DEDICATION AND MEETINGS AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Brethren at Washington are rejoicing in the success of the series of meetings surrounding the dedication of the first unit of their new church which has just recently been completed. Much of the success of these meetings is due to Brother L. S. Bauman of Long Beach, California, who came all the way from the Pacific Coast to lead us in them. Dedication Sunday was January 30, but for a week preceding Brother Bauman preached to us with powerful appeal. The faith of the saints was strengthened, many rededicated themselves to a closer walk with the Lord, and the unsaved were challenged with the mighty challenge of the Gospel. This week of inspirational and instructive preaching served to prepare the way for the day of dedication. We feel as though this day was one of God's passing ways.

Dedication Sunday was devoted to three blessed services. Due to the fact that the first unit of the building cost more than was anticipated it was necessary on this day to raise some five thousand dollars before we could properly dedicate the structure. At the close of the morning service at which Brother Bauman preached upon the subject, "Giving That Costs," he presented the situation and without any begging the people responded with about eight thousand dollars in cash and pledges. Before the series of meetings had closed ten thousand dollars had been given. Thus being so graciously blessed by this splendid offering which cares for the cost of the present unit, which is twenty-five thousand dollars, we eagerly anticipated the service of dedication in the afternoon. Though the afternoon was rainy every available seat in the church was taken. Following the splendid musical program and the sermon of Dedication by Brother Bauman, the pastor and people engaged in the holy task of dedicating the church to the worship and service of our Lord. We departed feeling that a forward step had been taken in the interests of the Brethren church in Washington.

We regret that at this time we shall be unable to complete the building, for we feel that there is a great opportunity for the Brethren church in this city. The completed structure is needed. But at this time, the Brethren here having done their best, we must abide such a time as the Lord may see fit to open the way for the completion of a structure that shall do honor to God's cause and shall be a source of pride to the brotherhood at large.

Following the Sunday of dedication, Brother Bauman led us in evangelistic services for ten days. Services were held each afternoon as well as evening. These days were fraught with great blessing to the entire church. Such days of mountain top experiences can not soon be forgotten. During this time thirty-nine people came to the front for confession or rededication. Many that had been prayed for for a long time were included in the number. On the closing night of the meetings which was Wednesday, February 9, we held our first baptismal service in the new building. Ten were baptized and received into the fellowship of the church. Another was received into fellowship by letter. Others will be baptized at later services. Many testified that this last service was the most blessed of the entire series of meetings. People were reluctant to leave the church though the hour was late.

We bade Brother Bauman goodbye, loath to see him go, but yet rejoicing that God had sent him this way. He did us all good and his untiring efforts and fervent preaching of the Gospel among us have served to strengthen us both as individuals and as a church. Come again, Brother Bauman!

Communion services will have been held in our new church when this reaches the "Evangelist" readers, as the date is set for February 27. HOMER A. KENT, Pastor..

SAINT JAMES, MARYLAND

It is now slightly more than a year since the writer came to Saint James as pastor. Though our correspondent has reported the work here from time to time, the pastor has written but one news letter in that time, so we feel that another letter, written from the pastor's angle, would not be out of place.

The temptation always arises to tell of the new bonds of friendship that have been formed, to tell of the ways in which these friendships have manifested themselves—the donations, and other acts of neighborliness; yet we wish to confine our report more to the work itself.

There has been nothing startling in the growth or progress of the work since our coming, yet we feel that we can say, without boasting, that the work is stronger in many respects than it was a year ago. For so widely scattered a community, the attendance is unusually good, and what pleases us most is that it has become increasingly regular; there is not nearly so great a tendency to stay at home just because it looks a little cloudy, and it MIGHT rain!

Another point for gratification is the increased interest that the individual members are taking in the work of the church. At the first few business meetings after our coming, there were not more than a dozen or fifteen out of the entire membership in attendance. We had some really important matters to consider at our quarterly meeting in September; we had made a special appeal, yet only ten came! We turned it into a prayer meeting and set the business meeting for the next week, when there were about thirty out—the highest attendance at a business meeting in the history of the church.

Shortly before our next quarterly meeting, in December, we suffered a staggering loss in the death of one of our most devoted members, Brother Harvey Poffenberger. Aside from his interest in the general work of the church, Brother Poffenberger had for years been the "treasurer" of the church—which means here that he financed the church and waited for his money till they could conveniently repay him. As a result, the church was perpetually in debt to him. His passing left us not only with a debt on hand, but left us without his assistance, both spiritually and financially.

However, at the December meeting the pastor was extended a call for another year; at the same time a committee was appointed to solicit funds in an effort to remove the indebtedness. They began their work about January 1; our revival meetings began January 10, with Brother Porte, of Louisville, Ohio, doing the preaching. This meant no little expense, at such a time, but it proved far more inspiration than burden. Counting what was given toward the expense of these meetings, what was received on back pledges, and what was given expressly for the debt, the folks gave in all well over eight hundred dollars in just a few weeks' time. As a result, we are happy to report that all the debts of the church are paid in full, and there is a slight balance in the treasury. And best of all, the folks are still ready, we believe, to go forward!

Our revival meetings, as already intimated, have proved a great inspiration to the brethren at Saint James. While we planned not to neglect evangelism, it was our expressed purpose to try to bring about a revival, and we believe that this was accomplished to no small degree. Aside from a super-abundance of mud, we had splendid weather throughout most of the meeting—really better than we could expect at that season; the attendance was splendid from the start; there was a delegation from Hagerstown, led by Dr. Carpenter, on the opening night, and several times later in the meetings. There were five confessions as an immediate result of the meetings, and there are still others that we hope to reach as a later result. Our contacts as pastor have been greatly strengthened in many ways. The work of the evangelist, in short, was such as to make it easier for the pastor to continue his work afterward, rather than to increase its difficulty. By using some of the "tricks of the trade," we believe we could have reported a greater number of confessions, but both evangelist and pastor were unwilling to resort to these, believing that it would only prove a hindrance to the church, as well as to the individuals concerned. Some evidence of a spiritual revival is to be found in the increased attendance at prayer meeting: before, there had only been from six to ten; since, we have had twenty and thirty. There is still room for improvement, of course, but we feel greatly encouraged; a church that won't support a prayer meeting has but little chance of growing, either numerically or spiritually. Two deacons recently elected to that office, were also ordained during the meetings.

We feel that we should not close without mention of our Christmas service. For the first time, the folks here were led to give the "White Gift" service a trial. It included a "chimes" number by candle light; a few recitations and exercises by the children, all expressive of the true meaning of Christmas; a song service embracing the best old Christmas hymns, and a beautiful and impressive pageant by the young women. We feel that it was well worth while, and that the White Gift spirit, as well as the service, has become established. Our Easter service, for which we are already beginning to plan, we expect to be of the same nature. We are of the belief that Santa Claus and the Easter rabbit are alike out of place in a service designed to honor our Lord and Savior.

We had requested the prayers of the brotherhood before our special meetings began; won't you continue to pray that the work that has thus been begun may continue to its full fruition, and bring life, and the more abundant life, to us all?

Home Mission Secretary.

"YE NEXTE THYNGE"

"Ye nexte thynge" is a quaint phrase in one of the old Saxon legends. But in spite of its age the phrase contains one of the arts of true living in the world today. "The next thing" is the thing that we do not have to search for, do not have to wait for, do not have to climb up to, but is always right at hand awaiting our attention.

The secret of many a useful life is found in this—simply doing the next thing that comes to hand and doing it well. Most of us are quite willing to be helpful to the world and to those about us. Indeed, most of us are more than willing—we are anxious—to make our lives count for something worth while. In our hearts we dream of doing noble deeds at some future day. But many never realize these desires only because they overlook the doing of "ye nexte thynge."

We have our thoughts fixed on doing beautiful deeds, on heroic actions, on high aspirations some day, and we overlook the opportunity that is right at hand to speak the helpful word or give the cheerful smile of which our neighbor may be in sore need or to meet our discouraged friend with a cordial handclasp and hearty greeting that would make the world a little brighter for him. It is well to follow the great poet's advice and hitch our wagon to a star; but if by so doing the glory of the great things of the future obscures the smaller but no less necessary duties of the here and now, it is a hindrance rather than a help.

The things that belong to the present moment are the important things. Great events often hinge on small events. And if we neglect the opportunity, small though it be, of the present, the greater opportunity of the future is growing farther and farther beyond our reach.

There is no need to think our duties are too complex, too conflicting. If we go to crossing our bridges before we come to them, as so many of us attempt to do, present duties begin to seem small and obscure. There is a way to make life worth while, and only one way. It is by doing moment by moment and hour by hour "ye nexte thynge."

Whether it be large or small, whether it seems important or not, "ye nexte thynge" is the task for our hands.—Christian Advocate.

A religion that does not strike its roots in the supernatural cannot be spiritual.—The Lutheran.

WE HAVE LOST A GREAT MAN OF GOD

After an attack of pneumonia lasting nearly two weeks, our dear Brother Marcus Witter departed to be with the Lord he loved so devotedly. Though for more than a week great numbers of friends were praying for his recovery, on Monday morning, January 31st, at 5 o'clock, he gave up the struggle. Try as we may, we cannot understand why such a true, noble and devoted lover of souls should be taken from the great work he was engaged in. His church people loved him, his home life was perfect, his ministry was one of power, he had arrived at those years of experience where his judgment was valuable and sound, and he had before him that which seemed to be the most promising opportunity of his ministry. Why should he be removed? There is only One Who knows, and he doeth all things well. Our ways are not his ways, neither are our thoughts his thoughts. Were it not so, we would reverse many a decision of the Almighty! But he who "Loved us and gave himself for us" does nothing that is not in harmony with that same love. WE CANNOT SEE, BUT WE CAN TRUST! May the Lord himself be the portion of Mrs. Witter, and son Alton and his wife as they are lonely for this loved one gone.

"Then, O my soul, be ne'er afraid;
On him who thee and all things made
With calm reliance rest;
Whate'er may come, where'er we go,
Our Father in the Heavens must know
In all things what is best."

The funeral was held from the Third Brethren church, at Ella and Tioga streets, on Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and burial was in the old Brethren Cemetery at Germantown. Brethren J. E. Braker, I. D. Bowman and our own pastor conducted the services.—From Philadelphia First Church Bulletin.

A GREAT MAN HAS LEFT US

Anyone who truly may have known Marcus Witter as a preacher of the gospel and a witness for Christ, can only concur with me when I say that this man was great. Not a man with the display of public gifts as some may have, but a man who knew God in a real way, and who could touch men for God in mighty power. There was a quiet power in his life that made him the greatest personal soul-winner I have known in the Brethren church. Sinners trusted him, and good men loved him. When numbers of his former parishioners traveled hundreds of miles to be present at his funeral, it testifies to the great love they bore in their hearts for him.

Marcus Witter was a man of prayer. He didn't "say prayers", he interceded and agonized in prayer to an extent that few have experienced. It was the precious privilege of the writer of these few notes to enjoy a fellowship with this great man of God in his hidden life with his Lord. It was in this prayer life of Marcus Witter's that sinners were won for God, and in which his churches were preserved. He did not preach a life that he had not experienced.

Marcus Witter was a man of one Book. It seems superfluous for me to declare that there was a gripping depth to his teaching of the Scriptures that made the reality of a life with God to assume a powerful conviction. He was not much of a man to roam around over the literature of the world although he was acquainted with it. He spent his time searching the Scriptures which he has often said he felt was most profitable.

Marcus Witter was a lover of souls. I hardly trust myself to speak here, for it was in this regard that I knew him best. He was not a stranger to tears of yearning for lost men. When I think of him thus, I recall the Savior in Luke 19:41. I thank God for what I learned from him in this way.

But God has loved him more than we and has taken him a way to be with himself. He has gone on, but has left some of the atmosphere of heaven with us, which, as a sweet perfume of what Jesus is like still lingers with us and entwines around our hearts. But as the days increase since his going, I am sure that the example of this noble Christian manhood and devoted ministry will serve to stir the rest of us to truer witnessing for Christ Jesus, his Lord and ours.

A LOVING TRIBUTE TO A BELOVED BROTHER IN THE MINISTRY BY ONE WHO KNEW HIM

A man of God has gone home to glory. Many are the hearts that are made sad by his early departure. All whom his consecrated life touched were made better. To know him was to respect and love him. He was a good man. He was a faithful minister. We were boys and young men in the same community, members of the same home church, the former Fairview church near South Bend, Indiana, members of the same class at college and seminary, graduating together in 1904. Marcus was one of the best men I have ever known. His family, his friends, his church, all have suffered a great loss, but all can join in thanking God for such a life. Though not long in years it was long in loving service.

John Bunyan drew a sevenfold picture of a Christian minister, and in this portrait I see a composite picture of our beloved brother in the ministry, Dr. Marcus A. Witter. Bunyan said: "He had eyes lifted to heaven, the best of Books was in his hand, the law of truth was upon his lips, the world was behind his back, he stood pleading with men, and a crown of gold did hang over his head."

He was faithful unto the end and has gone to receive the crown and the mansion over there. His life ought ever be an inspiration to those who remain to exemplify Christ's life and live his teachings in body, mind and soul.

A TRIBUTE TO BROTHER M. A. WITTER

By Alva J. McClain, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions

No higher tribute can be paid to the memory of Brother M. A. Witter than to speak of his devotion and sacrificial labor for the cause of Foreign Missions in the Brethren church. As this is being written, I have open before me the old book of Minutes of the Foreign Missionary Society. The Minutes begin with a copy of the Charter adopted in 1900, to which is appended a list of those persons who have the honor of being Charter Members. The list has fifty-one names, and one of these is M. A. Witter. Six years later, in 1906, Brother Witter was elected to the Board of Trustees. In point of service, therefore, he was truly one of the "Elders" of the Board, having served continuously for over twenty years. Only two members of the present Board, Brethren Miller and Bauman, have served for a longer period.

Our Board has suffered a great loss in the "departure" of Brother Witter; just how great, we shall appreciate increasingly as we gather for the next meeting. His judgment was always well-considered and helpful. His patience and courtesy were unailing. Seldom were the times when he was not in his place, always smiling no matter how long the sessions or how difficult the problems. But his greatest contribution to our work was that atmosphere of devotion and spirituality which he brought with him to the Board meetings. Human speech is wholly insufficient to describe the effect of God's Presence in and through such a life as his. One can only say that Brother Witter was to us a constant benediction because his life was filled with God and seemed to radiate his glory. The Apostle describes that of which I am trying to write when he speaks of God "shining" in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the Face of Jesus Christ."

But entirely apart from his services rendered on the Board of Foreign Missions, I personally shall remember Brother Witter as one of the great preachers of Christ and his Word. His messages were always simple, even when he dealt with the deep things of God, and there was a blessed quality in them that stirred the heart. I heard him preach but few times, but those times are to me unforgettable. His preaching was never perfunctory,—that curse which rests like a pall upon many a pulpit; to him preaching was something tremendously urgent. And he had learned from God that precious secret of how to feed the souls of men. Once, I remember, he came to a State Conference held in Philadelphia when I was a pastor there, and preached the evening sermon at the end of one of those long days when much business has been done and everyone is wearied. Very simply he opened the Book and read to us from the Ephesian letter; then he seemed to take us by the hand and lead us up into those "heavenly places" where the soul finds Christ and quiet rest. There are some of us who shall never be able to efface the impression of that message. May God give us more men like Brother Witter.

The Winnowing

Lord, thou hast stricken us, smitten us sore,
Winnowed us fine on the dread threshing floor.

"Had I not reason?—far you had strayed, Vain was my calling, you would not be stayed."

Low in the dust, Lord, our hearts now are bowed,
Roughly thy share through our boasting has ploughed.

*"So as my plowing prepares for the seed,
So shall the harvest our best hopes exceed."*

Lord, we have lost of our dearest and best,
Flung to the void and cast out to the waste.

"Nay then, not one of them fell from my hand,

"Here at my side in their glory they stand."

How shall we start, Lord, to build life again,
Fairer and sweeter, and freed from its pain?

"Build ye in me and your building shall be Builded for Time and Eternity."

That Questionnaire on Religion

The results of that newspaper questionnaire on religion were pretty widely distributed by the newspapers themselves, but some of our readers failed to see them and for their benefit we are passing on the following tabulation. Charles Stelzle was the originator of the scheme, about one hundred prominent clergymen of various denominations prepared the questionnaire and two hundred newspapers in two hundred different cities cooperated. Not all papers reported their results, but one hundred and fifty-three papers showed over 125,000 to have taken the trouble to answer the questions. Following is the percentage of reports from all those who voted:

Question	"Yes"	"No"
1. Do you believe in God?	91 per cent	9 per cent
2. Do you believe in immortality?	88 "	12 "
3. Do you believe in prayer as a means of personal relationship with God?	88 "	12 "
4. Do you believe that Jesus was divine in a way that no other man was divine?	85 "	15 "
5. Do you regard the Bible as inspired in a sense that no other literature could be said to be inspired?	85 "	15 "
6. Are you an active member of any church?	77 "	23 "
7. Do you regularly attend any religious services?	76 "	24 "
8. Would you be willing to have your family grow up in a community in which there is no church?	13 "	87 "
9. Do you regularly have "family worship" in your home?	42 "	58 "
10. Were you brought up in a religious home?	87 "	13 "
11. Do you send your children to any school of religious instruction?	72 "	28 "
12. Do you think that religion in some form is a necessary element of life for the individual and for the community?	87 "	13 "

Some have found in these figures occasion for encouragement with regard to the religious condition of our country, while others have found a warning in the fact that so large a percentage of those who reported—doubtless from the religiously inclined folks, of whom in the main the best could be expected—have no family worship and are indifferent with regard to religious instruction. The "Religious Telescope" thinks the returns showed "that Americans have not departed from the religious position of their forefathers; that, while the expression of religion is different today, yet religion is making progress in our country." And the following cogent reasons are adduced:

While it is impossible to secure accurate data regarding church membership for the early period of our history, yet since 1800 there has been a marked increase in church membership in our country, as shown in the following statement. In 1800 the Protestant Church membership was seven percent of the population; in 1850, fifteen percent; in 1870, seventeen percent; in 1880, twenty percent; in 1890, twenty-two percent; in 1900, twenty-four percent; in 1910, twenty-four percent; in 1925, approximately twenty-six percent.

Nineteenth Centenary of Jesus' Ministry

Plans are under way for the observance by the Young Men's Christian Associations throughout the world of the years 1927, 1928 and 1929 as the nineteen hundredth anniversary of the three years' public ministry of Jesus. The anniversary falls within those years, according to the general consensus of Christian chronologists. The idea is largely credited to Mr. R. F. McWilliams of Winnipeg, Canada, chairman of the Canadian National Council of the Y. M. C. A. The call for the observance has just been issued by Dr. John R. Mott, chairman of the World's Committee of the Y. M. C. A. to the 40 national councils and alliances represented on that committee. These associations embrace a membership throughout the world of more than one and a half million, besides many thousands of other adherents.

The commemoration in its general form, says Dr. Mott, will be carried forward by "furthering an intensive study of the personality, work and message of our Lord Jesus Christ concerning the whole range of the life and relationships of men." It seems however that no program of method for universal guidance is to be formulated and insisted upon. That, it seems, is left up to the suggestions and initiative of the Y. M. C. A. officials and members throughout the country. The associate general secretary of the National Council, Mr. S. Wirt Wiley, in transmitting the call to the United States, says, "We believe the American associations are in the mood to respond to the suggestion of the World's Conference, but the method of that response cannot be dictated by the national office. The idea must germinate and grow in the field. The proposal staggers the mind with its possibilities."

The current bulletin of the Home Division of the National Council points out that "to recall the days of his Ministry is to be driven back past Christianity to Jesus Christ himself." And it is quite possible that to be driven back past much of current Christianity to an unprejudiced study of the life, and work of the Lord Jesus and the teachings which he committed unto men would be the greatest blessing that could be imagined. We cling so tenaciously to the accumulations of the speculations of men that becloud the real Gospel message, or follow so readily the newly spun and unreliable fancies of unchristian philosophers, that occasionally to turn back to the one and unchanging compass of all truth for a relocation of our religious theories and standards of conduct is quite essential.

Moreover far too much has the youth of the present generation turned its attention away from the Christ to the gods of this world. There is too much shallowness and frivolity, too much seeking after pleasure and profit, too much reckless living and pampering of the flesh, too much disregard of the rights of others and of the laws of God. We need to be brought anew to face the seriousness of life and the necessity of squaring our lives with the demands of right living. And the most vital point of attack is the youth of our land. By that method we may be able to save the next generation from a vast amount of wickedness, and hosts of promising lives for the service of the Kingdom. It would be of untold blessing if that high purpose of the Y. M. C. A. should spread throughout the whole body of Christian believers and cause a far-reaching intensifying of effort in behalf of the young people of our generation. "One can see, as in a vision, a regenerated youth rising to shake off everything that binds us to spiritual ineffectiveness and beginning anew the unending search for Christ's Way of Life."

"The Fellowship of Prayer" Again

We have received inquiry concerning the pamphlet containing the outline of "The Fellowship of Prayer" concerning which we wrote last week. We gave the address where copies could be obtained (and will repeat it here), but did not give cost of copies obtained in quantity. Write to Federal Council of Churches, C/o Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City. They cost three cents per copy, or $2.00 per hundred. Any pastor or church leader may secure a sample copy free by writing the above address. It is a splendidly arranged devotional program, well calculated to direct the mind and heart during the Lenten period into the secrets of growth in the spiritual life and merits the interest that is being given to it. One sister who has charge of the Prayer Band of a W. M. S. has ordered a supply to be used in her society, and we commend the suggestion to other leaders of the W. M. S. Pastors will find it profitable to urge it through the regular church prayer meeting, and in fact, to use each week's series as a basis of study in the prayer service. Those who do not care for the full suggestions in the pamphlet, may find the outline as we print it in "Our Worship Program" sufficient. But whether this program or another is followed, every leader ought to seek to capitalize this season leading up to Easter to the highest spiritual good of those whom it is his privilege to lead, whether they be a family group or a church.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Sister Emma Aboud writes of her work in New York City, where she has been doing considerable preaching, and to large crowds. She has hopes of a church in that city some day. Why not?

Prof. J. A. Garber, general secretary of the National Sunday School Association, gives us another cluster of news items, which every one interested in the church school should read, and that takes in practically every leader in the church.

A personal note from Brother L. V. King, pastor at New Lebanon, Ohio, states that the work there is "going along nicely," and that Brother R. D. Barnard of Mansfield, Ohio, is to lead them in a revival meeting beginning March 13th.

Brother E. M. Riddle, member of the Christian Endeavor Booster Committee, jogs the memory again of those who have not yet responded with a pledge for Kentucky. This committee is certainly doing what it was appointed to do—boost, and they seem determined to keep on until they get results.

Brother Henry Rinehart, treasurer of the Brethren Home, reports the receipts to that institution during recent weeks. Doubtless many have not yet sent in their offerings to this institution and to the Superannuated Ministers' Fund, which offering was supposed to be lifted on February 17th. Those who have been delayed in this should get it out of the way promptly, for the Easter offering for Foreign Missions will soon be claiming your attention.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble's letter contains many items of interest. She indicates the growth in the new field of Bossangoa where Brother and Sister Sheldon are holding the fort. Twenty had been baptized and ten new conversions reported. Sister Myers was restored out of a serious illness with which she was attacked while on her way to care for Mrs. Sheldon who had been ill. The urgent need of a physician and of further hospital facilities is very evident. This and other needs should challenge the brotherhood as the time for the Foreign Mission Offering approaches. Our missionaries rejoice in God's provision in regard to auto supplies at the time of the arrival of the new recruits.

Three items are to be found in the "Announcement" column, this week, two of which are more than personal. Brother Drushal is calling for teachers for the Riverside Institute. He names the kind of teachers and the qualifications required, and is anxious to have the teacher problem answered promptly. Also Brother Bau-man states that the Foreign Mission offering may be taken any time before Easter rather than on Easter Sunday, if such plan meets the convenience of any church.

Milledgeville, Illinois, has experienced a stirring revival under the evangelistic leadership of Brother A. V. Kimmell and the pastoral supervision of Brother George E. Cone. There were seventeen confessions and four requests for membership, according to the report of the pastor. This doubtless will mean much to the Milledgeville church in the way of added strength and responsibility, and points not only to the power of the preached word, but to the faithfulness of the pastoral leadership, as Brother Kimmell suggests. The evangelist was found to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

Brother Charles H. Ashman, writes of his successful campaign in the First church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, where he is the efficient pastor. He was his own evangelist, but was assisted by Brother Arthur Lynn, as song director. Forty-five made the good confession, four of whom were reconsecrations. The meetings were well attended and the church was greatly revived. Plans have been laid to continue the evangelistic spirit and effort indefinitely. Their slogan: "An Evergreen Revival" is one that ought to be the inspiration of every church.

Brother Percy L. Yett, our missionary located at Huinca Renanco, Argentina, writes of the new mission point at Realico, twelve miles distant, and of the growing interest at that place. The experience he relates shows the utter need of that land for a gospel that can make real Christians out of men. It is the sheerest folly to look upon South America as evangelized, as some are inclined to do, because the Roman church has spread its lifeless doctrines and pagan priests throughout the land. This condition makes the people all the more difficult to reach, but they are none the less needy than the ignorant blacks of Africa.

Dr. W. S. Bell reports the results of his canvass of two of Indiana's smaller churches—New Paris and Brighton. The former is under the pastoral care of Brother B. H. Flora and the latter is being shepherded by Brother J. W. Erower. New Paris gave to College Endowment $225.00 and Brighton, $529.81, which amounts bring the total results of the new campaign to date up to $97,495.44. It is encouraging to note how the willingness to help to the extent of their ability possesses all our churches, both large and small. Gradually the fund is climbing up to the 100,000 mark, but it is not climbing any too fast; it ought to go to the 300,000 mark among the churches before the campaign stops, and it will require every church and individual of the brotherhood to do their bit and best to reach the coveted goal.

Dr. Charles A. Bame, pastor of the Ashland church, has returned home again, after an absence of three weeks in an evangelistic campaign with the First church of Philadelphia, of which Brother R. Paul Miller is the busy pastor. The revival seems to have begun several weeks in advance of Brother Bame's arrival on the field. During January there were four conversions and seven baptisms, besides numerous reconsecrations. During the campaign proper there were thirty confessions and three to renew their vows. The occasion proved to be a real "home-coming" to Dr. Bame and a very enjoyable season of fellowship was enjoyed.

We are in receipt of two neatly printed church year books, giving records and accomplishments for the year 1926 and the organizations for the new year. They are from the First church of Long Beach, California, and the church at Berlin, Pennsylvania. In the quite elaborate book of the Long Beach church we find among other things of interest the pastor's summary of membership from the date of organization until the present. During that time a total of 1,060 names were added to the church roll and 385 were dropped for various causes, leaving a present membership of 675. During the past year a net gain of 97 was realized. Dr. Bauman has been its pastor from the organization. The Berlin church has a record of which it can be proud also, for the pastor, Brother W. C. Benshoff, reports 46 added to the membership and four lost during the year, besides a splendid new church built during the year.

Mountain Tops on the Horizon.

V—"A Glorious Church"

By Elder G. W. Rench, D.D.

Paul wrote to the Ephesians in triumphant language: "That he might present the church to himself a glorious church."

Yet men abuse the church. Some of its own members join in this stone-throwing. Even some preachers criticize it because it has not done certain things. A few years ago it was no uncommon thing to hear, "The church has failed because it did not prevent the war." What short sightedness! Then science has failed; education has failed; government has failed—everything has failed. Every now and then, from some little conference, the cry goes out, "The church has failed in enforcing the Eighteenth Amendment." The church has not stopped strikes; the church has not put an end to murder; science, education, government, and religion combined have not stopped the crime of stealing. Why, such reasoning is anarchy in religion. The anarchist cries, "Away with all government", because some governments have failed to reach their ideals. "Away with all laws", because some laws are unjust. But governments have not failed; laws have not failed. Red-handed, bloody anarchy has failed, because all good agencies are succeeding.

Who said the church was to be a great physical force, stopping things? Not its great Head, and founder. There is many a branch of evil that it has not chopped off. This is not the church's method. It deals with the root, not the branches. "And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire." Luke 3:9. There was a time when the church was engaged in cutting off branches—"when it crowned and uncrowned kings." She did what her Lord had not sent her to do. It resulted in her disgrace. The church is not a police force; not an invading army killing and destroying humanity; the church is "the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3:15). The church upholds truth—eternal truth. The true church through its truth will chop away at the roots of the tree of evil as long as men can be found who will wield the axe. And, the great Head of the church is not contemplating failure, for as the inspired writer says, "That he might present it unto himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish" (1 Tim. 5:27). Notice, he does not count on weak humanity to present the "glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle" to HIM, for he knew that would be beyond our ability, but HE EXPECTS TO PRE-SENT THE GLORIOUS CHURCH UNTO HIMSELF. When he comes in the stillness of the night to this old earth FOR HIS CHURCH, the "spots or wrinkles"—the cowards, the hypocrites, and the blasphemers of his holy Word, will be left behind. God's Holy Book closes the vision of that "glorious church" as a city, the new Jerusalem, "coming down from heaven as a bride adorned for her husband" (Rev. 21:2). Think you that a man may despise the church with impunity, trample it under his feet, and yet be included in that holy company "without spot or wrinkle." "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thes. 4:16, 17). "THE DEAD IN CHRIST shall rise first." That is the time of first separation—when the church will be made "glorious," and when the dross shall be left behind. "For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God? And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" 1 Peter 4:17, 18). Do you see what takes place, "that he might present the church to himself a glorious church?"

Why, Christ walks in the midst of the churches: "And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, . . . And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength. I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen . . . The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches (Rev. 1:13-20). And the estimate Christ placed upon the churches is indicated by the character of the candlesticks. "And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks." Not iron, nor brass; nothing but pure gold properly represents the churches as Christ pictured them. And yet, men abuse the church. And a lot of folks can't see the church for the churches. Some are wondering around like a comet amidst the stars—and of about as much use. Instead of following Christ and his church WHEREVER HE LEADS through thick and thin, the only thing they know is Methodist, Baptist, or Presby-

The Church's One Foundation

*The church's one foundation

She is his new creation
By water and the word;
From heav'n he came and sought her
To be his holy bride;
With his own blood he bought her,
And for her life he died.*

And tumult of her war,
She waits the consummation
Of peace for evermore;
Till with the vision glorious
Her longing eyes are blest,
And the great church victorious
Shall be the church at rest.*

And mystic sweet communion
With those whose rest is won;
O happy ones and holy!
Lord, give us grace, that we,
Like them, the meek and lowly,
On high may dwell with thee.*
—S. J. Stone.

terian. Some preachers don't know what ordinances Jesus instituted in his own church, or they care less. They had rather be aligned with the ten spies who were sent out to view the promised land, than to be counted with the two who saw the same land, but said "we can." The ten did not make a "future"; the two did. The truth of God is what counts, after all is said and done. And don't you forget it, I am looking out for my "future"; but my future reaches far beyond the few days I shall spend here.

I read the other day, and from the pen of a very able writer, this: Speaking of the church he says, "Discursiveness has wasted her strength. Too fondly she has loved novelty in doctrine and practice. Leaders have endeavored to endow and commission her as the world's expert problem-saver. Committees and commissions are appointed to go up and down the earth looking into this and that, and to report progress, whether it be the steel corporation or the Republic of Mexico. She is being asked to take over the education and the hygiene of the heathen. Much of her energy is being turned toward a vague and materialistic something called sociology. Social-service apostles are advising her ministry to adopt the "church forum," a thing invented by the problem-solver to give cranks a respectable place to harangue against God and government. Christ did not send his church to regulate the universe, nor his preachers to solve problems. The only commission appointed by the Founder of Christianity is the commission to preach the gospel, a commission composed of all who confess and follow him. The witchery of the world beguiles the church—the world with its knowledge falsely so called, its glamor of yellow gold, its vain pomp and glory of might and power. The church is sent, not to confer with the world, but to confront the world; not with an olive branch, but with a sword."

So say I. I have served on "commissions", and reported "progress" until I have become a joke, at least, to myself. The supreme need is to line up and hear the great Captain say, "GO", "TEACH", "BAPTIZE." Matt. 28: 19. And when you catch a man leaving out some of the items in Christ's commission, ask him to show you his orders.

Some Brethren Church Leaders of Yesterday, as I Knew Them

VII. ^{WAMPLER} Stephen H. Bashor, L.L.D.

By Martin Shively, D.D.

Many of the later years of Brother Wampler's life were spent at Apollo, Pennsylvania, in the midst of the Allegheny Mountains, not far from Vandergrift. He was born in Armstrong county, in the Keystone State, January 8, 1837, and so far as I know, he never lived outside of that commonwealth. He united with what we frequently call "the mother church", when he reached the estate of manhood, and ten years later, was called to the ministry in that denomination. Still later, in 1884, he was ordained to the eldership, and both before and after the division in the fraternity, he served as district evangelist. In fact his ministry was largely of the pioneering type, for the fields which offered little in the way of compensation, seemed to appeal especially to his heart. If a congregation was all but down and out, or if a few members in an isolated location desired to make a try for the opening of a new church, he might always be secured to save the struggling group, or to make an effort to establish a new work at the behest of no matter how few. He was an excellent carpenter, and not a few of the church buildings in his state, which had become dilapidated, were rebuilt by him, not only as architect, but actually as builder. Just how many new church buildings he actually built with his own hands, I do not know, but I do know that there were several of them. And from yet other points of view, I know that the church has never had a more loyal son than it had in him. One never heard him in the pulpit without knowing what he believed and why, especially on the matter of baptism, and related matters. Just how much of training he may have had in the schools of his day, I do not know, but there never was any doubt in the minds of those who heard him, about his being a keen student for he knew his Book, and he was particularly well versed in the history as well as the theology of what are often spoken of as the Doctrines of the church. In his later years he compiled a history of Christian Baptism, and so thorough was the presentation of the subject, that all who read it could not but wonder how in the world he could ever have brought the matter in it together. Folks who united with the church under his ministry, could never be satisfied in any other, because they were so completely indoctrinated, that they were Brethren to the end. He may have been dogmatic in his faith, for he never missed an opportunity to present his faith and the reasons for it, but at any rate, he could never be charged with vacillation, in the matter of denominational loyalty. The church, and by that I mean the Brethren church, was absolutely first in his thought, and no sacrifice which he felt that it called upon him to make, was even for a moment thought to be too great. Thus he was practically never absent from the conferences of the church, either state or national, and was always smilingly ready to undertake any duty which was assigned to him there. Even at 70 years of age, he averaged four sermons per week, from year to year,—an amount of service which would stagger many a younger man. But there was no complaint from him, and he went on until the final break, which culminated in his death.

Just when I met him first, I do not recall, but it must have been quite early in my ministry, and at one of the general conferences of the church, for we rarely missed any of these gatherings. Two things in him, impressed me from the very first,—his keen interest in all things which he felt would affect the church either for good or harm, and his unfailing good nature. I never saw him ruffled in spirit, and his face was always wreathed in smiles, no matter what the occasion might be. And in the days when the Brethren church was being reorganized, at Dayton in 1883, and at Ashland in 1887, with men of such divergent views, such men as he were highly essential to maintenance of balance, and he was not found wanting. Many men who reach advanced age, become more or less touchy and irascible, but not so with Brother Wampler, for it seemed to me that the older he grew, the more mellow his spirit became, and in one of our last talks together, I said to him that I am praying that I might grow old as beautifully as he. Of all the old men

I have ever known, I think that he and Brother Swihart had acquired the art of getting old gracefully, to a degree that is rare.

Brother Wampler passed to his reward several years ago, and his good wife has since followed him. At her request, the books which constituted his library, all of which show constant usage, are placed in the College Library, with the hope, no doubt, that others may find them as helpful as he, and for the same purposes. There are, no doubt not a few of younger folk in our church and even in our ministry, who never knew Brother Wampler, and perhaps not a few, who never heard of him but there are few who have not in some way or other, been influenced by him, either directly or indirectly. For if the Brethren church is to survive the apostasy which is in the world to so great a degree, it will be largely through the influence of such ministries as his, and thus, though his tongue may be inarticulate, he will yet speak. In some measure he was like that Master whom he so faithfully served for he remained voluntarily poor, that others through his poverty might become rich, if not in worldly goods, then in that thing which constitutes true riches.

A Referendum in 1928

By Senator William E. Borah

(Second of a series of Articles on Prohibition by Men of Distinguished National Repute)

We are going to hold a great national referendum in 1928. This may, or may not, be a matter of comfort to those who have recently disclosed an uncommon interest in certain kinds of referendums.

In that year the American people will chose a President, every member of the House of Representatives, and one-third of the Senate. The great political parties will put forth their platforms and make their appeal to the voters.

It is the most impressive exertion of political power upon the part of the people that takes place in any country or under any flag. There is no finer exhibition of popular rule and I doubt if there can be a more accurate survey of public opinion than may be had in the choosing of a Chief Magistrate.

If the issues are framed in sincerity and the political parties deal in candor, I know of no better method to test the sentiment or record the judgment of the American people. It is the way contemplated by the framers of our government, it harmonizes with the practice of more than a century and its accuracy is such that no man need shrink from the test who believes in his principles and has confidence in the intelligence of the people.

It is in this way that the great issues of the past have been settled. It is a source of great pride as we look back and of assuring confidence as we look forward that in these great contests the final judgment of the American people has been singularly free from error.

Thomas Jefferson, who knew more about politics and people combined than any man of his time, if not all time, was never weary of saying that a free people should return from time to time to the consideration of first principles.

There is a first principle to which under the admonition of Jefferson and particularly under the circumstances and conditions now obtaining we may profitably recur in 1928.

We have lawlessness of individuals—and enough of it—in this country. It has been a subject of deep interest, if not of alarm, to journalists and publicists and laymen alike.

But the most significant and startling feature of this unwelcome phase of our national life is the proposal to elevate lawlessness into a principle of government and clothe it with all the sanctity of an inalienable right. If we pierce through the metaphysical maze which envelopes this contention it will be found to amount to simply this: "If I do not like a law, it is my patriotic duty to disregard it, to break it, and to encourage all other people to do likewise."

I do not propose going back over the history of the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. Neither do I propose to discuss the wisdom or unwisdom of its adoption. But there the amendment is—a part of the Constitution, the law of the land, binding every individual, every official, state or national, and striking down of its own force all laws in contravention of its terms.

So long as it remains unchanged, no one can legally or morally manufacture or sell intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes anywhere within the wide domain of the United States. So long as this remains a government of law there are only two things to do, enforce it or repeal it. Those who urge its repeal are acting within their undisputed rights. I have no desire to criticize the course which they are taking. It is one of the blessings of free government that people have a right to urge the enactment and the repeal of laws.

But there is a different program proposed and to that I am going to direct attention. It is proposed by political leaders and educators to build up public opinion so as to make the Constitution a dead letter, not repeal it but disregard it.

It is proposed to let it stand, and notwithstanding it remains a part of the Constitution, to nullify it, trample it under foot, and that, it is contended, is a wise and patriotic course to pursue and perfectly sound as a principle of free government.

Let me recur to the arguments and quote the language of those who insist upon this policy. I shall quote at random. "He who obeys a law which is wrong contributes by that to the final debacle, the intensity of which is increased because delayed by that obedience."

This is an appeal, first to law-breaking as a correct principle of government and secondly a denunciation of obedience to law, the rock foundation upon which republics rest. Who decides that the law is wrong? How do we decide that it is wrong? In a government of order and law, that is decided through the processes pointed out in the Constitution, or the framework of government. In a government of disorder and violence it is decided as here proposed by every man taking the law into his own hands.

You will readily recall conditions in countries where this vicious principle prevails. They are countries where property is the luxury of the strong, where the voice of the people is silent, and where security of life may be blown away by any faction coming into power.

"If a large number of citizens are convinced that the national Prohibition Act compels them to live lives of hypocrisy, cowardice and servility, they will feel no moral obligation to observe the law. On the contrary, they will develop an esprit and morale in the breaking of it in the name of patriotism," says one.

Is this doctrine peculiar to a prohibition law? May it be limited in its effect to a prohibition law? If once the poison is put out, can you circumscribe its spread? If a number of citizens feel that our laws of property force them to live lives of servility and abject dependence, it is clearly their duty under this doctrine to develop an esprit and morale in breaking down such laws and all in the name of patriotism! There are plenty of people in the world who think just that, and those same people who preach the above doctrine call upon us to crush them down as a menace to civilization.

Break the law in the name of patriotism! The American system is to repeal the law in the name of patriotism. If you love the principles upon which this blessed republic is founded you will seek to obey the law until according to the processes of government the people in their wisdom see fit to repeal it.

If it is wrong, the people will repeal it, as the people do not want laws which are wrong in principle. There is no safer judge as to a righteous law, than the judgment of the people—that vast mass of intelligence and character upon whom our institutions depend for perpetuity.

Let me quote again: "Some people go so far as to say that this nullification of statutes is wrong in practice as well as theory; that the best way to get rid of a law is to enforce it. But the cost of trying to compel obedience to a law which violates the conscience of the considerable minority of the people or the traditional usages and privileges of anything like a majority is usually too great."

This is the doctrine put out by a distinguished educator whose business it is to train and direct the minds of American youth. In plain, unadorned language, this says that if a considerable crowd can be gathered together they are perfectly justified in breaking the law, in defying the authorities. The learned professor says nothing about the right and the power of the people to change laws, the right of the people to repeal laws, but assumes that the only way the people can deal with the law is to break it.

There is no law upon the statute books which may not be repealed. There is no provision of the Constitution which may not be changed.

I want to ask you: What would be the condition of this country in a single fortnight if every law displeasing to a considerable number of people were disregarded, some disregarding one and some disregarding another? Whose home would be safe? Whose happiness would be secure? How long would we enjoy the blessings of orderly regulated liberty? And why does he speak of a "considerable minority"? If it is good, it is good as a matter of principle, not dependent upon numbers, and just as good for a single individual as for a group.

Again it is said: "The attitude (of those who disbelieve in the law) should be one of acquiescence in and encouragement of the process of nullification." Here is your doctrine. No repeal. No respect for the orderly processes of government, but nullification is the general law-breaking violence. By all means let us have the judgment of the American people upon this policy. Let us recur to this "first principle" to find what the people think of this doctrine of lawlessness.

But let us turn from these teachings to saner counsel and to somewhat safer leadership. In one of the statements sent out to the country by those who are advocating the doctrine to which I have referred, you will find a sentence to this effect: "The nullification of the Fugitive Slave Law developed men like Abraham Lincoln." This seems to be a clear statement to the effect that Abraham Lincoln as to the Fugitive Slave Law advocated nullification.

The very reverse is true—he gave his life for the integrity of the Constitution. As far back as in 1858 he declared in a public speech: "I have always hated slavery."

I do not believe you will find among all his letters and public addresses the use of this word "hate" save in connection with the institution of slavery. The word seems never to have passed his lips except when speaking of human bondage. He did hate slavery. But while he hated slavery, he was devoted to our institutions and believed in our Constitution. He said: "I have always hated slavery but I have always been quiet about it until this new era. . . . By the Constitution all assented to it (slavery) in the States where it exists. We have no right to interfere with it, because it is in the Constitution and we are by both duty and inclination bound to stick by that Constitution in all its letter and spirit from the beginning to the end."

"We must not withhold an efficient fugitive slave law, because the Constitution requires us, as I understand it, not to withhold such a law," he said. In one of the most notable occasions in his career he declared, "Our safety, our liberty, depends upon preserving the Constitution of the United States as our fathers made it, inviolate."

It does not seem to me quite fair to quote Abraham Lincoln in favor of nullification, for I take it that no severer test could have been placed upon his loyalty to the Constitution than to place slavery upon the one side and the Constitution upon the other and ask him to choose his course. He chose his course and never faltered. He did not belong to that group of political philosophers who think because a law is wrong that you have a right to defy it, and that because a constitutional provision does not suit your view of righteousness that you have a right to nullify it and trample it under foot.

"The basis of our whole political system is the right of the people to make and alter their constitutions of government—but the Constitution which at any time exists until changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people is sacredly obligatory upon all. The very idea of the power and the right of the people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established government."

These are the words of one who knew something about republics, for he more than any other one man helped build the only real republic that has ever existed upon this earth. He led our Revolutionary army to victory. He presided over the convention which framed the Constitution and he guided our nation through its first perilous years. He has won the right to speak and to speak to us. He speaks in my judgment the true voice of the American people at this hour. He spoke for those principles of government under which we have gathered strength and won glory. If there are those who sincerely believe that it is wise now at this time to engraft upon the doctrine of Washington the doctrine of nullification, the doctrine of personal lawlessness or group lawlessness, let them put forth their platform and name their candidate.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

Bobbed Brethren

By Charles H. Ashman

God's Word is a stream of revelation. The best way to understand it, is to step into the stream and surrender yourself to the current. Some people try to dig a canal to divert the stream so it will flow by their truck patch. Or they attempt to carry water from the stream to irrigate their pet theories. Now, we have no truck patch to irrigate nor preconceived ideas to prove in the study of 1 Corinthians 11:1-16. We desire to yield ourselves to the current of this passage regardless of where it takes us, or at what destination we arrive. Will you go with us on such a journey?

It has been said, "The best commentary on the Bible is the Bible itself." Another has said, "The Bible throws much light on the commentaries." We shall follow the rule of interpretation that this passage is a unit of divine revelation, self-explanatory, not needing any light of profane history of customs to reveal its truths. We shall shut ourselves up to the Word alone. It is inspired and perfect. With neither a desire to explain it away, or to prove pet theories, we will permit this passage of Scripture to speak to us its message. Will you?

God's Order of Headship

The theme of this passage is, "God's Order of Headship." This is the central teaching. This is the primary truth from which all others in it radiate. "I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God." Paul is writing about headship, not about the changing fashions of the world. He teaches this order, —God, the head of Christ; Christ, the head of man; man, the head of woman. He is writing to "set in order" the "things delivered" concerning this order of headship. This is a profound passage! It goes to the depth and climbs to the heights. It must be studied in all seriousness! It is vital, essential, spiritual!

Woman's Long Hair is a Sign of this Headship

Paul teaches that the long hair of woman is a "veil" intended by God and nature to be the sign of this order of headship, woman "ought to have power (authority—the sign of the husband's authority) on her head." He clearly states that he is not writing about an artificial covering or veil, but that, "her hair is given her for a covering (veil). By way of illustration of the appropriateness of this sign, he says, "Judge in yourself: is it seemly for a woman to pray unto God uncovered (without this veil of long hair)?" Doth not even nature itself teach you, . . . that if a woman have long hair it is a glory to her?" Now, these words are simple and plain. They surely teach that God has ordained through nature that woman's long hair should not only be her "crown of glory," but also the sign of God's order of headship. This is the reason this natural covering of long hair is related to worship. How absurd to suppose that God would put instructions in his Word as to just how women should look in the assembly of the saints. It is not a question of appearance or style, but of the sign of headship.

Now, Paul takes up the consequences of the cutting off of this sign of headship. He maintains under the Spirit's inspiration that if a woman removes this long hair,—covering,—veil, in God's sight she has "dishonored her head." He further teaches that if she removes this long hair veil at all, she might just as well clip it off tight and shave it off close. "For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn", The word "shorn" is the Greek word used in Acts 8:32, "like a lamb dumb before his shearer." It refers to the close clipping or shearing of sheep. If you cut it off at all, might a swell clip it all off! The word "shave" is the same word used in Acts 21:24 in which four men had taken a vow, purified themselves and "shaved their heads." If you cut it off at all, might you well shave your head clean for the sign of headship destroyed. Remember, not as a matter of appearance but as a sign of headship. Some professed Christians have said, "Paul was an old bachelor and was trying to dictate to the women as to the style of wearing their hair." Well, if that is all you think the Word of God

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience.)

MAN IS A SPIRIT

SUNDAY—The Divine Spirit Animates Man. Ps. 8; Gen. 2:7; Ps. 82:6. And Jehovah God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and he became a living soul.

Prayer—Thanks for our source of strength. Pray for forgiveness and for non-Christian peoples.

MONDAY—Spiritual Relations are Primary. Gal. 3:1-4; John 4:14; Rom. 12:2. Except one be born anew (from above), he cannot see the kingdom of God. I must have right heart relation with the great heart of the heavenly Father.

Prayer—For the true "birth from above," solution of our problems, establishment of God's kingdom.

TUESDAY—Material Things are Secondary. Mk. 8:31-38; Mt. 4:4; Mt. 6:18, 19. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his soul? The secret of spiritual attainment is always to consider material things secondary to the spirit.

Prayer—Thanks for the privilege of prayer. Pray for deliverance from self-centered life; for the sick.

WEDNESDAY—The Spirit Should Dominate. Rom. 8:5-17; Mt. 5:48; 18:8. For if ye live after the flesh, ye must die; but if by the spirit ye put to death the deeds of the body, ye shall live. Vigorous discipline is necessary to attain spiritual dominance.

Prayer—For spiritual power; the alert mind that sees clearly; the discouraged.

THURSDAY—Death not to be Feared. Mt. 10:16-39; 1 Cor. 15:54, 55; Gal. 6:8. And be not afraid of them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul. He that soweth unto the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap eternal life.

Prayer—Thanks for our hopes. Pray for deliverance from the fear of death; for the dying.

FRIDAY—We Look for Immortality. Rom. 8:31-39; 2 Tim. 1:10; John 3:36; Hab. 1:12; 2 Tim. 4:8. Our Savior, Jesus Christ, who abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. "Thy hope of vanquishing death is thy possession thyself of the Deathless One."

Prayer—For deathless life within; for true friends; for the unfortunate.

SATURDAY—Practice of Immortality. Col. 3:1-17; 1 John 3:3; John 17:3. And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself. "Let me feel that I am already immortal."

Prayer—Thanks for our wide contacts, temporal and eternal. Pray for fearlessness; for the bereaved.

better get out of the stream and walk the paths of men, but, if you believe Paul is writing under inspiration, surely you cannot escape the seriousness of Christian women bobbing their hair.

Man's Hair Should not be Long

In contrast, this passage teaches that man's hair should not be long. Now, the current opinion that the men in Christ's day wore their hair long is unscriptural. A part of the Nazaritish vow was that the man would not cut his hair. His hair was a sign of the vow. Now, if all men wore long hair, how could this be a sign? To be a sign, it would have to be different. It was to be an external sign to man, but if all men were long-haired how could this be? So Paul teaches that, while the removing of the long hair by woman dishonored her head, the permitting of his hair to be long dishonored the head of a man. "For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God." Also, "Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?" Surely, this passage is treating the subject of long hair as the veil or why introduce the contrast between men and women?

A Part of the Whole Gospel

Now, as a church we profess to be a "Whole Gospel Church." Is not this a part of the Whole Gospel? If some can set aside these sixteen verses of 1 Corinthians II, cannot others set aside the sixteen verses of John 13 with equal right? Cannot another reject the last sixteen verses of Matthew 28 including the Great Commission and the formula for baptism? By what rule of interpretation can some annul one passage and maintain that others are binding? Honesty and consistency forces the Brethren church to teach, preach, and practice 1 Corinthians 11:1-6 or else withdraw her claim of a "Whole Gospel Church." Bobbed Brethren are not true Brethren, nor scriptural Christians in the light of this passage.

Personal Liberty or Not?

The question is asked frequently, "What about the sixteenth verse?" "But, if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God." Some have thought that this means, "You can do as you please about it. It is a matter of personal liberty." What this verse means is,—if anyone is stubborn and refuses to yield to God's order of headship, let such a one know, that the Corinthian church nor any of the churches of God anywhere have no practice of cutting the hair by the women nor do they sanction it. This verse teaches that those disobeying God's order of headship are "bones of contention" in the church. What are the conditions in the Brethren church today? Who is counted the "Bone of Contention?" The one who preaches and insists that the church practice this passage, or the one who excuses or sanctions its violation?

Are We Drifting with Worldly Currents?

Is the Brethren church drifting? We do not bring any such charges, but sincerely ask the question. These are difficult times. Apostate teachers are "creeping in unawares." Itch specialists are turning the ears of the people from the truth unto "fables." We need to exercise extreme precaution in our beloved church or we will be caught in the currents of the world instead of being in the current of God's revelation. The Brethren church will win out on a Whole Gospel Platform, but lose out on anything less. We must be honestly consistent in our plea and not confine it just to the ceremonial ordinances, but make it all inclusive of the Gospel.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

God Our Refuge and Helper

By Mrs. J. R. Laughlin

OUR SCRIPTURE

Psalm 46, God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble, therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea; though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof.

There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the most High. God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved, God shall help her and that right early. The God of Jacob is our refuge; come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolations he hath made in the earth. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder, he burned the chariot in the fire. Be still and know that I am God. I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge (Psalm 46).

OUR MEDITATION

Here we have the promise of strength, help and constant companionship from one who is omniscient and omnipresent—even God. One who has created us and preserved us and whose will is that not one of his children should perish but that all should have eternal life. He hath provided means of grace, hope and forgiveness even through the sacrifice of his only begotten Son. He hath united all here below who believe in him and hath established and kept through ages past, the church—a great body of believers who have confessed his name and owned his cause; we also have a guide book, the Bible, our book of instructions which God has given us. This book which in the words of the Psalmist is "A lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path" contains the mind of God, the way of salvation, and the happiness of those who believe in it. The Bible contains many, many promises of reward for those who work for him, many promises of comfort and cheer for those who are sad and distressed, those who mourn, those who are discouraged—Yea, all I need in thee I find." Well have the hymn writers expressed it, "A mighty fortress is our God, a bulwark never failing," "God is the refuge of his saints, when storms of sharp distress invade." "How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord, you who unto Jesus for refuge have fled," and "Other refuge have I none."

The words of another hymn come to mind as we think of our blessings and the innumerable things God has done for us, "Must I be carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease?" Surely we would not expect to receive all these good things and return empty handed. Possession involves responsibility. To each one of us is intrusted a certain number of talents and God himself places the value on these and knows just what we can do and how much should be accomplished, so let us not be "I can't-ers", when we are asked to help with some work. Of course, refusals must be made sometimes, but with some it seemingly becomes a habit. Let us remember too that, "the reward of one duty is the power to fulfill another."

"For thou hast been a refuge for me, a strong tower from the enemy (Psalm 61:3). A refuge is a place inaccessible to an enemy, and such we find lurking about at every turn; we shall mention a few of the most common which perhaps seem not so dangerous but unless defeated may cause much unhappiness both to ourselves and to others. They are anger, fault-finding, envy, dishonesty, immodesty and intemperance. There are vices which are not easily concealed and are sure to be seen in our conversation or behavior; they are also enemies to our happiness and to the success of the church. In God, our refuge we find strength and help to subdue these and other enemies which seek to do us evil.

OUR PRAYER

We thank, thee, O God, our heavenly Father, that thou art a refuge and help unto all who seek thee; we thank thee for thy church, for the protection and help it has given. Help us to rejoice in the comfort of thy promises and grant to us understanding and a greater knowledge of things that are true, honest, pure and lovely. In Jesus' name, Amen.

Church School News

By J. A. Garber, General Secretary

Evangelist readers may have observed from references in these columns and news letters from the churches that commendable work is being done by our church schools. It is, indeed, gratifying to learn of the enthusiastic and determined efforts of our workers.

International Council

In this regard we find ourselves in line with fellow workers of other churches. Through the Executive Meeting of the International Council of Religious Education, held at Chicago during the week of February the 13th, we learned of very heartening progress among thirty-six Evangelical denominations. To this number three more were added, namely: the Cumberland Presbyterian, Presbyterian of Canada and the Mennonite Brethren in Christ. Brother George H. Jones and the writer, who represented our National Association, regard this late meeting as being prophetically significant. The very finest cooperative spirit prevails and a program of concerted effort which promises much for the future is being projected.

Statistics

So far one has to be content with general observation, for it appears impossible to get reliable statistics. The interdenominational leaders experience a difficulty in common with denominational leaders. One report said, "The whole matter of records and statistics is in a deplorable condition. The public has a right to look to us for complete and accurate figures but we are not able to give them. When we come down to the rock bottom facts it will be discovered that many local churches are not able to make reliable reports on their work because no accurate records are kept." We refer to this matter lest a like difficulty arise with our church school officers when we call statistical reports within the next month or two. Now is the time to check up on your records, particularly in relation to the requirements of our Standard of Excellence. We suspect that the two points with which the schools will have greatest difficulty are: teacher training and the addition of new books to the workers' library.

Awake and Alert

We are happy to note that certain of our workers are awake and alert to this issue. References have been made to schools organizing training classes. Recently we received request for examination questions for a class at Berne, Indiana. Brother Charles W. Mayes of Lanark, Illinois, wrote for a book list. This will be found in the workers' Hand Book. We are submitting an additional list of new books from which selection may be made in the April Educator.

Magazines

This issue deals with children's work. Children's Work is to be observed April 24th to 30th. The February number of the International Journal of Religious Education features Missionary Education in a very complete manner. The March number of the same journal deals with the work of the adult division, department and class in the church school.

The Value of a United Front

Many a sermon or address has been wielded after the above caption, and yet that is exactly what we mean to do in a few words. A "united front" made up of every Christian Endeavor society in the Brethren Church would make these appeals unnecessary. If every society should take a small share in the supporting our Kentucky teacher, how easy it would be!

We have a task, a work that is ours. We will only present a united front, when we all get down to it at once. The following little account, on the subject, "Getting Down To It" may be helpful. A smart buyer telephoned for the price of a car of birdseed. Later he asked if the same price would hold good on half a carload. Having been assured this, he called later if the same would be true for a 500 pound sack. Finally the seller agreed. Later, he called again to know if the same rate was good for a 100 pounds. The dealer, out of patience, replied, "If you will send your canary to our ware-house we will feed him for nothing." Endeavorers, let us get down to this fine piece of service in earnest and within a few weeks, see a report that will be pleasing to all.

SIMON THE CYRENIAN SPEAKS

He never spoke a word to me,
And yet he called my name;
He never gave a sign to me,
And yet I knew and came.

At first I said, "I will not bear
His cross upon my back;
He only seeks to place it there
Because my skin is black."

But he was dying for a dream,
And he was very meek,
And in his eyes there shone a gleam
Men journey far to seek.

It was himself my pity bought;
I did for Christ alone
With all of Rome could not have wrought
With bruise of lash or stone.

JUNIOR ENDEAVOR

By Virginia Haun

Taking Christ as Our Leader John 10:9-14

Once upon a time there lived a little boy whose name was John. This little boy lived over in the country called Palestine. In fact he lived on the Coast of the Sea of Galilee. This boy lived with his father and mother and brother James. The father was a fisherman and oftentimes John and James went with their father on his daily trips after fish. As soon as they were big enough they began to help their dad to fish. Sometimes they helped to draw in the big nets with fishes in it. When they would get in a net with a lot of fishes in it, they would pick over the fish. Some of the smallest ones had to be thrown back in the sea. Then some of the other kinds of fish could not be used because they were not the right kind, so those had to be thrown back too.

We might compare that dad to a leader in a game of "Follow the Leader." You know in that game, everyone has to do just what the leader does. And so James and John watched their dad and tried to do just like he did. They cast the net in the sea like their dad did and they sorted out the fish like their dad did. Their dad was the leader and they followed him.

One day, after James and John had become men they were with their dad, down by the sea shore mending their nets and preparing to go out for some fish. As they worked they were talking about some of the things that had been happening in their community. James probably said something like this, "You remember that time when John the Baptist baptized a young man named Jesus. Well, last night I was talking to some of our neighbors and they say that they heard this young man. He is in a town near here and he is preaching. Many people have been going to hear him."

Then it seems to me that John must have replied, "I wish that we might hear him, too."

Soon they fell silent and were all just working and thinking when a shadow fell across their net and they looked up. There in front of them was a very friendly looking young man, and with him were Peter and Andrew, two other fishermen of that country. Very little conversation passed between these men but James and John soon realized that this was Jesus. Then Jesus spoke directly to them and he said, "Follow me."

James and John looked at each other and they looked at their dad and they thought, "Does this man want us to come with him and leave our father? All our lives we have been following our dad and doing the things that our dad wanted us to do. Does this man think that it would be better for us to follow him than for us to follow our own dad?" But somehow the young man, Jesus seemed so friendly and so interesting and they felt like they wanted to go with him. And so it happened that these men who had been following their dad all their lives left their dad and started following Jesus.

Their lives changed entirely. No longer were they making money for themselves, instead they spent their time helping others. Just like they had followed their dad in the things that he did, they followed Jesus in the things that he did. Whenever they could they did things for Jesus. John especially loved to do things for Jesus and he is sometimes called, "The disciple whom Jesus loved." Sometimes when Jesus left the rest of his apostles he would take James and John with him. Thus with Christ as their Leader, these men became very happy and strong and helpful followers.

John loved his leader so well that he has written a book, called the Gospel of John. In this book John tells everyone, you and me and all the people who read his book, how they may become the followers of this wonderful leader, Jesus Christ. I hope that some day everyone will read that book and decide to follow Jesus like James and John did, don't you?

Our Mission at Realico

By Percy L. Yett

Realico has a population of about 4,000 souls and is about 12 miles from Huinca Renanco. It is in the Province of the Pam-pa.

We have been holding meetings there since the Bible Coach was there last November. Our worker goes there every two weeks from Huinca Renanco.

Interest continues to grow and the prospects are very good for this mission point. Last week forty were in attendance at our meeting. The room was crowded and no more were able to enter. If our work is to go we must secure a larger place. And if we secure a larger place we will likely have to pay rent. At the present we are holding our meetings in a believer's home. Pray that the Lord will help us solve this problem that is facing us there.

Last week before the meeting our worker went to the plaza for a few moments to study and meditate. While there one of the workers in the plaza, a man about forty years of age, came and wanted to know Brother Zeche's mission for he had seen him in the plaza on several occasions. Brother Zeche told the man that he came to Realico every two weeks to hold religious services. The man said, "O, I don't believe in any religion. Those priests are a band of thieves, and I don't believe in making confession to them; neither do I believe in worshipping the saints." Brother Zeche said, "neither do I believe in those things." The man was surprised, for he thought, as many of the people do here, that the only religion in the world is the Roman Catholic Religion. When he learned that we were not representing the Roman Catholic church he became interested, and in his conversation he confessed that he had a desire in his heart to do the right thing. He said, that many times when he had committed some sin and his conscience condemned him he would go out into the country where he could be alone and he would kneel and pray for forgiveness. He did not know who he was praying to, whether Nature, the sun, or the moon, for he did not know who God was. But he said when he returned to his house that he usually felt better; although he did not have the assurance that his prayer was heard. This gave our worker a wonderful opportunity to begin and teach this man that, "All we like sheep have gone astray . . . but the Lord hath laid on him (Jesus Christ) the iniquity of us all." Also, "That God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The man said, "I want to learn more about God. Where do you hold your meetings?" It will not be long until this man will know who God is, and that God hears and answers prayer.

The Situation in the African Mission Field

18 Rue Nationale, 18,
 Montpellier, France, February 8, 1927.

Dear readers of the Evangelist:

My heart has been turning back during recent days to that time ten years ago when the pioneer Oubangi-Chari party was just wending its exploratory way, so to speak, up the West Coast of Africa. Since that time what hath God wrought!

Again permit me to transcribe from letters recently received from the field. From the new station under date of October 23rd we read:

"We are still living in the rest house. The concession is getting quite well cleared, so that it looks less like a wilderness. The oversight of the work is rather difficult, since the rest house is an hour away from the concession. About twenty have been baptized. Ten more accepted the gospel this morning. Those who come seem to be thoroughly converted. We are using Sango at present in our preaching services, but will of course have to learn Baya as the women and children do not understand Sango. The garden is producing well. A well has been begun, but cannot be finished until the dry season, as there is too much water. The French doctor passed through here a few days ago, vaccinating for small-pox. He says there is no sleeping sickness through here. We see a tse-tse fly occasionally, but not many. Four weeks today since we received any mail. You know how anxious we always are at such times."

"We still have a Karre cook and table boy. I am training a little Baya boy and he also is doing fine. Yengedi came over from Bassai with the big gun a few days ago. He killed a buffalo and we certainly do have a feast of meat. Did you know Yakanenze named his baby Bomba, after Mr. Gribble?"

From the same station, November 9th, "Fudge and raisin pie today! (Mr. Sheldon's birthday).

"The Johnstown people sent us some dried fruit, so that is how we come to have raisin pie!" . . . "We take turns preaching at the daily services. The Lord is working miraculously in keeping us in good health at this time in spite of untoward conditions."

From Yaloke, November 14, 1926—"Miss Tyson and I are happy in having the Fosters stay with us. I feel they will be very helpful in the work here. Mrs. Fosetr is much interested in gardening and is trying a dry season garden. (The rainy season will soon be over."

From Miss Tyson, under same date—"It was wonderful the way the Lord provided in regard to auto-supplies for the coming of the new party. There was not the sign of an auto tire until the party reached Bangui. Brother Jobson picked up tires at Kinchassa that Brother Hathaway had ordered from the homeland. Brother Jobson had bought some at Antwerp but they did not get on the boat with the rest of the baggage. The ones you bought in January were still at Libuenge (Congo Belge—across from Bangui) and we were told that the original bill of lading must be sent to release them. Also Brother Hathaway had ordered tires through another source, but because they had not what was asked for they sent balloon tires.

"So we sent tepoys to Bangui to meet the missionaries. But it was not long until we heard that runners were coming with "Yangou-ke-Koutou-Koutou" (automobile tires), and sure enough, these runners brought four tires, two that Brother Jobson picked up at Kinchassa, and the others, two of those from Libuenge which had been released without the papers asked for by the customs officials here. It surely was the working of the Lord and we still continue to praise him. Mr. Hathaway left that afternoon for Bangui. The rivers were quite high and he could not cross near Bangui; so he waited in the rest house, and sent word to the waiting ones in Bangui. They hired an auto and soon they all met at the second river and came to us on Sunday afternoon, October 24th.

"We gave them a royal welcome and rejoice indeed that they arrived safely. Mr. Foster had fever, so we put him right to bed. (Between Bangui and the first river, they had been caught in a heavy rain, and being in an open truck, had no protection. This doubtless caused his fever). He was ill but a few days.

"Much freight has arrived lately—medical orders placed in May, 1925. Also part of an order previously placed (before my arrival).

"Also your amputation instruments. Of course since we are not permitted to do major operations they will not be used until your return (or the arrival of another physician). Am anxious for that day, so that I may be first assistant to the surgeon!"

From Miss Myers of Bassai, although written from Bossangoa, October 23, 1926—"I came over from Bassai to nurse Mrs. Sheldon when she had fever. Miss Bickel and I each wanted to come, each of us fearing the other was not well enough for the trip."

"On the trip I was running a low temperature all the time. Three miles from the next to the last rest house my tepoi broke and I walked the remainder of the distance. It was about noon and the sun was very hot. When I arrived I had a severe headache, temperature 102 degrees. I went to bed and kept Garcon and Noatemo putting cold cloths on my head the rest of the day. I never before suffered so with my head. I cried unto God for healing. What else was there for me to do? The boys were frightened, I could not raise my head even to drink water. I prayed that I might not lose consciousness, for I felt I was near death. The boys offered to carry me the rest of the distance on my bed. I felt it was of God, and consented to go as soon as the sun was down. The night was very cold, but I kept cold cloths on my head, and felt a relief. After being out an hour or so a big storm came up. The lightning flashed and the roar of the thunder seemed everywhere present. What were we to do?"

"There was nowhere to seek shelter. The run was very long. We could do naught but pray. I remembered how the Lord Jesus controlled the waves and calmed the storm and I prayed for God to have mercy upon us. The boys were all excited and I told them to pray. Not many Christians were with us, but they prayed earnestly. These words came to me, "I will care for thee; I will not leave thee." And I had peace that whatever happened would be for his glory.

"Suddenly the electrical storm ceased and the clouds rolled away. I realized God's care more than ever in my life before, for he stopped the storm just for me!

"We reached our destination at 3 A. M. My temperature had dropped two degrees. In the morning, Brother Sheldon anointed me, my headache left and my temperature gradually dropped to normal. I praised God. Mrs. Sheldon, too, improved, and we all had a time of rejoicing. I am waiting, now for a tepoi to return to Bassai. I will travel by moonlight to avoid the sun."

Regarding Bassai news, Miss Myers adds: "We have had a good many hospital patients lately. Miss Bickel has made fine beds, and we use mosquito nets for all patients. Native sacks filled with straw are used for mattresses. We are waiting for muslin for the sheets. Even fever patients can use sheets underneath instead of blankets. This would facilitate washing. Miss Bickel was making lockers when I left. These are to be used for blankets, etc. We shall be glad when the other unit is completed, so we can have better facilities for treating the patients. The stone house is being enlarged for the single ladies' residence, so that the two married couples (Jobsons and Kennedys) may have the two brick houses. Should one of us be transferred to another station, the other one will live in the stone house alone. God has wonderfully lessed Brother and Sister Kennerly in the health of their child. He is growing so large and is so well. Mrs. Kennedy is also well. (Proper housing such as is now possible on this our oldest station, Bassai, means much for the health of mother and babe).

"Mr. Kennedy has been busy building the hospital units. He has accomplished so much, working so hard, and solely for the glory of God. The longer he is here, the more his value is apparent. Miss Bickel is building a chicken house. We intend to go into the chicken business again. We are burying rocks as far as possible for they harbor mosquitoes.

"We are praying very much for the leper asylum. We have had three cases of leprosy break out recently on the station. The soldiers in the villages are driving the bad cases away into the jungle. We cannot take them into the general hospital because of infection.

"We pray much for godliness among our native Christians."

Surely this combined picture of conditions on our three stations in Africa will lead you to persevere in your prayers for the work, for the supply of every need, for the return of missionaries on furlough, for the thrusting forth of waiting candidates, for the completion of hospitals, for the opening of leper asylum, and for the glory of God.

Faithfully,
FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

New Paris and Brighton, Indiana

New Paris

New Paris is located five miles from Goshen and is a small town. Our church here is numerically small and is being served by Brother Ben Flora, one of our faithful veteran ministers. It was only recently that he and his good wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and they still have the glow and smile of newly-weds. Brother Flora lives at New Paris and is serving as pastor at New Paris and Dutchtown.

The talented and consecrated Smoker families live here and are a great help to the work. They also have with them Brother and Sister Jobson's children.

The church building is very commodious, well kept and is serving an important place in the community life.

My stay here was brief as there were only a few families to visit. I found most of the people interested in the College and while having about all they could do to keep their own work going, they did their bit toward the endowment. The total gift here was $225.00.

Brighton

The Brighton church is located in a small country hamlet near the Michigan State line, about 35 miles northeast of Goshen.

This community has gone through some trying financial conditions, which has led to bank failure and several going into bankruptcy. They are still continuing their church services and are being served by Brother Bowers, who has been doing good work there. They have a fine group of young people, a live Sunday school and a fine Christian Endeavor society. This should be a good field for our work and while it may never be a large church, yet it has splendid prospect for growth.

Our church is the only one in the town, is in fairly good condition and has a fine parsonage, but is separated by quite a distance from any other church of ours.

For a pastor to locate there, he would have to take on other work, as they are not able to pay for full time. One would have to teach in the school or have another church with it.

The people here were very cordial and interested in the College and I consider they did well for the few there and the financial stress through which they are passing. Their total gift was $529.81.

TRAVEL FLASHES

Philadelphia

Another great blessing has come to me. In the providence of God, I have been privileged to spend three weeks in Philadelphia—not only with the First Brethren church but it seems almost true that it was spent with the First Church of the Brethren where I had been pastor 1907-1910. Socially, it was like a three-week's reunion; meeting old friends and making new ones. Many people do not know that it was in the First church that I was received into the fellowship and the ministry of our church; and so, it was also, in a sense, returning home to be here. In this church the Kolbs, Cassels and a few others seem very near to me, because of old fellowships. Seems strange that I had never been able to return before. But the old-timers seem scarce in this church now. Perhaps with a single exception, this church is composed of people foreign to Brethren training and parentage more than any other. Young people who have grown up in the church but whose parents do not belong and that other large group who have entered our church here because of her stand for the whole gospel.

I am quite sure that it is entirely possible for us to go into any great city in the country and there build a great strong church in a few years, if—well, if well financed and managed and if—the whole gospel is preached. There are yet thousands who have not bowed the knee to the Baal of modernism and tomfoolery, who will gladly break all their old ties to be with the people of God who fearlessly uphold his truth. I pray God above all else that we shall not remain asleep much longer in our Home Mission policy but go out in the land to capture it while it is OUR BIG DAY OF OPPORTUNITY. I am not saying this on the strength of what we did in this meeting but what has been done in the last several years when there has been no uncertain sound to our whole message.

Historically and socially, Philadelphia is a city of its own kind and to one who likes shad, oysters and leg of lamb (as I do) this is a fine place to go to stay three weeks among friends. Really, I was feasted in homes of former parishioners in the old church where I had not been as pastor. Never a service, I think when some of my former people were not present and almost always from six to twelve. My home was with Brother and Sister Ed. Wolf was as good as I ever had and if not as good as an evangelist needs, then I would not know what to ask for. It is a great blessing to have just all you need in a time like that of a revival. To keep the evangelist in good humor, provide him with food of the right kind, a good bath and good bed in a comfortable room, well, IT PAYS! I'd like to say a good many things about Mrs. Wolf as a hostess but I am afraid all the preachers would ask to go there, hereafter. To keep my voice in a campaign is my big problem, but this time I could have finished with a solo (had I had the chance.)

This revival began rather unexpectedly, I am told, on the first Sunday of 1907 and continued right through the two months that have elapsed since. We had about a full third of the confessions the first week, several on the last Sunday and there will be more. It was the best organized meeting for prayer and personal visitation I have ever held. For that reason, we know the revival will not stop with the departure of the evangelist. Besides the pastor is an evangelist and a teacher of evangelism in the Philadelphia School of the Bible, loved of his people and used of God to enlist men in the Master's service. May the Lord richly bless them for the work they need to do for him in this great growing city and may they "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace."

Third church needs a good thorough Brethren pastor to take the place of the much lamented Dr. Marcus Witter.

My next open month is August. Should a church need my services for a part of that month, I shall be glad to help.

CHARLES A. BAME.

OUR REVIVAL IN PHILADELPHIA—FIRST CHURCH

As we were making preparation for our special meeting under Dr. Bame of Ashland, Ohio, someone (not a member) asked us, "Why does this church need a revival?" I think you have a revival." That sounded good and was also true. For we started right off in January with a great outpouring of God's Spirit upon us, so that in two Sunday services 33 of our people dedicated themselves unto the Lord. Some of these were renewals of broken vows, some giving their lives for definite service. During the same month we had four conversions, and seven baptisms.

So, perhaps, we could hardly expect a great response, so soon again. However, as Dr. Bame reminded us on his last night, "that joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth," surely, we can rejoice over thirty that repenteth during these three weeks of evangelistic effort, and three that renewed their confession!

We are glad, too, to report unusual attendances at times, when unusual weather prevailed (as they say in California). We worked for and had the biggest Sunday school during this meeting that we have had for a long time, and rejoiced to see some of our boys and girls step out for Christ, after an earnest message and appeal by Dr. Bame to the Sunday school.

At one of the week-day evening services, too, nine of our Sunday school boys came at one time to acknowledge Jesus as Lord.

The last Sunday, February 27th, was made an all day meeting, with an afternoon service to which we invited all the Brethren churches of Philadelphia. We had a full house, at this service, and a splendid sermon entitled "Some Strange Commandments" which discourse made us glad, we had accepted the position of the Brethren church and found the promise of John 13:17 verified, in so doing.

We express our appreciation of Dr. Bame's earnest preaching and efforts in every way to reach the unsaved, and believe the end is not yet. For we know that many attended these meetings who have not made the surrender, but have been convicted, and no doubt will come later.

Matthew 6:6—do we hear Dr. Bame say? "Yes! we shall continue to pray in secret, believing God shall continue to reward us openly.

MILLEDGEVILLE, ILLINOIS

The Gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation is still moving the hearts of men and their lives also. Milledgeville has had the preaching of the Gospel for lo these many years, so it was no new message we had to give them, and even after many days of earnest preaching there are yet many who should be saved.

Before arriving at the place of meeting we thought we were going to a place where we were scarcely known but when the field was reached we found some whom we had known before and a host of relation of people whom we had known both in the East and on the Pacific Coast so that it was no difficulty at all to get acquainted. The church here is composed of the substantial, permanent sort of people for the most part; people who stand high in the community both in business and the church, therefore there was no need to overcome prejudice or denominational opposition as in the newer places. Many of the members live in the country, but the country is no longer the country in these progressive days so the parish is just as large as the automobile makes it.

Brother George Cone, the pastor, is a fine fellow. He has a standing in the congregation and in the community of being a man engaged in the Lord's business and he has the happy faculty of attending strictly to that business, as all preachers ought. He is a teacher of the Bible as well as a preacher and his work is bearing fruit in the community. The teaching of Dispensational Truth is making the Bible a new Book to many members of this church, thus he is proving himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth. Mrs. Cone is a tireless worker and is doing a great work with the young people. This is the hope of this church as not many new people are coming to the town and there are many old people who will never accept the Lord with saving faith. Their hearts are hardened. They have resisted too many appeals. The crying need of such is to take their eyes off men and look upon the Lord Jesus Christ who alone hath the words of Eternal life. This is always the case when men have been taught to emphasize the works of the Bible rather than the Person, the Christ of the Bible. It is upon Christ alone that men can look and live.

I was not much acquainted with Brother Cone before the meeting but I cannot express the splendid fellowship I had with him in every way. May the Lord richly bless his ministry at this place. My home was with Brother and Sister W. L. Miller. This is truly a, "Preacher's Home." Their thoughtfulness and kindness will never be forgotten. They are instruments in the Lord's hands used to minister to the Lord's servants. He will not forget. All the Brethren of Milledgeville must have great big hearts and they just opened them wide open and took the evangelist in. The bounties of a wonderful community were placed before us and we did all that a two hundred pound man could be expected to do, but always there were many fragments remaining.

This was an easy church in which to preach, the members were with you all the way. The attendance was very good. It was quite regular. Members from other churches came often, especially the Church of the Brethren. On Sunday nights the other churches dismissed services and came over. There were not many empty seats during the meeting. Permission was given to present the work of the Evangelistic and Bible Study League and on this night a number of members were received for the League. When it came time for the offering for the evangelist they were most generous, and the offering came with such good will that we say again, "Thank you, Brethren."

"Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity."

A. V. KIMMELL,
Whittier, California.

REVIVAL AT MILLEDGEVILLE BRETHREN CHURCH

The people of Milledgeville, Illinois and community have just had the privilege of twenty days of forceful and BIBLICAL evangelistic effort. Brother A. V. Kimmell of Whittier, California, was our evangelist. We feel very fortunate in having been able to secure the services of such a sound, forceful and consecrated man for this meeting. The effort was consistent and absolutely free from sensationalism. Not even one topic was announced which would savor of sensationalism. It was the thought of the evangelist to have the messages such that the Holy Spirit could honor them by working in the hearts of the hearers. We are glad for that attitude and we commend it most highly. The Spirit did honor the messages with results to the glory of our Lord. We praise God for this.

I believe there are few, if any who heard the messages consistently, but that would highly commend Brother Kimmell to any church wishing a consistent, powerful, soul-saving campaign. The Word is honored and in turn good results follow. We are highly pleased.

The visible results of the campaign are very worthy. I suspect no evangelistic effort ever closes but that we feel that others should have been won to the Lord. That is the case here. It is not the fault of the evangelist that they were not won. Neither do we believe it is the fault of the church people or the pastor. We say this justly, we believe, for the evangelist, the people, and the pastor were busy in prayer and personal work a great deal of the time. When people will not accept the invitation to hear the message the one who has invited them can do no more. When men and women will not accept the invitation of the Christ as one does personal work the worker can do but one more thing and that is to call on God, for peradventure they might yet accept. Prayer is being raised to God for those who are away from him. There were seventeen confessions and four requests for membership in the church. Of these, eleven have been baptized. Others will be soon. Of the twenty-one it is quite likely that eighteen will eventually be united with this church. It is usually true that some are of parents who belong to other churches and that is true here.

The services of our Brother A. V. Kimmell were that highly appreciated that a very good offering was presented him on the last day of the meeting and an almost unanimous vote that they would be glad to have him come back and serve us again some day. Those who did not vote were all people who were there for the first time and had not, as yet, ever heard him preach.

The afternoon Bible studies, conducted during the two weeks, were a very praiseworthy feature of the meeting. Being at the afternoon hour not so many could attend but those who were able to attend are more than gratified for the work was of a very high order.

The writer would recommend Brother Kimmell for either an evangelistic campaign or a Bible conference to any church in the brotherhood. May the Lord bless in the meetings elsewhere richly as Brother Kimmell and others labor for the salvation of souls. We rejoice in the victories in all the churches. Doubtless Brother Kimmell will send in some word for the Evangelist readers. GEO. E. CONE, Pastor.

THE FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH

Johnstown, Pennsylvania

In the month of January, we enjoyed a successful evangelistic campaign. The victory did not come easily. We knew it would not. Within the last five years over 400 members have been received into the church. As far as the families of the church and the Sunday school are involved, the field was "well gleaned." Then too, the pastor was asked to be the evangelist. We were in our sixth year and had held an evangelistic meeting the year before becoming pastor, so we knew that the task ahead of us was a difficult one. But, the church pledged loyal support and was insistent that we be their leader, so we yielded in faith that the Lord would bless and give victory to his Word. We trusted in him to overcome the custom expressed in the words of the Master, "A prophet is not without honor except in his own country." Naturally, we began the campaign in "fear and trembling." In faith, we entered into it, "with boldness and confidence."

God honored his Word! He answered prayer! He gave victory to personal soul winning! The campaign was a pronounced success in many ways. There was the largest average, sustained attendance of any meeting in the history of the church. The audience on the last night was the largest ever gathered in the church, except one,—being surpassed only by that which gathered for the Baccalaureate Sermon of the Central High School a few years ago. There was a fine interest and excellent unity of effort. The campaign was first of all a genuine revival. The spiritual life, tone, and standard of the church was deepened, broadened, and heightened. Then, there was an ingathering of lost souls into the church. Forty-five public confessions were received, 4 of these were reconsecrations. Thirty-five of the others have already become members of the church. In attendance, interest, spirituality, and visible results, the campaign was a success.

Gospel singing was made an attraction along with the Gospel preaching. These were the only two "drawing cards" used. They were advertised as the prominent features of the campaign. There were no delegations, each night was "everybody's night." Prof. Lynn, of Dayton, Ohio, known as "Arthur" was the soloist and chorus director. He is an artist in this line. He has been appropriately named, "The Golden Tenor," for his voice is as clear as a bell, strong, and rich in tone. His solos were an inspiration. As a chorus director, Lynn is an expert. Experience and training have fitted him for this. His selection of solos and choruses are such as are appropriate for evangelism. The gospel choruses averaged 39 in attendance during the meeting. An illuminated cross was used to make the songs magnifying the blood more impressive. We can very truthfully say that the Lord used Brother Lynn and the gospel chorus in a wonderful way in this meeting.

We have adopted a program of evangelism whose purpose is to maintain a perpetual revival. Every Sunday service will be strictly evangelistic. Instead of the customary anthem, the choir will render a gospel chorus. The congregational singing, sermon, special music, and all will be strictly evangelistic. A director of evangelism has been appointed in the Sunday school whose mission will be to inspire the school to continual seeking out and bringing in the lost. At least two, if not three, decision days will be observed in the school instead of the annual one. Personal evangelism is being stressed. We are persuaded that soul winning must be made a perpetual and a personal privilege if the church is to maintain her spiritual life and growth. The special campaign is most essential, but it must be made only a part of the evangelistic program. Our slogan is, "An Evergreen Revival."

NEW YORK CITY

Dear Evangelist Readers:

Greetings in Jesus' name from the "Big City." Some of our Brethren desired that we write again about our work in this city. The work has been going on in the "open air" under God since the early spring of last year. I was privileged to preach to multitudes on the sands of Coney Island, and at Columbus Circle and Broadway, which is one of the theatrical districts.

We had bad weather at the Island but God gave us many souls from among his ancient people, Israel, for which we praise and give him the glory.

At Columbus Circle we had a longer period of services which lasted till near Christmas. There we battled against the tide of Atheism. They not only opposed the Gospel but tried to prevent the preaching of God's Word. The Lord was with us in power to the salvation of thousands for which we thank him.

The police have been most kind to me, granting permission and protection. This is of course a great encouragement. The Bible Society also gave us several hundred gospels which were distributed. And thousands of tracts were also given away.

Since the first of the year we started two Bible classes in private homes. May God grant us a Brethern church some day in this large and needy field, for Jesus' sake, Amen.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

BIRTHDAY PRESENTS THAT WERE DIFFERENT

Mother, I am tired of parties, they are all so—so alike."

"Why, Betty."

"They are, mother."

"We will see what can be done about it, dear," said Mrs. Dean.

On the morning of her birthday, Betty ran down to breakfast to find the dining room empty, not even a ribbon-tied package at her plate, simply a pile of numbered envelopes.

Surprised, she opened the top one—

Dear Miss Betty: You will find your breakfast in the oven. Please wait on yourself. NORA.

"How funny of Nora," thought Betty.

Just then envelope number two caught here eye and hastening to open it, she read,

Dear little Daughter: I have gone to market. Will be home early. Please answer telephone for me. MOTHER.

Betty was surprised, but she was also hungry, so concluded to eat her breakfast.

The contents of envelope number three delighted her when she read,

Honey-girl, meet me at the office at twelve. FATHER.

Number four was very exciting.

Dear Betts: Bring along some Pollyanna stuff, and help me out. Two o'clock, sharp. UNCLE DOCTOR.

The last was a tiny pink envelope numbered five, and Betty found the message.

Sweetheart, come up to my apartment at three o'clock. AUNT MERRY.

Promptly at noon Betty skipped into her father's office and found him chatting with a little girl.

"Ah, Betty, here you are," he said. "This is Davey Clark and I am going to ask you to play hostess at a near-by restaurant with Davey as your guest. Here is a two-dollar bill, and if there is any left after your luncheon, you may spend it as you like."

Presently the little girls were seated at a round table with a bright-faced waitress in attendance.

"Do you like chicken broth with rolls, fruit salad, and whipped cream pie?" asked Betty.

"Oh, yes," returned Davey eagerly.

"So do I," said Betty.

After paying the bill, Betty found she had just fifty cents left.

"What do you want most of all, Davey, I have fifty cents," said Betty.

"Oh, nothing," answered Davey.

"But you must," cried Betty. "Father said I could spend it as I liked."

So Davey finally chose a white apron for her mother, who always wore such big dark ones when she scrubbed the office floors.

Back again at the office, Betty found father ready to take her to the hospital.

"Whom am I going to visit?" asked Betty, dancing along the corridor, her hand in Uncle Doctor's.

"You'll see in a minute," ushering her into a room as he spoke.

"Good afternoon, Jackie, I've brought my little niece to visit you."

"Don't want a girl fussin' round," was the ungracious reply.

"Look here, Jackson Meredith White," said the doctor, "it is a pity when you broke your leg, you sent your manners flying to the winds, but I'll lend you some until you find them, and the one to begin with is, always treat a lady politely. Now Betty, I am going to leave you to amuse Jackie."

"Do you like games?" asked Betty.

"Nope."

"Puzzles?"

"Nope."

"What do you like?"

"Nothin'."

Betty was troubled, but Uncle Doctor had asked her to amuse Jackie and she must not fail him.

Leaning back in the white rocker, she began to sing a gay little song. Another song and when she commenced America, a whistle, bird-like in its clearness, joined her and kept on in perfect tune until the last note was reached.

"Oh, Jackie, how wonderfully you can whistle," cried Betty.

"You can sing nice, too," returned Jackie with a shy smile.

"Come Betty, we have just fifteen minutes to get to Aunt Merry's," called Uncle Doctor at that moment. "Good work," as he noticed the happy faces.

"Come again," called Jackie.

"Of course she will," answered Uncle Doctor for Betty.

Aunt Merry met Betty at the door and whisked her into the kitchen.

"Help me stuff dates and make fudge, will you, dear? I have heard of two little girls in Dakota who did not have any Christmas, and you and I are going to send them a Summer Christmas box."

"Oh, what fun," cried Betty.

After the dates were stuffed and the fudge made, Aunt Merry and Betty packed a box with dolls, books, games, and the goodies.

That evening when Betty and mother were alone, the little girl said happily, "It has been the nicest birthday I ever had."

"That is because you gave so much to others, dear," said her mother.

"But I didn't give one single thing, mother."

"You gave yourself, little daughter, and that is better than all other gifts."—M Fielder, in Western Recorder.

OPEN FOR EVANGELISM

I am open for evangelistic work, as the Lord may lead. Any one interested may write me at the following address,

LOST CREEK, KENTUCKY

The Institute is now lookinf for teachers for the coming year. It is hoped that the teacher matter may be all settled very soon.

Some of the qualifications that are sought in the teacher here is as follows: A real belief and confidence in the Bible as the source of our information as to the origin of life and its development, and not that organic evolution accounts for the same. A real belief that I am called of the Lord to the work, and not coming for the experience. At least a Normal education and training should be enough so that if necessary a certificate can be issued on your scholarship.

Then just now there is much need of a young man, with the above qualifications, or with sufficient qualifications to teach in the grades, about 4th to 8th, or somewhere there, and then with this added qualification, that he can handle the athletic activities of the school. This young man with the athletic qualities IS MUCH NEEDED.

Should this reach anyone who might be interested will you please write us at once? Will you join us in prayer that God will call out this young man for the work, and also just such other teachers as may be needed. There is also a real, yes, a very real need of a music teacher here, and also domestic science. Who will answer these calls for service? Also a woman to act as matron is needed, this a woman who can be a mother for the girls.

Redeeming the Time

PAUL rejoiced in his sufferings because he felt Christ was with him, still reconciling the world to God. And that is true of every genuine disciple of Christ. If Christ is in us, then we are seeking the goals of Christ. He answered the messenger of John the Baptist, "The Blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up and the poor have the gospel preached to them." Christ asks proof of our discipleship. Can we answer, "The lost are found, the sick are healed, the poor are fed and clothed and spiritually led, the rich are become stewards of the earth's bounty, the exploiters are exposed, the vicious are restrained, the burdened are relieved, the sinful are recovered, the young and old and weak are protected, the acceptable year of the Lord is being preached to the ends of earth?" It is to this task that we must consecrate ourselves with that same abandon which has marked the life of every disciple who has wrought righteousness in his generation.

Revival of Belief in the Providence of God

In various ways our attention has been called to what we believe to be a revival of belief in the providence of God. Among our own brethren incidents have occurred that are refreshing for the faith they indicate in God's presence and activity in his world in behalf of mankind. In correspondence that has come to our office, in contributions written of the pages of this paper and among the exchanges that reach our desk, we find many evidences of a growing confidence in the provision and protection of the Almighty. It is not surprising that it is so, for men have never been content with a god who is a mere force, a power, impersonal and unresponsive to human needs and pleadings. And though materialism may have its little day of cold, cruel sway now and then, it cannot long maintain its place, for the empty, yearning hearts of men will soon rebel against its unsatisfying, fateful philosophy. To think to hold men to such a belief as the nature of God is about as foolish as to attempt to turn the affections and confidence of a child to a plaster paris model used to display women's apparel. Such a materialistic conception is empty and meaningless, and so has no attraction for mankind. We who are made in the image of God cannot long be turned from the belief that God is active in his world and that he cares for his own.

One of the most satisfying utterances of this nature that have come under our notice recently was an editorial in the "Christian Evangelist" which we are taking the privilege of reproducing for the inspiration and reassurance of our readers. This editor was inspired to write these words after reading the book he mentions by Dr. W. F. Tillett, whose ripe experience, scholarship and Christian character have made possible a book of great value. Our fellow editor writes:

It is very gratifying to note a decided turn in human thought and feeling away from cold, impersonal naturalism to a lively belief in divine providence.

For years the word "providence" seemed almost to have faded out of the pages of literature, and I am unable to recall when I heard it in the pulpit. It has been almost as if we had forgotten entirely the wonderfully beautiful and the beautifully wonderful words of our Savior: "Be not anxious for your life. What ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on, . . . for your Heavenly Father knoweth that you have need of all these things."

I used to hear my mother talk about providence when I was a child too young to fully understand, but I saw even then that the belief gave her calmness and sweetness when others were in complaining and bitter mood. She had many limitations of life. The walls of our little home that shut out the cold were never very thick, and in long winter nights I have heard the wolves howl up on the mountains. They were hungry, and so were we—three or four small children. It seemed that our daily bread must be a miracle—how else could it come? To this day I cannot tell. It was a miracle, but then is not everybody's daily bread a miracle, both rich and poor? We must always pray, "Give us this day our daily bread." Many are the days since then, many and checkered, more than half a century, but the doctrines of providence I learned from the Bible and from mother and from my own experience have kept my life steady and happy.

Providence simply means that this is God's world, that he is in his world, that we "frail children of dust" are his children, and that he is down here with them in their struggles and sins, down with them to lift them up and redeem them.

And now the sublime old world is coming back. Many are speaking of providence again as have many in the past. Here, for example, is a great book by a great professor of Christian doctrine in one of the great schools of the land telling us the old story of it again in terms of learning indeed, but in learning made luminous by faith. I refer to "Providence, Prayer and Power" (Cokesbury Press), by Dr. Wilbur Fisk Tillett, of Vanderbilt University. Here also are books by other great men like "Providence, Divine and Human," by E. Griffith Jones. Besides these, Dr. Tillett finds a great cloud of witnesses saying the same thing in fresh, strong books, such as "The Place of Prayer in the Christian Religion," "The Power of Prayer," "The Way to Peace, Health, and Power," "Landmarks in the Struggle between Science and Religion," "The Great Partnership," "The Philosophy of the Christian Religion," and no doubt dozens of other Christian books.

It all reminds one that some of the most eloquent tongues that ever spoke the love of God gave way to the power, the mystery, the beauty, and the rhapsody of the theme—Bushnell, for example, telling his people and age that "Every man's life is a plan of God" and Henry Ward Beecher warming the heart and illuminating the mind with a sermon of surpassing eloquence on "God's love specific and personal."

The poets have had more even than preachers to say of it. The everlasting classic on the subject is by poor, sad Cowper:

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps in the sea
And rides upon the storm."

Men more modern, like Lowell, teach us to believe that if men must live and suffer, in the darkness

"Standeth God within the shadow, Keeping watch above his own."

And the good Quaker poet of seraphic and prophetic vision had his life made grand and strong amid the plain and magnificent simplicities by the faith he sang:

"I know not where his islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care."

The wonderful idea of providence reaches to the heart of theology, of law, of history and moves majestic across little lives and the lives of all the ages in sunshine and in shadow, in tragedy and in triumph, wherever men try to do something and suffer. But if one wants to see it in fullness he must go where God chooses the weak things of earth to confound the mighty. It is a dispensation that unmistakably moves among missionaries of the cross. It has done so from the first. It hovers like light over orphanages and the home of the helpless, which always seem to be in the atmosphere of miracle.

The Congress of the World League Against Alcoholism will be held in Winona Lake, Indiana, August 17-24 inclusive, according to announcement by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of that organization, who says that the Congress will take up the entire week's program at the Winona assembly.

"There will be an attendance of 3,000 delegates," Dr. Cherrington said, probably 500 or 600 of them coming from other countries." Coming as it does immediately preceding the Brethren National Conference, many of our own people may find it possible to attend this great gathering and be profited by this possible contact with world leaders and the world situation.

"The World League Against Alcoholism is a league of all the National Temperance organizations in all the important countries and its constituents are 55 such organizations in 34 countries. The World League was organized in Washington, D. C., in 1919. Its first convention was held in Toronto and 66 countries were represented. That convention was the greatest reform convention ever held in the world. It is expected that the Winona Congress will surpass in size, importance and far-reaching effect even the Toronto Convention of 1922."

EDITORIAL REVIEW

A CORRECTION—In making up the paper last week the name of "Stephen H. Bashor" was placed at the head of Dr. Shively's article on "J. B. Wampler" on page 5, and the mistake was not discovered until most of the papers had been printed and mailed. We are very sorry for the error and hope our readers will be kindly forbearing.

We are informed that Brother A. L. Lynn, pastor of the Pittsburgh Brethren church is quite seriously ill with some throat infection and has been taken to the Mercy Hospital. His friends are asked to pray for his recovery.

The many friends of Rev. Miles J. Snyder of Danville, Illinois, will regret to learn that he was stricken with paralysis on March 10th. His entire left side is paralyzed and he is reported by Mrs. Snyder's parents, Brother and Sister Guilford Leslie of Ashland, to be in a critical condition.

Miss Johanna Nielsen writes an interesting account of her visit to various mission stations in the Argentine, "in search of ideas as to new and efficient methods," as she puts it, and her visit seems to prove quite pleasant, and her report of it is informing and will doubtless be much enjoyed by our readers.

From Winchester, Virginia, we learn that the mission church, which is yet quite new and is shepherded by Brother E. J. Rohart, is thriving. Nine were recently added to the membership, four by baptism and five by letter. The Sunday school is going good and a Christian Endeavor society has recently been organized.

Brother W. A. Gearhart, Home Missionary Secretary, makes an appeal in behalf of a new project to be launched on the farm at Lost Creek, Kentucky. Brother Early believes the farm can be made more profitable by going into the poultry business, but it costs something to get started, and it is to aid in starting that business that Brother Gearhart asks help. See his notice in this issue.

Brother D. A. C. Teeter, pastor at Roann, Indiana, recently conducted his own evangelistic campaign, assisted by Brother Harley Zumbaugh as song leader. Fifteen souls were added to the church, ten of whom were men. Three others are expected to be received into the church in the near future. In addition to the increase in membership, the church is said to have been greatly strengthened spiritually.

Our correspondent from Oak Hill, West Virginia, writes of the splendid progress of the church under the able leadership of Brother Freeman Ankrum. They have gone forward from victory to victory, and now they have their hearts set on a new church building, and it is not difficult to believe that with the same splendid cooperation that the membership has given in the past few years, their pastor will lead them to victory in this new project also.

Brother A. V. Kimmell, secretary of the Executive Committee of General Conference, announces the date for the 1927 conference as August 22 to 28. This date is somewhat early, but it may not prove to be a disadvantage, but possibly the contrary, especially with the announcement coming so early in the year. It gives ample time to arrange summer vacations so as not to interfere.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble again favors Evangelist readers with a good report concerning conditions on the Yaloke mission field in Africa. Building operations are progressing rapidly, and it is apparent that they are very much needed, and haste is quite necessary, inasmuch as "hunting season" is soon to open, "when no man works." It will be a great protection to the health of our workers when adequate buildings are built in sufficient numbers. The school building is especially needed and is soon to be completed.

Brother Austin R. Staley, pastor of the church at Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, writes an encouraging report of the work at that place. Notwithstanding the difficult situation, they are able to rejoice because of victory. As the result of a revival in which the pastor and wife featured as preacher and song leader respectively, five souls were saved, and during the six months of their leadership thirteen have been added to the church and two await baptism. The prayer service has received commendable support, the average attendance having been "close to fifty." A new Christian Endeavor society was recently organized.

Nappanee, Indiana has experienced a great revival, with the pastor, Brother S. M. Whetstone, doing the preaching and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richer leading the music. Fifty-three confessions were received, and forty-seven have already been added to the church. After the close of the special campaign two others were received, making fifty-five, and others are expected. Every department of the work is said to be moving forward. At the Gravelton church, five miles distant, served by Brother Whetstone, twenty accepted Christ under the pastor's preaching and the singing evangelism of Brother Harley Zumbaugh. All these were baptized and received into the church.

General Home Mission receipts for the month are reported by the secretary, Brother William A. Gearhart. Doubtless these funds can be expected to come in the year round, but it seems they should have come in a little heavier in the early months following Thanksgiving to have allowed such a marked dwindling down during the month of February. If we have estimated aright, there has been something over $14,000 received for the several funds of the General Home Mission work. That may be a creditable amount all things considered, but at this rate, the total for the year is likely to fall far below an average of ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR FOR EACH MEMBER OF THE BROTHERHOOD, which has been the amount aimed at for several years, yet never reached. Is the goal too high? Or have we really tried to reach it.

Dr. Bell's Endowment Campaign report comes from the First Church of South Bend, Indiana, where Brother N. V. Leatherman is the loyal pastor. This church has faced some heavy financial obligations for a number of years past, and they are not out from under them yet, but they did what they could for the college. Their gift was $1,613.39, which, added to the amount previously reported, makes a total of $99,108.83 to date. Let us not forget to pray for the campaign, that God may work upon the hearts of men and women and prepare them for Brother Bell's coming, and pray for Brother Bell himself and also for his wife, that her health may be restored. The campaign was begun in prayer, and it can only progress as it should as we continue to realize that it is greatly dependent upon prayer.

President E. E. Jacobs reports the proceedings of the college board of trustees in their recent meeting, at which time, among other items of business, the building of a new gymnasium was placed in the hands of the president and the local trustees as a committee. It is said that this building is to be ready for the opening of school in September. The gaining of the recognition that membership in the American Association of Colleges and in the North Central Association of Colleges would mean is a goal earnestly coveted by the management of Ashland College, and it is a thing that is highly essential to the largest continued usefulness of the institution. The one thing that has been lacking for some time is the amount of endowment necessary for such membership. But it is hoped that the present campaign will make up this lack and that our college will soon be placed on the accredited list. The action of the Board of Trustees is an expression of confidence in the generous response of the churches. They fully expect them to meet the need. That faith and the need itself constitute a real challenge to the churches that have not yet been canvassed, to answer Dr. Bell's appeal in a big and fine-spirited manner. The splendid financial report of Dr. Shively shows that the funds in hand are being faithfully cared for, and that the college is doing its best to help itself when the tuitions for the year almost cover salaries of the teaching force. That income in itself is another challenge to the brotherhood, for the income from the endowment in the properly financed school, we are told, should equal that from the tuitions. But at Ashland the investment income is scarcely more than a third of the tuition income. And this challenge will be continuous, for as the students increase, the endowment must be expected to grow.

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Christ and Power

By A. E. Whitted

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," says Paul to the Philippians (4:15). Success is the natural right of every life, and if this be true then failure is the unnecessary imposition of the enemy of our lives. The human spirit has always chafed under weakness. On the other hand success is exhilarating, inspiring, glorious to man. It is because success is God's great plan for every life. We surely live "unto the praise of his glory" when we are successful in life.

Fellowship with Jesus the Christ, the sublimest of all human experiences, is the secret of success and power. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." The Holy Spirit is amazingly successful in the development of this fellowship, providing we will but yield to his touch. This developed fellowship with Jesus Christ means developed power. If you will listen while the great organist plays a masterpiece you will notice that the deep, rich tones of the bass give body and majesty to the great composition. So power in the human life rounds out the dream of the blessed Christ who is the source of all power and who is pleased to see this power manifest in his children. There is volume, depth and grandeur in character when it is under-girded with power. This power is not a gift, but rather a development. It seems to be on the trolley plan rather than that of the storage battery. To grow it must be used, to develop it must be drawn upon. Remember the parable of the talents. The used talents doubled, yea trebled. So the beauty and power of our Christian lives are to be unfolded, developed. In the tasks of life, in the tests and straits of life, in all life's perplexities, he leads with the hope that we shall draw on him for guidance and power. When we step out in his strength we win. One victory gives courage for a larger undertaking. The larger service brings the larger victory. So step by step we learn how unceasing, how unlimited, how wonderful is the undergirding of our lives when we remain in this unbroken fellowship with our Christ. Perfect obedience is the secret of power. Keep moving in the direction of obedience. Great experiences are up ahead. Let Christ lead—you can experience power.

I. Power to Speak. Christ would speak through us. Our talk is so often meaningless. Even when our human talk is well thought out and beautifully worded, it sounds empty and cheap. We hear men say, "I cannot talk." Perhaps it is well so; let Christ speak through you. A few words, brokenly spoken, will often touch the heart and give greater encouragement than an elegantly delivered human address. We have too many addresses when what is needed is heart messages. Let God have his way to use you. If you never fail the Christ, he will lead you through experiences, rich and full, so that you will really have some very interesting things to tell. Great achievements come through great endeavor. So however he leads, wherever he leads, follow on.

ELDER A. E. WHITTED
Pastor, Beaver City, Nebraska

"Follow on, follow on,
Where the Savior in the way before has gone
Till you rest beside him up in heaven's golden dawn
I will follow on, follow on."

Year by year you will have an accumulation of experiences. These will give you power of speech. One can talk if he has something to tell. Let us use every opportunity to witness for Christ. You never know what great purpose may be back of the promptings of the spirit in your heart to witness for him. Be heroic in your witnessing.

II. Power in Prayer. We all have witnessed the sweet hush that falls over human hearts when a sincere soul talks to God. The sentences may be broken and the words scarcely audible, yet the prayer from the sincere heart is, as another puts it so beautifully, like breaking the alabaster box of precious ointment. The fragrance fills the house. God wants to bless other lives through your voice in prayer. Power to pray grows through praying.

Let us allow the Christ to indite our petitions. Begin to pray. Trust him for words. He wants to pray through you as well as speak through you. Pray every chance you get and you will soon become a great blessing to others through this precious channel of power. Satan will try to close your lips and seal them in sinful silence; don't allow it. If you cannot pray as well as others, or as well as you like, what matter? Pray as the Spirit gives you utterance; that really after all is GREAT praying. Be active in prayer. This will give beauty and poise to your whole life.

"When the day is dark and dreary,
Don't forget to pray;
Prayer will make your pathway brighter,
Drive the clouds away.
For your loving heav'nly Father
Listens when you call,
And in mercy he will answer,
Trust him for it all."

III. Power for Service. Christ gives us many opportunities for service, they are all about us. The Holy Spirit gives to every one vision to see human need; he gives us hearts that feel for others; he gives us heart hunger to be a power in their lives; but best of all he will supply this power for success in all our undertakings. So again I say, let him lead. See to it that you follow closely. As you undertake whatever may come to your hand to do, whether you have ever done such things before or not, just follow on; draw on God for power and he will never fail you. Treat every opportunity for service sacredly. Never refuse to do what you are asked to do without the most careful consideration. These opportunities are sacred. They are doors opening for usefulness.

God definitely plans and wishes that every one shall be very useful. He is versatile in his plans. He will daily lead in your growth and unfolding with ever a view to your future usefulness. With every day will come experiences which will bear directly on future usefulness. Thus every day should be held sacred. It should be lived as though it were our only day. It is days lived like this in fellowship with the Master that keeps life where lessons are learned and training is gladly received. God's promise was and is, "I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations" (Isaiah 60:15).

IV. Power to Live a Beautiful Life. There are many things that mar the beauty of a life. Fear, hatred, anger, envy, worry, impatience, wilfulness and laziness are a few of the elements that would take away the beauty of life. But why allow these to enter? God is the keeper of life. He moves down the path of life just ahead of you. You have no problems too difficult for him. So many assurances are given in the Word—"I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward." "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory." "Flee to him in temptation." "Hide behind Jesus and then if the enemy gets you he will have to take Jesus first." "When the enemy shall come in like a flood the spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." "Trust the Lord forever for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength." God wants us to live in his will. He wishes us to live such beautiful lives of power that all who know us might find us a real stay in all of life's hard places.

A strong, true life is God's greatest asset. It isn't talk that counts. It's life. Let's be pleased to call a halt to the careless talk—just hush a bit—and listen to God that we might know his plan. He has a plan. He plans for you and me a wealth of goodness. Yes, God will most gladly teach you how and give you power to live the life of the unblemished day.

V. Power for Gladness. Gladness is becoming a lost art. Hurry and worry, and worldly, frivolous living have robbed life of its joy and gladness. The great friendship of Christ, a life of power, a life of usefulness divinely guided, a life of prayer furnish enough gladness in one's life to make the soul thrill with deep rapture. Why not? Don't we belong to the Royal Family of the universe? We are children of the King. Your soul is not a hovel, but a palace. God himself is our keeper. "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are called according to his purpose" (Rom. 8:28). There is a mighty tide of God's great purpose bearing you on through the passing years. Then why worry or fear or fret? Why should you allow anger, envy or jealousy to steal through the corridors of your soul's palace?

We imagine that crown princes feel their station. How much more should the children of the Highest feel the wealth of life. If you will cultivate gladness, if you will refuse every other mood than gladness, if you will live deeply enough and let CHRIST be your all-in-all, your gladness will be to you an abiding power of enthusiasm. Your very being will burn and glow with it. You will be good to look upon. People will count it a joy to be with you. Let God keep you and gladness will grow.

VI. Power to Win Others to the Beautiful Life. This is my last thought and it is also the most beautiful. People are deeply hungry to live beautiful lives. They do not know how to begin, nor how to proceed. They think Christianity is all duty—a system of don'ts. They think of the narrow path that leads to life but they are not aware of the great broad highway of great living after one has found the way of LIFE. The path leading to life is all exclusive, but the way of life is all inclusive. The real Christian finds in life a wealth of character, a wealth of inspiration, a wealth of association which is most wonderful and helpful. The one who is not in Christ sees none of this. Are you living this beautiful life, so that others may see and believe? There is nothing complex about it. It is all very simple. Just trusting, that's all! Just living a life of unbroken friendship with Jesus! What more can be said that will cause you to awaken to your possible wealth of power. Unused powers lie within you unawakened. Nothing but the touch of the Master's hand to your heart will ever awaken them. You have all no doubt heard the story of the old organist, but let me tell it again as I close.

A stranger hearing of a great organ in one of the cathedrals of Europe sought opportunity to feel out the possible volumes of music. Entering the cathedral he was met by the old organist who refused him the privilege of trying it out. After much persuasion the old man finally consented. However, he stayed close by to see that nothing went amiss.

As the stranger sat down to the keys there came over his spirit dreams of a wonderful symphony. He began to play it out. The music came and went like mighty tides of the sea. Combinations of tones were found that the old organist never knew were there. The music rolled in deep thunderings until it seemed that the very symphonies of heaven had burst forth in a storm of gladness and glory. As the music died away the old organist stood with his wrinkled face bathed in tears. He fairly ran to the stranger and said, "O stranger, tell me who you are." The stranger answered, "I am Mendelssohn." Trembling, the old man said, "Mendelssohn, the master organist. And I came so near shutting you out from my organ! And what a loss it would have been to have failed to hear the volumes of music I never dreamed were there."

So dear friend, the Lord Jesus is the Master Organist of your soul. He will amaze you if you will permit him to bring out the music hidden there. Such harmonies of beautiful living, such volumes of gladness, such rhapsodies of love revealing the fact that your life, your spirit is the instrument made to be used to express the beauty and gladness of the heart of God!

Jesus the Son of God, God (the Son)

By Samuel Kiehl

Hebrews 1:8 a quotation from Psalm 45:6 represents God addressing the Son as God. He is therefore God (the Son). Consequently the Son of God and, God (the Son) are synonymous titles belonging exclusively to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; who says, "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me (John 6:38). He also saith, This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent (John 17:3). Take notice, God is the sender; the Son of God, God (the Son, not God the Father) is the person sent.

Paul to Timothy says, Great is the mystery of godliness; God (the Son, sent by the Father) was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory (1 Tim. 3:16). Who was received up into glory, God, or Jesus Christ the Son of God, who is God (the Son)? Forty days after Jesus' resurrection he led his disciples out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them, and while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven (Luke 24:50, 51), and sat on the right hand of God (Mark 16:19). Now, according to Hebrews 4:14 the answer to the preceding question reads thus, We have a great high priest that is passed into the heavens Jesus the Son of God, God (the Son) who ever liveth to make intercession for those who come unto God by him (Heb. 7:25).

The writers of the Scriptures say, To us there is but one God, the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ (1 Cor. 8:6); the Son of the Father (2 John 3), God (the Son, Heb. 1:8), who came into the world to save sinners (1 Tim. 1:15). Yet there are those who say, We will not have this man to reign over us (Luke 19:14), crucify him (Mark 15:14). To such Jesus says, Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life (John 5:40).

Let others, saint or sinner, in the church or out, Think and say about Jesus their best friend, their only Savior (there is none other, Acts 4:12), what they will! The Lord enable us, and all God-fearing men and women, boys and girls, every one to say with Paul, I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me (Gal. 2:20). Glory be to his holy name for ever and ever.

Reasons for Prohibition in This Generation

By Colonel Raymond Robins

(Third of a Series of Articles on Prohibition by Men of Distinguished National Repute)

First, prohibition came to the United States in this generation, in part, because of the close of the frontier. You may think I am far afield. I am not.

People saw the promise of better things, and started their movement westward, seeking to escape from economic, social and religious pressure. Ever westward has been the vast trek of mankind.

Western Asia, Eastern Europe, Western Europe, the British Isles and then across the surging Atlantic to the bleak New England shores and to the happier shores of the South, was the challenge of a new hope, a new means of escape from the past pressure on the human race. There their sons picked up the trail and carried it over the Alleghenies, and ever westward, over the bosom of the Father of Waters, across the Great Plains to the foothills of the Rockies, and there it rested for a time, and then ever westward over the Continental Divide, and then on to the shore of the beautiful Pacific. There it rested for 20 years, and then we picked it up, westward and northward, and carried it forward until we reached the Behring Sea on the north.

Eager-hearted boys in the District of Columbia, in Maine, in California, in Florida, wherever they are, boys and girls with questions in their hearts, with desire to free themselves and get away from the shelter, possibly, of a father's home—that is the quest of the human heart. What are they thinking about? About the frontier.

Th old frontier has ceased to exist. They are thinking about Chicago, New York, San Francisco, Pittsburgh, and the great industrial towns of New England, and they are today pouring into those communities. This nation began 96 per cent rural. It is 54 per cent urban at this moment, and that percentage is increasing rapidly.

The social implications of individual action are wholly different in the two situations. A man getting drunk in his farm home, or driving along a country road with mules or oxen going six miles an hour, was not so serious. The mules or the oxen would take him home. But now in a sixty-miles-an-hour world, with crowded communities, the drunken hand on the wheel has a wholly different social implication. There you find one of the reasons why society has had to relieve the community from the danger and menace of alcoholic waste, poisoning, inefficiency and incompetency.

There is another reason. We are the greatest mechanical and engineering people in the world. Power under control—for that is all an automobile is—has more devices in this country than in any other nation in the world. Thirty years ago we made a rule that locomotive engineers in this country could not drink; they had to be teetotalers. Nobody wanted to limit the personal liberties of locomotive engineers, but everybody knew that locomotive engineers, whose business it was to protect life and property, could not do so if they were drinking engineers. And nobody in the country wanted to ride on trains that were run by engineers who were drinking men. And nobody from President Nicholas Murray Butler, who has so much to say about personal liberty and prohibition laws, down or up, if he were going from Chicago to New York on the Twentieth Century Limited, would want to have a drunken hand on the throttle. That condition which was necessary for a class 30 years ago, has now by reason of the diffusion of mechanical and engineering power throughout the mass of the people become necessary for the whole people, to protect the life and property of all of us.

There is a third reason. The diffusion of a better standard of living, of a larger means of recreation and of personal happiness in a material sense. The spread of general education has been greater in those 30 years than in any other previous period in the world's life.

The part that liquor played in the social life and habits of the people has been wholly changed, so far as the necessity for it is concerned, within the 30 years. These 30 years have seen the widest diffusion of general intelligence; the widest diffusion of general recreation, the coming of the movie, the radio, the Ford car, giving all kinds of opportunity for a better type of recreation. These things have changed the burden and necessity of artificial stimulation so far as the vast mass of the people is concerned.

And side by side with that education has gone on another education. . We have learned the effect of alcoholic stimulation and poison upon the human body. We have learned that it is injurious in every way.

A group of Germans have been studying the effects of alcoholic stimulation on men and women, and in a unanimous report which they have made, they tell us that it has the effect to deflect the accuracy of the message sent by the brain along the nerves to the muscles, so that a fine marksman shot a little off after he had had a drink or two; and that a fine draftsman drew his lines a little irregular after he had had a drink or two. And a peculiar thing in that study by the Germans was this, that the lower the type, or more phlegmatic or stolid the subject, the less the effect, and the more sensitive and higher the nervous tension, the higher the type of mind, the greater the effect. So when a man says to you that he can take three or four drinks without affecting him, it may be true, but it is not very complimentary to him.

There is another reason. We men and women of America are not a temperate people. We might as well be honest with ourselves. It is a fact that we may think we are following the Scriptural injunction, and we do things in a large way, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." We throw ourselves into anything we do or undertake until we overdo it.

All this talk about light wines and beers is pure unadulterated bunk, and the people who are doing the talking about it do not want it. They do not want light wines and beers. They want whiskey and they want it straight. They want cocktails and highballs and whiskey sours and mint julep. I come from Kentucky, and I know. And the reality is that the people of America, by reason of their characteristics and their social tendencies, can not be temperate with alcoholic stimulation. And the fact is that we want a kick, and we want it fast, and if we do not get it with one drink we take another to get the kick. This has been one of the reasons why it has been necessary in our present day to have prohibition.

There is another reason. The liquor traffic, itself, is more responsible at this hour for prohibition and its immediacy in the United States than any other one single force. I am not a fanatic.

I know some distillers, and there are some mighty fine men among them. But the more commercially-minded among them said, "We are not getting as much money as we could get out of this," and they began to buy up every available corner and established saloons, and they began to pick up the ex-convicts, and put them behind the bar, and said, "Get the booze across; get the booze across, and we will pay you a commission in proportion to the amount you put over."

That was the organized saloon. And that kind of an organized saloon soon gathered around it organized gambling and organized prostitution, and it was not long until it became a stench in the nostrils of the people of the community, and a menace to the children, to the homes, to the church and the school. The aroused conscience of the country arose and outlawed it, and made the saloon an outlaw among the institutions of the land. And now there is not a single saloon under the flag, and in my judgment the saloon can never come back to the United States.

That is the force, economically, socially, educationally, which, more than agitation, than mere moral enthusiasm, is responsible for the coming of prohibition to the United States.

The God of Forces. Dan. 11:38

By Dr. C. F. Yoder

Behold the mighty modern "God of forces",
He guides the universes in their courses;
Provides for all creation quenchless sources,
"But he does not know nor care!"
Electrons are his tiny, faithful actors,
In all material forms they are the factors,
In all the forms of energy the tractors,
"But, they cannot answer prayer!"

From out the depths of endless ether spaces
Mysterious waves all find their lawful places,
And form at last the climax,—human faces,
"Throne-room of this god of power."
Behold the man, from atoms still evolving,
Who, while secrets of his being solving,
By war and vice his highest hopes dissolving,
Worships himself this very hour!

He speaks of all his many great inventions,
And boasts of all his many great intentions,
But plunges down through vice and dire dissensions,
To where,—he does not know nor care.
Thank God we all may know our true Creator,
Who reigns, e'en o'er earth's blasphemous dictator,
Whose love is law and reaches e'en the traitor,
And he loves to answer prayer.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Message That Gets Results

By C. E. Johnson

And there they preached the gospel.—Acts 14:17.

The statement of my text is a significant one. When we look back to the ones who were preaching and the circumstances under which they were preaching plus the results obtained we realize that they must have had a wonderful message. Paul and Barnabas as missionaries had been preaching in Iconium until persecution became so strong that they were forced to flee to the cities of Lycaonia. This was not their first persecution, neither was it to be their last. But persecution or no persecution wherever they went, they preached the Gospel.

One of the outstanding facts in church history is that the Gospel has always made progress under persecution. After the resurrection of Christ we find persecution in its worse forms being meted out to the Christians. The same Paul who is now being persecuted was in the beginning the master hand in directing the destruction of those who believed in the Gospel of Christ. Because of this wanton destruction we find the early Christians fleeing to the religions round about Jerusalem. In the eighth chapter of Acts, verse four, we find these words: "Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the gospel." It is because of this preaching that Paul started on his journey to Damascus to continue his persecution. Now we find him no longer the persecutor but the persecuted, and as the early Christian went everywhere preaching the gospel, so Paul the persecuted continued to preach the gospel wherever he was led to go.

There is no question in the minds of people today that the church was wonderfully blessed in the treatment of the early Christian. Because of the trials through which they went there was of necessity a weeding out of those who were weak-kneed. Because of this weeding out those who went forth becoming ambassadors for Christ, preached the Gospel regardless of results to themselves. Because of this preaching the cause of Christ was given such impetus that people everywhere were compelled to recognize that its message was a message of power. If the church of Christ today, were made up of members who, wherever they went, preached the Gospel, can you in your imagination realize the wonderful growth the church would make? This is the thing that Christ wants his followers to do. Turn with me to the Great Commission in the last chapter of Matthew. Three outstanding words, "Go, Teach, Baptize." What shall they teach? All the things that Christ commanded them. As the church prospered under persecution because they preached Christ's message, let us look for our time in present conditions.

With each succeeding year there is a greater spirit of unrest and a feeling that all is not right within the church of Christ. It is because of this condition that we have so many fads and isms springing up and leading people astray. If you believe that the Gospel is being preached in all the churches today, turn with me to any large daily paper that prints church notices and see how many of them deal with the Gospel. Rather we find Psychology, Social Science, Child Welfare, Criminology, Astronomy and most every subject but the Gospel of Christ. Is it any wonder that the church is in a state of unrest? Is it any wonder that fads and isms find such fertile ground in which to work? Is it any wonder that the world criticizes the church and says that it has outlived its usefulness in the world? Oh that the church would come back to the Gospel of Christ and let the world take care of its own.

Can you imagine with me what the results would have been if Paul in his hours of persecution would have turned from the Gospel and preached on the wisdom of the day. He was qualified to do so. He was a learned man. He had studied under the greatest scholars of his day. Undoubtedly he could have stood in the place of the disputers of his time and been granted a hearing. If he was ever so tempted we have no record of it. Rather as we turn to Philippians 3:13-14 we find him saying: "But this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before. I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Let us now look for a time at the results. The magnitude of the work of Paul is beyond the mind of man to fathom. In his earthly ministry, by word of mouth, we find him preaching and establishing churches wherever he went. Literally thousands were swept into the Kingdom because of his fearless teaching. Turn with me to the New Testament. What a small book it would be if we were to remove from it the writings of Paul. To whom were his epistles written? To the churches he had established. To the people to whom he had preached the Gospel. Today after nearly 2000 years we turn to his teaching for help in our daily lives.

But what of today you ask? I say to you without fear of contradiction that the church of today that is making progress is the church that is preaching the Gospel. Not fanaticism or scarehead subjects but the simple Gospel preached with understanding and power. The average man of today wants to be amused but when he goes to church nothing so disgusts him as to hear the one who should be preaching the Gospel, dealing with some subject foreign to the teachings of Christ. Paul and the early founders of the church won their place in the religious world because of their fearless delivery of their message. Also is it true that the men who are making a place for themselves in the religious world of today are those men who without fear of the world are delivering the message of Christ to a dying world. Christ taught the people that heaven and earth should pass away but of his Word he said it would never pass away. Why, then, we often wonder, do men preach that which to God is foolishness while they sidestep the Gospel with all its power?

In closing, let us not overlook the fact that the preaching of the Gospel is not in the hands of the ministry alone. It is in the hands of every follower of Christ. Your minister may preach the Gospel wherever he goes but if you as members of his congregation fail in your duty but little progress will be made. When all, working together, preach the same message of power, then the Spirit of Christ will bless. With his blessing the world will be drawn to the church and it will come to learn more of the Master. Brethren, I plead with you. Wherever you go, whatever the circumstances, preach the Gospel, for it is the only message that can save a sick world.

OUTLINE OF "THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER"

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience.)

CHRIST IS A SPIRIT

SUNDAY—Christ is Spiritual, Col. 1:9-23; Jn. 1:1, 2; 8:58. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." He is love incarnate, producing in himself the fruits of the spirit, and begetting spiritual life in us.

Prayer—Thanks for Christ. Pray for greater appreciation of Christ, also for pastors and theological students.

MONDAY—This Makes His Words Significant, Mt. 7:13-29; Jn. 6:63; 8:28; Mt. 7:24, 25. "The words that I have spoken unto you are spirit, and are life." "The multitudes were astonished at his teaching", and so are we. . . . I will understand it if I can, I will live by it whether or no.

Prayer—For light on God's word; for victory in vexations; for church schools; for young people's societies.

TUESDAY—It Makes His Life Significant, Phil. 2:1-11; Jn. 14:9; 1 Cor. 15:45; 2 Cor. 3:18. "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father." "The first Adam became a living soul; the last Adam became a life-giving spirit."

Prayer—Thanks for our ideals and joys. Pray for submission to God's will; for honest doubters; for schools.

WEDNESDAY—It Makes His Death Significant, Isa. 53; Jn. 10:30; 12:32; 2 Cor. 5:14; Eph. 3:19. "I and my Father are one." "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto myself."

THURSDAY—It Means He is Present with God, Jn. 16:25-33; 14:12; Heb. 12:2. "I came out from the Father, and am come into the world; again, I leave the world and go unto the Father." God lives; so does Christ. The Spirit brings him to us.

Prayer—For trust in God's blessing on our gifts and charities; for the discouraged.

FRIDAY—It Means He is Present with Us, Jn. 16:1-24; Mt. 28:20. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." May my contemplation open the door for his presence, and make me a self-sacrificing servant of mankind.

Prayer—Thanks for the gospel record. Pray for the presence of the Holy Spirit; travelers on land and sea.

SATURDAY—It Means That We Shall be with Him, Jn. 14:1-24; 1 Jn. 3:2; Col. 3:4; 2 Tim. 2:12. "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." God, Christ and man, all being spiritual, quite naturally in a common spiritual society.

Prayer—Thanksgiving for health of body and soul. Pray for the spirit of holy adventure; for the aged.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Our Devotional Life

By Dessie M. Holinger

OUR SCRIPTURE

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit (Rom. 8:1). If we say we have fellowship with him and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth. But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin (1 John 1:6, 7). I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me (Gal. 2:20). Walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh (Gal. 5:16). We walk by faith and not by sight (2 Cor. 5:7).

OUR MEDITATION

By our devotional life we mean a life surrendered, consecrated and strongly attached to our Christ as the life of every true Christian will be. Our devotional life is not merely the time we spend in daily Bible study and prayer or in attendance at church services, but it constitutes more, yes much more in our everyday walk with God. It is not a cloak which may be put on for special occasions; it is something which must be a part of us to be real. It is an atmosphere which can be felt.

A young married couple, and older ones as well, who truly love each other will each in his or her daily acts, have in mind the desire to please and uplift the other, to ennoble their lives. So it is with the devout Christian. He or she desires above all else to please God. Hebrews 11:6, says, "Without faith it is impossible to please God."

Faith, then, is one of the primary essentials of our daily walk with God, to perform the duties of each new day. Oh, brethren! how often we forget the help and strength that Christ is only too glad and willing to give, and fret and worry about things in our own weakness. We want to walk by sight instead of by faith, like a self-willed child. In the time of the Israelites, only morning by morning did manna fall, only as the meal in the barrel wasted was it renewed, only as the need of every day requireth are we assured our strength shall be. God gives Morgan declares: "It is when you begin to do what you can't do, that you do it in the power of the Spirit." That which is impossible with man is possible with God. "Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Note the power of faith in God.

Another fundamental of our devotional life is our prayer life. Prayer is the key that unlocks the secret treasures of God's storehouse. It is a vital part of the Christian's life. Someone has said, "Prayer is the greatest spiritual instrument in the hands of man." It is talking to God, believing that he will answer our prayers according to what is best for us. The prayerful life is the powerful life. We have no finer illustration of this fact than the life of Christ himself. How often he prayed to the Father for strength and wisdom for the duties ahead of him. One of the best times for prayer is upon arising in the morning. A new and unseen and untried day is before us and we very much need God's guidance for the day we have never traveled before. We need to be always in a prayerful attitude of mind. We believe this is what Paul meant when he said we should pray without ceasing. Prayer is a healthy spiritual growth. Romans 8:5 says, "They that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh, but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit." For the Christian lives above the world. There is said to be a little insect that has the power to clothe itself with a coating of air and go to the bottom of the most stagnant pools. Prayer has been called such an atmosphere. What a great blessing to know we can pray to our heavenly Father, no matter where we are or under what circumstances.

A third important element of our devotional life is Bible study. Oh! how much we need it. Some say, "Well, I don't understand it very well." That is partly because we do not dig deeply enough and because we do not take the Holy Spirit as our guide. 1 John 2:27, says, "And ye need not that any one teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things and is truth—ye shall abide in him." Again, John 7:17, "If any one willeth to do his will he shall know of the doctrine." Here is splendid evidence that we can learn from the precious Book in a simple manner. It does not say we shall not also learn through Christian colleges, through association with Christians and through the reading of some of the splendid books written by many great men of God. We must take time enough to study, to get into the heart of the matter just as we go into any work for which we receive direct compensation. The Bible is a gold mine, the richest in the world. This is what it is called by a valuable little book on how to study the Bible; namely, "Getting the Gold out of the Word of God," by B. A. Torrey. Its suggestions are very simple and practical and it is most interesting and inspiring.

Another element which is most essential is Love. "Now abideth faith, hope and charity (or love), but the greatest of these is love." Love will solve all our difficulties, if we only have it to apply. Love implies that our will be surrendered to God. It is only when our wills are really surrendered to him that he can really help us, is it not? The Christian who has learned to lean on Jesus for counsel and comfort has learned the secret of the Lord—"the peace that passeth understanding." Have you not noticed among your Christian friends some who speak less of the faults of others, more about their good qualities, though they may be few apparently? These try to help them to a higher plane of living. Do not such show a true spirit of love by the faith manifested toward these less faithful ones? Think of the faith and love which Jesus manifested in Peter, that ignorant, impulsive fisherman, yet under the influence of the Master Teacher he became the great man of God he was.

OUR PRAYER

Heavenly Father, forgive our failures in the past and help us to more fully realize our responsibility to thee that we should honor thee in our daily walk, and to our fellowmen that they see not us, but Christ living in and through us. Grant that we may find great joy in the privilege of daily witnessing for him in some way through our lives. For Christ's sake. Amen.

Waynesboro, Pennsylvania.

Second Quarter—The Life and Letters of Peter

AIM: To discover, through a study of his Life and Letters, the contribution of Peter to Christian belief about Jesus, and how this belief should influence our lives.

Peter Becomes a Disciple of Jesus

Scripture Lesson—Mark 1:14-18, 29-31.

Devotional Reading—Isa. 55:1-5.

Golden Text—Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men. Mark 1:17.

Introduction—The Evangelist Mark is generally thought to have written his Gospel at Rome, under the Apostle Peter's dictation. There is nothing in the work itself to contradict this common tradition of antiquity, but on the contrary much to recommend it. Peter himself was a missionary to the Jews scattered all over the continent of Asia, even as far as Rome, Italy. The "Babylon" mentioned in 1 Peter 5:13, is supposed to be a disguise of Rome, because of the terrible persecutions which the Emperor Nero practiced. Tradition says that Peter was crucified with his head downwards at Rome.

Lesson Poem

Across the throbbing brow of pain,
To Peter sinking in the main;
To maniac boy tormented long,
To woman hiding in the throng,
Christ stretched a human hand.

On maiden fast in death's embrace,
On eyes which ne'er had seen man's face;
On leprous sore, most loathsome ill,
On Malchus' ear to show good-will,
Christ laid a human hand.

On childhood's loving, trusting head,
On widow's son borne forth as dead;
For youth or age, for want or woe,
His sympathetic heart did flow,
Through touch of human hand.

Who gives himself, Heaven's highest gift,
May help with Christ, the world to life,
By deeds of human hand.

—Alice Armstrong.

The Call to Service. "The call of Christ I conceive to be that time in a man's life when an impulse comes to surrender everything for Christ. The call of the cross is not merely a call to forgiveness, but a call to love and work for Christ."—Prof. E. E. Hale, Jr.

The qualities of the fisherman—watchfulness, patience, knowledge of the nature and ways of the fish, wisdom, tact, self-forgetfulness—are the qualities of the true soul-winner. "No human occupation has so very perfectly typified the art of soul-winning as that of the fisherman."

"Again the work of the fisher is rather a work of art and skill, not force and violence."—Trench. The fisherman attracts rather than drives. "In the 'Big Brother' movement now so successful in New York (and becoming so in other places as well), the men must save the boys by becoming companionable with them and leading them by a safe road into a man's problem of life, without seeming to so lead them, much less drive them by bridle and spur. A church brotherhood or a Sunday school brotherhood class can win boys into a close association with itself, sometimes in one way, sometimes in another."

"There are many ways of bringing men to Jesus. A young man linked his arm one day in that of a boy with whom he was walking, and talked with him earnestly about being a Christian. It was not long before the boy decided to give his heart to Christ. Later he heard the call to the ministry, and in due time became a preacher.

"A pastor in one of our cities was very sore-hearted because no one was to join the church at the approaching communion. It occurred to him to use his pen. He wrote eight letters to as many young men who had not professed Christ. In some of the letters he used helpful passages of Scripture. Six of the young men addressed united with the church on that communion day, and the other two came afterwards."

Bringing Others to Christ. "A physician once said that he kept himself in health by going to see his patients. Whenever he discontinued this, and required his patients to come to him, or when he tried to abandon his practice, he speedily became lethargic, stupid and dull; but when he resumed his efforts, and tried and tested his powers, he recovered his strength and vigor. So many a Christian man would find spiritual health and strength in trying to bring others to Jesus."

The Gospel Fisherman. The fisherman attracts fish; he cannot drive them. Every good thing that draws men, the work to which men are called; the meeting the needs, the finest gospel courtesy, the help for the helpless, the deeds of kindness, even warnings against sin, all draw men. The services, the prayer-meetings, the Sunday school, should be so full of good, of the right spirit, of helpfulness and blessing, that people want to come. No mere outside attractions will avail. Men will not come to quench their thirst at empty wells, however beautiful the curb. They will not go to satisfy their hunger at empty tables, however beautiful the dishes. And an essential rule for the gospel fisherman is to keep himself out of sight. The moment he has selfish motives behind his invitation, the moment he preaches even partially that he may be praised for his oration, or for any other motive than to draw his hearers to the gospel itself, that moment he loses power.

Note "the men whom Jesus first invited to follow him undoubtedly had as glaring sins and as obvious defects as most of us have today. Those imperfections must have been quite as much of a trial to Jesus as our fellows' shortcomings are to us. But he did not commence by telling them of this, nor did he seek to help them at the outset by showing them what was wrong with them. His first recorded word to faulty Simon was, 'Thou art Simon the son of John; thou shalt be called rock,' as though to say, 'for you deserve a stalwart name.' When he set out to win a person to himself it seemed to be his set purpose to find something in that one which he could commend, and then to commend in all heartedness."

Lessons from Christ's Work for human needs. Christ's going into the home of Peter and restoring the sick mother to health is an illustration of the individual giving courage and cheer to neighbors and friends in any kind of need. Simple, beautiful, sincere, neighborly, Christian friendliness, may be used with great advantage.

The wider work of Christian churches and individuals is taught us by the great numbers of sick and suffering people Jesus healed at the setting of the sun. Christianity blesses the body and through the healing of the body uplifts the soul.—Illustrated Quarterly.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Everything, says the Pennsylvania Railroad. Since the Company has started naming its fast through freights, the best records in its history for promptness and regularity in freight service have been made. The men, it seems, take more pride in bringing "The Standard" in on time than they did the WV-3. "The Flying Cloud," traveling from Buffalo to Pittsburgh, "The Thoroughbred" carrying livestock from Indianapolis to the Western seaboard, and a score of others, picturesquely named, have become things "of life and real personality."

Here is a suggestion for Sunday school workers. If you still adhere to the old custom of numbering your classes, try naming them, or let the classes select their own names; then encourage in other ways the building up of a class personality and spirit that will cause its members to take pride in it. There is very little inspiration in being numbered, at its best, and at its worst it suggests the fate of prison inmates. When a man goes to prison he ceases to be a personality and becomes a number.

The Cathedral for All Children has been established by the people of Walden, New York, a manufacturing town of seven thousand inhabitants in the Ramapo Mountains. Its building was the inspiration of Dr. J. Brett Langstaff, now rector of Saint Andrew's Church, while he was director of the David Copperfield Library for Children in London several years ago. Dr. Langstaff's main idea in creating this cathedral for children was to help children of all denominations to learn to worship God. They conduct the entire service themselves, taking turns in the various offices. The townspeople of Walden showed their intense interest in the project by giving their services to the construction of the church after their own work for the day was completed.

Poverty is uncomfortable, as I can testify; but nine times out of ten the best thing that can happen to a young man is to be tossed overboard and compelled to sink or swim for himself.—James A. Garfield.

Suggestions for the Committees

LOOKOUT PROMPTERS

For Lookout Committees

The lookout committee of a wide-awake society in Baltimore has found the following methods successful in stimulating interest.

The committee has mimeographed report cards, one of which is given each month to each member. The secretary of the lookout committee keeps the record of each member of the society, and makes out his or her report card showing what he or she has done during the month. At the top of the card is the name of the society, and then a space for the name of the member. Then:

1. Attended C. E. meetings.
2. Absent C. E. meetings.
3. Present at consecration service. Yes. No.
4. Number of times responded or took part (aside from singing).
5. Number of times prayed in meetings

Are you conscientiously fulfilling your pledge? Lookout Committee.

Here is a mimeographed invitation to attend the consecration meeting. It was mailed to all members. Note that the first letters, reading downward, spell the word "Consecration."

N-ever to forget the consecration meeting.

Small cardboard crosses were used to advertise the New Year's consecration meeting. In the meeting room a large cross was used, the letters "C. E. Consecration," and the year number showing in white against a background of red. This was illuminated by means of electric lights, and proved very effective.

Cards of invitation to attend the meetings are always handed to visitors and friends. They are often distributed with the church bulletins.

A REUNION MEETING

For Prayer Meeting Committees

Three weeks before the meeting, a Christian Endeavor society in Dallas, Texas, began a publicity campaign to make known a proposed reunion meeting. Newspaper articles, posters, and postal card invitations. Honorary members were especially invited, and also prospective members.

A picture of all those present at the meeting was taken. The picture was afterwards framed and hung in the meeting room.

The room was decorated with flowers, streamers, and an American flag.

The chairs were arranged in three sections, one section for each class of members, active, associate, and honorary, the honorary members being seated in the center.

The opening hymns were sung by famous singers on a phonograph furnished free of charge by a local dealer. The Scripture was read responsively by two girls and a young man. Three Endeavorers gave short opening talks, which were followed by talks from two active, two associate, and two honorary members. There was special music, and the meeting closed by all joining hands and singing "Blest be the tie that binds," and "God be with you till we meet again."

LET US PRAY

O thou by whom we live, with whom we live, who are our test of worth as well as the helper of our souls in all uncertainty, teach us to distinguish between good and evil and the lesser and the higher good. Let not our eyes be blinded by appearances, nor the tempter and betrayer persuade us into folly. Let not the lower good deprive us of the best that is thy wish for our possession and experience. Help us to make thy will and thought the touchstone of all our choosing. Having walked with thee, make us careful of our habitual companionships of soul, while we are generous and joyful in giving ourselves to others. And let thy purpose be accomplished in our lives and thoughts and thy will be done in all we undertake; to the honor of thy name and the fulfillment of thy purpose through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—Isaac Ogden Rankin.

JUNIOR ENDEAVOR

(Topic for April 3)

A Trip to Mexico and South America. Galatians 6:9, 10

Mexico City, Mexico,
January 20, 1927.

Dear Mary:

It seems like a long time since I said good-bye to you that morning when mother and dad and I started out on our trip. We have had a nice journey down here. Dad thinks that he can finish his business here in about a week, so we are planning to start for South America next week.

If I were still with you, we would be in school now. I never quite realized how nice school was until I had to leave it. But I am surely glad that mother and dad consented to let me come along with them. I would rather be with them even if it does take me a good bit of time to learn the new language so that I can do my school work in South America.

I almost wish we could stay here in Mexico and have dad preach and mother teach there. Yesterday when we were driving out through the country we saw so many poor children. I can hardly believe that these people whom we are seeing every day are not Christians like we are. Most of them are Catholics but they are not Catholics like we know in our part of America. Their religion does not make them good people like religion is supposed to do. I do hope that before many years many missionaries may be allowed to teach these people about Jesus and his love.

Buenos Aires, South America,
February 20, 1927.

Dear Mary:

It has been a whole month since I wrote my last letter to you and many things have happened since then. When we arrived here the sun was shining brightly for it was a warm summer day. You see, it is summer down here when it is winter at home. Some of the other missionaries met us when we arrived here and I am so glad to find that there is another little girl among the missionaries' children who is just about my own age. I know we are going to be good friends and she is going to help me in getting started with my school work here. Just think, I will have to learn to speak Spanish well enough to answer all my questions in class without using English words.

I think that the people are very interesting. Most of them are darker colored than the people of North America. They have dark hair and eyes. Some of the people here can play and sing very well. They have stringed instruments that they play on. Mother says that these people are mostly Spanish.

There is one thing that is very different about living here and living in North America. Girls can not go about the town just anywhere and any time during the day like they can at home. They have to be very careful. Usually older folks go with them wherever they want to go.

Somehow I feel about these people just as I did about the Mexicans. They dress and work and go to school and all those things and it seems impossible to believe that they do not know about Jesus as we do. Of course they must be wicked or it would be safe for little girls to go out on the street and go to public places. They do not have Bibles that tell all about Jesus. Instead they have some kind of books that the priest gives them and it hasn't near all of the Bible in it. Then instead of having preachers who preach to them and teach the boys and girls, they have wicked priests who do many terrible things and lead the people to do things that they should not.

I do hope and pray that dad and mother and the other missionaries may be able to teach many, many of these people so that they may become real Christians. Won't you pray for the mission work in South America.

Lovingly, Helen.

Visiting Mission Stations in Argentina

By Johanna Nielsen

Rio Cuarto, Argentina,
 January 29, 1927.

Dear Friends:

Brother Yoder has suggested that I tell you something of my recent visit to a number of missions, Mennonite, Christian and Missionary Alliance, etc., in search of ideas as to new and efficient methods of work and also a better knowledge of missionary work in the Argentine.

Having never traveled in a "visiting capacity" among strangers, it was an entirely new experience, and I confess I was not terribly enthusiastic about some of it. However, I left Rio Cuarto on November 9 for Buenos Aires, for in the Argentine all railroads, if not all roads, lead—not to Rome—but to Buenos Aires and often one can travel 150 miles across country quicker by going 600 miles around by Buenos Aires.

I spent the night in one of the stuffy little compartments that our European and South American friends find so superior to our "semi-public" Pullmans. Well, every one to his taste. I also had my first experience with the Argentine diner. The meal is served table d'hôte, the waiters starting at one end of the car and coming down the line of tables with big trays, from which they serve each one as they pass. They show real skill in manipulating their various utensils.

The only thing in which service varied was the drinks, which were of various colors and smells.

Buenos Aires begins to impress its size upon one an hour or more before one reaches the city proper, for one travels through its suburbs for at least an hour. It somehow gives one the impression of being still in the making. It seemed quite like home to have to get out into the middle of the street because of some building under construction in the business district. I wonder how the big firms manage their loading and unloading, for Buenos Aires, like the rest of the cities of the Argentine, is alley-less, the blocks being solid squares. Most of the streets in the down-town district are quite narrow; Florida, one of the main shopping centers, being so narrow that in the afternoon no vehicle traffic is permitted, leaving the street free for pedestrians, and at that it is crowded.

Since even yet a lone woman can not eat anywhere or go where she pleases without feeling unpleasantly conspicuous, the Y. W. C. A. is a welcome haven for such, even though it is not the efficient, up-to-the minute plant that one might expect to find in a great city. It is centrally located and easily accessible from bus-lines, trams and subway.

I was fortunate in spending quite a little time with Miss Zona Smith, one of the pioneer missionaries of the Disciples and for several years Directora of the American College. She knows Buenos Aires well and took me with her to some of the places of interest and also to see some of their methods of work. There are some fairly large churches in Buenos Aires, but the group meeting in the homes seems to be a favorite and fruitful method of reaching the people. Spiritualism, so I am told, is making a tremendous effort to capture even the Christian Missions of Buenos Aires, and since so many think that anything strange or supernatural must be of God, it is having some degree of success. It is working hard in some of the inland towns as well.

Of course much could be written of parks and playgrounds, display of the wealth of the Argentine, etc., but our interest centers in the little mission out in Flores. Half an hour or so, on the subway and a few minutes on the tram and I arrived on an extremely warm Sunday afternoon. The little hall soon filled with children, but the grown folks were conspicuous by their absence. Some 35 children, very attractive looking, bright youngsters, gave good attention to Brother Anton as he taught the lesson. The evening service was poorly attended, mostly children and few of those. The work in Buenos Aires seems to have a great many ups and downs and just then it seemed to be down.

Work Going Forward at Yaloke

18 Rue Nationale, Montpellier, France,
 February 11, 1927.

Dear Evangelist readers:

To have 1927 news from the field makes one feel like forwarding it at once even at the risk of tiring you with too frequent publications.

From Yaloke:

"Everything here is going very nicely and we have all been kept exceptionally well. The work has been hastened with all speed lately as the hunting season is approaching when no man works! We had as high as 750 workmen one week.

You can imagine what it was like to preach to them on the leeward side of a house on a cold morning. It is a bit worse now as the back of the veranda is walled up into store-rooms, etc. We will surely be glad when the church is completed. It lacks very little now. The floor and inside pillars are all that remain to be done. The framework of the school house is nearly finished. We hope the roof will be on before the hunting season. The foundation for the dispensary is about finished.

"Yama, Yolo and Jodiwan are especially faithful. Pray much for Jodiwan however, as it is quite a trial for him to be even a bit isolated as a leper.

"Miss Tyson and myself (Miss Emmert) are planning to take an itinerating trip in January, probably over the same ground as the first trip or at least in that direction. Brother Hathaway plans on itinerating in directions of Bossangoa, Bassai and Bangui in the near future. This trip of ours will be the first one for some time, but of course 'tis rather difficult to get away when we have school. I lack just one week of having taught six months. The Lord has wonderfully undertaken in regard to health, for so far, I have not had to stop on account of fever, although constantly exposed to wind and sun on veranda. The school house is however certainly going up rapidly now, so, after my month's vacation and itineration I may not have much more time to spend on the veranda.

"Sister Foster is very busy with the dry season garden, also with housekeeping, language study, etc. Brother Foster is very busy with Brother Hathaway in the work. Both are picking up Sango.

"One of Yaloke's sons last night, expressed himself in prayer as grateful for the answer in regard to the school, and as desirous of persevering in prayer for his father's conversion."

Brother Hathaway writes: "In regard to furlough we haven't made the least preparation for it, and feel for the present that we are in the center of the Lord's will in remaining here. It may be wise to wait for your return before leaving. We want to have the greatest possible number of workers on the field before leaving. Let us know should there be any change in your sailing plans . . . All things considered, our furlough will probably not be until 1928.

"Conditions here, briefly expressed, are as follows (January 1, 1924):

Church almost finished.

School roof going on (brick work—height 4 ft.

Bricks on hand sufficient for completion of both the above buildings.

Dispensary foundation finished and timbers going in place.

We have a new plan for setting veranda poles in rock sockets. This is cheap, while permanent.

"A few weeks ago, through carelessness of the one who was caring for burning the bricks, the brick and carpenter sheds were burned down. They have been replaced in different locations as follows.

One carpenter shed,

One brick shed,

One shed over brick kiln,

One blacksmith's shop.

(The village blacksmith is now employed. We are enjoying blessed fellowship with the Fosters who are fast fitting into the work."

We are sorry that recent letters from Bassai and Bossangoa are not yet in our hands. But God is also prospering there for this faithfulness faileth never.

Marguerite and I are both busy, for which we are thankful, as we are assured that it is change and not in idleness that one finds the truest rest. Continue with us in prayer. Very faithfully yours,

FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE.

"Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life."—Paul to Timothy.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

South Bend Church of Indiana Pushes the Dial Forward For $1613.39

This church is located in northern Indiana and has attracted much attention, because of its growth and achievements during the past few years.

It has had discouragements and met them heroically. A few years ago their church building was burned to the ground with only a small insurance. In this they did not waver. With great personal sacrifice and faith in God, they have erected one of the finest church buildings and parsonages in the brotherhood.

This people have struggled forward the past few years under a heavy financial burden, without any wealth to aid. It will only be a few years more until they will be entirely free of indebtedness.

Brother Leatherman is their present pastor. He and his wife are Ashland graduates and it is needless to say that every aid was given me in the work here.

I found industrial conditions in the city below normal and most of the members and organizations still carrying heavy financial obligations on the building. This naturally made it impossible for the church to do what they would like to have done. However, I found the membership in full sympathy with the College and ready to do all they could.

Brother Leatherman succeeded Brother Beachler as pastor, is well liked by the membership and is fitting the needs of the field. Their total gift was $1,613.39.

W. S. BELL.

Brother Witter and I were always intimate friends, but our life work was so far apart that we never associated together as much as we wished. His funeral was in the Third church, preached by Brother Paul Miller, who gave us a very helpful, appropriate, and fitting message for the occasion.

I am not given to eulogies, but Brother Witter was for more than twenty years, one of my favorite and ideal ministers.

In the first place, nature seemed to do much for him. He seemed to be entirely void of jealousy, bigotry, and selfishness that we see so prominently manifested in so many preachers that hinder their usefulness. Others more able than I, no doubt, will give account of his life and death.

With a sad heart I went alone to Delaware and preached in his place at three places appointed.

I preached at Sister Baker's home on Monday night to a good house, and with splendid interest, also at Charles Workman's, about 12 miles from Sister Baker's on Tuesday night to a larger crowd.

One young lady expressed her willingness to be baptized soon, at this meeting. On Wednesday night, I preached in Brother Walter Cary's home, near Milville, Delaware, about 25 miles from Brother Workman's. Brother Charles and Elwood Workman came over to this service. We had a good crowd and good interest here.

At Brother Charles Workman's we called the brethren together and they expressed a desire that I should come to Delaware every two weeks.

We also appointed a meeting for the off week conducted by some of the laymen.

They will have their first laymen's meeting on Sunday night, February 6, led by one of the Smith brothers. Three good families of the Smiths are members.

It seems to me there is quite a good field here for the Brethren. I expected not to take any pastoral work, but I have consented to help put this work on its feet till they will be able to hire a man who can stay on the field.

I will go down again the 14th and give them five services.

Hope to have good news to report right along.

ISAAC D. BOWMHAN,
Leesburg, New Jersey.

REPORT OF THE MEETING OF THE BOARD OF COLLEGE TRUSTEES

By Edwin E. Jacobs

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Ashland College was held in Founder's Hall, Tuesday, March 8, at which time they requested me to make a report of the meeting through the Evangelist.

The following members were present: Messrs Kilhefner, Stuckman, Ronk, Frank Lichty, Benshoff, Switzer, Bowman, Schaffer, Teeter, E. E. Lichty, Bemenderfer and Bell. Orion E. Bowman was re-elected president of the Board, E. L. Kilhefner,

FROM AN ITINERATING EVANGELIST

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This letter from Brother Bowman was to have been published in the issue containing Brother Witter's Memorial, but in some unaccountable manner the copy got misplaced and has thus been delayed. We beg the pardon of Brother Bowman for this mishap).

Dear Evangelist: Brother Marcus Witter was to go with me to Delaware January 31 and preach three nights and look over the field there and help and encourage those noble people.

I received a sad letter from his secretary stating that Brother Witter was very ill and he told her to tell me he could not go with me.

A few days later I received a letter from my daughter, Leona, the pianist of his church, stating that he was a very sick man and she feared he may not recover.

So on Saturday night I was taken by auto 10 miles to Milville, New Jersey, took a midnight train, went to Mrs. Robinson's another daughter, and arrived at one A. M., Sunday. I was at Brother Witter's home twice, but he was too ill to be seen.

Monday, January 31 at 5:30 A. M. he died. I received a 'phone message of his death. I arrived there about 8 A. M. A few minutes later Brother Paul Miller and wife came.

An awful blow to Sister Witter, son and wife, as well as to the Third Brethren church, where he took charge a month before his death.

Vice President, Dr. R. R. Teeter, Secretary, and E. J. Worst, Treasurer. Following are the important items of business:

1. The local trustees together with the President of the College were constituted a committee with full power to select the site and erect the proposed gymnasium. Bids had been previously received and evaluated. This building will be completed by the opening of the school year next September. The money accruing from the local campaign, will be in hand to pay as we go forward with this project.

2. Voted to approve plans for securing the National conference for Ashland in 1928, which will mark the Golden Jubilee of the founding of the College. With the new gymnasium we ought to be able to accommodate the crowd.

3. Voted to ask the various churches to observe Educational Day as usual, thus affording an opportunity for the making of a money gift. This will permit some to give who could not otherwise give any financial aid to the school.

4. Professor C. L. Anspach was elected Head of the Department of Education and Professor E. G. Mason, Director of Teacher Training. This was done on the suggestion of the State Office of Public Instruction.

5. The proposed amendment to the Constitution to the effect that the several districts should elect, instead of merely nominate the various trustees at present, could not be passed due to a lack of the two-thirds majority as provided for in the Constitution. A committee was appointed to proceed further with it.

7. It was voted to empower the President of the College to make application for admission into the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. It looks now as if we might be admitted within the next twelve months. We have made application for admission into the Association of American Colleges with good prospects of being admitted.

Admission into the North Central Association will depend upon how the Indiana churches respond to Dr. Bell's campaign during the year. We are not ready yet to apply, but ought to be within striking distance by this time next year, if the church campaign goes forward as is expected. Those upon whom Brother Bell expects to call, please take notice of the above statement. Much depends upon you.

Dr. Bell reported the progress of his campaign and while the work is hard, yet the Board feels encouraged and urges upon the brotherhood the necessity of reaching the final goal. Dr. Bell is doing a good work and materially aiding in building up the Kingdom through this department of the Lord's work.

The City Campaign. This report will be seen in the Report of the Bursar attached hereto.

The following Trustees were either elected or re-elected: Ohio, Messrs. Kilhefner, Worst, Young, Balch; Pennsylvania, Ashman; Maryland-Virginia, Dr. Shaver; Southern California, Dr. Wall; Indiana, Duker; Illiokota, Ronk; Mid-West, N: P. Eglin; Northern California, J. Milo Wolfe; Northwest, Ralph Cox.

Respectfully submitted,

The College is thus seen to be prosperous. The finances are good and the general outlook is encouraging. The Faculty is interested and loyal. The biggest asset the church has here at Ashland is the splendid Faculty which has grown up around the school, all men of deep devotion and fine loyalty. Every member is a member of the Brethren church, is well trained, most of them young, and altogether the church has reason to feel both proud and satisfied.

The Seminary. This received due consideration and Dean Miller reported progress. The need in this department, is the sending of young men here for the ministry who will qualify for the duties which will later devolve upon them. We have a number now but there ought to be more. There is no department of the school more important than the Seminary.

The College jealously guards its reputation as a Christian institution and covets the prayerful support of the church that we may stand firm in this topsy-turvy age.
E. E. JACOBS.

NAPPANEE, INDIANA

We are again guilty of neglecting the Evangelist readers for it has been a long time since we have given a report of our part of the work. We find ourselves well in the third year of work with the Nappanee folks and there are many splendid things we could say about them, but we will let that pass by saying we have here a very splendid class of people to work with. They know how to make a pastor feel at home, and they know how to work with all their might. We have never found a more loyal class of folks anywhere.

Every department of the work is showing splendid progress. Harry E. Price and his fine lot of helpers are leading the Sunday school forward successfully. The three Christian Endeavor Societies are moving forward under the leadership of Grayce Miller, Mrs. Maude Weygand and Mrs. U. J. Shively. The W. M. S. and the S. M. M. are both doing splendid work. We have a fine lot of young folks and they are using their talent in the Lord's service. Our Sunday School Band of young folks, under the direction of James Gentzorn, is larger and better than ever. The Sunday morning choir is also made up of young folks and Mrs. Cora Stuckman is the director.

During the past year the church was painted and decorated and new carpet was furnished by the W. M. S. and the Sunday school. This gives us a very nice place to worship.

On February 6 we began a three weeks' evangelistic campaign. This was the third three weeks' meeting we had held since we have been here, and we entered into it to make it the best one. We had as our special helpers Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Richer of Peru, Indiana, and they took care of the music end in extra fine shape. There was not a single "off night" in the entire three weeks. Night after night, the house was filled. From the very first service the interest was good. The members proved themselves as "having a mind to work," and work they did. The visible results were fifty-three. Forty-seven of these have already been received into the church and the others soon will be. The meeting closed with a splendid spirit and on the first Sunday following, a man and wife came to accept Christ, making fifty-five. These have also been baptized and received into fellowship. A number of others will yet come. During October we were able to add ten, through a little personal work. God has blessed us in giving us a few over a hundred additions since we have been on this field. We take none of the praise for this to ourselves, we only praise God for it. The Richers made many friends while here and their help was greatly appreciated by all. They are splendid helpers in evangelistic services.

Gravelton, Indiana

We have been giving these folks a little help during the last year by preaching for them every other Sunday afternoon. Gravelton is one of our smaller churches, but it would be hard to find a group of more loyal folks than they are. This church is only five miles out from Nappanee. They were in our meeting almost every night in large numbers.

On January 10th we began a two-weeks' meeting here. Harley Zumbaugh of Tiosa, Indiana, helped us here. This was the fifteenth meeting Brother Zumbaugh and I have held together and from many angles it was the best. The visible results were twenty additions, all of which have been baptized and received into the church. Brother Zumbaugh not only led the song service here, but he and the Gravelton folks looked after the personal work and he spoke each Sunday morning, while we were in the Nappanee pulpit.

May the Lord bless his people everywhere.

S. M. WHETSTONE,
Nappanee, Indiana.

FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH WINCHESTER, VIRGINIA

The work here is going nicely, under the leadership of Brother E. J. Rohart, who is our pastor. We are very fortunate to have so earnest and consecrated a young man for our leader.

The interest and attendance at our church services are very encouraging. Quite recently four were baptized, and five others who have moved here, moved their membership with us.

Now we are planning to hold a meeting just before Easter, and are praying that much good may be accomplished, for there are still others we are hoping may make the good confession at this meeting. May the Lord abundantly bless the efforts that are made to glorify his name.

Brother Charles Buhl, our Sunday school superintendent, is doing all he can to make the school a success, and we are glad to report a favorable attendance since the beginning of the year, and as the weather gets more settled, we are looking for still better attendance, and greater success. The past interest has been good and our aim is still to make it better.

In the past few weeks we have organized a Christian Endeavor Society and are expecting that much good may be gained by it. We ask an interest in your prayers, that the work here may bring forth much fruit, and that all we do may be done for the glory of God. MRS. IDA KELLER.

BOWLIN, WEST VIRGINIA

It has been a long time since I have tried to write a report for the church at Oak Hill and Salem.

Since we have a regular pastor I have been leaving the reports for him to make, but there are a few things he just leaves out, so I thought I would try to write again.

Since Brother Ankrum came to Oak Hill our church has taken on new life and is growing, growing.

The first of the year found us with funds enough to pay the pastor in full. Within three months something more than $1,700 had been collected on parsonage debt and pastor's salary. Only a small amount is yet due on parsonage and we hope to pay that before next quarterly business meeting.

Plans are being made to build a new church in the near future.

All of you who know Brother Ankrum, knows that he is a born optimist. He sees some good in most everything that happens. He is held in high esteem by all the other churches in town. He knew when he accepted the work here that it was no easy job, but he is doing the work and will win out in the end.

We certainly appreciate what he has done for the church and can say without trying to flatter that we are proud of our pastor.

We ask especially that you pray for the work at this place. Pray that we may be able to build a new church and that we may ever look to Jesus who never forgets nor forsakes the ones who trust in his word.

CONEMAUGH, PENNSYLVANIA

Six months have passed since our coming to Conemaugh and they have been about the busiest six months of our ministry. Coming here from a western and agricultural state we found conditions entirely different from those we had been accustomed to. This made it necessary for us to readjust ourselves to an entirely new environment. Conemaugh is located in the Conemaugh river valley and is one of the terminals of the Pennsylvania Railroad which employs a number of our men. The Bethlehem Steel mills are also located here. These works also employs several of our people. Most of our men are subject to call any Sunday, which makes our attendance so far as the men are concerned, very uncertain. Then, too, the population of Conemaugh is about half foreign, and most of these people are Catholics. Last, but not least, is this great cloud of coal smoke and the dirt that goes with it.

While we have met some disappointments and had to face some difficult problems we also have great cause for rejoicing. First of which is the wonderful reception we received. The people here sure know how to make the preacher and his family feel at home. And we never had a more appreciative audience than we have here. Our regular church services have been well attended.

On November the fourteenth we began our revival, which lasted two weeks, the writer doing the preaching. Mrs. Staley led the choir and they gave us a splendid support. Our attendance throughout the entire meeting was fine. But we faced the problem that so often has to be faced in this age, and that is the problem of getting the unsaved people in the meetings. Night after night we were told that the entire audience was church people only. As a result of these services five were baptized and received into the church. Several reconsecrations were made and all together we consider the effort a success for the church. We have been making our Sunday evening services evangelistic, and in the six months, thirteen have been added to the church, two are awaiting baptism and still others are almost ready to make the all important step in life. Brethren, pray for us, that we may by the Master's help, make every Sunday a revival.

We greatly enjoyed the presence of Brother Clarence Sickel and Dr. Bell, and the splendid messages they brought us, in presenting their different phases of our work. Thank you, brethren, come again.

The W. M. S. and S. M. M. organizations are both doing very efficient work.

We believe that we have just cause for being proud of our prayer meeting. Our average attendance for the six months has been close to fifty. It was in a prayer service that we received a most pleasant surprise. On Sunday morning before Christmas we were asked to announce what the church called a sunrise prayer meeting, for Christmas morning. We told them that that would mean an eight o'clock service, but they said no, the meeting was to start at six. When the time arrived over thirty people were present and we can truthfully say it was by far the best prayer meeting we ever had the privilege of taking part in. Now we are eagerly looking forward to another such service on Easter Sunday morning.

Our choir is doing splendid work under the direction of Brother George Searle. They are preparing an Easter Cantata to be given Easter Sunday evening.

On Tuesday evening, March the first, several of the young people from the First Brethren church of Johnstown met with our young people and helped us organize a Christian Endeavor. This is almost a new undertaking for this church, as it has been several years since they have had a Christian Endeavor service. The first six or eight services will be used in the study of Expert Endeavor, under the direction of the pastor, after which the regular C. E. topics will be used.

Just now we are making preparation for our Passion Week services, and the receiving of our Foreign Mission offering.

Pray for us that the Lord may prosper his work in this part of the field and that many souls may be born into the Kingdom.

Yours in his name,
AUSTIN R. STALEY.

ROANN, INDIANA

Always I am made to rejoice when I read of souls being born into the Kingdom. Believing the Evangelist family will rejoice with us, I shall endeavor to give a brief report of the evangelistic effort of the First Brethren church at Roann, Indiana. Our pastor, Brother D. A. C. Teeter, began a series of services Sunday, January 30th, and preached the Word with power to large and attentive audiences each evening for three weeks. The Lord gave us fine weather with the exception of two or three nights, but the people came just the same and this caused us to believe they wanted to hear the Truth. Brother Teeter does not compromise with Satan, neither is he a respecter of persons, but proclaims the Word of God fearlessly.

The immediate results were fifteen accessions to the church—seven by confession and five by letter, for which we give God our Father the glory. I call attention to the fact that ten of the fifteen accessions were men, which is unusual. Three others will be received into the church at an early date—two of whom are awaiting letters from another church. These two we shall be glad to welcome when the opportunity is presented.

Brother Harley Zumbaugh of Tiosa, Indiana, directed the song service each evening, proving himself a "workman who needeth not to be ashamed." His is a spirit filled life, and enjoys a large circle of friends in our community. While we cannot report a large ingathering of souls we have faith to believe the good seed sown will, in due time, spring forth, and those who were "almost persuaded" but turned away to "await" a more convenient time will yield their lives to the Master.

Yet another blessing resulting from this revival is the spiritual strengthening of the church and we are going forth with a new zeal to do the tasks set before us. May the Lord of Harvest keep the revival spirit growing and glowing in the hearts of all his children, everywhere, throughout the year.

MRS. BIRDIE LESLIE,
Roann, Indiana.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

GENERAL CONFERENCE 1927

The date of the General Conference of the Brethren churches for 1927 is now announced as August 22-28. This is somewhat earlier than we are accustomed to meet and a number of our people will be interested in knowing of the change in the date of the Winona Bible Conference this year.

The program announced by Mr. Breckenridge is as follows: Bible Conference, August 7-16, inclusive; Triennial Convention of the World League Against Alcoholism, August 17-23, inclusive; Brethren General Conference, August 22-28, inclusive. We considered making our Conference a full week later but finally decided that it would be better to overlap one day than to go into a later week when the Winona accommodations would be closing.

LET ALL DEPARTMENTS TAKE NOTICE: We herewith submit a motion from the minutes of the Executive Committee as passed at last General Conference: "Moved that the Officers of the various boards of the General Conference be required to have their programs in full in the hands of the Secretary of the Executive Committee by June 1st, 1927. In case of failure of boards to comply with the above request the Secretary is authorized to provide such program, which becomes the regular order of Conference business."

A. V. KIMMELL,
Secretary Executive Committee.

LOST CREEK, KENTUCKY

The Institute is now looking for teachers for the coming year. It is hoped that the teacher matter may be all settled very soon.

Some of the qualifications that are sought in the teacher here is as follows: A real belief and confidence in the Bible as the source of our information as to the origin of life and its development, and not that organic evolution accounts for the same. A real belief that I am called of the Lord to the work, and not coming for the experience. At least a Normal education and training should be enough so that if necessary a certificate can be issued on your scholarship.

Then just now there is much need of a young man, with the above qualifications, or with sufficient qualifications to teach in the grades, about 4th to 8th, or somewhere there, and then with this added qualification, that he can handle the athletic activities of the school. This young man with the athletic qualities IS MUCH NEEDED.

Should this reach anyone who might be interested will you please write us at once? Will you join us in prayer that God will call out this young man for the work, and also just such other teachers as may be needed? There is also a real, yes, a very real need of a music teacher here, and also domestic science. Who will answer these calls for service? Also a woman to act as matron is needed, this a woman who can be a mother for the girls.

G. E. DRUSHAL.

WHO WILL HELP?

At Riverside Institute, Lost Creek, Kentucky, we have over 100 acres of land, which should be utilized more than it has been. It was thought at first that quite an income might be derived from the coal mines located on it, but the profitable mines seem to be farther up in the Mountains of Kentucky. There are not very many acres suitable for farming.

Rev. Early, our efficient Financial Secretary, is very anxious for financial assistance to get started in the poultry business. Your Kentucky Committee and the Executive members of the Missionary Board, have carefully considered the proposed project, and favor going ahead on a rather limited scale at first. We do feel that we should not use money from our General Fund for this purpose, and we believe there are brethren and sisters, as well as Bible classes and auxiliary organizations, that would be glad to make contributions. It will take about $200.00 more to build the first unit. We have already received $50.00 which has been used to build some fences for the runs. We do not want this call for help to interfere with any other contributions you intend to make to other worthy causes. Please help. WM. A. GEARHART, Secretary.

Family Sitzings at Church

Every pastor knows the grief caused by the dearth of children and young people at the church services, and practically every church member knows that such a situation exists, though many do not seem to deplore it. It is a universal experience to see the young life that the Sunday school has called together taking flight at the close of the study period, as totally oblivious or indifferent to the church worship hour as if it did not exist. Preachers are themselves not wholly blameless for the situation, for it must be confessed that, in the main, little thought is given to the children and young people in preparing sermons and worship programs. And if one were desiring to thoroughly analyze the situation and determine the various contributing causes, there are many things that would have to be considered. We wish, however, to give attention to only one phase at this time, and a phase that apparently gives little concern and yet one that contributes largely to the total result, that is, the absence of family sittings.

There was a time, and not very many years back, when families sat together in church much more frequently than is the case today. It is the rare exception to see the family sit together in church now. And as a rule, when the family does not sit together, it is not all there, or does not remain so long. The church family whose various members attend church like business folk go to a restaurant—each at his own time and place—encourage separateness of interests, mutual aloofness and deny themselves of many things that bind the family together, besides offering greater temptations to the children to absent themselves from the church. Children who are accustomed to sit with their parents in church are less dependent on the presence of other children for their continued attendance than are those who do not sit with their parents. The presence or absence of their young friends will not have a big influence on any of the children, but especially strong will it be upon those who are not fortified by the custom of the family attending and sitting together.

There were fourteen hundred ministers in New York who listened recently to a Supreme Court judge deliver an address on this subject, and they were stirred to activity with a hope of counteracting the weakness. They formulated the following statement which they read to their congregations:

We of the clergy representing all the Protestant denominations in Greater New York in public meeting assembled, conscious of our responsibility, mindful of our duty, grieved and alarmed by the absence of large numbers of children from public worship, unanimously affirm that the family should constitute in the church a worshipping unit, that the spiritual welfare of the children of our city requires that when of suitable age they participate with their elders in the public worship of God, and the life of the church is dependent upon the recruitment of its membership from the ranks of the young. We, therefore, in God's name call upon the fathers and mothers of our city to bring their children to the house of God to the end that children may grow in the knowledge and love of God and of right and the church in spirituality and power.

Here is a matter that we have been neglecting, to emphasize the responsibility that rests upon parents for bringing their children to church and attending as a family. Some think it will do little good, but we have not done our duty until we have urged it. The "Christian Advocate" says, "The plea that families attend church together and occupy a family pew may be in vain, but it is one that should be made without ceasing." People have gotten out of the way of such attendance at our churches, but we do not agree that there is anything essential to our modern life that would make it impossible, or inadvisable to attempt to revive it. And we shall find it a great aid to the solution of the problem of the childless church.

The Jerusalem Chamber

The "Jerusalem Chamber" is a room adjacent to Westminster Abbey, built in 1376-86, and so named from tapestries formerly hung there, representing scenes from the history of Jerusalem. It is a place of many noted historic events. It was in this room that that noted group of scholars that gave us the English Revised Version of the Bible did their work. It is continually the center of much religious interest, being the meeting place of the Upper House of the Province of Canterbury.

Recently it has become the center of a new interest and the seat of a religious movement "said to be sweeping over the English speaking world", so "The Evangelical-Messenger" tells us. "Stirred by the sense of a great world need, and feeling that a spiritual revival is the only thing that will help the world out of its distress and misery, a few people gathered in this historic room and bound themselves together in a quiet fellowship of prayer." The appeal which they have sent forth deserves the attention of Christian people everywhere, and it is peculiarly fitting that we should ponder it at this season when the spirit of devotion is running high, and when we are looking forward with much introspection and feeling of responsibility to the celebration of the Passion and Resurrection of our Lord. This is their appeal:

LET US AGREE TO CONCENTRATE OUR PRAYERS ON THE FOLLOWING OBJECTIVES:

- I. FOR A MISSIONARY SPIRIT. That the church may see whole world's need of Christ, and may be ready for any sacrifice in order to make him known to all mankind.
- II. FOR A SPIRIT OF PRAYER. That the church may learn to pray as Christ prayed and taught his disciples to pray; and that an ever-increasing number of interceders may be added to us until the whole church is awakened to prayer.
- III. FOR A SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE. That the church may be willing at whatever cost to follow and to bear witness to the way of Christ as she learns it.
- IV. FOR A SPIRIT OF UNITY. That the whole church may desire and experience a new unity in Christ.
- V. FOR COURAGEOUS WITNESS IN MORAL QUESTIONS. That the witness of the church in the moral questions of our day may truly reflect the mind of God and may be known and felt throughout the world.
- VI. FOR A SPIRIT OF SERVICE. That a great number of men and women may offer themselves unreservedly to do Christ's work at home and abroad in our generation.
- VII. FOR THE COMPLETION OF OUR OWN CONVERSION. For the removal of all hindrances in our own lives in the manifestation of God's redeeming love and power.

This remarkable statement and the even more remarkable spirit of prayer and God-dependence grew out of the effort of a few sincere souls to face up to the world situation and to "Honestly measure the church's obligation in the light of that situation", says Bishop Donaldson of Salisbury, England, and the consequent "sense of helplessness and failure which that endeavor laid upon our souls." And as we turn our thoughts toward another "Jerusalem Chamber", that "Upper Room" in which our Lord sought to lead the hearts of his disciples to share his compassion for the world and to accept his commission to them for its evangelization, and then contemplate how slowly even yet we are to move and how ineffective we are in our efforts, we are wearied by our helplessness and saddened by our failure. At such a time we are driven to our knees as never before in humility and confession and with mighty intercession. We have the "balm of the world's wounds", but we have been slow to apply it; we have the life-giving message, but we have been tardy in communicating it. It is not that we have been wholly indifferent and idle. We may have done much and have been highly concerned. "But, as Bishop Donaldson expresses it, "the output still fails altogether short of the need; relatively the tree is barren, and nothing can bring adequate fruits but the word of power from on high. We are weary of campaigns and forward movements; nothing will avail us but a revival of the spiritual life." Though we seem impotent as we face the bigness of our task, yet the Lord Jesus stands by and says, "My strength is sufficient for thee"; though we so soon come to the limit of our outreach, yet the arm of the Almighty is not shortened. All this is available to us, if we but seek it. Let us betake ourselves to our "Jerusalem Chamber" and there realize anew the joy and revitalizing power of divine fellowship and the dynamics of intercession.

South China Movement Not Anti-Christian

It is likely that the Chinese Nationalist movement which heads up in Canton is widely misunderstood in America, due to the prejudiced attitude of the daily press, which naturally takes its cue from the powerful interests which under the protection of various foreign governments have secured valuable concessions and brought about irritating restrictions of Chinese sovereignty. It is good to hear a voice that speaks from the Christian viewpoint and has the highest interests of the Chinese themselves at heart. Mr. Fletcher S. Brockman, associate general secretary of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A., has been a leader in Association work for many years in China. He recognizes that the situation is serious and that there is much danger of confiscation of property in certain quarters by the radical and lawless element, but insists that the government has high and sincere purpose and is rapidly gaining control over the radical element. He counsels patience, saying that "The American public should not be discouraged if in a time like this, when such great forces have been let loose and there are so many inflammable factors in the situation, some things should happen that are in themselves very regrettable.

But he says: "It is a mistake to identify the Canton government with the anti-Christian movement. Some of the leaders in the government are very earnest Christian people. This includes Mr. Shu Chien, Minister of Justice; Mr. Sun Fo, son of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, a graduate of the University of California and Minister of Communications; Mr. T. V. Soong, Finance Minister and a brother-in-law of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, and Mrs. Sun Yat Sen, who is a graduate of a Methodist College in Georgia.

"These hold high positions in the new government, and we may be sure that as affairs get more and more settled and the moderate element in the Nationalist Movement gains greater and greater hold, the difficulties of Christian institutions will be minimized.

"In the same way this ought not in any way to be thought of as an anti-foreign movement such as was true of the Boxer War. The Boxer movement consisted of a comparatively small group of very ignorant patriots. This is truly a revolution of the people and its main motive is freeing China from her impossible international restrictions. It is a revolution against the handicaps put upon China by foreign countries, not against foreigners as such."

Faith that does not issue in obedience lacks the element of genuineness.

Prof. M. P. Puterbaugh, treasurer of the National Sunday School Association, gives his third installment of White Gifts reports, and it speaks for itself of the splendid support which the Association has received. It is evidence of the wide appreciation of the service it is rendering.

Prof. J. A. Garber, General Secretary of the National Sunday School Association, comes to Evangelist readers with more of his interesting news items. It seems that schools are beginning to show commendable cooperation by endeavoring to measure up to the standard of efficiency.

Brother I. D. Bowman tells of his work in Delaware, where he makes frequent preaching excursions, preaching in homes and school houses. Five have been baptized and two more are awaiting the rite.

We are glad to note that on February 18th, an aged couple in the Roann, Indiana, congregation celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. It was Brother and Sister John Lowman, the husband being 83 years of age and the wife 78. We are pleased to publish a record of the event in the news department.

It may be possible by the grace of God for church members to dance and play cards and be regular attendants at the movie, without losing their souls, but they cannot do these things without losing their power and effectiveness as servants of Christ. Worldliness and spiritual vitality and influence do not go together.

Brother A. D. Cashman, who recently closed his work at Fairhaven church near West Salem, Ohio, writes his final message concerning this church. Four were added to the church roll and the membership maintained a splendid spirit of interest and loyalty. These good people showed their fine concern for the pastor's welfare and appreciation of his services by frequent donations. Brother Cashman is now quite well established in the pastorate at Dallas Center, Iowa.

From the correspondent of the First church of Philadelphia we learn that the church is sharing the grief of their pastor and his wife, Brother and Sister R. Paul Miller, over the death of their little girl, Marjory Anne, at the age of five years. She was stricken with diphtheria and passed away in a few days. Services were held in the chapel on the Municipal Hospital grounds on March 12th, and conducted by Mr. Stewart of the Philadelphia School of the Bible. We bespeak the sympathy of the Evangelist family in behalf of the sorrowing parents and family.

Brother S. C. Henderson, who assisted the Mansfield, Ohio, church and pastor in an evangelistic campaign, expresses great faith in the future of this now promising mission church. It is good news, especially for the Ohio churches, whose contributions have for many years been going to the support of this work. Under the leadership of Brother Barnard, this church has lifted up its head out of the mire of despondency and seeming hopelessness to that of hope and assurance. Mansfield has some good people and they are calling more unto themselves. Brother Barnard states at out of twenty-four who responded to the invitation, twenty-two will unite with the church. This is indeed a great victory.

We have noticed that some of our pastors are making use of mimeographs in putting out weekly letters and church calendars. Brother R. D. Barnard of Mansfield, Ohio, mimeographs a letter which he sends through the mails to all his parishioners each week, giving news items, announcements and setting forth congregational aims and tasks. Brother S. M. Whetstone of Nappanee, Indiana, puts out a weekly calendar in the form of a folder, the front and back pages of which are printed and the inside pages given over to mimeographed announcements for the week, which is evidently intended to make unnecessary the public oral announcements, which are sometimes so lengthy that they become a real detraction to the services.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

All friends of the college will rejoice to learn of the "breaking of ground" for the new gymnasium, which President Jacobs reports in his news items this week. It is certain to prove to be a very attractive and much used portion of Ashland College's equipment when school gets in session next fall.

The Morals of Our Young People

By Prof. L. W. Barber, Teacher in South Bend, Indiana High School

It is an age-old question which has been pondered upon again and again, and springs out anew when the busy world fails of a subject for discussion.

We are now in an age when our attention is again called to this aged subject.

To many minds the morals of youth become as perplexing as any problem in science and to those of us who know youth as it is, have formed various opinions about the truth of the matter.

First: Is the present condition of morals among our young people worse than in previous generations? Humanity worried about this question back in the time of Babylon as excavations in the past have revealed. I could only answer no to this question. Do you remember when we were boys and girls in our teens? Do you remember your conduct and my conduct? In the history of our public schools more than any place else can we see this change. Having been a teacher for nearly nineteen years, I remember the bad boy or the bad girl of yesterday. How oft was the teacher, especially the more unfortunate in physical development, driven to despair by an unruly disciple, who caused the whole school to tremble at his conduct, who was truant from his or her classes to go skating, who purposely threw stones through the school windows, or set the woodshed, on fire, or locked the teacher out of school for long periods of time in order to cut the school day short. How many times have we witnessed the wielding of the hickory paddle, or settled a fight, or become a party to almost unthinkable deviltry led by the bully who cared not for society nor the happiness of others. I think of seeing a dozen large boys crawling through a hole in the stone wall only to remain under the school house for a whole half day while school went on. I think of the time of Nero when men were burned at the stake, or when men were thrown into prison for mere contractions of a debt because of the lack of Christian influences. These things I think I can say never happen now.

On Sunday evenings, how many times did we see a horse race, a gallop and then a wrecked buggy, and the girls of the community looked on with the same attitude which they have now. In our day we went just as fast as we could with what we had to go with, and if in comparison, the young people of today would go as near the limit with their means at hand as we did when we were young and gay, then our generation might complain. It is not my purpose to minimize the faults of the present generation because it is true, that because they have at their command more dangerous means, they must exercise more precaution lest they fall below the margin of the past generation.

We as adults are living at a speedier rate now than when we were young. Modern society with all its frills and gayeties is a great temptation even to adult life.

As a nation we are making haste to equip our young people with an almost entirely new form of education. The old type no longer prepares the young to meet the new demands. The process of development must continue. New conditions, both social and industrial, are continually rising and must be met with a new kind of preparation. Are the morals of our young people getting worse? I do not think so. A new type of moral behavior may be arising but it is only human. Throughout the ages there has been a cure for every ill. The new type of morals can certainly not be looked upon as alarming. If there is anything to be alarmed about it is probably the slowness with which the adult mind is responding to the needs of the new conditions.

We must admit that there has been a general breakdown in parental authority, but that is not due to the condition of childhood. We must recognize that the industrial conditions have had something to do with this. Never before have we had so many mothers who have entrusted the care of their children to others in order to help out in the financial problem of the home.

We have come to the point in our living where the poor and rich must be dressed alike, housed alike and fed alike, and this burden caused by the demand of society, placed upon the male parent alone cannot be endured. The mother naturally rushes to his aid.

Mothers, because of their desire for social standing, have been known to place their children in the down-town picture shows for the afternoon while she attended to some social engagement. The moral breakdown has not so much come from the acts of the child as from the influence of the parent.

The home, the church and the school are the moulding factors of our young. As the limb is bent so the twig inclines.

The church is not doing all in her power to aid the child. As an institution the church has failed to call "a spade a spade." Our big problem as a church is, how can we, not force, not drag, but influence and lend our children into the church. It is quite certain that this, as all other things are begun, must begin as an educational process. The lessons of the scriptures must be taught before the age of seven and as we do in other forms of education, continue the process throughout the

O Jesus, Prince of Life and Truth

O Jesus, Prince of life and truth,
Beneath thy banner bright,
We dedicate our strength and youth
To battle for the right;
We give our lives with glad intent
To serve the world and thee,
To die, to suffer, and be spent
To set our brothers free.

In serried ranks, with fearless tread,
O Captain of us all,
Thy glory on our banners shed,
We answer to thy call;
And where the fiercest battles press
Against the hosts of sin,
To rescue those in dire distress
We gladly enter in.

O Jesus, once a Nazareth boy,
And tempted like as we,
All inward foes help us destroy
And spotless all to be.
We trust thee for the grace to win
The high victorious goal,
Where purity shall conquer sin
In Christian self-control.

—Anonymous.

elementary and high school grades. To my mind some form of compulsory religious education must be established, in which the child learns that the plan of living which was instituted in Holy Writ is essential to his social, industrial, and religious conduct.

As a human race we are trying to meet the demands made upon us, by society, industry and religion. What is the religious world demanding of us?

I am not inclined to condemn the morals of our young until we ourselves have set a better example at home, at school and at church. We think from the fundamentals of Christian living and Christian morals. The community has a right to demand that its leaders of its young be qualified in the great principles of Christianity which is so necessary to abundant living. Childhood must be molded and can only be so in proportion to the amount of effort we expend on it.

Is the church losing its grip on the young people? I think this fact is quite evident. It is a very rare occasion which finds the church filled with young people as it was, especially in our country churches, in and preceding the years 1908. This fact is to be lamented, of course, but we must also consider that the average church is not filled with adults as it used to be. There are several reasons for it, one of course being the ease with which we travel. The country church has almost become a relic, because it has not supplied the community with the modern comforts of the city churches. But we say, "Neither do our city churches draw the young people," and I answer again that it is because the church is not progressing in its line of education at the same rate as that of other institutions. Who is educating our youth? Is it the church, or is it the "movie?"

Too long we have set Christianity off by itself as a thing to be admired instead of using it as a guide for everyday use, in industry, in school, in politics, and in society.

Very few of our young people have any knowledge of the Bible to any great extent and how often do we hear them talk of the work of the Great Master? It is a rule of humanity that we think and act in terms of our education. It is not infrequent to hear them talk of the life or death of a "movie star." Therefore it is my firm belief that the attitude of the young toward the church, which can be the only source of moral uplift, must be changed through a system of education based upon the great principles of Christianity as set forth in the great doctrines of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Conditions in South America

The following is a translation of a part of an article that recently appeared in El Vanguardia, the socialist daily of Buenos Aires. It is worth reading because it gives the impressions of an educated Argentinian who has traveled in both North and South America and writes with more than ordinary fairness and intelligence.—C. F. Yoder.

Latin-Americanism

The protest in Argentina against the Yankee intervention in Nicaragua are made in the name of Latin-Americanism, putting one civilization and race against another.

This is rather surprising when we consider that the protests come from a country in which the railways, street cars, packing houses, great stores and principal industries belong to foreign companies whose directors decide in Europe the questions of exploitation and conflicts with workmen, and who collect their dividends without paying here the taxes to which they are subject in their own country.

What difference does it make to the workman whether his exploiter is European or American? Yet the defenders of Latin-Americanism seem to think that North American capitalists are the only ones to be feared. Such a spirit causes us to overlook in a great nation that which should be an inspiration to us, and leads us to unjust judgments, especially harmful to us Central and South Americans who have so little reason to be proud.

As I write these lines I remember how intense were the impressions I received in visiting the countries of South America and then the United States. Here I was hurt at every turn by the spectacles of misery and stupidity. In Valparaiso I saw whole districts with hovels built of rusty tin from kerosene cans and multitudes of workmen with only overalls and shirt and hat, ragged and dirty and slaves to alcohol and tobacco.

I saw schools with all the windows broken and the classrooms in terrible condition.

I found hospitals which shocked me as a physician, yet had the walls covered with images and candles.

In Lima and Callao there are a few modern buildings, but the streets are narrow and crooked, badly paved and dirty.

A leaden mantle seems to hang over Latin-America. The Catholic church, translated in the ignorance and misery of the people, has retarded the development of the country without impeding the exploitation of the poor by the rich.

And from one end of Latin-America to the other alcohol and cocaine are plunging the people down to ruin without restraint.

But on the other hand, my first contact with North America gave the impression of capacity, of energy and of work. There is no comparison between that great nation and any of South America. The difference is too great.

We may well imitate her fight against liquor and ignorance and prostitution and in favor of children and libraries and benevolent institutions. Instead of criticizing our neighbors we should attack our own vices. Why should we spend our time shouting about Yankee faults when the only way to prevent their domination is to make ourselves as capable as they?

What we need is less politics and more education, less alcohol and drugs and more food.

It is a great mistake to turn aside to a false issue and lose sight of the real danger which threatens us.

ALICIA MOREAU DE JUSTO.

To which I would add that the way to what South America needs is not an atheistic party but the conversion of the people to the true Gospel. Romanism, imperialism, anarchism and all other evils must yield to Christ.—C. F. Y.

So long as Christ's theology and the system of Christian ethics derived from it remain central in men's religious outlook, we need not fear the outcome of the present era of religious change.—Bishop of Birmingham.

HYMN OF TRUST

"O Love Divine, that stooped to share
Our sharpest pang, our bitterest tear,
On thee we cast each earth-born care,
We smile at pain while thou art near!

"Though long the weary way we tread,
And sorrow crown each lingering year,
No path we shun, no darkness dread,
Our hearts still whispering, 'Thou art near!

"When drooping pleasure turns to grief,
And trembling faith is changed to fear,
The murmuring wind, the quivering leaf,
Shall softly tell us, Thou art near!

"On thee we fling our burdening woe,
O Love Divine, forever dear,
Content to suffer while we know,
Living and dying, Thou art near!"

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

TRUST IN GOD

"Shadows are faithless, and the rocks are false;
No trust in brass, no trust in marble walls;
Poor cots are e'en as safe as princes' halls.

"Great God! there is no safety here below;
Thou art my fortress, thou that seemest
my foe;
'Tis thou, that strik'st the stroke, must guard the blow.

"Thou art my God, by thee I fall or stand;
Thy grace hath given me courage to withstand
All tortures, but my conscience and thy hand

"I know thy justice is thyself; I know,
Just God, thy very self is mercy too;
If not to thee, where, whither shall I

TRUST SONG

"For thy name's sake lead and guide me.—Psalm 31:3.

"Just as God leads me I would go;
I would not ask to choose my way;
Content with what he will bestow,
Assured he will not let me stray;
So, as he leads, my path I make,
And step by step I gladly take,
A child in him confiding.

"Just as God leads, I am content;
I rest me calmly in his hands;
That which he hath decreed and sent,
That which his will for me commands.
I would that he should all fulfill
That I should do his gracious will
In living or in dying.

"Just as God leads, I all resign;
I trust me to my Father's will;
When reason's rays deceptive shine,
His counsel would I yet fulfill;
That which his love ordained as right
Before he brought me to the light,
My all to him resigning.

"Just as God leads me, I abide
In faith, in hope, in suffering, true
His strength is ever by my side—
Can aught my hold on him undo?
So patiently I wait, and know
That he who doth my life bestow
In kindness all is sending.

"Just as he leads, I onward go,
Oft amid thorns and briers keen;
God does not yet his guidance show,
But in the end it shall be seen
How, by a loving Father's will,
Faithful and true he leads me still,
A child in him confiding."

—In His Steps.

Trust in the Lord with all thine heart.

—Proverbs 3:5

GOD IS GUIDE

"God is guide, though clouds are black;
God is guide when skies are clear.
God is guide, though ways turn back;
God is guide, when goals are near.

"Hopes accomplished, God is guide;
Hopes abandoned, still he leads.
Trust in him when faith is tried;
Trust in him when all succeeds.

"As we follow, on he goes;
We retreat, He falters not.
Guides he where cool water flows;
Guides he when the sun is hot.

"Leaders guide both night and day;
Guides must guide through day and night.

Father guide us all the way,
Be it dark or be it light!"

—Amos R. Wells.

TRUST FOR TODAY

"Whate'er tomorrow holds in store
Is not for me to understand;
Today I have my Lord with me,
He holds tomorrow in his hand,
And well he knows what he has planned.

"What matters it how dark the day,
How chill the winds of winter blow?
Sufficient is the thought to me,
My Jesus sees and wills it so,
And Love marks all the way I go.

"He knows the path that I should take,
E'en when to me the way is dim;
And he will not lead me astray
When I am trusting all to him,
Who sees beyond my vision's rim.

"He knows the burden best for me,
Knows just how much my heart can bear

He formed my shoulders for their load,
And placed their needful burden there
And teaches me the strength of prayer."

—C. W. Waggoner.

TRUST IN GOD

"I have learned, as days have passed me,
Fretting never lifts the load;
And that worry, much or little,
Never smooths an irksome road;
For you know that somehow, always,
Doors are opened, ways are made;
When we work and live in patience
Under all the cross that's laid.

"He who waters meadow-lilies
With the soft dew from the sky,
He who feeds the fluttering sparrows,
When in need for food they cry,
Never fails to help his children
In all things, both great and small;
For his ear is ever open
To our faintest far-off call."—Anon.

HE LEADS ME

"He leads me where the fields are green,
And underneath the shadowed trees;
He leads me where still waters flow,
And down along the seas.

"He leads me through the crowded ways
Of city streets and factories.
He leads me where the stars are lit
To crown some far-off Calvaries.

"He leads me in the morning's glow,
He leads me through the noon-time
sun
And when the evening shadows fall,
He leads me when the day is done.

"When storms are charging down the sky,
And clouds in midnight blackness
swing,
He still my shepherd is and still Shall lead me 'till the robins sing.

"Beside the dunes, along the hill,
Through meadows green where winds are still;
By sunlit pathways to the sea,
The shepherd still is leading me.

"He did not cease to lead his sheep
When David smote his lyre of old,
And sang the shepherd's song
Of green fields and of gold."

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Family Altar

By Harold D. Fry

(In recognition of the worthy goal of the W. M. S.)

TEXT: "From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."—2 Timothy 2:15.

There are many problems of the day insolvable by you and me. In the face of an international situation in which we may not pass lightly the evident influence of the Roman church upon our Government, the great thinkers of the age when asked their opinion as to the probable state of the nation we love twenty years hence, consider the blighting moral and political conditions, and answer with downcast heads, "We do not know." And some have ventured to doubt the very existence of the United States as a nation twenty-five years hence, unless civic righteousness and religious purity come in sudden and complete reformation. We live in troublous days, with perilous times promised. Yet behind most evils there is a reason, and also a remedy, which, if sufficiently desired, might yet succeed in restraining the evil one for a season.

Greatest perhaps to the religious man and woman is that woe of the decadent home life of America. Why are our criminals so young? Why are there more unhappy marriages than congenial ones? What is the reason for the increasing corruption in business, government, recreation, and in the church? Whence the lack of ability to reach men's souls? Just why has the church become so worldly and selfish? It is not strange that in answer to these heart-rending questions, criminologists, spiritual leaders, and even scientists, all have the same reply. "It is the condition of the home."

Thus the present social and spiritual decadence is traced to the home. What is wrong with our modern homes? It is said that the temptations of our youth are too strong for the moral and spiritual strength so necessary and, alas, so lacking in the home life of America. That is it. Where are the evil-combatting influences of Father's Bible, and Mother's prayer—where is the Family Altar? Gone! and at great loss. If today we shall realize the loss of that family worship in which God is brought close, the family welded together in love and service for Christ, then let us hasten to repair the broken altars in our own homes. Our efforts will be well spent if we may thus persuade you to build such a stronghold.

I. The Family had the First Altar.

Standing in some great grove or canyon, where the trees, having grown toward heaven, inspire birds to song, and man to worship, we hear through the door of memory the poet's words, "The groves were God's first temples." Nature may have provided the first temple, not made by hands, but in that place of worship the first altar was a family affair. God has ever sought to reach man through the family. He loves the home of his creature; that is why we should keep the property neat, the spirit Christ-like, and the members pure. The whole story of redemption as we trace it through Adam, Seth, Noah, Abraham, and finally Christ, is the record of God revealing, or endeavoring to instruct men of the way of salvation through four human families, and at last seeking in his own Son a heavenly family to continue its worship in the land of the blest.

Into the first home worship we look to find Abel accepted as righteous, whereas his brother having the same privileges, and the same instruction was not worthy. The inference is natural and obvious from the very fact that it was judged unnecessary to record it in Moses' account, that God had revealed to every member of that first family, probably through Adam, the father's instruction, his will as to their worship. This fact also is plainly seen in the devotions and service of the people of that antediluvian day, and after the flood, that the man was the head of the household. He was the priest that gathered his family before God, who wherever he went constructed an altar for himself and his family. It is a sad statement of truth today, that instead of the fathers bringing their households to Christ and teaching them God's will for them, in too many of our homes the men are not masculine enough to worship him themselves, and hence cannot be as in that primitive day, the priest at the family altar. The children of that day needed the family altar; they do today, but tragic—the family altar needs the father and the father needs it.

So the early worship was in the family and by family and tribe. Look at the life of Abraham and God's estimate of the men. In the plains on that hot day when Abraham stood in his Bedouin tent to welcome three heavenly visitors in human garb, God had something to say about his friend Abram being a father. You remember it was when two of those visitors left for Sodom and Gomorrah in judgment, that the Lord—I like the name, Jehovah, Jesus—expressed his approval of Abraham knowing what he was about to do. He said, "Shall I hide from Abraham the thing that I do? I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord." Oh, powerful truth, that God knew Abraham, and convincing fact, that that man brought his children to God around his family altar! Would that our fathers had, and that we would command our children and our households so that they would keep the way of the Lord.

When Sinai shook and from out the lightning and fire God gave his precepts to the Israelites, this word was a warning, "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." My friends, it was the observance of that command on the part of parents which sent out from the home into world tasks the great heroes of faith. The children were taught worship and salvation in the home, where such instruction should be.

The Psalmist, sweet singer, exemplary father, understood. He said, "Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord." That is, the Lord gives them; they are his. Let us bring them to him by godly lives, earnest prayer and Biblical education. For there is no happier fatherhood expressed than when King David invites his sons, "Come, ye children, hearken unto me, I will teach you the fear of the Lord."

II. What is the Family Altar?

This is the question in our minds. What do we mean by Family Altar? Is it just any devotion at home? What is expected of us fathers and mothers? The condition that makes glad any answer is that parents love their children enough to adopt any method, to make any sacrifice, that will help their boys and girls. So let's discuss an altar in the home.

In the first place it includes all the family circle. Every member of the home should arrange to be there, and should take part. For common convenience some choose their time for worship immediately after breakfast. Who dares to admit without great shame that he or she cannot get up that soon? We should yearn for that time together with the Lord, if we do not care for breakfast. Perhaps in the evening, or preferably both morning and evening, may be your decision for the suitable time.

Since this is a season for devotion, it should include both prayer and the reading of God's word. Let your requests be made known with thanksgiving, and with gratitude for God's blessings to all the family. Pray for each member, for each other, for this problem, and that need, for the work of the church and the salvation of men in the neighborhood and on the foreign shores. But do not neglect that season which should precede prayer, when through either one reading with the others following, or else reading verse or chapter about, God can speak to your soul. "Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path." "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee."

Have you never prayed aloud? Is it hard? Perhaps you find it difficult to talk to God in the presence of your own family. Especially, if your family is an unbelieving one—the pastor knows. But why should your voice in prayer be any more strange to your family than your voice at the table? You are bowed in the presence of God, and whatever human weaknesses there might be, can be removed or overcome by his strength. Your children will pray aloud if you will—they look to you as a pattern.

The family altar is definite and instructive. The children need those things that are concrete and real in the Christian life, otherwise the youth cannot point out any one thing on which he will base his opinions and beliefs which every normal youth wants to know. Thousands of men and women have pointed to the family altar in their parents' home as the place where God first spoke to them. There in that fellowship hour the child's soul learns to lean on God; there he sees his father and mother worshiping, and depending upon, and grateful to the same Lord; there in childhood when lasting impressions are formed, Christ, who blesses little children, speaks not but three times, but continuously throughout that youth's life.

III. Domestic Life is Incomplete without it.

A bold statement you say? Not so. Remember the claim, observe and prove it for yourself. Real home life will never find its greatest happiness without the family altar. Why? Well, first it unites. The family altar unites, binds the family together. Into the homes of Samuel's parentage, we look to find such spirituality and love. There must have been true love crowned with spiritual devotion in the home of Zachariah and Elizabeth; while there was a reason for that spiritual worth that made the home of Joseph and Mary the home of the Holy One of God. There are many such scenes, where the love of God makes and preserves true love of husband and wife for each other, but we cannot speak of all of them. Yes, husband and wife would be happier, with kinder, more patient spirits. Oh, there is no true love unless God sanctifies it. Take your problems to God every day; begin the day with him, and there will be fewer wornout and nervous wives and mothers, and more exemplary fathers. Keep in mind, husbands and wives and young people, that the family altar unites, it binds home to Christ, and to each other.

It also saves. In that familiar parable of the prodigal son, the father appears as anxious to save his boy. The business of every father is to save her daughter. Be faithful to him or to her, a confidant, and the way in which to begin such ideal fatherhood or motherhood, is to conduct an intelligent, faithful, and loving family worship together. Hear me, the story of the prodigal has little place in the church when we speak of saving our young people. Christ wants us to prevent them becoming prodigal. His command to his own is, "Bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." This is the principle of business methods, of medical effort; make it the spiritual realm, prevention rather than cure. If v

OUTLINE OF "THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER"

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience.)

SUNDAY—Sense Impressions of the Divine are Impossible, 1 Cor. 2:11-16; Mt. 16:17. "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned." Though this natural body cannot sense the presence of Christ, yet we may thank God that the heart has its own eyes and ears.

Prayer—Thanks for the day and its opportunities. Pray for spiritual understanding; for church officers.

MONDAY—Our Inner Impulses are Significant, Psalm 42; 1 John 5:10; Heb. 11:1. "He that believeth on the Son, hath the witness in himself." As spiritual infants we have a babel of feelings, emotions, impulses, but these have meanings. God is knocking and we are yearning to understand.

Prayer—For inner sense of God; for freedom from anxiety; for the heavy laden, and the intemperate.

TUESDAY—Our Awareness of God is to be Trusted, Mt. 5:1-12; 11:25; Jn. 8:12. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Quickly the babe becomes sure of the presence of people, though it may find it difficult to distinguish between them.—So the pure of heart, the sincere soul, the childlike of mind, are aware of God.

Prayer—Thanks for fellowship of believers. Pray for pure hearts; for strangers; for the impure.

WEDNESDAY—We Should Cultivate Spiritual Sensitiveness, 1 Cor. 12:1-13; 1 Cor. 14:1; Ps. 119:18; Eze. 26:36; Jn. 8:32. "Follow after love; yet desire earnestly spiritual gifts." "Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." It is possible for the soul to stand still, or to comply with the laws of the spiritual world and grow.

Prayer—For sensitive spirits; for success of worthy undertakings; for prisoners and the profane.

THURSDAY—Imperfect Spiritual Ideas are but Natural, 2 Cor. 5:1-10; Rom. 8:24; Lk. 24:16; Jn. 20:29. "For we walk by faith, not by sight." We are learning to talk spiritually, slowly, to be sure, but as we keep on talking we grow in the power to converse.

Prayer—For strength for our cares; for discernment between good and evil; for the prejudiced.

FRIDAY—We Shall Perfect Our Spiritual Faculties in the Future, 1 Cor. 13; Ps. 17:15; Rev. 22:4. We may expect spiritual growth in the next world and there will be a spiritual language. We are now in the Beginners' class; let the foundations be well laid.

Prayer—Thanks for the open Bible. Pray for patience; for doctors, nurses, hospitals.

SATURDAY—We Should Live by the Light We Have, Mt. 25:14-30; Jn. 13:17; Jas. 1:23. "If ye know these things, blessed are ye if ye do them." To live by the light we have is to obey the spiritual voice.

Prayer—For power to weigh things spiritually; for personal safety; for seamen; for the wayward.

spent one-half the time and money and effort instructing and leading our children and youth as we do in trying to collect the derelicts and adult unbelievers in spasmodic revival services, we would not so badly need the latter.

Even Rahab saved her family, her household, by the scarlet thread in the window. If our home testifies to visitor and to neighbor the source of our strength and happiness, our children will be saved. The family and the church can work together better if the home truly belongs to Christ. Those friends of yours are waiting for your witness, your winning; have them join you in worship; bring them to church; hallow the Sabbath day; and you and your children will then find real life in worship and service. You, young people, still in school, or perhaps contemplating marriage, you young married couples, take heed to the word of God, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build."

IV. How may we Conduct the Family Altar?

Choose a regular time, a season that will not be hurried lest the spirit suffer; and begin immediately, have your thanksgiving at meals and your silent individual prayer on retiring, if you wish, but also have at least one time when God's word and your family's hearts are alone with him. Keep the home near heaven. Let it face toward the Father's house. Not only let the day begin and end with God, with mercies acknowledged and forgiveness sought, but let it be seen and felt that God is your chief joy, his will in all you do the absolute and sufficient reason.

As you eat your dinner today, talk the matter over, and every family decide just when that season is to be, and make a start tomorrow. When you have started your worship in your household, tell the pastor if you find it a blessing. And any help he can give you in beginning such a valuable habit is gladly offered. For, may it be said of your children, in years to come, as of Timothy, "From a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation."

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Jesus the Light of the World

By Letha Grove

OUR SCRIPTURE

There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light that all men through him might believe. He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light. That was the true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not. He came unto his own, and his own received him not (John 1:6-11).

Then spake Jesus unto them saying, I am the Light of the world, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the Light of life (John 8:12).

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation, that Light is come into the world and men loved darkness rather than Light, because their deeds were evil. For everyone that doeth evil hateth the Light neither cometh to the Light, lest his deeds should be re-proved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the Light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God (John 3:16-22).

Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life (John 6:66-69).

OUR MEDITATION

John the Baptist was the bearer of the glad tidings of the coming of Christ. His was a great mission to prepare the people for the coming of the Lord. John as the prophet of the Highest gave knowledge of salvation unto the people, salvation by the remission of their sins. The people were in great need of a leader and had watched faithfully for the coming of the Christ as the prophets had foretold. God, understanding the weakness of man, knew that the people looked for a King to come who would sit on a throne in all his pomp and glory and rule his people; but they were soon to learn that, this was not God's way. John was sent to teach the people of the greatness of the coming Savior, who was coming in his humble way to save his people from their sins. Where there are unbelievers, pride, doubt, fear, crime, wickedness, and unhappiness, there is darkness. People are afraid their sins will find them out and they want darkness to hide them. Christ came as a Light to a world dark in sin. Christ proved himself the Light of the world when he healed the sick, caused the blind to see, raised the dead, walked upon the waters and made the winds and the waves to cease and by making light where there was darkness, having all power from God the Father. Those only who repented of their sins and believed were able to see the Light. Those who confessed the Christ saw the light of a clear conscience and once free from the bonds of sin were able to feel the great joy of salvation. There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

As Jesus was, and so he is today, a beckoning Light to a world dark in sin. Many today who are lovers of pleasure and lovers of money go on and on in their mad rush through life and from the cradle to the grave are trying to snatch that which always seems just beyond them, that which they feel will give them satisfaction and peace of mind. They seem not to feel the emptiness of their lives as the chase after the will-o-the-wisps of this world, and seem not to realize, until they are near the bitter end, that they have missed all that makes life worth living. For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?

It seems almost unbelievable that in our land of so many churches there are crowds of people, many within the sound of the church bell, who continue to go on in sin, never knowing the joy of living a Christian life, and never experiencing the peace and rest of going to the Sanctuary of the Lord for worship. Although great things are being done by the churches, it seems sometimes that we are overlooking some of the great opportunities almost at our door and come far short of doing all that Christ would have us do as workers for him.

"God so loved the world, the wicked world, that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Jesus Christ so loved the world that he gave his own life on the cruel cross as a ransom for our sins. How much love have we for sinners? Are we worthy of being

LESSON LIGHTS

Introduction—On the night succeeding the feeding of the 5,000 occurred the wonderful miracle of Jesus walking on the sea, related by three of the Evangelists, Mt. 14: 22-25; Mk. 6:47-51; John 6:19-21. Matthew's account is the fullest, and he alone relates the interview between Christ and Peter on the waves. The discourse of Jesus related in full by John 6:26-59, was spoken the next morning in the synagogue at Capernaum.

"God's help is always sure,
His methods seldom guessed;
Delay will make our pleasure pure,
Surprise will give it zest.
His wisdom is sublime,
His heart profoundly kind.
God never is before his time,
And never is behind."

Storms on the Sea of Galilee. Dr. W. M. Thompson says that on a certain occasion, in his experience, "The sun had scarcely set when the wind began to rush down toward the lake; and it continued all night long with constantly increasing violence, so that when we reached the shore next morning, the face of the lake was like a huge boiling caldron. The wind howled down every way from the northeast and east with such a fury that no efforts of rowers could have brought a boat to shore at any point along that coast."

For the Wind Was Contrary. From any point on the eastern shore the disciples would require to steer northward in order to reach Bethsaida. A contrary wind, therefore, would be one blowing from the north or northeast, and would drive them back far into the sea. The fact that in several hours they had made only about three miles (John 6:19) shows the power of these contrary winds, for several of the disciples were experienced seamen on this lake, well known for its sudden storms, and they could make their way if any one could. "It was while they were rowing back, against the wind, toward Bethsaida, where our Lord had promised to meet them, that he came out upon the waves for that purpose."

Contrary Winds in Our Experiences of Life. In every life there are contrary winds, opposing our progress, interfering with our hopes, fierce temptations urging us from our course of duty. Every mariner on the sea of life faces these contrary winds, even in childhood. Hard duties, heavy burdens, sickness and pain, trials to our strength, trials of our temper, disappointments, poverty, failures, and a hundred other storms.

The same is true of the church and Cause of Christ on earth. Recall through what dangers it has passed, what persecutions have almost wrecked it, what false professors have almost sunk it from within; what enemies of every kind have assailed it as with tornadoes and whirlwinds; how it has had to resist false doctrines and perverted truths, and wolves in sheep's clothing that would eat out its heart.

(1) "The foolish thing that a man can do is to quarrel with his lot: no grumbling can change it. ... If he will not take to his oars and do his best, he will only drift on the rocks."

(2) But if "we may not quarrel with the contrary wind, we can learn to value it. It is, after all, struggle and toil—taking to the oars—that tests the stuff we are made of. It is the contrary wind that makes manhood."—Arbp. Lang. And yet all these are meant to be a means of strength, of training, of education, of higher character. They mean sweeter harps, higher thrones, brighter crowns.

"Realize that the disciples' experience was not so very different from that of many a man today. People shy at many things are alarmed over apparitions that threaten, over the blackness of the darkness of the night that closes in around them, over the storm that keeps them from their chosen direction and their longed-for haven. But when their vision clears their fright disappears. The ghost that terrified them turns out to be the Christ that calms them.

Church School News

By J. A. Garber

It is encouraging to the officers of your National Sunday School Association to learn of the attention given to these notes. Frequent word is received from workers relative to some item of interest.

Warsaw Again

Brother F. E. Robins of Warsaw, Indiana, has the distinction of being the first superintendent to report the rating of his school on our Standard of Excellence, and that without solicitation. His school has already attained 90 points out of the possible 100. His school appears to be short in Point III, which has to do with Leadership Training.

Nappanee Cooperates

That leads us to remark about the possibility of having the school to qualify on the first part of this requirement through cooperation with a community training school. Nappanee, Indiana is represented in the conduct of such a school. Mrs. U. J. Shively, National President of our Woman's Missionary Society, is President of the school organization. Mrs. Cora Stuckman who was one of the first of our workers to complete the Three Year Course is teaching the course for teachers of intermediates.

Note and Report

Brethren church schools having representation in community schools may count this on Point III, 1. of the Standard in lieu of a training class in the church school. Please note this possibility and report the number of such students. We desire also a report of Brethren workers serving as deans, committeemen and teachers of such schools, whether the school be of the five day type or a more extended one. We have reasons to believe that our folks are giving a good account of themselves in this regard, and would like to know the details.

Leaflets

Recently we printed two leaflets that promise to be useful to our workers. The one entitled "Missions in the Church School" should be particularly helpful at this period of the year. A copy may be obtained from Missionary Superintendent N. V. Leatherman, South Bend, Indiana or from the writer. The other leaflet deals with "The Adult Division in the Church School," and was written by the new Adult Superintendent, Prof. A. B. Cober of Berlin, Pennsylvania. This leaflet is being distributed from the Ashland office.

Dedication of Homes

Some of our readers will recall the report of the strikingly impressive manner in which Prof. H. Augustine Smith dedicated his home to Christian fellowship and service about a year ago. The plan has appealed to many persons as being worthy of general use. Accordingly April 13th has been announced as the day for the dedication of homes by all the Christian people who will join in the effort. Prof. Smith has prepared usable hymns, scripture readings and prayers, which may be obtained from him by addressing The Boston School of Religious Education, Boston, Massachusetts.

A Wild Animal Show

For Social Committees

This social was held by a society in the state of Utah. Around the room pasteboard boxes were arranged, slits having been cut in front of them to represent bars of cages. In the cages, thus made, articles were placed to represent animals. A cough-drop stood for a horse (hoarse); a mirror, so placed that one might see one's face in it, stood for a monkey; some "wienies" stood for dogs (hot dogs); and so on.

The guests were given slips of paper and pencils, and were asked to write on the slips the names of the animals. A box of animal crackers was given to the person that guessed correctly the largest number of names.

It was then announced that some of the animals had escaped, and the guests were asked to search for them. The escaped animals were animal crackers hidden in the room.

A boathouse was erected in one corner of the room. It contained a bathtub, in which a small boat sailed back and forth. The Lady of the Lake operated this attraction.

Lemonade was sold from an old-fashioned well, and candy and pop-corn were sold by small boys in circus style. The gypsy fortune-telling booth was kept busy all the evening.

Education does not mean teaching people what they do not know. It means teaching them to behave as they do not behave. It is not teaching the youth the shapes of the letters and the tricks of numbers, and then leaving them to turn their arithmetic to roguery, and their literature to lust. It means, on the contrary, training them into perfect exercise and kingly continence of their bodies and souls. It is a painful, continual and difficult work to be done by kindness, by watching, by warning, by precept, and by praise, but above all—by example.—John Ruskin.

"I love you, mother," said little John, And forgetting his work his cap went on And off he went to the garden swing Leaving his mother the wood to bring.

"I love you, mother," said little Nell, "I love you more than tongue can tell." But she pouted and fretted full half the day Till all were glad when she went to play.

"I love you, mother," said little Nan, "Today, I will help you all I can." So glad am I that school doesn't keep." So she rocked the baby till he fell asleep.

Then tripping softly, she brought the broom And swept the floor and tidied the room, Busy and happy all day was she, Glad and cheerful as child can be.

"I love you mother," again they said, Three little children going to bed, And how do you think the mother guessed Which of them really loved her best."

I don't believe that that mother had much trouble guessng which of them loved her best, do you? That was easy to guess. Now I have a question I want you to answer. Which of them was spelling the truth with their lives? Do you know what that means? It means, which of them was living and acting the same way that they were talking. You know the answer to that question too. It's easy. It wasn't John, for he said that he loved his mother and then acted as though he loved himself much better than anyone else and went off and played. It wasn't Nell, for she too said that she loved her mother, and then was unkind to her mother and everyone else, showing that she didn't mean what she said. It was Nan who lived the truth, wasn't it? She meant what she said and she showed that she meant it by being loving as well as talking loving.

Now I wonder about this matter of being true. We want very much to be true, everyone of us, but I wonder if we are always true to the things we say. Next Sunday when we go to Sunday school and church and Christian Endeavor and say there, "I love you, Jesus," let's be very serious about it. Then let's follow the example of little Nan and live the truth. There are lots of things that we might do that would hurt Jesus oh so much. When we fuss with our sisters or brothers, it must make Jesus feel like saying, "That little girl said that she loved me but how am I to know that she meant it when she acts like that."

When some little boys says, "I can't be good and stay home when all the other boys are out playing. I just can't do it. Please let me go. I don't want to work today. Let someone else do my job." Then don't you think that Jesus must feel like saying, "That little boy said that he loved me, but he is being unhappy and making others unhappy. If he loved me he would act more loving to others too." So now is the time for all boys and girls to resolve in their very own hearts, "I am going to love Jesus and I am going to live true to that love."

called a Christian? For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the publicans the same? Christ does not ask us to love their sins, nor to join them in their pleasures, but if we obey our leader. Jesus Christ, when he said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," then we must first love the souls of sinners. To lead souls to Christ we must first humble ourselves, realizing that in ourselves alone, we have no power to know the Lord's will, nor to do it, but through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and through prayer all things are possible. Then we must manifest that patient, self-sacrificing and loving spirit of our Master, toward sinners if we would win them for him.

It is only as we do for others that we receive a blessing ourselves. "The path of the just is as a shining Light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." How dark indeed would be the hour of death without "Jesus the Light of the World."

OUR PRAYER

Heavenly Father, knowing that thou art the giver of all good things, we ask that thou mayest give us a better understanding of thy Word. We ask for a clearer vision of thy will. We thank thee for this Christ who is a light to our pathway. We thank thee for the blessings we receive when in thy service and for the joy of Christian fellowship. We pray that thou mayest help us in all we try to do, to see our mistakes and to mend our ways. We know that without thee, we are as sheep without a shepherd and can do nothing. We need thee every hour. At all times we pray for a closer walk with thee. We pray that thou mayest take our lives and use them in thy service as thou seest fit. We pray that thou wilt give us understanding minds, loving hearts, and willing hands to do thy will. Help us to make this prayer a part of our lives—"May the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, Oh, Lord, my strength and my Redeemer. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

Visiting Mission Stations in Argentina

From Buenos Aires I went to 25 de Mayo, where Miss Alice Wood, whom Brother Yoder baptized some years ago, has an independent mission. She believes and teaches much as we do except that she is—shall I say—tainted with Pentecostalism. I found her a very sweet-spirited, earnest Christian and have a very high regard for her in spite of my very decided reaction against what seems to me "emotionalism." Also I am more than ever convinced that a church needs a man at the head, at least in the Argentine.

I had expected to be in 25 de Mayo for a day or two, as the Lantzes were to come for me, by Ford, from Bragado, some 25 or 30 miles away. But it rained and then rained some more and so I awaited word from them and it took four days for their letter to reach me, as it went the 200 miles or so to Buenos Aires and then by another line the 200 miles back. So I left 25 de Mayo about four P. M., drove by auto-stage about three miles to the station of the Provincial Railroad, then a couple of hours by train, another stage ride of three or four miles from the station to the town of 9 de Julio where I had to lay over all night, reaching Bragado next day at noon, and all this to go 25 miles "across lots."

The Lantzes (Mennonites) have a rather new work in Bragado and a branch work in one of the little towns near. They go there by Ford in all kinds of weather and surely the Lord cares for his own, or I should not care to make that trip night after night. From there I went to Carlos Casares and it rained most of the time that I was there and the streets were flooded, so there was no service. Then on to Pehaujo, where I saw the closing exercises of the Kindergarten, which is a feature of the work there. They have a lovely church building with the basement equipped for school purposes. They also have a small orphanage. There are 6 workers in Pehaujo, which is, perhaps, the Mennonite headquarters, Mr. Hershey being Field Superintendent.

My next stop was Trenque Lauquen, where I spent several days with the Shanks, who with the Hersheys of Pehaujo, were the pioneer Mennonite missionaries to the Argentine. Then on to America for a day or so with the Rutts, who came down at the same time I did. There was real fellowship with all these Mennonite friends, for our differences are small, especially in this country where the dress question does not enter.

The Rutts have spent the time thus far in learning the language and were to begin actual work the first of the year, in this town which will then have the Gospel for the first time. After a protracted study of the time table I discovered that I should have to leave Sunday morning or not get away for several days, so away I went to Pico, where I was obliged to lay over until Monday evening. It was not a pleasant prospect, but I was fortunate enough to find a good hotel and in the P. M. at our Sunday school hour, I started out to find the Mission of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. The workers in charge are quite young, native trained, though he is Italian and she German. This mission is among the strongest of their missions. Here I was shown the finest sample of hospitality that it has ever been my lot to see. They were more than friendly and I surely think it would be difficult to find its equal any place I know in the United States. So the trip that was begun with a feeling akin to dread is now a series of pleasant memories, so far as the contacts with the people are concerned.

All through this southern district I saw miles and miles of marshy land, very different from our Cordova scenes, and a veritable paradise for all kinds of water-fowl, of which I suppose I saw thousands, birds of all kinds, from the humble mud-hen to the gorgeous pink flamingo. I was only sorry that I knew so very little about them and so could not appreciate what I saw as I otherwise might.

Reaching Huinca Renanco seemed like getting home, for there I was met by the Yetts and some of the friends I had met on former visits there. There I spent about two weeks of real vacation. It is considerably warmer in Huinca than in Rio Cuarto, and I think there was a storm almost every night, sometimes coming so early as to interfere with the meeting, but not often. The work in Huinca is being well cared for by Brother Adolfo Zeche, while Brother Yett is spending the greater part of the time with the Bible Coach. However, I had the pleasure of hearing him make his maiden speech in Spanish, an illustrated talk to the Sunday school, using the story of Elijah on Mt. Carmel. He has since preached his first sermon in Spanish. It was hard to tear myself away from the friends at Huinca, but Rio Cuarto was calling, and after another day's stop-over with the Istuetas at Laboulaye, the last lap of the journey was finished.

After all, there is no place like home. I arrived in time to get in on the last Christmas practices. The program was not lacking in either quality nor quantity, beginning at 9:30 P. M. and closing at 12:30 A. M., with hardly standing room and still I think not a soul left until the program was concluded.

The next week we observed the Week of Prayer and also had our Sunday school picnic, with some 150 in attendance and with a nice little service that afternoon. This week's services were preparatory to the coming of Brother Hershey for a series of special meetings. For ten days he gave us each night a talk on the Victorious Life and later an evangelistic sermon. About 50 made the great confession and many of these are now in the class which Brother Yoder conducts preparatory to baptism. It was a season of real revival for the church here.

The next week we began the Vacation Bible school, which has some 50 enrolled; Brother Yoder teaching the boys and I the girls. We are studying the life of Christ.

So the days are busy ones, but also happy ones, for we are seeing many new people in attendance, the church encouraged, and souls being saved. Pray that we may be wise in our methods, ever alert to hear the Spirit directing.

Why Foreign Missions?

Rev. Jacob G. Rupp, D.D.

Every man who professes as a Christian Jesus Christ and has experienced his salvation should never waver in following the Savior. A faithful child heeds his mother above all others. As we grow older we cherish with warmer affection a mother's sayings. The greatest men confess that a mother's advice has saved them many a time. We hear them constantly paying tribute to their mothers, and that all they are they owe to them.

Our Savior commands: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Jesus is more to us than a mother could ever be, for he created our good Christian mothers. A thankful heart has a tremendous urge within it to proclaim him everywhere as Lord and Master. The bird sings lustily as it sits upon the tree in the balmy air of spring. The song is in it—and it must come out or else the bird would burst.

Several years ago our missionaries in China converted a young man who had a sister whom her parents sold to a man to serve as his concubine. After the young man was converted and enjoyed the Christian way of living he could not rest while his young sister was a slave to the evil passions of this man. One evening he retired but could not sleep, so he arose and went in the dark night to her house of bondage and stole her. He brought her to our Girls' school. She became a Christian, and such a faithful pupil that she graduated from the school. I wish you could see her now in all her beauty.

In the light of Christian history all down the ages, no reasonable and intelligent man asks any longer the question, "Why Foreign Missions?" When we enter a modern Christian home today we find so many things to beautify it which were made by the natives of the different countries, which show that the whole world has become a neighborhood. In our home communities our best customs crystallize into laws which we put into effect so that we may be safe and live in peace. Just as we exchange the commodities with other nations so we are bound to imitate their customs, and whatever these people may be we are destined to become at least in part. It is therefore absolutely necessary for us to bring it about that our Christian life prevails throughout the world so that our children shall continue to enjoy the Christian way of living in the future.

As I traveled around the world and observed the social and religious conditions of the nations, I found that wherever there were people who had not yet learned to pray the Lord's Prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread," there were famishing and hungry! oh, so very poor! Wherever in this wide world you find the people praying, "Give us this day our daily bread," to the true and only God, as revealed in Jesus, there they have plenty. The greater part of the world is still hungry; oh! so hungry, yea, famishing, not only for daily bread, but even more so for the "Bread of Life." While in India I was told that they had on an average only four cents to spend daily for each individual. They can not buy any more food according to that value in India than in our country. Think how you might appear if you had to spend during the Christmas season only four cents daily for each father, mother, sister, brother! I saw how people look without the influence of the Gospel.

Our missionaries in China must see even worse conditions than these, when famine stalks frequently through their communities. In this day of our great Christian enlightenment, with all the blessings we enjoy in our land of Christian homes and in the light of what we know about the spiritual privations of our neighbors in China, India, Mesopotamia and the isles of the sea, can we still raise the apology, "Why Foreign Missions?"

I wish you could see as I saw, and meet as I met, Christian men and women in Japan, China, and India whom God has raised up through the missionaries to preach the gospel and see what they are accomplishing, then you would fully understand Matthew 28:18-20. "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."—Reformed Church Messenger.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Armore Church, Indiana

This is one of our new churches, it is located only a few miles out of South Bend, in a growing community. Brother E. A. Duker is the pastor of this congregation, and in connection with his pastoral work is helping to support himself in South Bend, where he is engaged in business.

Just recently they completed a fine parsonage for which the money has already been raised and pledged. Brother Duker and his family are now very pleasantly located in it.

The church here has a fine field and is taking advantage of it. The building already is crowded at its services, especially their Sunday school which is growing rapidly. The church building was formerly the Fairview church and was moved from its former location of about five miles and remodeled.

This building was the first Brethren church that I ever preached in. Brother Chas. F. Yoder and I were classmates at Chicago University and by his request I went to Fairview to fill the pulpit for him. Brother David Augustine was then on the farm and his home was the first Brethren home I was ever entertained in. These associations with the aid of Brother Duker and his family made my stay very pleasant.

As I have already stated, the church here is just getting on its feet. The membership is small and only paying Brother Duker for part of his time. They manifested a keen interest in our school and gave to the Endowment $537.00. Under the alert and earnest membership of Brother Duker and with the opportunities before them, we expect to see the work here grow.

W. S. BELL.

MANSFIELD, OHIO

We are happy to report a great victory at Mansfield, Ohio. On February 14, 1927, we began a two weeks' series of meetings at the Bowman Street Brethren church in that city. This was our first acquaintance with the Mansfield folks, and we enjoyed every minute of our stay among them. Pastor Barnard and his good people had things in readiness for the meetings; in fact, the revival was on when we arrived, and it turned out to be one of the greatest meetings that the Mansfield church has ever had, and indications are that it is not yet over. I will leave the pastor report the results, but I might add that few churches can add nearly a third to their membership roll in a single meeting.

Yes, I believe that the Mansfield church has a big future before it. They have a good location in a growing city of forty thousand. They have a good class of people and many young families who expect to make their permanent homes in the city. Then they have a host of boys and girls in Sunday school who will be young people within a few years. Whatever discouragements and disappointments the Brethren may have had in days past, they are facing a big future. Much credit is due to the untiring labor of Brother and Sister Barnard. They took up the work just a little over three years ago, when it was discouraging and many were disheartened, but now they are reaping the rewards of their labors. Brother and Sister Barnard have endeared themselves to not only the Brethren people but they have the respect and esteem of the people of the city. One of the great needs at Mansfield is a parsonage. In a growing city where houses are scarce and rents are high a parsonage is both a necessity and an investment. Many of the Mansfield Brethren are praying that they will have a home for their pastor and family. It will be a great step forward.

During our stay we had our home the first week with Brother Dale Beal and the second week with Brother Bert Sampsel. We also shared the hospitality of many Brethren homes.

S. C. HENDERSON.

MANSFIELD, OHIO

We would offer just a few words as news from Mansfield, and in them give a report of the evangelistic meetings announced in the last report. Rev. S. C. Henderson came to us and the special service began February 14. It may be said for the church, they were ready and anxious for the meeting, so from the very first night there were crowds such as we have never enjoyed. There were very few special features. Two evenings a neighboring church orchestra came and assisted us, but aside from this, the burden of our effort was toward the preaching of the word, and personal visitation. Brother Henderson gave us his characteristic messages, wonderful with their style and delivery, and with that very decided Gospel tone.

The response was immediate. It even began the Sunday before the meetings started; it continued with a bountiful harvest throughout the meeting, and into the Sunday following. To date the net results are 19 by confession, 5 by letter or relation. Out of the 24 who came forward 22 will enter the fellowship of our church. To many these results may not sound so large, but for us it really adds a third to the membership of the church. We praise God that he has given us this victory which is even greater than we had dared to ask for.

We desire thus publicly, both for our church and personally to thank Rev. Henderson for the very excellent services which he gave us. As we write this we are New Lebanon-bound. Pray for us, that God may use us to bring honor to his name in our services there.

R. D. BARNARD.

A GOLDEN WEDDING

On February 18, 1927, Forty-eight friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lowman to celebrate with them their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Mr. Lowman is now 83 years old and his wife 78 years. They were both born and reared near Twelve Mile, Indiana. Mrs. Lowman's maiden name being Hannah Aldredge. They were married February 18, 1877 and the following September moved to their present home at Roann, Indiana, where they have spent nearly fifty years together, and I know many who will join with the writer in saying that true hospitality ever beamed from this home. Its doors were always open to church visitors and a welcome awaited them.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowman have been faithful members of the Roann Brethren church since near its infancy—Mrs. Lowman coming into the church—after its present organization—from the Dunkards.

Mr. Lowman was baptized into the church in 1884 by Wm. Summers, and was one of the first trustees for the building of the present church building in Roann. He was truly faithful and sacrificed much for this. He was chosen deacon and his faithful wife deaconess in 1898.

Mr. Lowman is one of the few remaining Civil War veterans—having served in Regiment 21—Indiana battery—light artillery. His old captain is still living—to whom a golden wedding card was issued.

A delightful cafeteria dinner was served at the noon hour. Brother Harley Zumbaugh sang "Silver Threads Among the Gold"—which seemed so fitting for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowman received several useful gifts and floral offerings with a host of best wishes and greetings from their relatives and many friends.

ORA ANDERSON,
Roann, Indiana.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Rev. George Ronk stayed over a day after the Board meeting and gave an excellent talk in Chapel the following day.

Rev. Charles Ashman paid us a welcome visit recently on his way back from Berne, Indiana, where he had been holding a meeting.

Miss Eulala Tombaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tombaugh of Williamstown, Ohio, was recently elected May Queen for this year.

The College Band of 20 pieces recently gave a concert at Red Haw. Very excellent reports have reached the school about it.

The Boys' Glee Club proposes to go to Indiana the week of April 2nd. I am confident that the churches will be well pleased with them. We have a violinist this year of unusual ability.

The Girls expect to go to the Pennsylvania churches the week of April 23 and following.

Easter vacation will begin the Thursday before Easter and close the Tuesday following.

The new Gymnasium has been definitely located at the south end of the campus along the King road, to face north. The Small Construction Co., of Mansfield, are the builders. The material will be Metropolitan Brick from the Canton kiln.

Formal breaking of the ground for the new gymnasium took place last Thursday.

The local high school, Y. M. C. A., the Faculty and the Board of Trustees were represented in the program. The college colors were flying and the College Band furnished music. Dr. Teeter, secretary of the Board drove the team, and the writer held the plow for the initial furrow.

At the annual meeting of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary school, held at Chicago, last week, eight colleges were dropped from membership, one from Ohio. They were all disqualified as I understand it, for lack of endowment funds. I take this to mean that the above mentioned association means business and intends to keep up the standards for membership. I call the attention of the Board members to this item. Also the uncannvassed churches. Also those friends who have already made their subscription that it shall be paid promptly and fully. We are so near the goal that we may be able to reach it soon. I wonder what the Alumni, the church, and friends would think if we had been a member and then was dropped. The standards are not too high. We ought to do any way and voluntarily what we are now compelled to do. All of this has been said so often that I am reluctant to repeat it, but it is so vital that I desire to keep the church informed at every step of the way.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

AN ITINERATING EVANGELIST

Dear Evangelist: I preached at the Third Brethren church in Philadelphia February 13, and then preached from Monday until Friday nights in five different homes. We had some wonderful meetings. Had the promise of two young ladies to be baptized soon.

Baptized a young man and wife who had previously confessed. They are splendid people, and we expect them to make valuable members. This makes five who have been baptized recently in Delaware. Three had been reported. All are active members. We expected to baptize four or five more very soon.

These good people are badly in need of at least two church buildings as they are scattered about forty miles of territory. Pray for the people. They have gone through some deep waters, but many of them seem thorough Brethren and soundly converted. Hope to be able to give good reports right along of Delaware.

On my return preached again at the Third church, Sunday, February 20. Hope these Brethren will be able to employ a consecrated, tactful pastor as Brother Witter's place will be hard to fill.

ISAAC D. BOWMAN,

DALLAS CENTER, IOWA

Just a few lines in retrospect, concerning our association with the Fair Haven, Ohio people, which appointment we filled while doing post graduate work at the College. We can truthfully say that no church anywhere can boast of a finer spirited group of members than the group of which the Fair Haven church is composed. It takes Christian characters in a church to create such an atmosphere as is found there. Considering the bad roads leading to the church, its members are unusually loyal. At any special service a large attendance could be expected for each one was an advertiser.

The field is very well gleaned in that locality so there were no special campaigns of an evangelistic nature. The Girls' Gospel Teams of Ashland College were out on two different occasions and did much good. Four were added to the church as a result of Decision Day in the Sunday school.

We have noticed that most pastors in their reports do not fail to enumerate the evidence of the generosity of their people. We believe that most of our people are of the generous type and must say that the Fair Haven people make you think of a continuous donation party. On one particular occasion two machines well loaded with physical necessities of life drove up to the writer's home in Ashland. These things were very much appreciated.

As has been noticed in various reports of offerings, Fair Haven is better than average considering the membership. While it is not a growing church and is not large it makes a fine showing in interest and gifts and is instrumental in keeping many interested in their spiritual lives.

Two Sundays with the Dallas Center, Iowa, people have impressed us very favorably. They have made us feel at home with a fine reception and a nice parsonage. Good things have been reported by former pastors from here and we shall endeavor to make such reports possible in the future.

A. D. CASHMAN.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE

"The government of a country never gets ahead of the religion of the country. There is no way by which we can substitute the authority of law for the virtue of man. Of course, we can help to restrain the vicious and maintain a fair degree of security and protection by legislation and police control, but the real reforms which society in these days is seeking will not come as a result of our religious convictions, or they will not come at all. Peace, justice, humanity, charity—these can not be legislated into being. They are the result of a Divine Grace."

Notes on the S. S. Lesson

Unrecognized in many an alarming experience, in many an overwhelming sorrow, the Master is drawing near and his voice reassuringly calls to all who stop to listen, 'Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid.'

"Peter's experience is also a common one. Great enthusiasm, a somewhat presumptuous eagerness to show faith in the Lord, a leap out into the dark, and then what? First, all goes well, for eyes are fixed upon Christ, then eyes are suddenly turned to the threatening waves. Like a flash all power gone, nothing but peril, a despairing cry, 'Lord have me.' The twofold lesson is obvious: Wait till Christ invites you to leap out into the dark! But if you do leap out into danger at your own desire or at his bidding, keep your eye fixed upon your Master, regardless of waves or winds or anything or anyone else.

The world's rude tempest rages,

Rough is life's stormy sea;

O blessed Saviour, save us,

We perish without thee.

Arise and lay the billows

Around us calm and deep;

Awake and bid the passions
That dwell within us sleep.

Lift up thyself among us,
And let thy presence fill
The void that makes the tempest,
Till every heart be still,
Till every sorrow slumber
And every passion cease;
Then shall we sing our praises
To thee the God of peace;

To thee who ne'er dost let us
Have needless care, nor yet
In all our sins forget us,
Though we may thee forget.
O Holy Father, shelter,
O Holy Spirit, be
Our comforter through Jesus;
We perish without thee.

—People's Hymnal, London, 1867.

What Should This Experience Have Done for Peter? "It should have made him more cautious afterward in his avowals, his too self-confident boastings, of what he would do and dare for his Master."—John Foster. Also, it must have given him, in all his later life of peril bravely met for Christ, a cheery and strengthening memory of an outstretched hand and the firm arm that pulled him out of the engulfing waves.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

BILLY BUTTINSKI

By Minerva Hunter

The most wonderful story the Kercheval grandchildren had ever heard was told by Grandfather Kercheval and began, "Once upon a time when I was a small boy, during the Civil War—"

At every family reunion Grandfather was called upon to tell the story. This Thanksgiving day when he finished, little Chester asked, "Where is the house, Grandfather? Is it still standing?"

Everyone knew the answer to these questions and to the other questions that always followed.

"The house still stands in one of our Southern states. Such a lovely old brick house it is, two stories high with an attic and a basement. The front porch was my mother's special pride. The glass in the front door extended nearly to the floor and acted as a mirror. I remember mother used to stand before it to see the 'hang' of her skirts. The three windows in the cupola and the two windows in the front parlor extended to the floor and acted as mirrors. That made six full length mirrors for us. I remember I always paraded the porch whenever I had a new suit so I could see myself often."

"Do any of our relatives own it?" asked Chester.

"No. My father and older brother were killed in the war. I was a very small boy and Anne was little more than a baby, so there was no one to look after the place. Then too, after the battle all the windows were broken and no more panes could be gotten. Cold wind came into the house and we had to live in the attic the rest of the winter."

"I wish my great-grandmother Kercheval could have kept the place and then you could have lived there and I could have vis-ted you often," Chester observed. It was an old wish. All the Kerchevals loved this old house that Grandfather told about.

"When I make my fortune in oil," Grandfather presented his old promise once again, "I am going to buy the place back and invite you for Christmas."

The word "Christmas" awakened a new train of thought in Chester's mind. "I want a goat and cart, Grandfather. When you make your fortune in oil, will you buy me a goat and cart?"

Everyone laughed. The dear old historic home and a goat and cart mentioned all in one breath. How funny! Grandfather laughed with the rest, but he promised Chester the goat and cart, if fortune came.

Then, strange as any fairy tale, the wells being bored on Grandfather's land did better. One turned out a gusher. Grandfather had a fortune in oil!

Christmas day found all the Kerchevals in a distant Southern state at the dear old home Grandfather had told them about so often. Grandfather had kept his word and bought the place and, much to Chester's delight, he bought the promised goat and cart.

When the man brought the goat and cart on Christmas eve, Grandfather said, "Is this goat safe? Are you sure he will not butt children?"

And the man selling the goat said, "He has never butted children. He hates other goats and will butt them with all his strength, but never have I known him to butt anything else."

"All right," Grandfather laughed as he paid the man, "his butting days are over for there are no goats here."

Christmas morning after breakfast and after looking at all the gifts, some one asked Grandfather to tell again the story of the battle.

"And suppose we all go up to the attic where Grandfather was when the battle was going on," some one suggested. This seemed a good idea and all the Kerchevals went to the attic. Grandfather pointed out the place where the bed stood on which his grandmother Kercheval lay sick. He showed where the crib stood in which his little sister, Anne, slept so peacefully during the battle. He pointed out the small window that his mother snatched him away from just a moment before a bullet came whizzing through. Then every one sat down to hear the story once more.

"Once upon a time when I was a small boy, during the Civil War," Grandfather began and seemed to be living it all over again in a way more real than ever before. He went on and on with his story, the same words they had heard so often, but now everything seemed very real. His listeners had been thrilled by the story many times, but today as they sat in the very house that had been in the thick of the battle and in the very attic of the house in which Grandfather had been while the battle raged, it seemed the battle must be really going on.

"Not long after the bullet came through the attic window where I had been standing," Grandfather was saying, "we heard shot hitting the house in a pretty steady fire. One by one the panes in the great window around the front porch and in the front door were broken out. The sound of shattering glass—"

"Bang," came a loud noise from the lower floor, "shatter, shatter, shatter!"

Grandfather paused in his story telling. His listeners looked at one another amazed.

Were they hearing the noises Grandfather described, or real noises that actually happened? Every one sat upright. "Bang!" came the loud noise again from the lower floor. "Shatter, shatter, shatter!"

It was an actual sound. Not at all connected with the story it fitted into so well. Grandfather jumped up. "Bang!" There was that loud noise again. "Shatter, shatter, shatter!"

Every one ran for the attic steps. Before they reached the second floor there came another loud bang and again the glass fell. Once again this happened before any one reached the first floor. Grandfather was in front, going just as fast as he could and Chester was right behind him.

The front hall was a sight; the glass broken from the front door, lay in shattered pieces upon the floor. The three cupola windows were broken out. Through the folding doors into the front parlor they could see one of its windows broken. How odd, how very odd! Every one paused on the stairway to look. Then every one saw a flashing white body hurl itself at the last window on the porch. "Bang!" came the now familiar sound. "Shatter, shatter, shatter!"

"Bless my time!" Grandfather exclaimed.

"Billy!" Chester almost wept. "My goat! He has broken all the windows. Will you have to sell the place, Grandfather? Will you have to sell the place as your mother did when all the panes were broken?"

Grandfather put his arm around Chester. "I can get new panes," he assured him. It is many years since the Civil War and window panes can be gotten easily now. Most likely they can be put in before night. Your goat saw himself in those glasses and felt it his duty to butt every goat he saw. He made a good job of it and he made my story seem very real. I thought at first it was the battle going on again," Grandfather laughed.

"He butted in and cut your story short," Chester remembered. "I am going to call that goat 'Billy Butinski'."—The Presbyterian.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

GUSTON-SUTTER—At the home of the writer at Denver, Indiana, on March 9th occurred the very pretty wedding which united in holy wedlock George E. Guston and Sylvia E. Sutter, both of Roann, Indiana. Both are highly esteemed members of the Brethren church at Enterprise, near Roann, Indiana. The single ring ceremony was a beautiful feature of the occasion.

The groom is a merchant of Roann, and the bride is teaching at Gilead, Indiana. The bride is the daughter of Amos and Verna Sutter of near Roann.

We are joining their many friends in wishing them a beautiful and holy life. W. F. JOHNSON.

WINGARD-MAHAN—At the home of the undersigned, in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, on Wednesday evening, February 16, Mr. Cloyd Wingard, of R. F. D. 3, Johnstown, and Miss Luella Mahan, of Scalp Level, Pennsylvania, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. The groom is a member of the Mennonite faith and the trusted employee of one of the lumber companies of Johnstown. The bride is a member of the Second Brethren church of Johnstown, and a young woman of estimable character. They will reside in Oakmont, a suburb of Johnstown, and have the best wishes of many friends for a happy and prosperous marital experience. DYOLL BELOTE.

MAURER-FORD—Saturday evening, February the twenty-sixth, Mr. William H. Maurer and Miss Zella R. Ford were united in marriage at a beautiful church wedding, Miss Ruth Ford, an aunt of the bride, played the wedding music and Miss Ruth Steffler sang "At Dawning" and "The Sweetest Story Ever Told." The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mildred Ford, as the maid of honor. Mr. Edward Maurer, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. An impressive ring ceremony was used by the writer. The bride is a member of the Coneyaugh Brethren church. The groom is a member of the St. Paul Lutheran church. These young people will make their home in Pittsburgh, Pa. where Mr. Maurer is employed in the freight department of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The best wishes of their friends accompany them through life. AUSTIN R. STALEY.

IN THE SHADOW

MARTINDALE—Mrs. Alfa Martindale was born in Fort Scott, Kansas, January 29th, 1890 and departed this life March 3rd, 1927, at the home of her brother Roy Perkins, of Iola, Kansas, of heart trouble. There survives her a husband, mother, seven children, a brother and a sister. She had made her home in Fort Scott all of her life.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, from the Undertaker's Chapel on Saturday afternoon of March 5th. Burial was made in the family lot at Oak Grove Cemetery. L. G. WOOD.

LEININGER—Ana Hart Leininger was born at Sullivan, Ohio, November 5, 1876, and departed this life on the fourth day of February, 1927, aged 60 years and nearly three months. She was united in marriage to M. C. Leininger on the twentieth day of August, 1897. To this union were born two sons, Herbert and Hartie and one daughter, Menota. She leaves to mourn their loss three children, a husband, one sister—Mrs. Wm. Street, and many relatives and friends.

When but a girl she became a member of the Brethren church of Homer, Ohio. Later in life she became affiliated with the community church of Huntington, Ohio. She has been a faithful member and a worthy servant of her Master.

The years of our lives are like a weaver's shuttle that fits in and out, in and out, till it comes to the end of the thread. Each deed and each thought determines the texture of the fabric we weave. Judging from the earnest Christian life she lived in the community, her fabric must have borne the marks of the glistening threads of the golden rule. May others choose this thread for their weaving. The funeral services were conducted by the writer who is the student pastor of the community church. FLOYD S. SIBERT.

FREDERICK—Louie Frederick, daughter of the late John W. and Huldah Frederick, was born in Ritchie County, West Virginia, February 20, 1882, died March 8, 1927, at the age of 45 years, two weeks and two days.

She was a member of the Church of Christ and lived a consistent Christian life until death. She is survived by one sister and brother. Her kind and gentle ways won for her a host of friends who mourn the loss.

Funeral services by the writer at the home near Burnt House, West Virginia, March 10, 1927. N. D. WRIGHT.

COLLINS—Lennie Evert Collins, son of Wilford D. and Sarah Collins, was born June 25, 1888, died March 8, 1927, aged 38 years, 8 months and thirteen days.

He was married to Miss Elva Riddle, August 19, 1908, to which union were born seven children, four girls and three boys, two of which have preceded him to the spirit world.

He made a profession of religion early in life, but was not identified with any church. He lived a peaceful and quiet life, and was a hard worker, and well respected by all that knew him. He leaves a wife and five children. The widow and one of the daughters are members of the Mt. Olive Brethren church near Racket, W. Va., and am glad to say that they are willing workers. Funeral services by the writer at the above named church to an overflowing house. N. D. WRIGHT.

The Cross---The Impelling Motive

We cannot approach this season without thinking of the Cross, and we cannot long contemplate the Cross without thinking of Missions. When we gaze upon the Cross and consider what it means to mankind, and what it has meant and does mean to us individually—when we sense anew the freedom and cleansing, the power and joy that it has brought into our lives, we find ourselves in the grip of a feeling that we cannot contain, and we are impelled to go forth and tell of the Gospel of saving grace, we cannot escape it. As we stand in the presence of the Cross, missions becomes a necessity; the love of Christ constrains us; we cannot but speak of the things we have seen and heard and experienced. That is the bed-rock motive for missions. There are many other motives that influence us, many others that may well be emphasized, but the one that above all others sends men forth willing to go to the ends of the earth, convinces them that it is a task that is supremely worth while and accuses and condemns them if they sit still and hold their peace, is to be found in the fact of the cross of Christ, as viewed in the light of the empty tomb.

"Christ died for our sins," said Paul. That is the key note of the Gospel. It is the prophecy of the Old Testament and the culmination of the New. It is the crimson thread that runs through the entire Bible and knits its message into one. That is the thing that gives the Gospel its power and attractiveness. Lewis Browne in his remarkable book, "This Believing World", though he attempts to write impartially, declaring that he has "no Christian axe to grind", yet hits upon the central truth and pays a high tribute to the Christian religion in these significant statements: "To every man without distinction it has said: Jesus died for you! To every human creature on earth it has said: You too can be saved! And therein lies Christianity's highest virtue." That is the thing that Jesus himself declared would be the secret of its power: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." That has proven to be actually true. That is the only explanation of the phenomenon that we see—all nations and races, all classes and conditions of men riveting their attention upon the Lord Jesus and clinging to him with unrelenting tenacity, as if held fast by some invisible bonds. Some have explained the marvel by saying it is due to admiration for his character, or for the purity and wisdom of his teaching. Some have said it is because he has proven to be a great and powerful reformer, who has revolutionized society. Others have said it is because of his claims to be divine, and because of the wonderful works which he wrought while here among men. Granting the full force of all these phases of his greatness, yet they fall short of the attractive power of the cross. That is the thing that distinguishes him from all other religious teachers the world has ever known, and that is the thing that enables him to call out the warmest affection and strongest allegiance among his followers of any leader who ever commanded an army. "Christ crucified is the powerful object of attraction to the believing soul, because in him centre all the currents of an infinite and eternal love." And this is the power that sends men and women forth, ready to go to the uttermost parts of the world, ready to endure any hardship or to make any sacrifice, that the Gospel of Christ may be preached.

Apart from the death of Jesus and its significance the Bible ceases to be an evangel, the Christian has no message and the Christ no attractiveness. But Christ did truly die for our sins according to the Scripture. John is convinced of it, for he writes: "The blood of Jesus his Son cleanseth us from all sin." Peter is sure of it, for he declares that "his own self bare our sins in his body upon the tree." The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews puts the teaching into the mouth of Jesus in the form of an Old Testament quotation: "Lo! I am come to do thy will, O God," and then adds, "by which will we have been sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus once for all." The Savior himself proclaims the truth that "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." "I lay down my life for the sheep." "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit." And speaking of the sacred cup, he said: "This is my blood of the new covenant which is shed for many." It was a great accomplishment and is a great living reality, which not only the definite words of Christ unmistakably teach and the unimpeachable witness of his disciples prove, but has also been demonstrated in our own experience. Truly God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself.

That is the outstanding message of the lenten season, and the cornerstone of Christianity, and no thoughtful soul can go through these days and fail to be impressed anew with its importance. Christ died for my sins. Blessed assurance! I shall rejoice beyond measure as I gaze upon the Cross. But Christ also died for all men; his promise is to "whosoever will", and he has said to those of us who are the beneficiaries of his grace, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Let us then exclaim, not "What a responsibility"; but "What a privilege!" The fact of the Cross impells us.

Wise Counsel

No one will doubt the conservatism of Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Baptist World Alliance, and for many years president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, at Louisville, Kentucky, and because of his reputation for sanity, his counsel carries great weight. He recently gave expression to words which are worth quoting:

"I think it is a blunder and foreign to the New Testament faith to lay hold on legislatures and the civil power to compel certain interpretations of the Bible. It is a reversal of our Christian position. The provocation is sometimes great, as when wanton attacks are made on the Christian religion by teachers in State schools. But Christ's religion calls for spiritual weapons of defense, not laws and penalties, courts and juries. The universe is fireproof, at least all of it that is worth preserving. The Christian religion can survive the hottest flame. We need not fear any test. But if our religion is to make its contribution to the spiritual life of the world, we must cease harassing our Christian schools and adequately equip them."

The man who sings, "I surrender all" and then holds on to his money until the cause of Christ goes begging and the preacher must go in debt to keep alive, has yet to learn the meaning of plain English.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The Men's Glee Club is making an enviable record for itself, and so is favorably advertising the college.

Christian Endeavorers will be interested in the list of societies that have to date cooperated in the Kentucky Mission project. Others should "Send the cash."

Brother John Parr, pastor at Berne, Indiana, reports twenty-four additions to the church as a result of the meeting conducted by Brother Ashman.

President E. E. Jacobs in his College News announces the new athletic coach, in the person of Fred Schmuck, a choice which alumni are likely to consider a very satisfactory one, in view of the unusual success he has had in coaching high school teams. He is also a clean and upright young man.

The Brethren at Lanark, Illinois, where Brother Charles W. Mayes is the enterprising pastor, recently enjoyed a Bible Conference under the leadership of Brother A. V. Kimmell of Whittier, California. The pastor says the church was greatly profited by these meetings, and the community as well.

Brother N. V. Leatherman, of South Bend, Indiana, reports a meeting which he held at Brighton church, nearby, and speaks encouragingly concerning the high purpose and determined struggle of this little band of Brethren. Brother J. W. Brower is the faithful pastor of these people.

Kindly notice the Business Manager's Corner this week. Dr. Teeter gives a partial report of the Publication Day offering. Taken as a whole it is a splendid report and shows a good support of the Publishing House. Doubtless other offerings are yet to be sent in. We are grateful for this help in building up this brotherhood institution.

Brother I. D. Bowman continues to have encouraging reports concerning his work in Delaware. Two have been recently baptized. He is at present supplying the pulpit of the Third church of Philadelphia, made vacant by the death of Dr. Witter.

Brother G. E. Drushal, superintendent of the mission at Lost Creek, Kentucky, writes some news items concerning the work and workers. The Sunday school, with the assistance of the Long Beach, California, church, is getting a new piano. Sister Srack, a teacher in the school, is reported not up to her normal health, and prayer is requested in her behalf.

Dr. W. S. Bell, secretary of the College Endowment Campaign, reports the result of his canvass of a group of small churches near South Bend—namely, County Line, La Paz and Teegarden. The total gift of these churches was $486.60, which, added to the good Ardmore gift concerning which we failed to mention in this column last week, brings the total to date up to $100,132.43.

Brother J. W. Brower, pastor of the Brighton church at Howe, Indiana, reports the work at this charge in good condition. At the recent meeting conducted by Brother Leatherman, eleven confessions were received. Others received before and since the meeting bring the total number of additions to sixteen baptized and four awaiting the rite.

One of the country's outstanding educators and a widely known speaker and leader is President Henry Churchill King of Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. He will have completed fifty years' service at Oberlin the eighteenth of next June and on that date will retire from his present position, amidst a great demonstration which will be staged in his honor.

Possibly you have noticed the new tracts added to our list on the back page of this issue. The one on "Christian Baptism" by J. F. Garber, was just recently written, being a reprint of an article published in The Evangelist, the last week in December.

Readers recognized its worth and requested its publication in tract form. If you have not a supply of doctrinal tracts, select those that give promise of meeting your need and order them. We recommend them all and they ought to be used.

Miss Alice Longaker, office secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, supplies copy for the Mission page this week and you will want to read her messages. And don't neglect to plan and to pray for the Easter offering for foreign missions, which is being stressed in this issue, and will be still more strongly next week, when practically the entire issue will be devoted to that interest. Dr. Bauman, the treasurer, insists that your offering should be sent to him before July 1st, and if possible by June 1st. Be prompt and you'll find it more satisfactory all around.

One of the widely known and highly useful laymen of the brotherhood was Dr. E. J. Worst, of Ashland, Ohio, and it will be sad news to his host of friends to learn that he passed out of this life on March 23, 1927, at the age of seventy-eight years. Brother Worst has for many years been a trustee and treasurer of Ashland College, and a pillar in the Ashland church. He has proven a noble servant of the church and of Christ in every way possible. Many a former student of Ashland College will remember times when Dr. Worst proved their friend in time of financial need while in school. He is the father of Mrs. J. Allen Miller and Mrs. G. C. Carpenter. To these, and to Mrs. Worst and daughter at home, the Evangelist bespeaks sincere sympathy.

The work of the Ardmore Brethren church of South Bend, Indiana, is going forward in a fine way under the leadership of Brother E. A. Duker, who with his family is now enjoying a splendid new parsonage, the picture of which we are privileged to present to our readers. We congratulate these loyal people on this accomplishment. The churches are beginning to find more and more that it pays to build parsonages. Let the good work go on. This preacher's home was "dedicated" with the entire cost covered with cash and pledges. The Sunday school is showing splendid progress in numbers and efficiency, also a Christian Endeavor society has been organized. It seems to us that Christian Endeavor must be coming to its own, as three new societies are reported organized in this issue. In a postscript, the pastor reports seven persons baptized.

We are in receipt of a scholarly paper written by Dr. J. L. Gillin, professor of Sociology in the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, which booklet is a reprint from "Social Forces" magazine, December, 1926. The article is entitled, "Masters of Social Science; Franklin Henry Giddings", and traces in a masterful way the growth of Professor Giddings' sociological theories. Dr. Gillin has steadily advanced in his chosen field until he is ranked among the authorities on social science. In addition to his teaching in the university and the devoting of considerable time to lecturing and aiding in the solution of social problems in various localities, he has found time to bring out a number of very excellent books, which are rated high in the field of sociology. Brother Gillin, it will be remembered, was for a number of years, president of Ashland College.

It is usually the busiest man who has the most time for helpfulness.

Concentration and perseverance are essential to success always and everywhere, but nowhere more than in the effort to build Christian character.

He who gives rein to passion will soon find himself thrown from his steed. Poise can only be maintained when self is held in control.

There are those who find it hard to administer comfort, consolation and encouragement to the sorrowing and discouraged, but genuine sympathy will break down the difficulties and discover a way.

The man who discounts the acclaimed greatness of pioneer preachers, has never oriented himself into pioneer life and conditions; the very moulds into which they were cast made them great.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Statement from the Treasurer of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church

By Louis S. Bauman, D.D.

Just before starting to write this statement, your Treasurer sat down and did some figuring. For the information of the friends and supporters of the foreign work of our church, we here make a brief statement as to the financial situation.

FIRST—We find that the expenditures last year on the South American field was about $2,000 in excess of the expenditures on the African field. But this year, ending July 1st, just as nearly as we can now tell, the expenditures on these two fields will be even.

SECOND,—We find that the income from all sources this year promises to be about the same as it was last year,—that is, if the Easter Offering shall run about the same as it did last year,—and that this income will be just about sufficient to cover the expenditures for this year. (By referring back to the Annual Report which was sent to every member of the Society last August, you will find that the cash receipts last year amounted to $37,402.13.) In other words, by maintaining the present rate of income and expenditure, our Society will break even this year. The Lord's provision therefore has at least equalled our faith. Jehovah-jireh is his name!

THIRD,—There is urgent need for funds to carry on a program of advancement on both our fields.

In Argentina, two new church buildings are badly needed,—one in Laboulaye, and one in Buenos Aires. In both these cities, we own the lots, fully paid for. But at the same time, we are paying $42.00 a month rental for a hall in which to worship in Loboulaye, and $61.00 a month for a place in Buenos Aires. Now, we ought to build in both these places, on the lots that are ours, and stop this leak. If we cannot build and fully pay for the cost of the building at present, we certainly ought to make some first payment money toward the buildings, sufficient to enable the missionaries down there to secure loans covering the balance of the cost of building, and then let these high rents apply toward paying the indebtedness thus incurred. How fine if the Lord would put it upon the heart of some one to whom he has entrusted a goodly share of his money, to build these churches,—these life-saving stations in that dark priest-ridden land. Souls are being saved down there, and if our Lord shall tarry, Argentine may some day return missionaries to us, to save us from the thralldom and superstitions of Rome, from which we helped her to escape. That is very possible! Stranger things than that have happened through the passing of the years! How we need to pray here in this great land of ours,—

"Lord God, Who gave this land
Freedom from Rome's command,
Be with us yet!
Bring to our minds the past,
When Rome's black spell was cast,
Then rouse us all at last,
Lest we forget!"

Two more missionaries will be added to the staff in Argentina this coming year, if the plans of the Board now carry out. A new Ford car for the station at Huinca Renanco is a necessity; a fund has been started for this purpose. Shall we go forward in our work in Argentina? Your Easter Offering will be your answer! Your Board can only go forward to the extent that your own gifts to this work make it possible.

In Africa, there is urgent need for new buildings on all three of the main stations,—new homes for missionaries, new store-rooms, new churches, new school houses, and considerable new equipment. The Lord has provided almost enough money for a new Ford at Bassai,—badly needed. How much one of those little cars means to a station in Africa! A Sunday school class in the Long Beach church has already pledged itself to raise and turn over $1,400.00 by July 1st, for a new church building on the Bassai station. We have that pledge signed by names "good as gold." Who else along the line will do something real for God and thus help to heal what Livingstone called "The open sore of the world"? We are not begging. The Lord knows all about it. We are simply doing our duty in making known the great need. We feel sure that God will provide for his own work, when manned by true heralds of the Cross! Shall we go forward in our work in the great heart of Africa, where the Lord has so signally honored it in the past? The Easter Offering will be your answer!

We might say here that probably the greatest need of the work in Africa at present, looking at it from a human standpoint, at least, is the need of another trained physician on the field. Our Sister Gribble is the only physician. When she is off the field on furlough, or because of physical need, the missionaries there are utterly without a trained physician. And this situation exists right now. It seems almost a crime to allow such a condition to exist. Now, it would appear that if we are to have such a physician, one who can work in connection with Sister Gribble in our medical work, there where a dozen physicians for the body are needed, we must look to some young missionary who will give himself to the Lord and enter into special training for that place. He will probably need considerable assistance, for that sort of training costs money, real money, as we all know. And we can scarcely expect one to pay all the expenses for such training, and then go to Africa on the magnificent allowance of $350.00 a year! If we could find a physician already trained and equipped in every way, we should praise the Lord! But where is he? As none are applying, we praise the Lord that in Floyd Taber, one of the most brilliant students Ashland College has ever known, who graduated from Xenia Theological Seminary before his graduation from Ashland,—in Floyd Taber we have the promise of another caretaker for the body with our missionaries in Africa. But Floyd must spend five more long years in his medical preparation! And it is for the good of our work in the French territory in Africa, that those years should be spent in France. Now as to the need here, we need not speak further. We are simply making it known. It is not within the province of the Foreign Board to educate missionaries. We cannot use money from our African General Fund for this purpose. But this is a peculiar need, and so great, that we feel we must make it known. The Lord will do the rest, we are sure! He has not yet failed us in this work, and he will not fail us now!

Listen! You members of the Brethren church! We do not hesitate to say before all the world, that a finer group of missionaries are not to be known by any missionary society in all the world, than are working under our Board. "Look them over,"—every one! Think! Ask about them from any one who knows! There is not one now on either field of whom we are not justly proud,— proud because they are so thoroughly consecrated to him, because they are so genuine, so self-sacrificing (though they themselves would not admit it!) so true, so ready for either the altar or the plow! Uncomplainingly they simply toil on, and on, and on,—in great joy to know that souls are being won, and it is all for him! The work was never in better shape,—never more hopeful,—never more united,—than right this minute! Have you confidence in these splendid workmen and their work? Do you believe that their work is "unto him?" YOUR EASTER OFFERING WILL BE YOUR ANSWER!

What Has the Brethren Church Done in Foreign Missions?

By Alva J. McClain, Secretary Foreign Board

The Foreign Missionary movement began definitely in the Brethren church with the organization of a Foreign Missionary Society in the year 1900. The organization was effected at the General Conference of that year, and the Charter members numbered fifty-five. I wish that space would permit the publication of these names in this article; it is an interesting list, especially to those who are acquainted to some extent with the history of the church. But it must suffice to say that in that list here are many well known and honored names.

Although there was very little money at the disposal of the newly organized Society, search for a field of work was begun immediately. This move received added impetus by the gift of $2,000 from John A. Miller of Summit Mills, Pennsylvania. Work was started in both Canada and Persia, but was not continued for various reasons.

The first of our permanent missions in foreign lands was opened by Dr. C. F. Yoder in 1909 at Rio Cuarto, Argentine Republic. Ten years later the Gribble party entered French Equatorial Africa for the purpose of establishing the second, although government permission to begin work did not come until 1921. Thus our African Mission is eight years old, the Argentine Mission is eighteen, and the Foreign Missionary Society is twenty-seven.

In the Argentine Mission there are fourteen workers. Of these, seven are North American missionaries and the remainder are South American Helpers. In the African Mission we have sixteen North American missionaries. The Brethren church, therefore, is at present maintaining a force of thirty in foreign missionary service. This is considerably more than one foreign missionary to every thousand members of the home church, counting the entire membership as between twenty and twenty-five thousand.

To maintain our foreign missionary work for the past year required an expenditure of approximately 35000 dollars. This includes missionaries' salaries and allowances, building expenses, furloughs, home office, and all other expenses. Some people say that foreign missions are expensive! Suppose that the missionaries received all of this 35000 dollars, which they do not by a great deal. For thirty individuals this amount would provide a salary of 1166 dollars per year! Where are there thirty preachers in the homeland who cost as little? More than that—the thirty preachers will require each one a building to preach in, costing from 10,000 to 100,000 dollars. to say nothing of a multitude of other expenses. But this hypothetical salary of $1166 received by the foreign missionary includes everything! Out of it the missionary provides food and clothing, pays transportation to and from the field, builds or rents his own church and parsonage, and on top of all this supports the Home Office! As Briggs used to say, Can you beat it? I do not have at hand the necessary information upon which to base exact estimates, but it is quite safe to say that it costs considerably more to win a soul here at home than it does in our foreign missions.

In looking over the yearly offering for the past twenty-six years I have noticed some interesting things. For the year 1900 the entire offering amounted to the small sum of $403.94. During the next six years the offering ranged from $392 to $558, with the exception of that year when John A. Miller contributed his gift of $2,000. Then the year that Brother C. F. Yoder prepared to leave for South America the offering jumped suddenly to $2,800, which proves that God provides when the church lays plans to do his will. For the next ten years the yearly offering increased gradually until it reached the figure of $6,300. Then it leaped to $14,000 in one year, to $19,000 the next year, and to $29,000 the following year. These sudden increases came not as a result of mere accident. These were the years 1917 to 1920 when our African Mission was prepared for and actually begun. Thus the Lord through his people has always provided in the hour of the church's need. Since 1920 the offering has gradually increased from $29,000 to $37,000.

Now it seems to some of us that the time is ripe for another one of those sudden leaps in the annual offering. It must come if plans for advance are to be carried into effect. And it can come if the praying Christians in every church will go to their knees in earnest prayer. It has been through prayer that the increases of the past have come. There is no question as to this. God has never set any limit upon what he will do for us except our faith. Therefore, the Board does not wish to set any limit, but if plans for the future are to materialize, and if available missionary volunteers are to be sent out, the Easter offering should advance to at least $50,000. This means two dollars or more per member. Certainly this is but little. How many Christians are there who will join with us in earnest prayer for an advance which is according to God's will?

We need not be ashamed of our work as a church in the field of foreign missions. Considering the brief existence of the Brethren church and the small number of her adherents, few denominations can point to greater accomplishments. But we dare not live upon the records of the past. Like Paul we must in a sense "forget the things that are behind" and press on with greater vision toward a higher goal. If God has given to us certain "resources", they were not given to be conserved. He that would save his life shall lose it, and he that loses his life for Christ's sake shall preserve it. I would not for a moment depreciate the importance of the other departments of our church's work, but I have a growing conviction that a denomination can best justify its separate existence in Christendom by the size of the task it is willing to undertake in the work of world evangelization. Truth is supremely important. I believe that. But truth was meant to be passed on to those who sit in darkness.

Four Missionary Hows. Romans 10:13-15.

By Charles H. Ashman, Member Foreign Board

(Substance of an Address delivered before the Pennsylvania District Conference at Berlin)

Christianity is pre-eminently a missionary religion. The law was intended for the Jew. Others were permitted to become allied with them through the proselyting system, but the Jews sent no missionaries to others. They always gave their testimony, even in captivity, but they sent no missionaries to spread the law. It was exclusive, distinctive, separative. The Jews prided themselves in this very thing,—that they had something the other nations did not possess. But, when "grace and truth came by Jesus Christ", it was intended for the world. Christ established Christianity as a world religion to be made such through missionary evangelization.

Note a few significant things. The first message was a missionary one. The angel of the Lord said to the shepherds, "I bring YOU good tidings of great joy, which shall be to ALL PEOPLE." The first disciple of Christ's immediately became a missionary. Andrew immediately, first, before he did anything else, found his own brother, Simon, and won him to Jesus Christ. The first prayer taught was a missionary prayer. "Thy Kingdom Come." It will never come until the Bride of Christ is completed through missionary endeavor. The first resurrection message was a missionary one. Jesus appears to his disciples in the evening of the first resurrection day and says to them, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." The first command was a missionary edict. "Go ye into all the world." The promise of the Holy Ghost was inseparably related to missionary enterprise. "Ye shall receive power—ye shall be my witnesses", the two are inseparable. Jesus Christ is a world Savior. The Gospel of Christ is the light of the world. The church of Christ is a world institution. God's program for this age is for the world. Christianity is pre-eminently a missionary religion.

Now in the tenth chapter of Romans there are five missionary "Hows", to which we invite your attention. They follow that wonderful passage in which the simplicity of the method of salvation is so wonderfully expressed in these words, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. For the scripture saith, whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." Wonderful! Marvellous! Matchless! Behold the simplicity, yet how profound! Now, immediately following this passage the five missionary "Hows", are propounded. They present the problem and responsibility of making known to all men this wonderful message of salvation by faith. Let us study them carefully.

First, "HOW then can they call on him in whom they never believed?" So fine a scholar as Moule of Cambridge maintains that all through these five great missionary questions the translation ought to be, "can" instead of shall. It is the conjunctive verb. It conveys the staggering impossibility of God's great program of salvation being carried out without missionary endeavor. "How can they call upon Christ in whom they have never believed?" Why have they never believed in him? Because they have never heard of him. This leads to the second missionary. "How." "How can they believe on him of whom they have never heard?" Ignorance never led anyone to God or Christ. Knowledge always gives light that leads to salvation if accepted in belief. This leads right on to the third missionary "How." "How can they hear of him apart from a proclaimer?" Without the telling, proclaiming, there can be no hearing. In High School, we debated for several days as to whether there would be sound in a forest when a tree fell, if there were no animal or person present to hear. Well, one thing is true, there is no hearing of the Gospel without it being proclaimed. This leads up to the fourth missionary "How." "How can they proclaim unless they are sent?" Paul is making a plea here for the church to release her forces in evangelization. "Unless they be sent", contains in it a veiled charge that they had been held back. The Jews who had become Christians still were held in the narrow confines of their jealous reserve and did not take readily to Paul's program of evangelization of the Gentiles. They were like a Mexican who once attended our church. He was asked to bring some of his friends, but replied, "I want this good church all to myself." Now, Paul gives us the fifth missionary "How." This one is not a question, but a declaration. He writes, "How fair the feet of the gospellers of peace, of the gospellers of good."

Here in these "Five Missionary Hows" is given to the church one of the most distinct and urgent of her "marching orders." Six steps are outlined from ignorance to salvation. Preachers are to be sent. As they go, they are to preach Christ. When they preach him, men will hear. As they hear, they will believe. When they believe, they will call upon him. When they call upon him, they will be saved.

Paul stamps this gospelling of salvation through Christ with glory and beauty. "How fair the feet of the Gospellers of peace." Sometimes the feet grew weary and with heaviness they drag slowly along. The burdens are so heavy and the journey so long. There are so many who know not Christ. But, Jesus says, "How beautiful the foot." A Proclaimer of the Lord is engaged in the most glorious and beautiful and beautifying mission among men.

Then Paul asserts the necessity of this Gospel evangelization. Without questioning God's plan in the least he asserts it. Man can be saved only through a personal calling on the Lord. This personal calling demands personal believing. This personal believing is dependent upon personal hearing. This personal hearing is dependent upon, not God speaking from Zion, nor the sending of Angels from heaven, but upon the sending of missionaries to preach the Christ.

In conclusion, may we call your attention to a sad mistake which we believe is being made in many churches. It is the constant comparing and contrasting and distinguishing of the so called, "Foreign Missionary" and "Home Missionary" zeal and liberality of the church. Home and Foreign Missions are both of God. "Beginning at Jerusalem" and "unto the uttermost parts of the earth", form God's program of evangelization. The National slogan of our church has been for five years or more, "Not less for Foreign Missions, but more for Home Missions." No church will ever increase their offerings for missions in America by criticizing the liberality of the offerings for those in Africa or South America. An equitable basis in our giving ought to be established. But decreasing one to increase the other savors of tearing down another's reputation to build up your own, the result is that you tear down both.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

A Model Church

By Charles W. Mayes

Hypocrites, saints and sinners alike have multifarious ideas about what a model church should be. But the model church is not built on ideas. Books by the train load tell men's best judgment about the model church. But a model church cannot be built on books. Orators settle (to their own satisfaction) all the problems connected with the church. But oratory is not authority. To whom then shall we go?

When it comes to matters of church standing, the inspired epistles of the great Apostle have the authority for which we seek. Or Paul himself would be quite capable of passing judgment on a church. Any congregation should be glad to be commended by Paul. If he were to step into the typical American church and hear the typical twentieth century preacher preach, what would be his reaction?

One of the churches to which St. Paul wrote is worthy of being called a model. That church is Thessalonica. To these believers he writes, "So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia." (1 Thess. 1:7). Now an ensample is a model. Then to all the region about Thessalonica, this church was a model. In the following verse we read, "For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak anything" (1 Thess. 1:8).

Perhaps there are some churches worthy of standing beside this church at Thessalonica, but to say the least, the model churches are few. Now the Thessalonian church is a model first, BECAUSE THEY ACCEPTED THE GOSPEL AS FROM GOD AND NOT FROM MEN. "For this cause also thank ye God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard from us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe" (1 Thess. 2:13). Paul opened to these people the scriptures which testify of the Lord Jesus Christ and they believed. Of course Paul used the Old Testament scriptural teaching, which they accepted as, "Not the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God." Here incidentally we see a tremendous claim for the inspiration of the Old Testament as not being the word of men, but the word of God. Say, the Thessalonians were real believers. The deity of Christ was no obstacle to their faith.

Today regiments of men are marching through the land denying the Bible and taking from it, its testimony of itself. They take Christ from his position of Deity where he placed himself. They vaporize the Spirit. They steal from God the right to make a plan for the world for all time, and place their own notions on a par with the revelations of God. But not so with this model church at Thessalonica. They accepted the Scripture not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God.

The model church did not only hear the Word of God. They acted. THEY TURNED TO GOD FROM IDOLS. This is what happens when the Scripture gets a serious hearing. These believers had to be taught about the grace of God, the love of God and the meaning of Christ's death and resurrection. When they heard about God sending his only begotten Son in the likeness of sinful flesh to condemn sin in the flesh, they heard readily and acted logically. When Paul told them about Christ crucified, dead, and resurrected, the history of whose life was written long before it happened, they turned to God from idols. How could they help it? The truth melted their hearts. The Spirit could do his work. Their common sense could tell them that idols could never settle the sin question. And the worst unbeliever knows more about sin than many of us give him credit for knowing. These Thessalonians had found a God better than idols as they gave up the idols and did it gladly.

Faith in God cannot be a dead thing. The man who claims to have faith in God and never does anything about it shows that he does not have faith. After these Thessalonians had turned to God from idols, they turned TO SERVE THE LIVING AND TRUE GOD (1 Thess. 1:9). The faith of the model church was a serving faith, a faith that would work. To them, to serve the living and true God was a labor of love (1 Thess. 1:3). Today there is a world of room in which to serve the living and true God. Just to think! Our Lord is a living Lord! He stands at the right hand of the Father on high and his word to us is to tell the whole world about him. The truth is to be taken to men everywhere. Who will carry it? Those who sing understandingly:

Must Jesus bear the Cross alone

And all the world go free?

No, there's a cross for every one,

And there's a cross for me.

Our cross is to carry his Cross to every cross road on earth. "Go ye therefore and teach, all nations..." MANY ARE NOT WILLING TO OBEY THAT COMMISSION TODAY. Instead, much of the church is trying to put into operation the man made plan, to "make the world Christian."

But remember it! The church is to teach all nations what the Lord has commanded. God will take care of the results. The world needs Christ. They need the LIFE WHICH ONLY HE CAN GIVE. His principles will never take the place of his Person. The world needs Christ, not character dissertations. The world needs to hear how to be saved, then it can hear how to live. No man can LIVE UNTIL HE IS ALIVE IN CHRIST JESUS! The world needs the Bible which testifies of the Lord Jesus Christ, not men's opinions about the Bible. The world needs peace of heart. World peace will come when the Prince of Peace gets here. Not before.

The church has many childlike notions about service. But sandwiches and coffee to the needy mean service only to the extent that they create a hunger for the Bread of Life and a thirst for the Water of Life. Our churches need to learn that GOING TO A CLASS PARTY OCCASIONALLY AND ATTENDING SUNDAY SCHOOL WHEN THE WEATHER IS RIGHT AND BAKING A PIE TO RAISE A LITTLE MUCH NEEDED CASH IS AS FAR FROM THE LORD'S WAY OF SERVING AS THE EAST IS FROM THE WEST. Service is giving one's self. Take the burden of souls upon you. Take the Bible as the Word of God. Study it. Get acquainted with God's plan. Turn to God from idols. When the idols are gone, service will become easy. Surrender your will, and life, possession, power and pocketbook will follow. No task set forth in God's word will then be too great, no sacrifice too hard, no gift too great, and no burden too heavy.

The Model Church we will remember, turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God. But that is not all. They turned also TO WAIT FOR HIS SON FROM HEAVEN. They at Thessalonica WERE INTERESTED IN THE RETURN OF THE LORD. Paul talked freely to this model church about the doctrine. If we notice carefully, the doctrine is mentioned near the close of every one of the five chapters of the First Thessalonian epistle.

The Second Coming of Christ is a vital part of Gospel preaching. The church which is not instructed in the Biblical truths concerning the return of the Lord, and the consummation of the age, is deprived of a tremendous blessing. The model church must have had it in their hearts for the writer, speaking of this "blessed hope" writes, "Wherefore comfort one another with these things."

A model church must have of course a definite faith. It will emphasize the work of Christ on the Cross. It will not forget the risen Lord. It will likewise anticipate the coming Christ, and look forward with expectation to the event which will be the glorious "appearing of God our Savior." The church which does not wait for his Son from heaven misses one of the very happiest elements of the Christian faith.

The model church of which Paul speaks, was not content with a milk and water Gospel. They wanted meat. It is the business of a model church thus to preach a whole Bible and not a Bible full of holes. Believers today should "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you for a reason for the hope that is in you" (1 Peter. 3:15).

This model church with its glorious doctrine likewise had a glorious life. For all this we are told is "to the end he may establish your hearts unblamable in holiness" (1 Thess. 3:13). The Word of God emphasizes doctrine but does not forget duty. Paul through his writings seems to follow the principle of presenting some great foundation truth concerning Christ and then making it appeal to the daily walk. This has been done in the letter to the model church. We are not to wonder then that the Spirit in this letter places emphasis on how the Thessalonians lived. The first twelve verses of the fourth chapter set forth the principles of the model walk of the believer. They then close characteristically with the believer's hope. "But I would not have you ignorant brethren concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not for others which have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, for this we say unto you BY THE WORD OF THE LORD, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not precede them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God; and the dead

OUTLINE OF "THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER"

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience.)

SUNDAY—Prayer is Subject to Spiritual Laws. Lk. 18:1-14; 1 Cor. 14:15; Rom. 8:26. "I will pray with the Spirit and I will pray with the understanding also." It is man's nature to converse with the Infinite; it is a function not for the Lenten season only, but for the whole of life. But the mere uttering of words is not praying; there must be a stirring of the depths.

Prayer—For holy aspirations; strength for burdens; our enemies; for the prevalence of the spirit of brotherhood.

MONDAY—We Should Pray in Private, Lk. 11:1-13; Mt. 6:6; 14:23; Lk. 6:12. "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret." Jesus could pray anywhere. Yet he knew the essential value of private prayer, and he fled to the mountains to practice it.

Prayer—Thanks for true servants of God. Pray for grace of surrender; for judges, lawyers, criminals.

TUESDAY—We Should Pray for Others, Jn. 17; Mt. 18:19; Jas. 5:16. "Pray one for another." We cannot be Christian unless we are unselfish. Prayer quickens the feelings, moves the sympathy and enables us to love others.

Prayer—For sympathy; mastery of the unexpected; for officers of the law.

WEDNESDAY—We Should Pray in Public. Ps. 116:1-14; 1 Chron. 16:29; Heb. 10:24, 25, "I will pay my vows unto Jehovah, yea, in the presence of all his people." The congregation is the power-house of the Spirit; the worshipping throng is peculiarly susceptible to God's mind.

Prayer—Thanks for co-laborers. Pray for molders of public opinion; for modern Pharisees.

THURSDAY—Friendship with God Involves Mutual Interests, Mt. 6:8, 19-34; Phil. 4:8. "But seek ye first his kingdom, and his righteousness." If we are truly interested in the affairs of God, nothing can keep us back from communion with him (from prayer), and we shall be eager for service to God and to man.

Prayer—For interest in God's interests; for the indifferent; for the President of the United States.

FRIDAY—Friendship with God Involves Mutual Self-revelation and Answering Trust. Hos. 14; 1 Jn. 1:9; Isa. 1:18; 43:1; 50:4. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and righteous to forgive us." I will bring to him the confession of my sins and the fervor of my desires.

Prayer—Thanks for the Great Friend. Pray for understanding of self; for strangers to God.

SATURDAY—Friendship with God Involves Self-Surrender. 2 Cor. 6; Jas. 4:8; Mt. 7:21; 6:14. "Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you." When I come to converse with God as his friend, I am eager to give up everything that is offensive to him.

Prayer—For obedient spirits; for our homes; for the blind, the deaf, the inmates of other institutions.

in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words" (1 Thess. 4:13-18). Can we not share this comfort? Three seconds after that event takes place every believer will feel repaid for a whole lifetime of trouble and persecution.

Let us now remember that the model church must accept the Word of God as from God and not as from man. It must turn to God from idols. It must serve the living and the true God. It must wait for his Son from heaven. Believers are freed in Christ from the guilt of sin, from the power of sin and when this same Jesus shall so come in like manner as he went, he will free his church from the PRESENCE OF SIN. He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself (1 John 3:3). What a happy thought! What a glorious hope! What a continuous comfort! The Brethren church, standing on the platform THE BIBLE, THE WHOLE BIBLE AND NOTHING BUT THE BIBLE, has the possibility of demonstrating to the world, THE MODEL CHURCH. Will we arise to the occasion? Lanark, Illinois.

One in a Hundred

The following statement appeared in the missionary page of The Moody Monthly. It is food for sober thinking and should prove an impetus to Christian giving, especially among those who look and long for Christ's soon return:

A conservative estimate places the total number of Protestant Christians in the whole world at approximately 35,000,000. It is perhaps safe to say that only half of this number have really experienced the new birth and know the risen Lord as their personal Redeemer. This means that at the present day, 1,900 years after Calvary, only one in every one hundred of the world's population knows the joy of salvation, and the ninety-nine are still in the place of spiritual death. A considerable number of these are living in communities where the Gospel has been preached for generations, and are enjoying many of the incidental benefits of Christian light and truth, but the vast majority are far removed from the sound of the Good News, and know not even the name of God and of his dear Son. What are the Lord's redeemed ones doing for that great enslaved mass of benighted, suffering souls? For carrying out our Lord's command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature", the whole Christian church contributes annually a sum approximating $69,000,000. This means that the average individual contribution is about $2.00 per year, or less than four cents a week. Compare this paltry, insignificant sum with what is spent on needless luxuries, or recklessly wasted! The average American family spends about $500 a year on luxuries, $80 of which goes for mere amusements. The average church member uses perhaps eight times as much money for needless indulgences as he contributes toward the evangelization of the world. When will the world be evangelized? What will be our explanation when we stand in the presence of our Lord and Redeemer?—Selected by Alice B. Longaker.

Get into sympathy with Jesus. Seek his presence, seek his help. And walking through the world in his company, you will be as balm in the bleakest weather, a benediction in the wildest scene.—James Hamilton.

The Home

By J. L. Kimmel

(Digest of sermon preached at Fort Wayne, Indiana, February 14, 1927, and published in the "Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette")

"The state, the home and the church are the three great factors of a nation. Without these a nation could not exist.

"This church has become such a potent factor in the civilization of our day that it is evident that if the church should fail that civilization would collapse and there would be nothing left for this world but despair.

"There is, however, another institution that seems to tower above all others and that is the home.

"The home was the first institution that God ever ordained. Without it no other great institution can stand. Great as our Republican form of government is, it could not possibly stand without the home.

"Great as the church of Jesus Christ is, it is apparent she could not continue to have a saving and restraining influence among men if the sanctity of the home were destroyed. A stream can rise no higher than its source and the church cannot possibly be any better than the homes that represent it.

The Irreligious Home

"There are too many irreligious homes in this Christian country in which we live—homes where the Bible is not read and where prayer is never offered and religious instruction is entirely unknown. Homes where cheap, trashy literature takes the place of good books, and the dance, the card table, and the movies take the place of things that are pure, and should fill the hearts and minds of the occupants of the homes.

Cites Unhappy Homes

"There are so many unhappy homes. God intended that the home should be a paradise here upon earth and with Christ exalted and given the first place. Instead, however, the thoughts of God and righteousness are banished from the home, and the things that have an evil tendency are made welcome, and then people wonder why their homes are so unhappy.

"This city has very many beautiful homes, but beautiful homes are not necessarily good homes or happy homes. It takes more than brick and mortar, great paintings and costly furniture to make a home.

"A beautiful home is a place where good words are spoken, good deeds are done, and pure thoughts are expressed. In other words the people who live in the house make the home.

Impurity in Home Assailed

"God pity the people who live in a home where the very atmosphere is filled with curses and quarrels and impure thoughts and wicked deeds. There is only one hope for such a home, and that is to bring it under an influence and a power that can lift it out of such an atmosphere. That power is the church.

"Lincoln, the great emancipator, was reared in a home of poverty, but this is what he had to say when he had reached the highest office in the land: 'All I am, and all I have accomplished, I owe to my angel mother.'

"The tremendous responsibilities of the home cannot be overestimated. Because there is where character is formed and the foundation of manhood and womanhood is laid."

Crown him with many crowns!
Crown him the Virgin's Son,
The God incarnate born,
Whose arm those crimson trophies won
Which now his brow adorn;

The root where mercy ever flows,

—Matthew Bridge, 1800.

Introduction.—The ministry in Galilee is now drawing to its close. Through the length and breadth of the country Jesus has proclaimed the kingdom of Christ, and has shown by mighty works that he is the Christ, that was to come. He begins to ask the disciples, what are the results of all his labor. First inquiring what the people said he was, he then put the same question to the apostles themselves.

Open Confession of Christ the Need of Today. "What we need in this age, as Christian men, is the heroism of what we believe. What we need is the courage to put our creed into our deeds and not let our creed be something that is separate from ourselves. What we need is to be able to keep our Christianity and our ideals in the midst of men and women who are losing both—to be unafraid and unashamed. "Where is the heroism of what we believe? How is the world any better off for what such a man believes? What has he done for it? What has your religion ever done that has ever helped any man to do anything? What have you as Christian men ever said that has helped any man to do anything? Let that test your religion."—Bishop Laycock.

Note that the triumph of the church depends upon its remaining upon the Rock, for only thus is it the church to which the promise is made. It "will be strong and enduring only so long as the faith in the Father and in Christ the Son, and the Spirit of the Father and the Son reign in it. When the Christ spirit is weak, the church will be weak."—Exp. Gk. Test.

Application. "Our cities are crying for rock Christians. Of gentle Christians, and affable Christians, and kind-hearted Christians we have abundance. Christians should stand like rock amid the seas which surge and roar. Like rock they should stand around the Lord's day, beating back the social and industrial forces which are rolling in like a flood. Nothing but the rock will save our cities from the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah."—Charles E. Jefferson, D. D.

The gift of the keys is widely bestowed upon man. God has bestowed upon him the keys of nature, as to a house with numberless doors, and bids him open them. Science and civilization are the results of the use of this power of the keys. Not so much knowledge as the power to learn is God's gift to men. "It is an awful responsibility, but it is a magnificent trust." But the process of learning the use of the keys has been "worth far more than all else which civilization has brought." In the same way and for the same purpose "God gives to each soul personally the keys of his own destiny and bids him unlock life's closed doors; puts in his hands the rudder and bids him steer his bark; gives him the tools and bids him model his own character. This is the solemnest fact of all."—Lyman Abbott.

What Think Ye of Christ? "From the day of this conference at Caesarea Philippi down to the present day there have never been in the world but two opinions concerning Jesus of Nazareth. According to one opinion, Jesus is a man, a great man truly wonderful, but only a man, a bright and shining light like John the Baptist, a sensitive and tender-hearted patriot and martyr like Jeremiah, an intrepid messenger from the courts of heaven like Elijah, a beautiful Heraclitus or Socrates, a noble Seneca or Epictetus, a Palestinian Confucius or Buddha, very great and very wonderful, but still a man. According to the other opinion he is the Mesisah, the desire of the nations, the consummator of history, the one who was to come, the Son of the Eternal, the only Son of God, unparalleled, unapproached, unapproachable, unique, unlike any person that has ever been, or that ever will be. From the beginning of the Christian church took the higher of these two conceptions, and she has steadfastly held it to the present hour. The lower conception is easier to grasp than the higher, but a conception is not to be rejected simply because it is difficult to take it in."—Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D.D.

Christ's conquering church, the church established on men's allegiance to him as their personal Savior, has proved to be the one enduring earthly institution. It has outlasted the world's mightiest empires. The citizens of Christ's kingdom, though often won lasting influence while great poets, painters, architects, orators, and rulers are obscure and ignorant of scholarly lore, have forgotten. Against Christ's conquering church, ceaselessly through the ages, all the bitter onset of Satan's armies has been hurled, and hurled in vain. It is mightier today than ever before, and is conquering and to conquer until it shall win universal domain.

"The Cross is not merely a symbol of something done for us. It is even more, a symbol of something we must do. Every one of us, if we would really live, must take up our cross. We must solemnly dedicate ourselves to the task of making the new order prevail in the world. This self-surrender must be complete, but it is only in exceptional cases that it means a clean break with all our former activities. Usually we continue our lives in the old associations, but with a new spirit animating all we do, the spirit of brotherliness and human service.

"Involved in this self-surrender is the desire for growth. The enthusiasm of the task that is ours, the sense of our inadequacy to its demands, make us willing to pay the price of increased capacity. And always this self-surrender means the finding of the self. It is only as we throw our lives away in unselfish service that we truly find them. Plain men and women have found over and over again that life has become a new and beautiful thing when they have dedicated themselves to the kingdom of God."—Rev. T. H. Billings, Ph.D., (The Illustrated Quarterly).

Teacher Training Work in Korea

Teacher Training in American Sunday schools has been emphasized for so long that it seems to be experiencing a slump in some quarters. A new thing always catches the interest and holds the center of the stage for a season, and for some things there is no loss when they pass out of focus, but efficient and consecrated Sunday school teachers are not a mere passing fad, they are a permanent essential to progress of the kingdom of God. And we must not grow weary in well doing with regard to teacher training.

It may be an inspiration to note the advance in the work in one of our religiously aggressive mission lands. The Korea Sunday School Association is giving special attention to Teacher Training and their plans with regard to the training course for 1927 is worthy of note. The list of approxed text books was revised that the very best available may be placed in the hands of those who are preparing to teach in the Bible schools of Korea. As before, the Teacher Training Course may be studied in Bible Institutes, Bible classes, or at home by correspondence. On each course a list of 100 questions has been prepared which lists can be obtained by the teachers of such classes or by individuals studying the course. When ready for examination, questions will be sent out from the office of Rev. J. G. Holdcroft, D.D., Secretary of the Association, whose office is in Seoul. Papers are returned to Dr. Holdcroft and those passing will be given a certificate for each course in which they make the required grade. All students are to take the first four courses, preferably in the order in which they are listed. When these are finished one is to be elected under Specialization, ordinarily the one corresponding to the grade in which the person works. When five subjects are completed a diploma will be granted. Even Teacher Training Classes of only ten days' duration, by studying two subjects for two periods each day, can complete two subjects in two, or at the most in three years.

The mountains are girt with the chariots of God fighting with the hosts of righteousness. What we need above all things are eyes to see.

We Need the Cash

By George S. Baer

To do this work, we need the cash,
And need it now.
The pledge you made, pay with a dash,
And pay it now.
If on the job, please do your stroke;
Don't make your C. E. pledge a joke;
The treasury is nearly broke,
So pay up now.

If you have never made a pledge,
Well, send the cash.
Just lift your pen, your check's the wedge,
And drive the cash.
Thus you will help to get us through
This knotty problem, and renew
Our faith in what C. E. can do.
So send the cash.

(Dedicated to the Booster's Committee of Christian Endeavor's Kentucky Mission Program.)

To which the Chairman of your Booster
Committee appends the following:

Our thanks go out to Brother Baer
For this fine poem.
We think that he has hit the nail square
On the dome.
We sure do need your every pledge
If we would keep our work on edge.
So, any time you send that "wedge"
We'll be at home.

And, by the way, Endeavor Friends,
Incline your ear.
We have one other thing to say,
And that quite clear.
Not many moons will pass away
Until we'll stray up Cleveland way.
Now, may we see your face and say,
"We're glad you're here?"

'Nuf said. Now do your stuff.
These writings are not bluster,
And we do not aim to bluff,
But if you will get your cash in faster
We can do more for the Master
And for him we ne'er can do enough.

ITS UP TO YOU

*If you think you are beaten, you are;
If you think you dare not, you don't.
If you'd like to win and think you can't,
It's almost a cinch that you won't.
If you think you will lose, you're lost,
For out of the world we find Success begins with a fellow's will;
It's all in the state of mind.
If you think you are outclassed, you are;
You've got to think high to rise.
You've got to be sure of yourself before
You can ever win a prize.
Life's battles don't always go
To the stronger of faster man;
But sooner or later the man who wins
Is the man who thinks he can.*

Using What Talents We Have Mark 25:14-29

"Mother, what did Rev. Jones mean yesterday when he said that everyone had talents. What are talents, and how can I get some?"

Mother smiled at Betty Jane before replying, "Talents are abilities. Rev. Jones meant that all of us have abilities to do certain things and that we should do those things. You have talents, too, and I want you to learn to use them."

"What are my talents, mother?" asked Betty Jane.

"Well, sometimes it is rather hard to tell, when a little girl is only seven years old, what her special talents are. Do you see the sunshine coming in that window over there? Look at the table and the flowers and the rug and see how beautiful that sunshine makes everything that it shines upon."

"Oh, I do see. Isn't that nice? I like to watch the sunshine on things. I remember the day when you took me down to the little brook and we watched the sunshine sparkle on the brook so that the little brook was so beautiful."

Mother smiled at her little girl and said, "I am glad that you remember that. Now there are some people that have the talent of being like that sunshine. I think that that is one of the best talents that anyone can have. People who have the talent of being like the sunshine can make other people beautiful and happy like the sunshine made the little brook."

"I think that that would be wonderful, mother. How can people have such a talent as that? I couldn't have such a nice talent, could I? I would like to so much."

"That's just what I was thinking about," said mother, "It seems to me that my little girl might have just that talent. Once there was a little girl named Pollyanna who had the sunshine talent and people called her the glad girl. Some time I'll read you that story. Little girls with the sunshine talent try never to fret or cry when they can't have just what they want and they make other people glad by being glad themselves."

The very next day Betty Jane had a chance to show her talent of being bright like the sunshine. Mother had to go to town to do some shopping and she did not have much time for all the work that she wanted to do, so she told Betty Jane, "You will have to entertain yourself this afternoon, grandmother will be busy in the house and I am going to town shopping. Don't go out into the streets. Play in the yard and the house."

Betty Jane was about to ask why she had to stay home. She started to frown and look cross, then she remembered that her mother had said that little girls might have the sunshine talent and that she had decided to see if she had that talent. She smiled and said, "I'll have a nice time out in the yard with the kittens." Then mother smiled and looked happy for Betty Jane's sunshine had helped someone already.

About a week later Betty Jane had a harder test than ever. Something happened that seemed so bad that she almost decided to let the cloud of frowns and scowls cover up the sunshine of her smile. This is what happened. Mother's sister was seriously sick and had sent for mother. That meant that Betty Jane would have to go to bed each night without mother's kiss and mother to tuck the covers up. That meant that Betty Jane would have to get up each morning and dress herself without asking mother about her clothes and having mother help her when she needed it. It means Oh so many terrible things that Betty Jane said to herself, "Surely I can not smile and look happy now." After a few minutes she decided that she had enough sunshine talent even for such a terrible thing. So she smiled quite cheerily and that made her mother feel very much better about leaving her.

Thus Betty Jane developed her sunshine talent and when she grew older she found that she had other talents, too, and she worked very hard to develop and use these in the right way, too.

Membership in the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church

(All who wish to be "workers together with him" in our foreign work, please read this.)

There are three classes of active membership in the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church.

(1) The individual active member is one whose contribution of $5.00 to the work of The Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church entitles him to one year's membership in the Society and a year's free subscription to our monthly magazine, "The Brethren Missionary." A gift of $10.00 entitles him to membership and subscription for two years; $15.00 for three years, and so on.

(2) An individual contributing $10.00 in a lump sum to the Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren Church, may become a Life Member of the Society, with a life subscription to "The Brethren Missionary."

(3) Congregations, Sunday Schools, Young People's Societies and other organizations may become active members for one year by contributing $25.00 in a lump sum, and the magazine will be sent for one year to whatever address the organization may designate.

This latter class of membership was decided upon by the Foreign Board at its annual meeting at Winona Lake last August. As you can well realize, churches and other organizations are never supposed to die, and therefore a Life Membership would mean a perpetual membership and subscription to the magazine. And yet, sad to relate, such bodies do sometimes pass away, or they change officers, and no one thinks to notify the Office Secretary of their demise or of the change of address. As a result, the magazine continues to go indefinitely to some one who is not entitled to it and who takes no interest in it. So, in order to avoid this unbusinesslike waste, the Board decided on this new classification, which will automatically take care of such a situation.

Now, all ye churches, Sunday School Classes, Young People's Societies, etc., surely $25.00 is a sum that you can easily reach. And beginning with this Easter's Offering, the Foreign Board will issue a beautiful certificate of membership to each such organization, stating its name, the amount given and the length of its membership in The Foreign Missionary Society. This certificate will be of a size suitable for framing, and on it will be provided space for the affixing of seals, which will be sent to the organization from the office of the Foreign Missionary Society as later gifts are received. These seals will bear the amount of the additional gift and will automatically extend the term of membership in accordance with the amount of the additional gift. Come now, get together on the Easter Offering and secure one of these certificates for your class room or meeting place!

But REMEMBER, neither individual membership, life membership nor this term membership for organizations, will be given unless there is an explicit request for such membership. It is a privilege and a prayer responsibility to be a member of The Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren Church, and we would not force it upon any individual or organization against their desire. Also, in the case of an organization, be sure to give the name and address of the individual to whom the magazine is to be mailed monthly.

As to Life Memberships now held by churches and their organizations, these, of course, will stand as issued. But the Board, at its annual meeting instructed the Office Secretary to notify those churches, organizations, etc., holding Life Memberships that it will be required of each such organization to notify the Office Secretary in writing before June 30th of each year of their desire to continue receiving "The Brethren Missionary," giving the name and address of the officer to whom the magazine shall be addressed. In the event that such written notice shall not reach the Office Secretary by the date specified, subscription to "The Brethren Missionary" will be discontinued until request for renewal is received. So, shortly all such churches and organizations on record as Life Members will receive such a notice. Please help the Office Secretary at this busy time of the year by answering promptly.

ALICE B. LONGAKER, Office Secretary,
 1925 East Fifth Street,
 Long Beach, California.

An Open Letter

Long Beach, Calif., March 17, 1927.

Dear Members of the F. M. S.:

It has been a long time since I took my typewriter in hand to write unto you an epistle, and here it is almost Easter-time again!

Easter Sunday is a wonderful day to the Christian, for it is the time when we especially remember the glory of the resurrection of our glorious Lord from the dead,—indeed, on every Lord's Day, as we meet to worship him and show our love for him, we do show forth his resurrection. But Easter Sunday in the Brethren church has a special significance, for it also spells F-o-r-e-i-g-n M-s-s-i-o-n-s,—it is the day when we make our annual offering of money to carry to those in Africa and in South America the news of our Lord's death for our offences and of his resurrection for our justification! It is the day when we do our best in giving of our money.

But do you know, dear Members, you can give something that is far more precious in the Lord's sight than your money—something that will reach even farther? And that thing is time,—precious moments,—yes, we know at least one dear brother who gives hours of his time in daily prayer for our missionaries, naming them one by one and praying God's blessing on their work for him, and his protection of their health and life. And we know that in more than one instance that man has moved the very Hand of God by his faithful prayer. Yes, prayer travels far and is powerful—it reaches up to the very throne of our Mighty God, and, through him, travels on to Africa, South America, China, and the very smallest islands of the sea. What a storehouse of power is PRAYER. Many of us have not much money to give, but $1.00 backed up by the prayers of one who is God's child will do a thousand times more of God's work on the foreign field than $1,000.00 given without enough personal interest and consecration to ask God's blessing upon it, and guidance and blessing on the spending of every penny of it.

"Little is much when God is in it;
 Man's busiest day's not worth God's minute!"

It is entirely beyond the comprehension of our little, finite minds why our Almighty God and Heavenly Father should wait for the prayers of his children before he moves and works the impossible, but nevertheless it is true that the God of all the universe has committed unto us the honor and the privilege of being co-laborers with him (II) Cor. 6:1) in the salvation of souls even thousands of miles away,—souls whom we shall never even see until that great Day when we shall all stand before the Judgment Seat of Christ!

So, this is a call to every individual member of the Brethren Church who realizes the tremendous responsibility of having "committed unto us the word of reconciliation." We cannot all go in person to the foreign field, but we can go by our prayers. Let individuals pray: let Prayer Bands pray! If you do not have a Prayer Band in your church, form one and set aside a special and regular time for prayer for our work in Africa and South America. "The Brethren Missionary" will keep you informed of the work and needs on both fields. The forces of Satan in these last days are so fierce in their onslaughts on the work in both Africa and South America, that were it not for prayer, our missionaries would be overwhelmingly defeated every day! So you who are giving so sacrificially this Easter-time, PRAY, PRAY, PRAY, daily. The Master spent whole nights in prayer. May we never be among those to whom he says, "What, could ye not watch with Me one hour?" As, pray that the spirit of prayer may descend upon each one of us, and that the Master of Prayer himself shall teach us to pray in accordance with his own perfect will for our lives and for the winning of the "other sheep not of this fold" for whom the Lord of Glory died!

Yours in His Glad Service,
THAT OFFICE SECRETARY.

The Thracian emblem of God was a sun with three beams; one shining upon a sea of ice and thawing it; another upon a rock and melting it; and a third upon a dead man and putting life into him. So God shines upon his people even in their forgetfulness of him, and brings to an end their coldness, and hardness, and deadness.—From Cyclo-pedia of Religious Anecdotes.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

A Group of Rural Churches

COUNTY LINE—LA PAZ AND TEE-GARDEN, INDIANA

These churches are located about 16 miles south of South Bend and are only separated about five miles from each other, County Line and La Paz being only two miles from each other. All three are small in membership and only one having regular preaching. Brother Delbert Whitmer is preaching part time at La Paz. They all have Sunday school and comfortable buildings. It does seem that some arrangement should be made so that this work could be consolidated, or a pastor be secured for full time to take care of the field. I am fully convinced they are able to meet the support of a minister.

It was necessary for me to get aid in finding the families from the Brethren, which was gladly given. The people were very friendly to our school and the program.

The gifts from County Line was $275.00. La Paz gave $201.69. On account of working conditions Teegarden gave only $10.00. This made a total for this group of $486.60.

BIBLE CONFERENCE AT LANARK, ILLINOIS

There is nothing the writer enjoys more than a real live Bible conference. It makes little difference whether he is the speaker or just an interested listener if the Word of God is the subject for honest consideration. In this case it was my privilege to be the speaker in a Bible conference that stirred up more enthusiasm in a week than some conferences develop in a month, or more than some churches ever experience.

The preparation for such results on so short notice, for we just stopped over a few days between meetings, was made by the pastor Charles W. Mayes, who is a Bible lover. Jeremiah said, "Thy words were found and I did eat them." This pretty well describes the attitude of Brother Mayes. We had our meals with him, when not in the homes of the people of Lanark, and besides other things to eat it was Bible for breakfast, Bible for dinner, and Bible for supper, besides two long services at the church each day and often private conferences in between. For once in our life we were just about talked to the limit.

The Brethren at Lanark are being trained in the real essentials of the Book and their appetites were keen for the studies we had to present. The question box produced whole handfuls of questions almost every night. This enlivened the meeting and gave a range of Bible exposition that was helpful to the meeting. Some of the preachers of the other churches came in to help and to be helped, and others came to criticize and to scoff. However, we were not disturbed by this for the Scripture says, 2 Peter 3:3, 4, Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days SCOFFERS, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? Strange indeed it is that so many preachers insist on PRIVATELY interpreting the Bible.

We were given a room in the home of Brother George Garber, while in Lanark. He is a teacher in the High School and a director of athletics. We mention this not only because of the splendid home he gave us but to note also that here is a man in a position where little religion is required these days, yet this coach loves the Bible and is teaching it as much as he can in his classes and in his games. The school life of our nation needs teachers like him in every room in the country. The fellowship we had in the homes of the members and friends of the church was a great blessing. Several visits in the home of Brother Livengood were greatly enjoyed. Brother Livengood is recovering from a serious illness which has kept him in doors for several weeks.

Brother Mayes is a pastor who is much loved by his people and he is sparing no effort in feeding them with the true Bread which came down from heaven. Furthermore, he knows when the Scripture is for the Jew, or the Gentile, or the Church of God and thus can truthfully direct the study of the Word.

As president of the Evangelistic and Bible Study League, we presented the cause of the League at one of the services and secured several new members. The offering for my services was very generous and I count it all joy to have spent a few days with the Brethren at Lanark.

A. V. KIMMELL,
Whittier, California.

LIFE AT LANARK Bible Conference

We recently had the privilege of having Brother A. V. Kimmell with us for a week of Bible Conference. This was a most successful endeavor. Although the roads just at that time were terrible, the crowds were large. Many people made extraordinary efforts to come over the bad roads. Brother Kimmell teaches the Bible, the whole Bible and nothing but the Bible.

Brother Kimmell came to Lanark just at the psychological moment. When a few were having difficulty in establishing the pre-millennial truth of the Bible, Brother Kimmell happened along and made things clear. Everybody says, "If he could just have stayed longer." There was just one group of people in the town who did not like the conference. That was the modernists. However, they hid themselves and had to do their objecting secretly.

Just a word about advertising. We did not advertise the man, in particular. But instead we made the subject for each night prominent with three or four questions under each subject which would surely be answered. These questions were not "catch" questions but they were the things which arise in many minds and which the Scripture makes clear. A very interesting question box was conducted. This attracted attention also. We also found that people tell others when they know the Bible teacher is a teacher of the Bible.

Afternoon meetings were also held with good attendance. If any church wishes to secure a Bible teacher or evangelist who will do the church a great and lasting good, get Brother Kimmell.

Last evening after the service, four were baptized, two men and two school boys. Several others will be in the near future.

CHAS. W. MAYES.

FROM AN ITINERATING EVANGELIST

In a recent article in the Evangelist I made an error which I wish to correct.

I baptized Brother and Sister Baker near Millsboro, Delaware, not Brother and Sister Bailey as I stated. Brother and Sister Bailey have been good active Christians for four years; they made confession at my services, but were baptized by Brother Bowers. I gladly correct this mistake, as it was not intentional.

I recently baptized a young married couple near Millsboro, Delaware—Brother and Sister Conway; both are proving to be active spiritual Christians. Two weeks ago I had a preaching service in the home of Brother and Sister Harvey Evenses, near Bethany Beach. He will be baptized soon.

Since the sudden and unexpected death of dear Brother Witter I have been filling his pulpit in the Third Church in Philadelphia until they can get a suitable pastor.

Brother Witter and I have been special friends for many years, but we in our work have been so far apart, and so strenuous that we seldom met except at conferences.

He was so absolutely free from selfishness and jealousy and so full of kindness and love that I could not help but have a special love for him. The articles written by Brethren Paul Miller and George Carpenter were certainly not overdrawn.

I have great sympathy for Sister Witter and his son and wife as well as for the Third church that is suffering by the loss.

How I long to manifest more of that sweet spirit and nature that seemed so natural in his Christian life.

ISAAC D. BOWMAN,
Leesburgh, New Jersey.

ARDMORE BRETHREN CHURCH, SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

We are glad to come to the Brethren with another report of the work in Ardmore Heights, South Bend. Several phases of the work indicate progress. First, general growth of the attendance; church school increasing in numbers and interest; the formation of a Junior department of the school under the leadership of Miss Fields and assisted by an efficient corps of Junior workers; the meeting the need of our young married people by organizing a class for them is meaning much in numbers and usefulness to the church itself. M. P. Runyan is our energetic church school superintendent.

A Christian Endeavor has been organized and Brother Jack Faulkner, one of our fine young men, is acting in the capacity of president. In this organization interest is as yet not all we would like but we see where it will meet a need among our young people.

The W. M. S. of the church has been doing a nice work under the leadership of Mrs. Charles Pierce. This work is both in the things material and spiritual. We men of the church have long since seen the value of a WORKING W. M. S., for they are such a help in time of need.

Our Sunday morning worship hour has not come up to our hopes, but even in this the attendance has been good. Our Sunday evening attendance has been very gratifying, especially in the attendance of our young people. We are offering nothing spectacular and yet the young people are increasing each Sunday evening until last Sunday evening the house was full and better than half were young folks. It is to the young people that we are turning our definite attention, and we are glad for the response.

Why and where is Ardmore Brethren church? It is truly the Second Brethren church of South Bend, located in an addition just west of the city and with one more annexation move on the part of the city and we will be subject to city taxes. The addition is with nominal restrictions and peopled with all American people. The church was originally located here to meet the demands of a scattered rural Brethren people but has now come to a place where she can serve in a larger way and the Brethren have a deep desire to meet this opportunity.

To meet this opportunity, they believed

NEW BRETHREN PARSONAGE
Ardmore, South Bend, Indiana

the work would progress better with a pastor living in the field and giving the services each Sunday. With this in view a parsonage proposition was launched late in the summer of 1926. The actual building was begun about the middle of October and on December 30th we moved into a parsonage that any pastor in the brotherhood would appreciate as a residence. The house is modern in every detail. A double stall garage was also built at the same time.

This building project is perhaps the largest material work yet attempted by these good folks. By the wise supervision of several of the men and aided by the liberal donations of labor, this house and garage was presented to the church at a cost of $3,072.20. It is generally estimated that any contractor would ask anywhere from $5,000.00 to $5,500.00 to build as has been done. There were no dollars in the pocket at the start but on Sunday, January 23, the Elkhart Brethren kindly loaned us their pastor, W. I. Duker, who is the writer's brother, and the entire amount was raised in cash and subscriptions. There is now but $2,000.00 indebtedness against the project and this is fully covered by the pledges. One of the splendid features of this giving was the fine way in which the young men and young ladies gave.

Our next special work will be our evangelistic meetings with our good Brother C.

C. Grisso of Warsaw as evangelist and Brother Milt Wysong of South Bend as song director. These meetings will begin on Sunday, March 13th and continue for two and perhaps three weeks.

Next Sunday at the morning service baptism will be administered to a family of four and we are trusting to have three or four others ready by that time.

E. A. DUKER, Pastor.

P. S. Seven were baptized on Sunday morning.

LOST CREEK, KENTUCKY

Nice, unusually warm spring weather brought out a large crowd for services today. We have just been passing through one of the most rainy and muddy times ever known in this section.

Walter Napier, one of our last year graduates, recently spent a day with us, and left $10.00 to apply on our new piano.

We are expecting Dr. Jacobs with us for the commencement address, April first.

The Sunday school here has now ordered a new piano for the chapel room, a Kimball. This piano is made possible largely through the help of the Long Beach church, Long Beach, California. They are paying for half of it, and the Sunday school here is paying the other half, so it is now understood. The Sunday school has sent a vote of thanks to the Long Beach Brethren for their help.

Only three more weeks of our regular school year. Then, beginning April 4th, Miss Hooks and the writer will teach a six weeks' review drill for teachers, expecting to go to the county examination. Some others will take the work also.

Mrs. Srack has not been very well of late, but she keeps up her work. Our Lord has done wonderful things for this sister, keeping her going when the doctors said she could not go longer. Hers is a real life of faith and trust. Brother Early and the writer recently anointed her according to James, 5th chapter. Will you join us in prayer for her that it may be our Lord's will to keep her in such health that she can do her Bible and other work years yet?

Will you join us in prayer that God will raise up a young man who can teach here, and also take care of the athletic activities of the young folks. This is a phase of the work that must be taken care of, and there is REAL NEED OF THE RIGHT KIND OF A YOUNG MAN FOR THAT WORK. We trust that we may hear from some such young man very soon, as we are trying very much to get the teacher matter arranged for NOW.

G. E. DRUSHAL.

BRIGHTON EVANGELISTIC MEETING

The writer had the privilege of preaching during an evangelistic campaign at the Brighton church for two weeks from February 14-27. We found this church a very faithful group of loyal Brethren seeking to maintain their position in their community. And they are doing it nicely considering their many handicaps. This is distinctly a country church. And like many another country church. And like many another members when the young folks move out of the community to seek any other means of livelihood than farming. Yet because of the grace in their hearts and because of the love they bear to their children they have learned the worthwhileness of doing their utmost to save these young people and train them for service even though that service may be rendered in some more fortunate congregation. We sensed this as their motive in planning this meeting recently closed. May God bless them for it, and may a goodly number of those interested in the Lord and his church also be interested in staying by the farm and their fine little country church. The success of the meeting is due entirely to the splendid cooperation of the congregation with their pastor, Brother J. W. Brower. He makes a fine shepherd among them and they like him. Brother Harvey Plank led the song services, assisted by a splendid choir and an orchestra. The attendance throughout the meetings was very good, even though there were several nights when folks would get stuck in the mud in their endeavors to reach the church. The interest at every service was excellent. The young people here would make the soul of any preacher rejoice. Much credit for their interest is due to the faith and concern of their Bible school teacher, Brother Myron Long, himself a young man and very capable and apt to teach. We believe the results reached in this meeting fully justified the wisdom and judgment of those who were responsible for its arrangement. To say that we were well entertained while in their midst is stating the facts very mildly. Kings could have enjoyed their sumptuous meals no better than we. And I am sure that the hospitality of these good folks cannot be bettered. We shall continue to remember their kindnesses and Christian interests.

N. V. LEATHERMAN.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Before this issue of the Evangelist reaches most of its readers, I shall have been to our mission at Lost Creek, Kentucky, as Brother Drushal has invited me to make the Commencement address there Friday evening, April 1st.

Last Thursday evening I went with our Men's Glee Club to Ruggles, near Ashland, where they gave a program before the Parent-Teachers' Association. They did themselves proud. The special numbers were especially well rendered. They start on their Indiana itinerary this week, appearing at the College Corner church, Saturday, April 2d.

Professor Mason has been acting as judge on several inter-High School debates this season. It is not an easy task to decide a debate alone, and in many cases they have only one judge. Professor Mason has had good success.

Work has started on the new gymnasium.

Elsewhere in these columns doubtless, notice will be given of the death of Dr. E. J. Worst who was buried from our church last Friday. For many years he was the Treasurer of the College Board and filled the office of trustee longer than any other man, I am sure. He must have served in that capacity for more than a third of a century. He will be missed in College affairs.

Mr. Fred Schmuck, a graduate of the College of three years ago, has been called to the office of Coach and Director of Physical Education for men. It will be recalled that Mr. Pfeiffer, our former coach, passed away early last fall. Mr. Schmuck has made a good record and we expect good results of his work here.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Ashland recently donated some 15 trees to the College which we have set out.

Friday of last week, Professor J. A. Garber spoke before a Parent-Teachers' Association in Mansfield.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

BRIGHTON CHURCH, HOWE, INDIANA

We are in our second year as pastor of this church. We have had the best of cooperation in our efforts, in fact, we have "worked together" in the Lord's vineyard at this place, and "He has prospered his work." Our corresponding secretary, Miss Letha Grove, gave the Evangelist family a very complete and satisfactory report recently of the activities here. I want to report the results of our recent revival meeting with Rev. N. V. Leatherman of the South Bend church, as our leader. I do not know just when our revival really began, it seems to me from the very beginning of our pastorate. The attendance and interest has been good all along.

Brother Leatherman came to us on Monday evening, February 14 for a two weeks' meeting, closing on Sunday night, the 27. He preached "The Word" with no uncertain sound. He fearlessly told men of their lost condition without Christ, and the way of salvation, the results were 11 coming and making the great confession, 6 the following Sunday, 2 at a regular service in the winter, one renewal from a previous meeting; 16 baptized, 4 waiting baptism. The attendance was fine from the beginning, the choir and orchestra were in their places almost every service and rendered very valuable service, Brother H. C. Plank leading. We enjoyed the fellowship of Brother Leatherman very much. It was certainly very kind of him to come to us out of his busy life. May God continue his blessings on Brother Leatherman. Also, we say Thank You, South Bend church. Pray for us that the Lord may continue to prosper his work here, and everywhere.

In Jesus' Name,

SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF ERNEST LYNWOOD JOHNSON

This beloved brother, friend and neighbor passed to his rest in the "House of Many Mansions" in the late evening of November 29th, 1925, leaving behind a great gap in his sweet Christian home, as well, as in the large circle of his kindred and friends.

Death is always a mystery even when it comes at eventide, under the weight of increasing years, but when it comes in the noon-day life, when all the faculties are alert and the hands are busy in useful and fruitful service, the mystery deepens.

The sun of Ernest Johnson went down while it was yet day. Artists lament that they can not reproduce the charm of character because they cannot paint the soul. The same is true of any pen picture that may be drawn of him. God had provided his soul with a most ornate and handsome terrestrial habitation.

He was by nature, genial, kind, and sympathetic, without guile and without hypocrisy and underneath his bright exterior lay the profounder depths of moral worth, and consecration to Christ and his cause. When free from suffering he was wondrously bright and cheery, and a visitor to his sick room, could scarcely realize that he was in the grip of fatal sickness, which he bore with patience, and back of this lay a life of faithful service to his church and a simple child-like faith in the saving power of his Divine Lord and Redeemer.

To him his Lord was very real and precious. The circle of his friends was large and were bound to him by hooks of steel.

The large company of friends and relatives which participated in the last rites of his remains, and the array of beautiful flowers, bore complete testimony to the deep affection in which he was held. The services were simple, beautiful and tender.

But there is one sphere of his life, too sacred to enter, his constant and immeasurable love to her, who for twenty-five years had shared the immortal secrets of his soul and who responded to the fullest degree to the chivalrous love, make a story not to be entered upon here.

He was not old, but the weariness of mortality which is the destiny of all, had overcome his strength, so he went away.

"He resteth well,
Life's battles bravely fought, and nobly won,

He laid down content, at set of sun,
As twilight shadows fell." A. W. R.

BERNE, INDIANA

Dear Brother Bear: It always gives me great pleasure to read the church news. I thought it might be of interest to our readers of our church paper to hear from us. Brother C. H. Ashman came to us on the 22nd of February and began a revival and closed on March 13th, the visible results were 23 confessions and one came by letter. We baptized 11 on Wednesday night and received them into the church. Brother Johnson came to Berne on Tuesday the 15th, to conduct the funeral of Sister Debolt, and we persuaded him to preach for us on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, for which we were grateful. In regard to Brother Ashman, he preaches the Word without fear or favor of man. He gave us Bible lectures in the day and evangelistic sermons at night, for which we were more than pleased. There was one man in particular that came to church who said he had not been to church for years. Brother Ashman surely won the hearts of our people, and we will be glad to have him come back.

Yours in his name,

JOHN PARR.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

EASTER OFFERING DATE

All money received in the office of the Treasurer, in Long Beach, California, on and after March 1st, will be reckoned as a part and reported as "The Easter Offering." Therefore, money can be sent now at any time for this offering. Please send the offering to the Treasurer as soon after Easter as will be possible to do so. All money should be in our hands by June 1st, if possible; and, under no circumstances can money received after July 1st, apply as "Easter Offering." The Easter Offering MUST BE CLOSED on that date. Last year, several churches sent us "Easter Offering" money between Thanksgiving and Christmas time!

Do not permit the two Long Beach addresses to confuse you. You should send your offering addressed to "Louis S. Bauman, 1330 East Third Street, Long Beach, California." That is our residence address. But if it should be sent to "1925 East Fifth Street," we will get it. That is the office address. (The office is on the main floor in the South West corner of the church.) It is best to use the residence address, however.

LOUIS S. BAUMAN, Treasurer.

As indicated at the top of this column, this is only a partial report of the Publication Day offering. There are other churches that took the offering that have not yet sent it in to the office.

Apparently the offering will amount to practically the same that it did last year. Some churches have done splendidly and some not so well. But we do not believe much is gained by scolding. However, we would ask our readers to look over the list of contributions, and see if your church has made its contribution. If it has not done so, will you please tell your pastor that you and a number of others would like the opportunity to make a contribution to this cause.

Noticing the many individual contributions, one is almost led to believe some of them have been denied the opportunity to contribute through the regular church channels and they have been compelled to make individual offerings in order to express their feelings about the matter.

How about it Brother Pastor? Have you given your membership an opportunity to cooperate in this good work?

The First Resurrection Impulse

To tell the news—that is the first resurrection impulse. One cannot be gripped by the fact of the resurrection without feeling a joy that cannot be restrained—the good news must be told. That was the case when the resurrection of Jesus Christ was first discovered. When the women learned that their Lord was no longer holden by the grave, that he had actually risen from the dead, they hastened away with joy to tell it to Peter and the other disciples. It was not merely the "Go quickly and tell" that caused the news of the resurrection to spread like wild-fire throughout that first community of believers; it was the over-flowing joy of it, the thrill of it, the contagion of it; it could not be withheld. That was the thing that lent feet to the messengers, and that gave eager and ready response to the hearts of the sent-ones. And that mighty resurrection impulse is based upon three heart attitudes that are just as constraining and forceful today as when the women first saw and understood the meaning of the empty tomb.

First, this impulse was based upon a strong conviction that a resurrection had actually taken place. It was a conviction that grew out of what they had experienced, what they had seen and heard. As they approached the tomb that morning their hearts were sad and despairing for Jesus was dead, they thought, and they had come to do honor to his dead body. But behold! they had found the tomb empty; they had heard the assuring message of the angels; they had indeed seen the person and heard the words of the blessed Lord himself, and their sadness had been turned into joy and their despair into confidence. Jesus was alive! he lives! they were sure of that. Other tombs might still be sealed, but this one was not. Others still bore the doleful epitaph, "Hic jacet", or "Here lies", but from out of this former gloomy abode came the victorious note, "He is not here; he is risen, as he said". They could not doubt it; the evidence was full and convincing. They believed with a faith that equaled certainty. The impression was deep and overpowering, and under the strength of that conviction they were thrust forth to make known the good news. It was indeed "good news"—too good to keep; it thrilled them and they must tell it.

Second, they were moved by a great love for the Master. How good, and great, and precious he had become in their eyes! They had been with him during the days of his ministry; they had served his spotless life, and had been impressed with the beauty and purity of his teaching and had felt the weight of authority back of the words he spoke, they had been convinced of his claim to be the Son of God and had marvelled at his wonderful works. But more than all else, they had experienced his imparted grace in their lives, and out of the depths of their gratitude there grew up an attachment that was strong and abiding. And what he had done for them, they had seen him do to multitudes of other men and souls. And at last they had seen him face unflinchingly the storm of persecution, and had watched him tread the rough road to the cross and drink the cup to its bitter dregs without complaint, and he might accomplish the purpose for which he came. And as he stood by the cross, while he endured its torture and shame, their love for him which had been growing steadily stronger, was kindled into a holy passion. And now he whom they had loved and lost awhile, had been restored to them, had come to life again; they could see and hear him! What wonder their hearts overflowed with joy and their lips were eager to tell of his resurrection! They could not have done other than they did; they could not have withheld their peace. Love constrained them and sent them forth.

Third, they were actuated by a sense of responsibility for the telling of this good news. The disciples were filled with sorrow and despair. They had hoped that this was he who was to redeem Israel, but they had given up hope. Their would-be Savior had been crucified and buried, and they thought his cause had perished with him. They were floundering in the slough of despondency and fear. And lo, here was their leader alive again, and they knew not! Here was he who would dispel their sorrow, restore their hope, and fill them again with joy and confidence. Here was the very telling of which would revive faith, rekindle love and courage instead of fear. How dare they hold their peace? Could they bear the awful responsibility of not telling? They were like the lepers outside the city walls, knowing that the enemy was fled, that their friends in the city were dying from despair and starvation, and that food lay in the deserted camp in abundance. They dared not withhold such good news. They dared not tarry till the morning light. The situation required immediate action. The news must be told at once. So were these women under high obligation to go speedily to the disciples and tell them this glorious thing that had happened; this victory that had come so unexpectedly, notwithstanding their Lord's previous assurance that this good news that would restore the waning spark of their eternal lives. Moreover the Lord Jesus himself was counting on them bearing the news to his disciples. How could they have refused in the face of such responsibility? How could they have delayed or been indifferent? Surely it would have weighed severely on their hearts, had they held their peace.

That same story is waiting for us to tell it. There are vast multitudes of men and women who are living and dying without hope and without love in the world. They have never heard of the living Christ and his conquering power. If we are in touch with the risen Lord, our hearts must surely burn and throb with love as did those of Cleopas and his friend as they walked with the Lord on the way to Emmaus, and the hope and gladness that their hearts cannot but find their way to our lips. He who knows the experience the blessed fact that Jesus lives, cannot rest until he has done his utmost to take to all the world the glorious message of Easter. May we not restrain the impulse of such experience.

Universal Ignorance of the Bible

We are distressed at the woeful ignorance of the Bible in all lands, and every magazine is pointing out the prevalence of this weakness throughout the land, but if "man loves company", we may find consolation in the reported complaint concerning this ignorance in both England and Germany. And if in these three most highly civilized countries in the world the Bible is so widely neglected, we may safely conclude it is a universal condition. Of course, there is little real consolation in the fact that others are in as bad a predicament as ourselves; the knowledge of the situation does impress us more strongly with the urgency and universality of the need of more Bible knowledge.

Voices are frequently coming from the so-called Christian telling us of the ignorance of vast multitudes of people concerning the Bible, as for example, the recent editorial comment in that widely influential English paper, "The British Weekly", concerning conditions in Germany and confirming a similar situation in England. It refers to a discussion in a certain German weekly, "Das Evangelische Deutschland", concerning the "appalling ignorance of the Bible" among large classes of the German people." The discussion seems to have been precipitated by a recently published volume, "The Century of the Church", by Dr. Otto Dibelius, who aroused interest by the frankness with which he laid bare this "festering wound." Protestants, as well as Roman Catholics, are said to have no real knowledge of the Scriptures. It is now proposed that Bible reading should occupy a far more prominent place in public worship, and that congregations should be encouraged to follow the reading on the printed page.

Discussing the subject in the above named German religious organ, Professor Wobbermin, of Gottingen, says:

Evangelical Christianity is, and must be, a Bible Christianity. About that there can be no serious doubt whatever. For the Christianity which we owe to the Reformers, and primarily to Luther, rested on the Bible. The teaching of the Reformers took it for granted that the general body of the laity did, in fact, possess a sound textual knowledge of the Word of God, and especially of the New Testament writings.

Many attempts are made in these days, to strengthen Protestant services by an enrichment of the liturgy, and it is usual to defend this practice on psychological grounds. But even from that standpoint it is far more important that Protestant Christians should regain a knowledge of the Bible than that they should possess a more elaborate liturgy.

Our German contemporary is right when it says that evangelical Christianity, the Christianity which we owe to the Reformers, is "Bible Christianity." It follows, therefore, that to maintain the truly evangelical character of Christianity the knowledge of the Bible must be widely diffused, especially among Christian people. Doubtless the most strategic point in life for the impartation of Bible knowledge and the inculcation of a permanent interest in the Bible, is the plastic period of youth, and the greatly intensified effort on the part of the church in various ways to make large use of this opportunity gives encouragement for the future. The growing emphasis on the re-establishment of the "Family Altar" and the providing of religious instruction in the home also adds brightness to the outlook. But there is something that can be done for the adults, as well as for the children and youth, who may attend the church services, by giving Bible reading, as well as Bible instruction, a larger place in the worship program of the church. We ought to let the Bible speak for itself more than we do. But we give time to it so grudgingly! and sometimes we all but crowd it out of our public worship, we have so many more spectacular things that bid for a place! Let the church services be made as attractive and as worshipful as they can possibly be, but let us not imagine that the reading of the Word is an unimportant or unattractive part of such a program, or that it can be omitted or crowded into a small and insignificant place without serious loss to the worshippers. It is more important that we shall let God speak through his Word than that any word of man should be spoken or any song should be sung. For in some way or other—and this way is strategic and important—the Bible must be gotten into the minds and hearts of the people, if Christianity is to be a vital factor in their lives.

"The British Weekly" remarks significantly: "For the personal experience of the Protestant Christian is founded on his knowledge of Bible truths, especially as set forth in the New Testament, and such knowledge is the condition of its purity and truth. ... In Germany, as in Britain, religious teachers are awakening to the absolute necessity of a new and deeper understanding of the Bible among the young men and women to whom the future belongs."

While this lament over the widespread ignorance of the Bible is a challenge to the church, it is also a token of the approach of a new day; it points to an awakening to a vital need; it presages a revival of interest in the diffusion of the knowledge of the Word of God. When the church and Christian people are brought to a consciousness of their gross neglect of the Bible, we may expect a turning to its pages with renewed zeal. Let us sound the alarm that will help to bring about this awakening.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Send your Foreign Missions offerings to Louis S. Bauman, Treasurer, 1330 East Third Street, Long Beach, California.

Life-membership in the Foreign Missionary Society is granted upon a gift of $100.00, and not $10.00, as appeared in Miss Longaker's article of last week.

Prof. J. A. Garber, General Secretary of the National Sunday School Association, gives us another installment of his interesting news items and observations. Read them on the Sunday School page.

Brother Henry Rinehart, treasurer of the Brethren Home, gives an excellent report of finances received for that institution in recent weeks. It betrays a good spirit of cooperation in this noble work.

Brother C. H. Ashman writes of his evangelistic campaign at Berne, Indiana, where, as previously reported, twenty-four confessions were received. This is a very unusual rural church and Brother Ashman sees a bright future for it. Brother John Parr is the faithful pastor.

A post card received at our office from Brother M. L. Sands, the pastor, informs us that "the Smithville, Ohio, Brethren church is now free of all debt", and will have "a time of rejoicing on Sunday, May 1", on which date they will have an all-day meeting. We are promised a history of the congregation and a picture of the church for publication in the Evangelist.

The attention of the children is called to the story written by Sister Orville D. Jobson, and written especially for them. We are sure our boys and girls will enjoy this original story. We are endeavoring to give them a story whenever space will permit. We have had some expressions of appreciation of the children's stories we have published. We find this department fills a real need.

Dr. W. S. Bell reports the result of his visit to Florida, where he was accompanied by Attorney Orion E. Bowman, of Dayton, Ohio, in the interest of college endowment. Gifts to the amount of $700 were secured on this trip and the W. M. S. gift of $500 is also reported. This $1,200 added to the amount previously reported brings the total to date up to $101,332.43.

This number of THE EVANGELIST is our "Foreign Mission Special." Last week we emphasized this interest and next week other voices will be heard, voices that either did not reach us in time for this issue, or were crowded out. The urgency and bigness of the church's missionary task warrant this attention, and it is hoped that the emphasis we have given it may help to stir our people to still greater zeal for the evangelization of the world.

Brother B. H. Flora tells us of his work at New Paris and Dutchtown, Indiana, churches, the latter church having recently gone under his care when he left Ardmore. As a result of a meeting at New Paris conducted by Brother H. F. Stuckman, six were added to the church. And at Dutchtown with the pastor doing the preaching, the church was strengthened by forty, eight of whom were reclaimed. It was a great revival and nearly doubles the membership.

A very encouraging report comes to us from the church at Sunnyside, Washington, where Dr. J. C. Beal is pastor. Thirteen have been added to the church through the regular services; the financial condition good, the year ending with a neat balance; the various auxiliaries are thriving and making a real contribution. This church through its pastor is doing a commendable piece of missionary work at a nearby point. That is one way new churches are built. Why not have more effort along this line?

Our efficient correspondent from the Pittsburgh church tells us how the work goes there. They are still denied the services of their pastor, Brother A. L. Lynn, who has not fully recovered from his throat infection. And though the work naturally has suffered a loss through the incapacitation of the pastor, yet through the faithful cooperation of Elder Gans and the membership commendable interest has been maintained. It is noted that Brother C. E. Kolb and family are now making their home in this city, from which place Brother Kolb serves the State Christian Endeavor Union.

GENERAL ARTICLES

"Thou Sufferest that Woman Jezebel"---Rev. 2:20

By C. F. Yoder, Ph.D.

Not long ago I received a copy of the report of the world missionary conference held in Edinburg. It consists of two large volumes, but contains not a word about South America, with the largest unevangelized area in the world and the rest of the continent dominated by a religion that is Christian in name but pagan in spirit.

And why? Because this conference decided to consider Roman Catholicism as true Christianity and therefore to abandon to it the country it claims as its field.

In this it is easy to see the influence of the Anglican Church, which though nominally Protestant is really Catholic. The movement toward Rome which for years has been secretly propagated in the Anglican Church is now extending in America through the Episcopal church and is influencing "modernism" to a large degree and thus gaining entrance into many denominations.

The fear of being considered fanatical is causing the modern church to be indifferent to the encroachments of the world apostasy, and when the Lord suddenly appears this indifferent church will be spewed out of his mouth. Tolerance is a Christian virtue, but there is a limit at which tolerance becomes participation.

In my travels among the churches I found several cases where young people were about to marry Catholics. As the Roman church does not allow her young people to marry outside of the church it follows that in such cases the couples must at least pretend to be Catholic, which means either heresy or hypocrisy.

In the messages of the Lord to the seven churches (Rev. 2 and 3) we have an accurate description of the seven historical periods of the church, and the dominance of Romanism is well described in 2:20-23 under the likeness of Jezebel. Seven statements are made, all of which are true of the ancient Jezebel (1 Kings 16 to 18) and of the Roman Catholic Jezebel, later described as the scarlet woman.

It is said first, that she "callesh herself a prophetess," that is a religious authority, yet she was a heathen woman whom king Ahab married as a political alliance.

The Roman Church first made a political alliance in the time of Constantine and thenceforward sat on the throne of worldly power "where Satan's seat is" (Rev. 2:13) and to justify herself made pretense of authority over conscience and belief, over individuals and governments, and began her career of intolerance and persecution which is only curbed by her loss of temporal power.

The second charge is "to seduce my servants to commit fornication." This was true of the ancient Jezebel because the worship of Ashtoreth which she introduced consisted of the most licentious rites; and it is literally true of the Roman Jezebel because the pretended celibacy of her clergy, the temptations of the confession and the superficial character of her morality have resulted in a standard of living in proportion to her domination. It is not seen so much in the United States because of the counter influence of the Bible, but in these Latin countries where she has been able to suppress the Bible, the official statistics show that from 20 to 30 per cent of the births are illegitimate, and when the church had full power in Rome conditions were still worse.

The third charge was the introduction of idolatry, a charge as true of Romanism as of the ancient Jezebel. One time Mohammed visited the churches in search of true religion, but finding them filled with images before which the people bowed just as the heathen do before their idols, he left in disgust and founded his own religion which scourged the church and has been the most bitter opponent of Christian missions. Roman defendants may talk about the difference between reverence and worship, but in South America at least, the mass of the people worship the images and the official publications of the church foster the faith in the miracles they are said to perform.

The fifth charge is that of obstination in sin. "I gave her time and she repented not". Thus the Lord gave evident proof in the test of fire on Mount Carmel, but Jezebel instead of repenting redoubled her efforts to exterminate the true religion and establish her own false cult. It is the boast of Romanism that she never changes, and all the abominable innovations that she has introduced during the centuries she claims were in the church from the beginning. She will not repent and therefore she will be destroyed.

The sixth statement announces the great tribulation. This came upon Jezebel when she was cast from an upper window and was eaten by the dogs. It is rapidly prepar-

I AM A DEBTOR, I AM READY

(Romans 1:14, 15)

*I am a debtor to the many who of God have never heard,
For whom Jesus Christ has suffered, yet who've not his precious Word;
They are groping on in darkness, not a ray of hope in sight,
They are perishing and dying, while for them is joy and light.
From a child I've known the Gospel, and its message full and free,
Is for all who will accept it—it would bless them, has blest me.
Shall I tell it or withhold it? Shall I spread it far and wide,
That there's hope for any sinner, just because the Savior died?*

*Yes, I'm debtor to the heathen: I've been blessed and I will tell
How the Lord of life and glory died to rescue them from hell;
How his blood is all their safety, how his blood is all their plea,
How he will redeem the sinner who to him for help will flee.
If I should withhold the Gospel when I know it, should not I
Of the sinner's blood be guilty, if for want of life he die?
Lord in heaven grant me favor, give me grace and truth to speak,
Let me tell or send the message—Jesus came the lost to seek.*

*Make me ready, ever ready, in as much as in me lies,
To proclaim God's love and mercy, even at a sacrifice;
If I cannot go and tell them, I can send them those who will,
And in doing so Christ's purpose I am sure I will fulfill.
For he said unto his loved ones, "Go ye into all the world, Preach the Gospel of Salvation, let my banner be unfurled."
So I'll go or send the message, and for those who go I'll pray,
For I'm debtor to the many, and I'm ready to obey.*

—A. E. R., in "Kingdom Tidings."

ing for the modern Jezebel. The socialist party is growing in these Latin countries and is advocating the Mexican policy with the church. Italy is temporarily supporting the church, but in due time the ten horns of the beast will destroy the scarlet woman (Rev. 17:16).

The seventh statement is "And I will kill her children with death." This happened with the ancient Jezebel (2 Kings 10:11; 11:16) and will happen with those who persist in following the Roman apostasy now. The call to those sincere believers in Romanism is "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins and that ye receive not of her plagues" (Rev. 18:4).

Instead of condoning Romanism because of some good people we know, or some good works she is doing, instead of abandoning to her the countries which she has blighted rather than blessed, let us rather give to all her deluded subjects the light of the Gospel that they may know from it the will of their Lord and do it. Missions are more difficult in Catholic countries than in heathen countries because of Rome's eternal enmity toward the Word of God, but all the more it is our duty to give to these countries that Word which is the power of God unto salvation.

The Mainspring of Christian Missions

By A. L. DeLozier, Member of Foreign Board

No doubt one should cite as the all-controlling motive for Christian missions, the Great Commission. But I am thinking of something that is needed if the Great Commission is to be other than a mere dead letter. I believe the mainspring of missions to be none other than a message that grips our own hearts and must be told. It must be a message replete with hope. The minute we take hope out of the Christian message or even minimize its great hope, we lessen ardor for world evangelization. I even predict that in another generation ye shall see a lessening of missionary zeal unless we resuscitate the "Faith once for all delivered unto the saints," and make it the ministry of our lives.

On this basis, I want to urge that of all the churches in Christendom, we Brethren ought to be 100 per cent missionary. The simple reason is that we claim to have a message, may I say, THE message, namely the Whole Gospel. We aim to take Jesus seriously and to accept his commands. It is incumbent upon us to give an account of that message before the world.

The Unitarians have tried missionary activity and have failed, as Ernest Gordon so ably points out in that splendid book, "The Leaven of the Sadducees." The Unitarian Church cannot plant churches among non-Christian peoples. Why? Because it rejects Christ. As one of its own devotees very accurately says: "That which is lackif these same statements may not in a large part apply to many non-unitarian groups? Anyway, I am thinking of the cult in question by way of contrast with ourselves. We believe in Jesus "with a vengeance", as some would no doubt say. But I am wondering if we are going to be content to allow ours to be a mere empty belief. Between that so-called church which rejects our Master, and ourselves who mean to obey him to the full, there are groups possessing all degrees of faithfulness.

My point is that WE take a bold and a rare stand. Our effort for our Lord should be correspondingly rare and bold, else we make our profession of no effect.

The real evangelizing spirit is revealed in a Chinese woman who had lived a consistent Christian life for a year or two, but was strangely unwilling to be baptized and join the mission. At length one of the missionaries found out her reason.

"If I only could be a true follower of Jesus and be baptized!" she said wistfully. "But how could I? I could never do the work."

"But what work couldn't you do?" inquired the missionary.

"Why, the Lord said that his disciples were to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. I am not able to do that. I love to tell and preach the gospel to every creature. I have told my son and his wife, and all our neighbors, and in the summertime I can go to several villages near at hand. But I am old and feeble, and can only walk a little way. You see it is impossible for me to go to foreign countries and preach the gospel. It is too late now, I cannot be his disciple."

When the missionary explained that she only needed to do what she could, she was very happy and forthwith became a Christian.

The saddest commentary on our Christianity is that we do not care to witness for HIM. Most of us will not witness where we are.

How CAN we realize the ever widening circle, beginning at Jerusalem? Our work is not intensive enough.

I bring an indictment against so-called Christian America in that she allows even millions of foreigners to dwell in her midst, and instead of holding up the Christ to them, thousands of whom are hungry for the gospel, we disgust them with our boasted civilization and they go back to their native land to curse us for our shortsightedness.

They have a sort of hungering and thirsting for something higher and better, but they do not get it here.

This fact alone puts a big question mark over against our boasted Christianity.

Until we get the mind of our Master, and of St. Paul, ing in Unitarianism is conversion, the coming of a new life." Another man of the same cult says: "Should new life come into our churches there would also come with it a new power to reach others."

I am not writing on Unitarianism, but I am wondering who was debtor to Gentile as well as to Jew, our whole missionary effort is a farce.

We are afflicted with hypermetropia which makes us appreciate our fellowmen only at long range. We are interested in the Chinaman of Hongkong, but care not for our laundryman around the corner. We are saddened at the need of the blacks in Africa, but Jim Crow the negro here among us, etc.

Let's be consistent and begin at Jerusalem and with a can't-help-it attitude, "woe is me if I preach not the gospel," let us either GO, or send our substitutes.

As for our own city or community, let's not try to make the pastor our substitute.

Let's all be witnesses to everyone, as were the members of the early church.

Let our Christianity be based upon Korea rather than upon Germany. If we have a good piece of news we must tell it.

This blessed gospel doesn't mean anything to us if we do not tell it.

Five Missionary Coins

By Charles H. Ashman, Member Foreign Board

One time a Christian in Europe brought five different kinds of coins to a missionary collection. Their value was only $3.75 in our currency. But the inscriptions on them were significant and illustrative of five great missionary principles. These principles ought to be kept bemonize and focus the prayer, zeal, and giving of our church. Instead of some saying, "We are Home Missionary Enthusiasts" and others, "We are Foreign Missionary Enthusiasts," all must be brought to say, "We are World Evangelization Enthusiasts." Instead of some giving all of their thought, prayer and money to South American missions and others to African missions, we must think of all our missions in their proper relationships to the program as outlined by Jesus, 'unto the uttermost parts of the earth.'

A third coin was one of Hanover and bore this inscription, "Difficulties do not affright us." If God is with us and we are united, why should the difficulties strike terror into our hearts? They shall then be tests, but not trials. They shall be stepping stones, but not stumbling blocks. They shall neither disturb nor discourage. We face them in confidence and assurance instead of fear and trembling. Yes, there are difficulties and multitudes of them attending the carrying out of world evangelization. They can never be overcome in human sagacity or energy of man alone. But with the Holy Spirit energizing human life consecrated to whole-hearted service and with God's people united in purpose and plan, "difficulties do not affright us."

The fourth coin was from Brunswick, with this inscription, "Never Backward." The direction for Christians is always "Forward!" A missionary one time wrote, "I am willing to go anywhere, providing it is FORWARD!" In world evangelization, there must be no retrenchment. Our drummers must not be allowed to beat a "retreat". The greatest indictment of the church in the last quarter of a century is that in several denominations the missionary budget has been reduced, in a few instances almost cut in half. Should the church stand still (if that is possible) and just maintain her ground, it would be indictment enough, but to retrench, reduce budgets, recall missionaries, close stations, forsake fields, what an indictment against the church! Have we come to that point in the Brethren Church? God help us if it is so! It must not be, Brethren!!

The fifth coin was a Saxon and bore this inscription, "God bless Saxony." Sounds selfish, doesn't it? But not when taken in relation to the preceding four. God does bless the missionary church. The reflex benefits of missionary praying, giving and living are strong and numerous. If God loves a cheerful giver, he surely blesses abundantly those whom he loves. A missionary church is a live church. This reward ought not to be the motive, but the encouraging result of missionary zeal. But, this principle does operate. The church that is dead in missions is dead in everything. It is a decaying corpse. It needs a resurrection through a missionary vision. How fore our people to guide them in giving and praying for the evangelization of the world.

One of the coins was Prussian and bore this inscription, "God With Us." How vital this is in all missionary endeavor. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" If God is with us, we are invincible and irresistible. If our field and plans are God-chosen and God-approved, victory is only a question of time. If our missionaries are God-called and Spirit-filled, their human talent, time and service will be Spirit energized and triumph is assured. "God With Us,"—be certain of this and then plunge ahead in the recklessness of faith.

Another of the coins was Austrian and bore this inscription, "With United Strength." Another way of saying, "In union there is strength" or "United we stand, divided we fall," or "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Herein is a great challenge and need in the church! In some way, by missionary education, by the dissemination of missionary information, we must har-foolish, short-sighted, and absurd for churches to say, "we cannot give to missions for we have hardly enough to pay local expenses." That is just the reason they are so hard up. The church that attempts to "save its life" in this way is sure "to lose it." God bless the missionary church and individual. Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Brethren Foreign Missions---A Safe Investment

By Alva J. McClain, Secretary, Foreign Board

When thoughtful men have money to invest, they invariably look for a business opportunity that is safe, a place where the money will not be misused or lost. Safety is the first requisite in the world of business investments.

Now, no Foreign Mission Board on earth would be so foolish as to claim that it's business administration is absolutely perfect. The Board of the Brethren Church makes no such claims. But there is one important claim that we can make as an incentive toward loyal generous giving to Brethren Missions. It is this: The Brethren Church does not have a single missionary, in either Africa or Argentina, who is unsound in the Christian faith. I do not believe that we have really come to appreciate our missionaries as we should in this respect.

Think what this one fact means to us. It means that we can send our offerings to Argentina and Africa, and know that not one penny goes to support a worker who is teaching or preaching a false gospel. A missionary dollar given to Brethren Missions is safe in this respect.

Christian stewardship is a tremendously solemn obligation. The Christian is under obligation not only to give, but also to know something about the work to which he gives. And money given to support missionaries who have forsaken the Truth is worse than wasted. Such money goes on working in the propagation of untruth. Therefore, it should be a cause for satisfaction to every giver in the Brethren Church to know that money given to our missions is not given in vain. God has given us missionaries who are absolutely loyal to Jesus Christ and his Word. This one reason, if we had no other, should move us to give mightily on behalf of our Foreign Missions. If God has given us such missionaries, it must mean that he expects more from us as a church. There is no other possible explanation for his favor.

Eternal Values in Africa

By Louis S. Bauman, D. D., Treasurer, Foreign Missionary Society

"The very first thing that requires to be done, if Africa is to be won for Christ, is to carry a strong missionary force across the center of Africa to bar the advance of Moslem." With these words, the chairman of one of the committee concluded his address at the World's Missionary Conference (Edinburgh, 1910). Right at the center of this missionary line thrown across the center of Africa—at the very heart of the conflict now raging between the Cross and the Crescent for a world in the making—stands our faithful band of missionaries.

This vast continent, with a larger diversity of races, languages and culture than any other continent on earth, with her 11,650,000 square miles of territory, with her 130,000,000 of human beings, with her vast tribes numbering millions of souls yet to hear the message of salvation,—AFRICA,—is at the cross roads! The one road leads to the living Christ, Conqueror of Death; the other leads to the tomb of Mohammed where death reigns above his bones!

But a few years back, civilized people thought of Africa as a vast continent with vast deserts where seldom a voice broke through the moan of the winds that swept them, and where great forests were echoed and re-echoed with the cries of wild beasts and naked savages,—a vast continent of mystery that terrified the hearts of all but the stoutest of travelers.

However, we are face to face with a new Africa today,—an Africa whose millions, with the exception of a paltry 350,000 souls, have come under the domination of nations foreign to her soil. As a result, a fast-growing net of railways is being flung over her, and the auto is pushing its highways through her forests and over her deserts. Along the march of virile colonists, towns and farms are springing up where once the lion and the elephant had their haunts.

Such economic prosperity as poor old Europe may know tomorrow, depends more and more upon the riches that are being uncovered in the opening bosom of Africa. How true this is best can be told through the fact that Europe's trade in Africa leaped from $300,000,000 in 1876 to $3,000,000,000 in 1926! The age-old Africa is undergoing a tremendous transformation, and a mighty new Africa is springing into existence. But, a sordid world has little interest in the new Africa save for the sordid values that may spring from her timber, her cotton, her cocoa, her ground-nuts, her diamonds, and her gold. For the eternal values of Africa, the nations of the world care little; and yet, these are the only values worth while. A world that has been slow to recognize the values in the souls of men, even in the most enlightened peoples, has been infinitely slower in seeing anything of value in the soul of the lowly, naked, superstitious African. Rather, the world would find in him the so-called "missing link" between man and the brute,—of little value beyond that!

However, there are men and women in the world whose ears are attuned to the voice of the Creator, and who understand eternal values. To all such, the soul of the lowliest African is of infinitely more worth than all the material treasures of that vast continent can ever be! Africa is a part of God's world, and the message of our God cannot be misunderstood: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

Missionaries who have heard the voice of God, who have believed and obeyed that voice, have come to know as no others can, that the African is fit for something more than merely to spend a brief existence here, "working like a nigger," and then to pass away again into the oblivion of everlasting nothingness. They have come to know that the despised "nigger" is capable of making one of the bravest "fightingest" soldiers that ever carried a musket; they have come to know that though he may appear crude and grotesque to the undiscerning observer, yet the wise observer knows that these children of the sun, the Africans, are by nature both artistic and musical, endowed with high social faculties, and, above all, they are deeply religious, and therefore contain those things essential to the very highest development.

The thoughtful missionary does not deceive himself nor lose his faith in these black-skinned children, just emerging from the habits of century-old barbarism, simply because they do not immediately show forth all the graces of the Christian life. The missionary marvels, as he surveys the pit from whence they are hewn, that they show as many of those wondrous graces as they do! He knows that God works not "by the day" but by the millennium, and that, as God works, Africa shall stand forth some day, stripped of all her gross garments of that night, arrayed at last in the garments of his beauty who gave himself for her purification. The missionary knows that the African is absolutely capable of producing a fine type of Christian manhood or womanhood, and this knowledge spurs him on to the sacrifice of time, money, ease, home and loved ones,—yea, of life itself! It was this knowledge that caused the saintly Bishop Mackenzie to cry, "If I had a thousand lives to live, Africa should have them all!"

The simple fact of the matter is (strange as it may seem) that the God who works by centuries, in all the world has no more promising material with which to work than these same crude, grotesque, naked children of the sun, simply because of the religious instinct they seem to possess, naturally leading them toward God. If it be true that "man is a religious animal," then the child of Africa is the most religious of us all. David Livingstone, long, long ago declared that he was ready to say from experience that no African lacked a knowledge of God. "I hand the African a Bible," he used to say, "as a message from their God!" Dr. Westerman, out of the fullness of his own rich experience, confirms Livingstone's idea of Africa's children by declaring that "The missionary is an ambassador of the God they know!" A missionary attending the International Conference at Le Zoute, Belgium, in 1926, said: "It is this awareness of God and religious predisposition that make the evangelization of Africa possible and provide a basis for it. I myself have begun at that point hundreds of times when speaking to pagan Africans. You go into an African village for the first time; you sit down and converse with a handful of people about ordinary everyday things; then almost before you know where you are, you and they are all talking eagerly about God. You ask, 'What praise-title do you give to Leza?' They may be shy in answering, but if you say, 'The people over there call him Chaba (the great Giver),—I wondered if you knew the name,' you will probably get a chorus of replies: 'We too name him Chaba; he is also Lubumba (the Moulder), and Chilenga (the Creator).' And in a few minutes they give you half a dozen names which express the deepest thoughts of their people concerning the Power whose working they discern in the world. Nowhere, as far as my experience goes, do you need to prove God's existence—you may assume it." Mr. Dube, an editor of a newspaper and the founder and principal of the Ohlange Institution in Natal (himself a child of the sun out of the Zulu tribe) and one of the most brilliant minds at this same International Conference where the problems of Africa were laid upon the heart of the world, there declared that he had never known a Zulu who doubted the existence of a God. He was amazed when he went to England, and there in Hyde Park found a white man preaching atheism! "That," he exclaimed, "would be impossible among Africans!" What would John Dube think were he to visit Harvard or Yale today? What would he think were he to know that even in so reputable a religious (?) school as Princeton, a religious questionnaire, tabulated and published, showed that 557 students out of 1061 replying, had lost their belief in a personal God? There is a story of a student applying for entrance at Oxford, and telling Jowett, the Master of Balliol, that he had not been able to find a personal God. Jowett looked at him sternly and said: "Young man, if you don't find one by tomorrow morning, you can't enter Oxford!" If our Lord shall tarry, are we yet to behold the sight of young men and women from Africa's lands, dark of skin but keen of spiritual vision, filling all colleges and seminaries where faith in God shall form at least one requirement? It looks that way, and not to the disparagement of the naked heathen from Africa, either! It will not be the first time that Africa furnished a cradle for the saving of the world's Savior! Africa has her many problems—tremendous problems, indeed—but, utter loss of faith in the living God,—bleak, blank, black, despairing atheism,—that is not the problem of Africa. The great problem there is to reveal to her great soul that the God in whom she inherently believes has revealed himself in Jesus Christ, and has sent his message of salvation through him to a world under condemnation because of sin. We repeat, the religious predisposition of the African,—the natural sense of God that seems inherent within him—makes Africa the most promising mission field in all the world!

Ah, let us not forget that there is a strong hand, an open mind, a spiritual heart, and a great soul awaiting a revelation of God, our Father, on the vast plains and in the tangled forests of Africa. Mohammed is making a tremendous bid for that strong hand, that open mind, that spiritual heart, and that great soul! It is nothing short of treason to the Lord Jesus Christ and the kingdom of God for the Christian to be indifferent to that fact, in an hour like this! We dare not—O, we dare not—go up to the judgment of God and say, "We knew, but we didn't care!"; Christian! "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself....and he hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then, we are ambassadors for Christ....We pray in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." (II Cor. 5:19, 20). Therefore, "Necessity is laid upon me! Yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." (I Cor. 9:16). PRAY, you should! Go, you may! SEND, you must! Now! Now!! NOW!!!

Long Beach, California.

If we see nothing but the "cloud", life is bound to be fretful, broken, anxious. But we shall be able to rejoice in tribulation and to sing songs at midnight, if only, arching our clouds of disappointment and trial and sorrow, we see the "bow" which tells us of God's unfailing love and care.—J. D. Jones.

Foreign Missions

By R. Paul Miller

I have been asked to write of the causees that underlie the missionary spirit of the Philadelphia church.

With seven of our members now in Africa, and one in Shanghai, China, and several more now preparing for the field, it is but to be expected that a strong missionary interest should prevail among the rest.

Let me pause to say that all of the missionary spirit of this church has not come during my ministry, but was begun by my predecessor, Brother McClain, who was Secretary of the Foreign Missionary Society and doubtless the seeds were sown during his ministry here which are now bearing fruit.

Now it may seem rather queer but I have preached but one missionary sermon in this church. I am persuaded that real missionary zeal is not the result of "missionary" sermons. A certain response may come from placing the needs, conditions, etc., before the people on the order of responses to Near East Relief appeals.

But true missionary endeavor is not based on aroused sympathy. A permanent missionary attitude is the very woof and warp of a true Christian experience and is based upon the true conception of the great basic facts of the relation of the Christian to the person of Christ.

The example of the Thessalonians has been followed here. These first turned to God from idols and then so learned Christ that their response to him is described as "Work of faith, and labor of love and unwavering hope in our Lord Jesus Christ."

The objective of this hope they held is plainly given in verse ten of the first chapter, namely, the Second Coming of Christ.

We have believed that the first thing for the Christian to know is Jesus Christ, and we have been preaching and teaching Christ; not about the Bible, or about the church, or about holidays, festivals, celebrations, great statesmen, etc., but Christ himself, our Lord of All.

We have sought to show his deity, his love, his grace, his beauty, his riches, his power, his sacrifice, his endless life, his present victorious ministry before the throne of God for his disciples, his glory and his coming.

The world and all its interests will naturally hold first place in all hearts till something far higher and better wins their affections. The only attraction that can win and hold the complete devotion of men's hearts against the allurements of the world is our glorious Lord Jesus Christ.

The next step is to show the ownership of Christ—I Corinthians 6:19, 20. When the Christian realizes that the sacrifice of Christ not only purchased his freedom from sin's penalty, but his life and all there is in it: his time, his service, his money, his children, all, you will have one whose entire devotion will be to please Christ.

That is what the Thessalonians did as we read in II Corinthians 8:5, "They first gave their own selves to the Lord."

This realization of the Lordship of Christ is absolutely essential to the laying down of life and means for the preaching of the gospel. THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER GROUND WORK THAT WILL PRODUCE A PERMANENT MISSIONARY SPIRIT IN A CHURCH.

Now we look at the result. From those Thessalonian Christians, who first gave themselves to the Lord, Paul says that the Word of God went out through all that section so that it was not necessary for him to preach to other towns! Also in a period of adversity and hard times, they gave so freely and spontaneously to help others that it actually embarrassed Paul when he knew their condition.

Now, a people who do not truly know Christ, will not admit of his right to their lives and substance. But when they do so know him, his exhortation in II Corinthians 5:14-20, to not henceforth live unto themselves but as ambassadors of Christ to a lost world, will be accepted as a life program.

To continuously exalt the person of Christ; to emphasize his absolute Lordship; to set forth his will for us in evangelizing the world, with the added incentive of his imminent appearing, has been the background of the missionary accomplishments of this church. Then, definite appeals were made for life and substance based upon these claims of Christ, and responses followed. We make every effort to get true missionaries to speak to

OUTLINE OF "THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER"

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience.)

SUNDAY—High Attainment Involves Struggle, Rom. 7:14-25; 6:5; 1 Cor. 9:17. "But I buffet my body and bring it into subjection." All the rest of nature follows physical instincts unquestioningly. In mankind alone is found innate struggle to subject lower impulses to higher.

Prayer—Confession of sins; thanks for the church; pray for missionaries.

MONDAY—Struggle is Necessary to Life, Rom. 8:1-18; Jas. 1:2-4; 2 Cor. 4:17. "Count it all joy when ye fall into manifold temptations (trials); knowing that the proving of your faith worketh patience." Would I not prefer to escape the "trials" and forego the "patience" which they work? That would mean being nothing but an animal. Life develops under resistance.

Prayer—For moral will power; physical and spiritual strength; earth's laborers.

TUESDAY—At Heart the Struggle is Spiritual, 1k. 14:25-35; Gal. 5:17; Rom. 12:21; 8:6; Lk. 13:24. "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh." It is not a question of how great the opposition is, but of how strong the Spirit within is.

Prayer—Thanks for battles to fight. Pray for faithfulness; for spiritual cowards.

WEDNESDAY—There are Evil Forces About Us, Eph. 6:10-20; Gen. 3:13; Jas. 1:14. "For our wrestling is ... against the principalities, against the powers, ... against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in heavenly places." My safety is in the living armor of God; that is, his spirit possessing me.

Prayer—for the spirit of longsuffering; for slaves of habit; for true enjoyments; for servants.

THURSDAY—There are Allies of the Good, Eph. 3; Mt. 4:11; Lk. 22:32; 2 Kin. 6:16. "Fear not: for they that are with us are more than they that are against us." The living Christ is our great ally.

Prayer—Thanks for friends, human and divine. Pray for the spirit of goodness, for the weak of will; for business men.

FRIDAY—Desire is Fundamental, Ps. 40; Jn. 14:23; 7:17. "I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, thy law is within my heart." Whosoever desires to do God's will can have all the necessary information to keep him busy in righteousness, with more to come day by day, and forever.

SATURDAY—Choice is Essential, Ps. 51; Zech. 4:6; Acts 3:19; Lk. 11:12. "Repent ye, therefore, and turn again." If I choose, I can cover the light and quench the Spirit, or I may repent and make it burn brightly.

Prayer—Thanks for daily bread. Pray for the spirit of good will; for lovers of self; for young people.

the people, which with letters read from those on the field furnishes the information.

We do not write these things in any boastful or supercilious spirit, but rather in the spirit of rejoicing that we have found such a wonderful plan and power in the Word.

We have truly but begun to taste of the possibilities in this ministry and are praying for greater things. We covet that every church should embrace and enjoy this happy service as we have, yea, and even more so.

Peter at the Transfiguration

Scripture Lesson—Mark 9:2-10; 2 Peter 1:16-18.

Devotional Reading—Isaiah 6:1-8.

Golden Text—There came a voice out of the cloud. This is my beloved Son; hear ye him.—Mark 9:7.

LESSON LIGHTS

Lesson Poem

O Master, it is good to be
Here on the holy mount with thee,
When darkling in the depths of night,
When dazzling with excess of light;
We bow before the heavenly voice
That bids bewildered souls rejoice;
Though love was cold, and faith be dim,
"This is My Son! Hear ye him."

—A. P. Stanley.

Introduction

One week after last lesson, in the summer of 29 A. D., the third year of Christ's ministry, occurred the wonderful event of the transfiguration of Jesus, who appeared in glory with Moses and Elijah. It is thought that the transfiguration took place on a spur of Mount Hermon, near Caesarea Philippi, in the extreme north of Palestine. Peter, James and John were present to witness the event, while the other disciples were left at the foot of the hill. Peter's two epistles were probably written from Rome during the decade, A. D. 55-65, while Peter was in prison there.

Golden Text Illustrated Mark 9:7.

A sainted mother, who lived to an old age, used to tell us much about the "Mount of Vision." When she was a young mother, she had all her own housework to do, and a large family made constant demands upon her time and strength. "I had so much work in the valley," she said to us, "that if it had not been for the 'Mount of Vision,' I could not have possessed my soul in patience. When I became impatient and inclined to be what many of us call 'nervous,' ready to speak quick words and pass unjust judgment, I would go alone into my bedroom, and shutting the door, tell it all to Jesus. That room was my 'Mount of Vision,' for I always saw with a clearer light my weakness, and received strength from the Lord to administer my government in the home with equity and more of a Christ-like spirit."

And so should all mothers have a "Mount of Vision" to go up to when the work of the valley is so trying and upsetting. May the mothers' preaching in our homes be the means of leading the dear children to give their hearts to the Lord Jesus Christ in the days of their youth.—Selected.

Apart in Prayer. Luke (9:28, 29) tells us that Jesus went up into the mountain to pray; and that the Transfiguration took place while he prayed. So it was at his baptism; as he prayed the heavens were opened and the Holy Spirit descended upon him as a dove (Luke 3:21, 22). Thus ever at special crises of his ministry. This may have been one of the times when "in the days of his flesh" he "offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears" (Heb. 5:7). In this case there was not merely prayer, but a prayer meeting. Doubtless the three disciples joined with their teacher in prayer. And to this prayer meeting of four was the promise fulfilled that "where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matt. 18:20). "Every one of the six men who met on that mountain was eminently a man of prayer."—Illustrated Quarterly.

The Heavenly Visitors. Luke tells us that they talked of Jesus' "decease" which he was about to accomplish at Jerusalem. The Greek word for "decease" means exodus, or departure, from this world by the cross, the resurrection and the ascension. It was not the end of Jesus' existence, but an episode in it.

1. This conversation would bring human

Scriptures which foretold and typified the Messiah.—Ibid.

Every Man Has Some Visions of Heaven. "Once on a certain morning you felt the glory of living, and the misery of life has never since that been able quite to take possession of your soul. Once you knew for a few days what was the delight of a perfect friendship. Once you say for an inspired instant the idea of your profession blaze out of the midst of its dull drudgery. Once, just for a glorious moment, you saw the very truth, and believed in it without the shadow of a cloud. Years, years ago, it may be, God gave you a day of exalted communion with himself. Christ and his light shone out from everything. Those are the realest days of all your life."—Phillips Brooks.

"It is not a belief in immortality that will deliver a man from the woes of humanity, but faith in the God of life, the Father of lights, the God of all consolation and comfort. Believing in him, a man can leave his friends, and their and his own immortality, with everything else even his and their love and protection, with utter confidence, in his hands. Until we have this life in us, we shall never be at peace. The living God dwelling in the heart he has made, and comfort and strength to Jesus, as he stood seemingly alone in his view of a suffering Messiah. He would know that he was right in going on to the cross. The presence of Moses and Elijah, in glorified form, would

Church School News

By J. A. Garber

The return of spring should witness a revival of effort in all our church schools. We naturally expect more favorable weather and consequent improved roads. It ought to be easier to secure increased attendance.

April

April is replete with opportunities for special activities. Reference was made earlier to Home Dedication Day throughout the world which is to be observed on April 13th. Professor Augustine Smith, the promoter, regards this observance as "the golden cord close binding all mankind." Children's Week is scheduled for April 24th to May 1st. The main purpose of this yearly event is to enjoin upon home, school and church their cooperative responsibility for the total well being and complete development of the child. The April Educator contains a wealth of material on this subject.

May

The objectives for 1927 in the Adult Division, as set forth by Superintendent A. B. Cober, calls for two Adult Rally Days. The first of these is due on the first Sunday of May. Schools are asked to strive to attain unto high levels of achievement with their adults on that day. Mother and Daughter Week will follow over May 8th to 15th. This order affords the young people, particularly the daughters, a fine opportunity to honor the mothers. Helpful leaflets may be had at nominal cost. The May Educator will carry much help with regard to these activities.

Indiana

Hoosier schools appear to be very active in teacher training. Roann has a class under the leadership of Mrs. Harley Black that will soon be ready for the third year of the regular course. A similar class has made about equal progress at North Manchester under the tutelage of E. Jay Hippensteel. The class taught by Brother George H. Jones at Muncie has just completed the section of "The Life of Christ." A class at Berne, reported by Brother John Parr, has taken its first examination. Inquiry concerning the organization of the class was just received from Mrs. Edward Wise of the Center Chapel church.

Plans for Junior Committees

By Rev. R. P. Anderson, in Junior C. E. World

A BACKWARDS MEETING

For Prayer Meeting Committees

A backwards meeting is one in which the programme moves backwards, beginning at the end, and ending at the beginning. First of all, the chairs should be turned around so that the seats that are usually at the front will be at the back, the leader's table being at the back of the hall. Start with the benediction. Sing a closing hymn. Then have the talks, then sentence prayers, then the leader's talk, then a short story, then the Scripture reading, then an opening hymn. Hymns will be sung between these items, of course, and the order just given need not be slavishly followed. Make your own order, but let it be completely different from the usual order. You may want to introduce a motto-talk, or an object-talk, or a blackboard-talk, and so on.

ENCOURAGEMENT

For Sunshine Committees

The superintendent does so much for the Juniors that it would be a good thing for the Juniors once in a while to do something for her. One of the best things to do is to give her a surprise party, or a sunshine party, to encourage her and show her how much she is loved. Care must be taken to see that she is at home at the time the Juniors go to her house. Take refreshments, plan games and singing, and take a little present (it need not be very valuable) for the superintendent. Of course several of the Juniors will speak for the society and tell the superintendent how much the Juniors think of her.

A MISSIONARY PLAY

For Missionary Committees

This plan is so simple that any Junior society may try it successfully. It is especially suited for missionary topics in which various characters appear and speak. Two Juniors are sitting at a fire (a camp-fire made with electric bulbs covered with red tissue-paper), talking about the topic of the meeting. While they are speaking, a Junior enters and speaks the little piece he has prepared beforehand. He may represent a missionary doctor, evangelist, or some other character, according to the nature of the topic. The superintendent will help the committee to prepare the Junior's talks. Usually they may be taken from "The Christian Endeavor World" or this paper. The chairman of the missionary committee of the Young People's society may also be asked to help in preparing for this meeting.

GROUP PHOTOGRAPHS

For Lookout Committees

If a big brother or sister of one of the Juniors has a kodak, this plan may be tried. Divide the society into two equal parts, and take care that the hard workers are about equally divided between the sides. Then have a photograph taken of each side. Cut out two pieces of cardboard about twelve inches square and paste the photographs on them, one photograph on each piece. Now start an attendance contest. The photographs show the sides. When one side brings a visitor to three meetings, the name of the visitor is written on the cardboard on which that group's photograph is pasted. At the end of the contest take another photograph of the two sides, and this time include all those whose names are on the cardboard.

Stunt for a Social

This stunt was put on by the Juniors of the Tenth Avenue Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, North Carolina, at one of their socials. Other Junior societies may try it.

While the following words were sung by some girls behind the piano, the boys came in and dropped to the floor, forming a "railroad track." One of them stooped over with full coat covering, holding long horns made of newspapers rolled tightly, was the cow in the middle of the track. Others followed as the train, with arms rounded in front for the cow-catcher. A large "Railroad Crossing" sign was conspicuously placed. At the words, "The train hit her right in the back," the cow was knocked down by the "train."

In the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia

Stood a cow on the railroad track,
She was a very nice cow, with eyes so fine,
But you can't expect a cow to read a railroad sign.

And she stood in the middle of the track,
And the train hit her right in the back.
You will find her horns in old Virginia,
And her tail on the lonesome spine.

(The stanza may be recited if you have no tune for it.)

Why Easter Means Happiness

Mark 16:1-15

Many, many years ago, there lived two sisters and a brother. Their home was in a little town called Bethany and their names were Mary and Martha and Lazarus. Now these two sisters and their brother were very hospitable, friendly people, and they liked to have friends come to their house.

One day Mary and Martha were walking along the road and they saw a great crowd gathered at a certain place. They hurried to see what was going on and when they came to the crowd, they saw that there was a young man in the midst of the crowd.

Mary said, "Let's stay and see what this man does and hear him when he speaks."

They became very much interested in the words of the speaker and soon Martha whispered to someone who was standing close to her, "Who is this man and why are there so many people here?"

The person to whom Martha had spoken, answered, "This is Jesus of Nazareth. He has been up in Galilee and we have heard rumors that he has been performing great miracles. These people are trying to see him because they hope that he will perform a miracle that they can see."

Martha told Mary these things and so they stood and listened to Jesus' words. Soon the people began to tire of standing. They decided that Jesus was not going to perform any miracles that day and began to go to their homes. As the people were leaving, Martha slipped through the crowd and said to Jesus, "Will you go to my house and eat with my sister and brother and me today?"

So Jesus went with Martha and Mary to their home. While Martha was preparing the meal, Mary talked to Jesus and asked him many questions. Jesus told Mary of his ministry. He probably told her among other things, "I have been up in Galilee and the people there have listened to my preaching, but when I come back here to my own country it is much harder to get people to believe. The people today were just watching and hoping that I would do something unusual. I do not perform miracles just to show what I can do. I perform miracles to help people and no one had faith enough to come to me for help today."

Mary and Martha were so happy that they could have Jesus in their home, and they invited him to come back as often as he could.

So Jesus visited Mary and Martha whenever he passed that way and when Lazarus, their brother died, Jesus came to Bethany and raised him from the dead. So this little family learned to love Jesus very much. After Jesus had been preaching and teaching about three years, he stayed several times one week with these young people. Then one day they heard that he had been imprisoned at Jerusalem and that very same day Jesus was crucified. It was hard for Mary and Martha to understand. Martha said, "He raised Lazarus from the dead, why did he allow the people to kill him? Surely he could have saved himself."

So, they grieved. They were so unhappy that they could hardly bear the thought of the happy hours they had had with Jesus. Everything seemed hopeless.

Three days of this grieving passed by and then they received the most wonderful message that any human being ever heard, —Jesus is risen from the dead and several people have seen him. He is alive again. Oh, they were happy. They remembered Jesus' words about rising from the dead. He had said that they should arise after death, even as he. That meant that they could be with him in heaven, too.

No one ever experienced a greater happiness than these friends of Jesus did when they found that Jesus lived again and that same happiness is yours and mine and we celebrate it on Eastern morning, the morn when Christ arose.

"The Unknown God" in South America

By Percy L. Yett

The Great Apostle to the Gentiles as he walked along the streets in Ephesus and observed the objects of their worship, found an altar with this inscription, "To an unknown God." Paul said, "I perceive that ye are somewhat superstitious, or very religious." Exactly so! And the same can be said of many in this land. If beating one's breast and swallowing "Ave Maria" in a vociferous routine, and praying for some DEAD SAINT,—if that is religion, then our women and some of our cruel politicians in this land are very religious.

We have heard many sermons on the "Unknown God" to which the Apostle Paul referred in the 17th chapter of the Acts, and the God to which he referred to is unknown to thousands yet. We have read pious talks concerning the unknown soldier. And this service in our own blessed land is fast approaching the excessive admiration. Now I am searching for some expression of admiration to the UNKNOWN SAINT. I have a book before me which gives the names of the SAINTS which have been enrolled in the catalogue of the saints by the Pope. I have just completed the list for the month of January which contains 440 names. Each day has its numerous saints ranging in number from four on the 6th of January to twenty-two on the 12th of January. These saints have done some notable act for their Mother Church, so there is held a festival in their honor and the Catholic Church celebrates with great solemnity their anniversary. Now if you are not in harmony with the acts of one saint, you do not need to pay respect to that saint for you have many others to choose from.

Perhaps you did not know that Jesus was circumcised on January 1st. Peter, the first Pope knew, for he was there. Did you know that the wise-men from the east came to worship and offer their gifts to the little child Jesus on January 6th? Did you know that the body of Saint Inigo was discovered (invented) January 18th? Did you know that the marriage of the most holy Virgin with Saint Joseph occurred on January 23rd? Did you know that the Virgin descended to the Cathedral of Toledo, Spain, on January 24th? Did you know that Saint Paul was converted on January 25th? Did you know that Saint Mark, the Evangelist, was translated to the Church of Venecia, Italy on January 31st? Did you know that King Edward of England, (the father of the present king) is listed among the notable saints during the month of January? Now if you don't believe these things of which I speak, and a multiplication of other things just as foolish, you will be blackballed and excommunicated by the holy Mother Church. Therefore, because of fear and superstition, the people believe these things. And too, they have been taught them from infancy. However, the younger generation in this land are breaking away from this superstitious grip and are beginning to think for themselves. Of course the majority are turning to unbelief. But thank God, many are turning to the Evangelical Missions.

Yes, conditions are rapidly changing in this land, not only religiously, but socially. And I believe that our Evangelical Missions are principally responsible for this change. I am very optimistic. I can see the great gap between the rich and the poor growing smaller and smaller. And I believe that it will not be many years, if the Lord should tarry, until the spirit of democracy will be very noticeable, and the rich and the poor will be seated side by side in our churches in Argentina. When it comes to this, Argentine will no longer be a Mission Field. So Brethren, now is our day. Now is our time to erect a monument to the Lord in Argentina. We have building lots in Buenos Aires and Laboulaye, but because of the lack of funds we are compelled to pay high rents, when a thousand dollars or fifteen hundred dollars would build a very desirable church building on our lot in Laboulaye, and twice that amount would build a church building in Buenos Aires.

O, brethren, don't put your hands over your eyes and say, "I see no fields white unto harvest." Don't put your hands over your ears, and say, "I do not hear the Macedonian Call, Come over and help us." Don't be among that class that always say, "I intended to, but I didn't." REMEMBER THAT WE MUST DO OUR GIVING WHILE YET LIVING.

Why?

By Floyd W. Taber

It has been suggested that I tell in a few words why I want to follow the plan which I have chosen for my life ambition, medical missions. This can best be done by asking and answering three questions.

A Baptismal Service at Bassai

First, why "bury" my life in the heart of darkest Africa, when there is so much work to be done here at home? The answers are legion, but we will consider only one. The region where our mission is located is hanging in the balance between Christianity and Mohammedanism. The natives are tired of their pagan superstition, and are ready to accept the first religion that comes along. Mohammedanism missionaries are sweeping down from the north to claim them for Islam. Today, we can enter a tribe and found a mission, and the whole tribe will eventually be Christian; but if we wait until tomorrow, a Mohammedan missionary will enter that tribe, and it will be forever barred against Christianity. Scores of tribes just like it are hanging in the balance; and if by investing my small talent in central Africa I can help to swing one tribe to Jesus Christ instead of letting it fall to Mohammed, that will be an immeasurably greater work than I could ever do in this country, and it will be worth the price a million times over.

But if the need for Gospel preaching is so great, why be a medical missionary instead of an evangelist? In the first place, it is simply following the example of Jesus to touch a man's body in order to touch his soul. Many can be won for the Lord Jesus Christ through physical healing that cannot be reached in any other way. In the second place, a doctor is needed in every mission station in Africa to protect the health of the missionaries from the ravages of the tropical climate. A physician who saves the life of one evangelistic missionary renders as great a service as if he himself had gone out as an evangelist. And within his period of service, he will be able to save, not one, but many missionaries who without him would succumb to the dread malaria or some other tropical disease. Thus the Gospel will be reached in many tribes because of his ministry, while he himself would be able to preach in only one.

The third question that may be raised is this: Why take medical schooling in France, rather than in this country? One reason is that it gives an opportunity to master the French language, which the government requires to be used in all school work on our field. Another is that it gives a better standing with the French officials in Africa. They do not give the same recognition to doctors trained in other lands as to those graduating from their own schools. Moreover, the knowledge and experience and acquaintance with the French governmental system can be gained only from a protracted residence in that country will greatly facilitate dealings with the government officials on our mission field.

Argentina, South America

The following are interesting facts quoted from the Official Report of the Montevideo Congress of 1925. This is "the last word" on missionary needs and work in South America:

"If one-third of the Protestant churches in the single city of Brooklyn, New York, were correspondingly distributed among 9,000,000 people over an area in the United States reaching from the Atlantic to, and including, the first row of States west of the Mississippi, the relation between extent of territory and paucity of Evangelical agencies would be analagous to that which actually obtains in Argentina. There are in the whole republic only seventy-four centers where Evangelical pastors (national or foreign) reside, and forty-seven non-residential localities and out-stations where Evangelical work and worship are maintained. The number of organized churches is 139, about one-fourth of which are in capitals, two of the ten territorial capitals, and ten of the sixteen largest cities, each with a population of more than 50,000. But these principal centers are separated by distances ranging (with one exception) from 100, 150 and 200 to several hundreds of miles, leaving dozens of intervening towns untouched.

Hundreds of towns unoccupied.—While recognizing the selective strategy which has resulted in the primary occupation of the larger cities, the Commission desires to point with emphasis to the following facts, indicating the inequality and insufficiency of the present disposition of Evangelical forces with respect to the Republic as a whole.

(1) Argentina has, in all, 322 cities and towns exceeding 2,000 inhabitants each—containing a total population of about 5,000,000. In 201 of these towns and cities, with estimated population of 3,000,000, no Evangelical work is being done.

(2) Of more than 100 towns of 5,000 to 20,000 inhabitants each, at least seventy are without gospel preaching.

(3) Two provincial and eight territorial capitals, and six cities each exceeding 50,000 inhabitants, have not yet been occupied.

(4) A rural population of 4,000,000 connected with the estancias and pasturelands and dwelling in small settlements of less than 2,000, remains entirely unreached except in a few sections through the rare visits of a traveling chaplain or colporteur."

"The city of Buenos Aires.—The federal capital, with a population of 1,789,000, is culturally and commercially the South American Paris. It is the largest metropolis of not merely the American-Iberian republics, but of the whole Hispanic world. It contains a fifth of Argentine's inhabitants. It has more churches, both Protestant and Catholic, than has any other city south of the Panama. But, from the Christian viewpoint of actual need, neglected service and unmet opportunity, the brilliant and progressive capital, uniquely conspicuous for its comparative lack of Christian agencies, must be described as the greatest unoccupied locality on the Continent."

In the light of this concrete information, is it any wonder that our own missionary, Brother Percy L. Yett, wrote to the Treasurer of our Foreign Missionary Society, upon returning from a trip with the Bible Coach: "O, Brother Bauman, this country is surely being neglected! Sometimes I wonder if God hasn't forgotten about Argentina!" No, God has not forgotten, but HAVE WE?

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

NEW PARIS AND DUTCHTOWN

New Paris, Indiana

We at New Paris have nothing startling to report, but we are busy doing the Lord's work. Brother Stuckman of Goshen conducted a two weeks' meeting for us. I do not think I ever heard a finer set of sermons. They all rang true to the Gospel of our Lord. The visible results of the meeting was six conversions which have all been baptized and received into the church. There is a fine Christian spirit among the members of this church. The finances of this church are taken care of in a very commendable way. The missionary spirit and charity demands have the preference in our offerings. We had the honor of entertaining Dr. Bell in our home while here. I think every pastor should endeavor to lighten the task of Brother Bell.

From Ardmore to Dutchtown

Two years ago I went to Ardmore, which was a pastorless church at that time. We began with a revival meeting led by Brother A. E. Thomas. We had quite an ingathering at that time. The year following we began the erection of a very modern parsonage. I was called for the third time to that field but saw an opportunity to do a better thing for the church. By resigning it was possible to install Brother Ed. Duker in that fine new parsonage as an all time pastor. That, I think, has for all time settled the question of one pastorless church.

Dutchtown

I do not know why this church should be called Dutchtown. There is no one here who can talk Dutch. I would suggest the name of "North Winona" or "Lake View" Dutchtown is only five miles from Winona and a rival for natural beauty. The community is surrounded with lakes that are well stocked with fish. The landscape with its well kept farms is a marvel for beauty.

Being well acquainted in this community and knowing the church had no pastor I offered my services which were accepted. We began the first of October. We decided to hold our own revival, singing and all. The meetings continued with increasing interest for thirty days with the following visible result: 24 applicants for baptism, 2 by relation, 8 reclaimed, 6 letters promised, total 40. Nineteen have been baptized in the baptistry at Warsaw. The others will be baptized in the lake near the church soon. Others have promised to be baptized at the final baptizing.

One soul is as precious in the sight of God as another but it makes a difference to a pastorless church whether the ingathering is children or adults. As near as I can ascertain this brings the membership up to 85. It certainly was an occasion for rejoicing to see fathers and adult sons, mothers and adult daughters coming together. Those people are fixtures in the community, for they own the farms and homes. I think this settles the question of another pastorless church.

We have planned to beautify the church by planting trees and shrubbery and painting the church white. B. H. FLORA.

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Florida Visit in the Interest of Ashland

Several years ago Brother Paul of Martinsburg, Pa., gave to the college a forty acre tract of land, which is located in central Florida and with which nothing had been done. It was thought best to look the land up and find out what could be done with it. At the same time a few of our members located in Florida were visited in the interest of the endowment. Attorney Orion E. Bowman, who had some legal matters to look after in the State accompanied me.

We found the land well located in a desirable district, the title and taxes satisfactory. Due to the collapse of Florida real estate, we were unable to dispose of it at this time to advantage. A value of $4,000 was placed upon the tract by competent real estate men and placed on the market at that figure.

We met Brother A. T. Wirick and wife in St. Petersburg and were royally entertained and received a nice cash gift from them. Also visited Brother Daniel Crofford and family and Brother and Sister George Hedrick of Hollywood. They suffered much from the hurricane that swept the east coast last year and had financial loss from the land boom, however they all contributed to the college. Others were visited and we were made welcome and enjoyed our short stay.

This State has certainly seen some "wild times" from frenzied finance and the angry elements of nature. As one real estate man expressed it, "They went on a money drunk and are now suffering a sore head and it will take some time to sober up."

The total personal gifts from Florida were $700.

National W. M. S.

This excellent body of women are known for their loyalty to the interests of the church and the splendid aid they are giving to its different interests. They are boosters for the college and paying the salary of Dean Miller in the Seminary. We certainly appreciate their cash gift of $500 to the endowment and acknowledge it in this communication and thank them for it.

SUNNYSIDE, WASHINGTON

The church at Sunnyside started the New Year with an all-day business meeting at the church. This has been the custom for years. In the forenoon the various reports are read and in the afternoon new officers are elected and general business transacted.

The reports showed all departments of the church work in a healthy condition. Although no special evangelistic services were held during the past year, thirteen people were added to the church membership. The treasurer reported all bills paid and a sum of practically two hundred dollars on hand.

The Sunday school is using for its slogan this year, "Every member, every Sunday on time." Thus far attendance at the opening exercises has been doubled. Missionary giving is being emphasized by use of a missionary story told by some member of the school. This plan has increased our monthly Missionary offering. The teachers and officers meet once each month in a social and business meeting. At these meetings the welfare of the Sunday school is discussed and plans formulated for carrying on the work.

The "Volunteers", a group of young people banded together in definite service for the Master, has done very effective work in visiting the sick and shut-ins and holding services of song and prayer with them. This group has been meeting each Tuesday evening at the parsonage for dinner, the dinner being followed by a special Bible study led by our pastor. The starting of a church library is another result of the efforts of this group of young people.

The all-day monthly meetings of the W. M. S. are well attended. These meetings are deeply spiritual, the spirit of prayer predominating. The nine o'clock hour in the morning has been chosen as a time for special prayer by the women of the church. A definite prayer list has been made and is being followed daily in the homes. These women of the W. M. S. are buying one book each month for the church library out of their free-will offerings. The money for carrying on their work is raised by free-will offerings. No sales or suppers are given to make money.

The Christian Endeavor Society is doing good work. Some changes since the first of the year have resulted in new life being manifest in the work. The Sunday evening meetings, while not so largely attended as we might wish, are meetings of real worth. The monthly business and social meetings are well attended and much enjoyed. With the same cooperation now manifest the society should be increasingly helpful as the months pass.

In keeping with its missionary spirit the church granted its pastor, Dr. J. C. Beal, permission to preach at Harrah one Sunday evening each month. This is a prosperous community, some thirty-five miles from Sunnyside, where several Brethren families are located. After hearing the truth preached for several months the people of this community asked Dr. Beal to lead them in a one-week's meeting. As a result of this short meeting seventeen persons, ranging in age from sixteen to sixty-seven, took a definite stand for the Lord. Twenty-four persons from this community have received baptism at Sunnyside. Twelve of these have already been received into our local congregation and at least six more of those baptized are to be identified with our work. A large number of those who made a decision in this special meeting were heads of families.

VICTORY AT BETHEL CHURCH, BERNE, INDIANA

For five years there has been a standing invitation for us to lead the Bethel church in an evangelistic campaign. This year the Lord opened the way to accept it. The shepherd of this flock is John Parr, a faithful consecrated man of God. He is held in high esteem, both within and without the church. It was a joy to be a co-laborer with him in the Lord. This church is strictly a rural church, seven miles from Berne, Indiana. But, it is not a decaying one. We found it wide awake, well organized, instructed, trained, and consecrated. It has made a specialty of Bible study and evangelism. Many of the strongest Bible teachers and evangelists of the Brethren Church have been called to lead it in seasons of conference and ingathering of souls.

We found the field well gleaned. Almost the entire Sunday school was in the church. (Every last scholar did stay for church service.) Practically all the children of the members were included in church membership. The field's boundary lines were close for the Bethel church is surrounded by other churches. But, there were backsliders and not a few excuse-hardened sinners, two of the most difficult classes with which to deal and from which to gain results. Yet, regardless of these conditions, the Lord gave us victory to the number of 24 confessions.

This church believes in intensive study and effort during a campaign. We delivered 13 messages a week. Every night without rest, three times on Sunday, and four times a week during the day. Yes, and the members are on the job with the evangelist for them all! But, they feed a man four times a day with an average of fried chicken once a day. With such rations, why shouldn't he preach 13 times a week or even more?

This campaign was an inspiration, we believe, to both the church and the evangelist. It was a spiritual feast. Bible study, prayer, clean cut evangelism and personal soul winning were made supreme. The Spirit of the Lord gave evidence of his presence and power continually. God has a mission for the Bethel church. It stands as a beacon light for the Whole Gospel, the separated life, and the blessed hope of our Lord's return.

CHARLES H. ASHMAN.

THE FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH OF PITTSBURGH

We are pleased to convey at this time to the readers of the "Evangelist" a brief report from the Pittsburgh church.

At the moment of writing, we are without the services of our pastor. Brother Lynn in some manner contracted a very serious infection of the throat some six weeks ago. He was confined to his bed for about three weeks, when, as reported in the Editorial column of this paper a few weeks ago, it was found necessary to remove him to Mercy Hospital. After a week at the hospital he returned to the parsonage, but in a quite weakened and unstable condition. Of course, the membership at large was most solicitous concerning Rev. Lynn's welfare during his afflicted days, but at home and at the hospital, and there were many prayers offered up for his speedy recovery. It is scarcely necessary to remark that the work of the church has suffered in the interim, although there were willing hands ready to step forward and carry on the work. It was our pleasure to have Brother DeLozier from the College with us one Sunday. Our own Brother Gans has very willingly assisted in supplying the pulpit. He has procured a number of outside speakers and has also filled the pulpit himself. Much credit is due Brother Gans for this, for his duties as principal of one of our city schools are very arduous, and the preparation necessary to fill the pulpit add to his many other duties. Our sincere hope is that Brother Lynn will, before many Sundays, be able to resume his active work, fully recovered and his normal self again.

We learned some few weeks ago that Rev. C. E. Kolb had relinquished his position as Chaplain at the Eastern Penitentiary at Rockview, Pennsylvania, and was again accepting one with the State Christian Endeavor Union. We were very agreeably pleased to learn that Brother Kolb would have his headquarters in Pittsburgh and that his family and himself were moving here. Rev. and Mrs. Kolb are very valuable workers in the church, and, now that they again claim Pittsburgh as their residence, we are expecting to utilize Mrs. Kolb's very valuable services as a teacher in our Sunday school. Of course, Brother Kolb's duties with the State Christian Endeavor Union will take him away from Pittsburgh a considerable portion of the time, but he is a "handy man to have around" when he is in Pittsburgh.

On the evening of March 15th, the Sunday school provided an entertainment for the members of the school and their friends, and a large crowd of adults and children was present.

The several auxiliaries are active. The church's chief auxiliary, the Sunday school, has not been keeping up with the attendance as it should, but we feel that this is doubtless due to a lack of trained teachers, and particularly is this true of the Children's Division. We are at present conducting a Teacher Training Class, and a number of young ladies are enrolled, and we are hopeful to utilize their services soon and thereby remedy the teaching situation—the school's greatest weakness.

MARY A. McMASTER, Ass't. Sec'y.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Bassai, French Equatorial Africa,

January 10, 1927.

DEAR CHILDREN OF THE EVANGELIST FAMILY:

HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL! I presume you children are enjoying the snow these winter days and making snow men. What do you think our little black boys and girls would do if they saw snow? I am afraid their little bare skin wouldn't be warm enough. We have been having such cold winds here the last few mornings and the poor children shiver with cold. The fathers come to church with a large blanket wrapped around their bodies and the mothers and children with leaves, how thankful you can be that you live in a Christian land.

Last week two boys came to our house with a rabbit, it was wild but looked just like our bunnies at home. The ladies had a nice big cat which caught most of the rats at Bassai, but, one day she got tired of being alone and went out in the bush with the wild cats. So a few weeks ago a man came here with a little wild cat and wanted us to tame it, but we have no time for taming cats, as there are plenty of natives to tame.

Our boys have been shooting wild guineas and ground hogs; they seem plentiful this time of the year. Some of our little boys have been feasting on rats, but Salda, our chicken boy, told me they are better than chicken, he can't prove it by me. Wish you could see these little black boys shoot with their bows and arrows. They love to shoot at birds and bats, but we ask them not to, as we love to see the beautiful colored birds flying about on the trees and the bats catch the mosquitoes.

We all have some chickens and ducks, every day Mr. Kennedy's boy drives the ducks to water, as there is no water near Bassai. We also have goats; the boys milk them early in the morning and let them out of their house to search for green grass, as this is the dry season and food is scarce for animals. Several of the goats have been taken by leopards; they come very near to the station.

Since writing you last, we have had a little baby girl born at Bassai; her name is Mary (Marie). She was very tiny when she was born but her mother oils her body every day with peanut oil and she is getting fat as well as shiny.

Several months ago there was a little boy named David, came to live a Bassai. He was so nice and strong, but one day his mother brought him to Miss Myers and Miss Bickel, for treatment as he was very sick with pneumonia. They did all in their power to save his life, but he died in a few days. He was buried on the hill near Brother Gribble's grave. I am sure you children will remember these little black jewels in your prayers that they too may come to know Jesus as their Savior and be bright and shining lights for him.

In his Service,
MRS. ORVILLE D. JOBSON.

Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

be a positive assurance to him of his own resurrection.

2. It strengthened the faith of the disciples. They would see that what Jesus had taught them about the suffering Messiah was true. It helped them to realize the possibility of the resurrection of Jesus. It showed them how Jesus was fulfilling the glorifying it by inmost speech with himself, —that is life, assurance and safety."—George Macdonald.

"Life is a present thing, and its continuance a matter of course. It is life, therefore, rather than immortality Christ speaks of. Eternal life he defines, not as a future continuance to be measured by ages, but as a present life to be measured by its depth. Life prolonged without being deepened by union with the living God were no boon. Life with God and in God must be immortal; life without God he does not call life at all."—Marcus Dods.

MISSIONARY GLEANINGS

EIGHT HUNDRED MILLIONS are still ignorant of Jesus Christ.

The NEW TESTAMENT is a record of Missionary Evangelization.

THE LAST COMMAND given by Christ was WORLD EVANGELIZATION. Matt. 28:19, 20.

JESUS CHRIST, even on the cross, was a MISSIONARY.

The light that shines brightest shines farthest from home.

Charity ought to begin at home, but not stay there.

If the church goes first into heathen countries, she can shape civilization, but if civilization goes first, it will misshape the church.

FERVENT FINANCES

HOW MUCH of God's money are we keeping for ourselves?

GENEROUS GIVING keeps the soul from shrinking.

THE KEY to the Windows of Heaven is in your POCKET. Malachi 3:10.

The LOVE OF MONEY produces a stingy church.

The LOVE OF GOD produces a generous church.

Be a FOUNTAIN-GIVER and not a CISTERN-HOARDER.

STINGINESS in giving is the product of inexcusable ignorance, or deliberate selfishness, or willful disobedience.

EDITORIAL

The Inversion of Values

We are forever getting confused as to the relative value of things, and are often transposing the vital and the insignificant. We frequently give ourselves to grave deliberations on matters of little consequence and pass over lightly other matters of profound importance. It is one of those human weaknesses that is in evidence on every hand and works incalculable harm, but has a way of avoiding detection and is exceedingly difficult to eliminate. It shows itself in individual and in group life, in daily home duties and in special responsibilities, in public affairs and in religious thinking and conduct.

In the home we often give first attention to things of secondary importance; we prize the things of passing value more highly than the things of eternal worth; we place the chief emphasis on the material things of life—the things we eat, the things we wear, the comfort and beauty of our homes—rather than on the things of the spirit. The serving of tables and the care of the home are not matters to be lightly considered, and yet they who allow these things to so consume their time that they have no time left for sitting at the feet of the Master and learning of him the things that will make for the beautifying of the spirit of the home, the ennobling of its ideals and the increasing of its enjoyments, fail as did Martha in grasping the worth of the things of most importance. Proper attention to personal appearance and apparel is not to be desisted, but when the knee is bowed to the goddess of Vanity, when personal adornment becomes the soul's absorbing aim, and life is given over to the superficializing and denaturing fads of the world, it is time to be reminded that not all the superficial glory of Solomon could be compared with the God-given beauty of the lily, and that it is vastly more important to cultivate the enjoyment of good books, music and the fellowship of cultured souls and to seek supremely to be clothed with the heaven-designed garments of righteousness and true holiness.

We become confused with regard to relative values in the pleasures, recreations and amusements of life. We are inclined to drift toward the shallows of worldliness, and it is important that we keep the goal clearly in view and pull strongly against the current. The important thing in life is not to be amused but to be used, not to be indulged but to be disciplined. To be sure a certain amount of play is a good thing even for adult life, but play is not to become life's vocation. The beneficial effect of recreation and amusement depends on their being limited to their rightful proportion, and it is important that our consciousness is kept alive to the fact that our chief aim is not to be toyed about with pleasurable pursuits, but to be given to service. Our Lord Jesus, who is our great exemplar, did not deny himself the enjoyment of a reasonable amount of the social functions of his day, but they served only as recreation, only as ballast on life's stormy sea, only as toning to keep life heartily human and in sympathy with his fellowmen. He never gave them undue emphasis, never lost his sense of values. Nor can our lives maintain their poise, their vitality and virility, when frivolous, superficial things predominate. "She that giveth herself to pleasure is dead while she liveth."

There is danger of losing our sense of values by an over-emphasis of the minor elements of religion and morals until they becloud the great and vital principles. That was the outstanding weakness of the Pharisees in the days of Jesus' earthly ministry. They had added tradition to tradition and had multiplied rulings on the most insignificant affairs of life, until the people were lost in the maze of petty requirements, for no one was able either to know or to keep them all. Not only did popular religion become devoid of life, but the religious teachers and leaders themselves forgot the very principles of vital godliness. The Law had become nullified and dead through its multiplicity of accretions. We are ever in danger of doing that very thing today, losing sight of the vital elements of religion and life through an over-emphasis of insignificant and often unauthorized details. If a true conception of relative values were universally had, how the petty opinions and prejudices of men would drop out of sight and give place to the fundamental and abiding truths of the Gospel! And how much less of insincerity and shallowness Christians would possess! and how much more of life and power!

There is a tendency among vast numbers to give supreme consideration to things that have commercial value, to estimate the worth of things in terms of dollars and cents. Life to them is a great business enterprise and they are most successful who accumulate most. Money is of supreme value and everything else takes value according to its money power. Home is merely an adjunct to business, and the church is worthy of attention because it offers opportunity for advertising business and increasing the inflow of shekels. Does that not describe the attitude of many? Or is it that of the rare and extreme cases only? If it is, it is yet the goal towards which vast multitudes are pressing, and it behooves us all to take our bearings. We need to measure our lives and enterprises in terms of eternal values, then would our estimates of things greatly change. The things we have been considering of outstanding worth would shrink into insignificance and the heretofore puny things in our eyes would take on infinite value.

That inverted evaluation of things carries over into every field of life. In popular diplomacy the dollar is the standard of value and not a life, and where the dollar goes the flag follows to guarantee its safety. In politics votes are of supreme worth, and all ideals and standards must acknowledge their subservieny. In governmental policies expediency rather than justice is the key word. In administrative circles graft is so commonly expected that it is difficult to convince people that any one can go through honest. In legislative halls material wealth is preferred before ideals and receive more ready and generous consideration than institutions of imperishable value.

Dr. Harvey Wiley recently told an Alabama audience that he paid a dollar for a marriage license in Washington, D. C., and was asked no questions, but when he applied for a license to drive an automobile he was questioned for two hours and charged two dollars. In other words, he explains, "It cost me double the amount to qualify as a driver than it cost me to found a family, and there was more public concern about the driving problem than about the family problem." To which the Christian-Evangelist remarks:

If Washington were the only city where more attention is paid to the small than to the great we should be happy indeed. It would be a rewarding exercise to sit down and searchingly ask ourselves what matters most in life and then arise to pursue it with earnest ardor. It would soon bring the better things so deeply desired.

This would not by any means cause us to neglect the smaller issues of life. It would be to use them better than we do now. But it would prevent many of us from selling the most precious things possible to us for a mess of pottage. It would keep life symmetrical and its interests proportionate. We would cease to put the things of the body above the things of the spirit.

Surely it is time we were bending ourselves with all earnestness to the task of correcting the confusion that adheres in the minds of men regarding the things of greatest value. And after having gazed anew on the cross and empty tomb, our eyes should have lost much of their earthly dullness and we should be able to see more clearly and accurately the worth of things according to eternal values.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The Christian Endeavor Stewardship Superintendent, Brother Orville D. Ullom, discusses the problem of "Choosing a Life Work" on page 11.

Brother Henry Rinehart, treasurer of the Brethren Home, supplies us with another report of the good response of the brotherhood to the needs of that institution.

Brother W. A. Gearhart, Home Missionary Secretary, reports the receipts for the month of March, which shows up very good, indicating the continuance of a splendid interest in the work of Home Missions.

President E. E. Jacobs writes very interestingly of his trip to our mission stations in Kentucky, where he gave the commencement address at Riverside Institute, Lost Creek. Dr. Jacobs was highly impressed with the condition of the school and with the work that is being done in both missions.

Brother George E. Cone, National Statistician, has begun the task of collecting statistics, and he asks for the cooperation of the pastors and other church leaders of the brotherhood, a cooperation which is absolutely necessary if results of which we need not be ashamed are to be had. Brother Cone has started in good time, so that with proper support he ought to have a very complete report. We bespeak the cooperation of every pastor.

At a very successful revival at the Ardmore church, South Bend, Indiana, under the evangelistic preaching of Brother C. C. Grisso, twenty-three were added to the membership of the church and eight were reconsecrated. The enthusiastic pastor, Brother E. A. Duker, says the influence of the evangelist was very marked. It strikes us that two such enthusiasts made a splendid team and was the outstanding human element in the success of the campaign.

Brother Harold D. Fry, pastor of the church at Oakville, Indiana, writes of the evangelistic campaign recently conducted in his church under the leadership of Brother A. V. Kimmell, of Whittier, California. The evangelist was warmly received and his services highly appreciated, as was the case at each of the other points on this evangelistic itinerary. Four were added to the church, two by baptism and two by letter. Brother Kimmell also writes his impression of the campaign, and he seems to have enjoyed the work and the fellowship thoroughly, as well as having discovered some new relatives.

The Boston University School of Religious Education conducted by Dr. Walter S. Athearn has announced five new annual scholarships ($250 each) offered college graduates of high ranking who wish to do advanced work in religious education. The William S. Studley Fund makes possible these scholarships. Application of persons eligible for the academic year 1927-1928 must be filed before May 1 with Dean Athearn, 20 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Dr. C. F. Yoder gives us a most informing, challenging and at the same time, encouraging article concerning the religious and moral situation in Argentina. He reports splendid progress in Rio Cuarto, where fifty-four have been baptized since his return from furlough. Three were recently baptized at Cabrera. A pastor's conference was held and a field council. There is urgent need of a church building in Buenos Aires. Miss Nielsen is teaching in the National College at Rio Cuarto, supplying for a professor who is on leave-of-absence.

No one need to fear to follow where truth may lead, but it is foolish for one to think to follow truth without following Christ. He alone can lead us into all truth.

If you are not enjoying your religion, perhaps it is because you are not making much use of it. It must be used to show its worth and to be appreciated.

The United Presbyterian church and the Southern Presbyterian, or known as "The Presbyterian Church in the United States", are considering the question of uniting their forces. At a meeting of their two committees it was found that there were many reasons why the merging should take place. Both are conservative in doctrine and occupy different regions, the United Presbyterian being in the north, and so would supplement one another in territorial extension. The two together have a membership of about 750,000.

It is reported that the Soviet People's Commissars of Russia have issued a decree authorizing district local governments to establish dry regimes in their territories where a popular vote is favorable. The sale of intoxicating drinks to chronic drinkers and to minors is strongly forbidden by decree, and also prohibits the sale of booze in movies, theatres and clubs. Local authorities have also been empowered to close stores on the eve of holidays and on holidays, and that the doors be closed before the workers quit work.

The Salvation Army has what is known as an Anti-Suicide Bureau, established a decade or more ago and recently revived to investigate the suicide wave among students that has swept across the country. The bureau insists that great responsibility rests upon parents for failure to properly rear their offspring. Most of the suicides, the Army claims, are from homes where there was no religious training and where the atmosphere was anti-religious. The Army believes that this irresponsibility on the part of parents is increasing, and that the evil is to be found in the home of the rich and educated, as well as in the homes of the poor, and that the former are more blameworthy than the latter because of their greater opportunity. Christ is indeed the sure foundation of the home, and they who build on any other foundation will sooner or later find their frail structures tumbling upon them in ruins.

The Supreme Court of the state of Colorado handed down a decision recently permitting the reading of the King James version of the Bible without comment in the public schools, holding that the Bible is not sectarian and that such reading does not conflict with the state constitution. The Court held, however, that children of parents or guardians objecting, could not be compelled to listen to the reading. The Court said:

"It is said that the King James Bible is proscribed by Roman Catholic authority, but proscription cannot make that sectarian which is not actually so. If it could, the atheists could proscribe the Sear Spangled Banner, the Calvinists Whittier, and the fundamentalists half of modern science.

'When portions are read which are claimed to be sectarian the courts will consider them.

"It is said that reading of the Bible is intolerant and a form of religious persecution, but if those who don't like it can stay away and yet say to those who do like it 'You shall not read it here,' who is intolerant? Are those who stay away persecuted?"

Judge Ben Lindsay received a well-deserved rebuke recently from Bishop William T. Manning of the New York Episcopal diocese. The judge had challenged the bishop to debate upon the subject, "Companionate Marriage", when Bishop Manning wired the following reply:

"I beg to say, that for Christians the moral standards given to the world by Christ are not open to debate, in spite of your assertions to the contrary. The so-called 'companionate marriage' advocated by you is not marriage, but another name for free love. Your teachings would lead not forward, but backward to those conditions which destroyed the old pagan world. In your writings you reject and hold up to contempt the Christian ideals of morality and purity. Such teaching is a sin against God, and an insult to the womanhood and the manhood of our land, and should be condemned by all good citizens."

GENERAL ARTICLES

The Christian Hope

By N. V. Leatherman

ELDER N. V. LEATHERMAN
Pastor First Church, South Bend, Indiana

In the April issue of McCall's there is an array of thirty-three short articles on the subject of immortality. This symposium runs the whole gamut of possible conceptions or beliefs: from atheism, to agnosticism, to infidelity, while some have faith. If this group of intellectuals represent the American mind, then may God pity us.

In our Bible school class several weeks ago our young men discussed the question, "What is the Christian's hope?" The responses in answer to the question were placed on the blackboard, as follows: "Eternal Life," "Full Life here," "Happiness here on earth," "Heaven," "Contentment," "Satisfaction of doing our duty to our fellowmen." But after reading those blessed words: "Let not your heart be troubled: Ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Then the question was asked again, and the response was unanimous—"Christ." Why certainly, Christ is the Christian's hope.

Our belief and hope cannot be based on the idea that energy and matter never cease to be. It may be reasonable to conclude if we wish, that because—if it be true—energy and matter never cease to be, then the ego, the self never ceases to be. But there is no hope in that.

Regarding energy, we can surely see much of it become waste and void even though it may not cease to be. Witness the boy who with his energy, plus marksmanship, demolishes the street light; the thug who lays low his victim. Certainly this energy never ceases to be, but who admires its quality? The energy of an exploded cartridge may be transferred to a man's shoulder, to the thin air, or to another's heart; but who considers this form of energy as valuable?

Regarding matter: witness the potato with a tiny speck which grows and changes the entire tuber. The mass is still there, yet it begins to give itself off to the air in a manner that is not pleasant and makes one wish that this matter was not.

By the same process of reasoning we would conclude there are some spirits who may continue to abide, but their changed form is not to be desired.

No; such is not our hope.

There are others who think of their continuity through the generations which they may be privileged to father or mother, or influence through association, as if memory, and other personalities, were a continuation of their own self.

But these views portend from the philosophy of men. We see no reason why Christians should be dependent merely on such views. Neither can we understand why Christians should base their testimony to others for their hope of immortality upon them, when they have such a wonderful opportunity to testify to Christ. Of course it is a matter of belief. "Ye believe in God, believe also in me." It makes little difference whether we believe in immortality or no, if we do not believe in him who determines what our immortal existence shall be. The content of our belief is either fact or fiction. It cannot be both.

It is as easy to believe Christ is God as it is to believe Caesar was a ruler of Rome or Shakespeare was an English dramatist. The historic records of one are as reliable as the other and unprejudiced Christian folks will agree to the better evidence of the historicity of Christ. Apart from Christ we see little reason for a belief in immortality. The evidences are too intangible. But postulate belief in Christ, and our hope and belief, or faith, or whatever expression we use for our aspiration of things above, becomes most reasonable. Christ is the Christian's hope. And he is our only hope.

Christ is our hope because he is God. The efficacy of the cross is not merely that Jesus shed his blood. There were others who spilled their blood before him. Not merely that he was crucified. There were others crucified before him. Not merely that he sacrificed himself; Socrates drank the hemlock poison. Not merely that he lay down his life for his friends, is it that Jesus becomes our hope, for other men have laid down their lives for their friends. Ah! no. He is become our hope because of who he is. He is God. The value of the atonement is vested not merely in the deed; but in him who became obedient even unto the death of the cross. The glory of our righteousness and position, rests not merely upon the virtues of Christ; but upon who he was. True, if he had not been virtuous, if he had not been obedient, if he had not made atonement, then we would know he was not Christ, not God. Likewise we know him as God because of these things. The cross becomes the central appeal of the gospel because it was Christ, God, lifted up. His virtue and his works take meaning in the fact of his deity. He is Emmanuel, God with

HALLELUJAH! CHRIST IS RISEN!

"Hallelujah! Christ is risen!"

Down the years the echoes peal
As he bursts th' infernal prison,
Sin and Death beneath his heel.

Death is vanquished; Sin is smitten;
Ended is their tyrant reign.
Christ is Victor. Lo, 'tis written,
"Man's last enemy is slain."

Wondrous blaze of Heaven's glory
From the riven tomb doth shine.
Give to all the world the story—
Life and Love of God, divine.

Then shall Life, new glory knowing,
Flood thy soul this Easter hour,
As thy heart, its full faith showing,
Claims his own immortal power.

Thus shall Love, thine own, eternal,
Lift the veil and let thee see,
In the bliss of Heaven supernal,
Blessed loved ones waiting thee.

Let the Risen Lord, immortal,
Make thee strong for earthly strife,
Till he lead thee through the portal
Into heaven's Love and Life.

us. In him we see the reality of all our true ideals, our loftiest aspirations; he is our completeness, our all and in all because he is God. In him we place all our confidence, trust, belief, faith and interest for both time and eternity, because of who he is. He is our hope.

Christ is our hope because he is man. There seems to be a great deal of alarm wasted today over folks thinking in terms of an anthropomorphic God. But how else can I think of my Christ, "Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God", that is, because of his being in the form of God he did not consider that position a thing to be grasped or eternally to be held on to; "but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men."

John, in writing of the value of our fellowship in relation to the Father, wrote of Christ, "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of Life;" "For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us. "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ."

Hence we conclude we know God, we know Christ, because of his anthropomorphism. Since man cannot reach up to God, he in Christ reaches down to man and lifts him up. He then is our hope. He is our only way up and out from our dilemma.

Lastly, Christ is our hope because of his resurrection. His scoffers reviled against him while he hung on the cross, saying, "He saved others, himself he cannot save." Ah! he could not save himself from the cross and remain true to himself as God and Savior. He could not spare himself from this ignominious treatment; but he had a power to do even a greater thing. He had power to overrule the effects of death, hell and the grave. He is the resurrection and the life. He is the content of all our hope and aspirations after immortality, because he gives us here and now eternal life. That is eternal fellowship with God, so that we can say, for me to live is for Christ to live in me, here and now; but to die is gain, for that is to be with Christ there.

So Christ is the fact that gives content to our belief and makes our faith most reasonable. He is the Christian's hope.

He is Risen---Matthew 28:6

By Mrs. Edna Nicholas

The awful hours of the crucifixion creep on—morning lengthens into evening. The great Roman guard with spear in hand is pacing before the tomb, watching the Roman seal.

Midnight comes again. The guard is still on duty. Was there ever such a watch?

The last day of the week begins and lo! there is a great earthquake. Behold! an angel of the Lord with the appearance of lightning and a garment as of snow, rolls away the stone and sat upon it.

The guards are stricken with terror—the Roman seal is broken—the tomb is empty—they shake with fear and become as dead men.

Why are these startling events? Why this quaking ground—this descending angel—this rolling stone—this paralyzed guard? Ah! the Roman guard—Caesar's seal, the great stone, the rock-walled tomb were not strong enough to hold our Lord, the King of Glory.

No man saw him leave the tomb. It was God's plan—the great event took place in solitude. But we do know that sometime during Saturday night the dead Jesus became a risen Savior, the conqueror of sin, death and hell.

Thus the great plan of man's redemption was completed. The resurrection becomes the Christian's hope.

The birth of Christ would have been only a beautiful story—his life and work would have meant but little more than the life and work of any good man—his crucifixion would have been an unparalleled sacrifice and his death would have marked the end.

Whereas the resurrection makes his birth divine—his life and work holy—and establishes the power of his atoning blood and makes sure the Christian's faith and hope—something no other religion possesses.

"He arose for our justification," there would have been no justification in his death. You and I would be without hope were it not for the power and glory of the resurrection, which wiped away all scandal and ignominy of the cross and made it the act of faith to hope for life and immortality.

In the light of the resurrection, life is worth living—our work, our sacrifices and our love are not in vain, all have a recompense—eternal life. The great stone has been rolled away; there are no hindrances for the believer. Every barrier has been removed. The resurrection teaches us that death is only an event in life—not the closing of it.

Much is made of the doctrine of the cross and too little of the doctrine of the Crown. We need the atoning blood of Christ's death, yet the atoning blood would have been useless were it not for the hallowed influence of Christ's risen life. We hear much of the crucified Savior and too little of our risen Savior. He is not dead but risen. Ours is not a funeral procession. "He is risen." The same power that raised Christ from the grave is able to bring you forth in the newness of life.

"He is risen." Woe be unto those who reject his mercy and heed not his authority. A conqueror of death no man can successfully resist his will. Such a conqueror can crush the haughtiest rebel.

To those who accept his mercy, he says, "Come,, and those who refuse to accept he says, "Depart."

We are children of the resurrection, bought with the price. What does it mean to you? What manner of men are you?

When you are about your daily work, in the shop, in the store, in your profession, or in the home, what manner of men are you? Are you living in that newness of life? Are you teaching men, by contact, the power and glory of a resurrected life?

It is your opportunity to go higher and higher in the realities and glories of the resurrection. Are you?

Prayer—Our Father, we acknowledge our Savior's resurrection as the crowning event in the redemption of men. Help us to live in the light of his resurrected life and go forth in new power that we may have the full hope of eternal life and be clothed in immortality. Father, we thank thee for the Resurrection. Amen.

Wilful Ignorance

By A. V. Kimmell, Member of Foreign Board

"What more can he say, than to you he hath said,—
To you, who for refuge to Jesus have fled?"

As the time for the annual Easter Offering comes again, those most directly interested are wondering what more to say that the church may be aroused to the point of action with regard to her responsibility to the non-Christian peoples of the earth. Mark that phrase, AROUSED TO THE POINT OF ACTION. Action in this case means giving and not pretending. In most denominations "Missions" is a popular theme at this hour therefore those who would follow the trend of things are long on talk for Missions, but we are discovering that there are quite a few who are long on talk but very short on pay when the annual offering is taken. True, some do not have much money, but a real missionary Christian would have to be very poor indeed who could not spare five dollars or more for the only offering for Foreign Missions, taken during the year. Giving to other causes will not excuse the individual, who is commanded to send the Gospel unto the ends of the earth.

After all that the Bible says about going, giving, living, etc. It seems that should be enough on this question, and indeed it would be if the Christians were taking the Bible seriously, but they are not. In former years we have excused this indifference of the church on the grounds of there being a lack of information on the part of the membership of the church. This year we have no such excuse. The churches have been visited by the missionaries from both fields. They have told simply and earnestly of the needs of their respective fields. The pastors, with few exceptions have added their words of encouragement and approval to this great cause. Missionary instruction in Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and Missionary Society has been quite regular. Almost every issue of the Brethren Evangelist and Brethren Missionary is crowded with missionary information. Therefore, Brethren, we are without excuse. If the members of the Brethren church are not informed as to our Foreign Missionary Program it is WILFUL IGNORANCE.

Wilful ignorance excuses no man but brings the one making the plea under condemnation. Jesus judged the slothful servant out of his own mouth. Refusal to receive instruction or neglecting to secure information when it is available amounts to the same thing, wilful ignorance. Brethren, as you give keep the following facts before you:

First, we have the finest, cleanest, most consecrated group of missionaries on the field that any Society has ever sent to any field. Every time one of them comes home and visits among the churches this truth is strengthened. Every one is thoroughly sound in doctrine.

Second, the affairs of the Foreign Missionary Society are so administered that practically all the money is used for the workers or field equipment. Several members of the Board use time paid for by their churches in order that this may be made possible.

Third, the needs this year are greater than ever. The responsibility of the church was never so great as now. We are responsible to the natives, for we have given them a taste of the Gospel and owe them more of it. We are responsible to the large band of missionaries we have on four continents of the world right now, remembering that we are responsible for those on furlough. We are responsible to our LORD for he gave the world as the field and sent us to the uttermost parts of the earth.

"Fear not I am with thee, O be not dismayed,
For I am thy God, I will still give thee aid."

The World's Need

By U. J. Shively, Member Foreign Board

When in our fair country there is so much thieving, and robbery, such disregard for law, so many automobile fatalities, murders, divorces and the breaking up of homes, we think surely the United States needs something.

When we read of war stricken China, of the caste system of India, of priest-ridden and unbelieving South America, of dark and Moslem threatened Africa, of sin seemingly rampant in every country of the globe, we must come to the conclusion that surely the world needs something.

From every tribe and nation comes the cry for God, that yearning, longing and need for something above and beyond the individual.

How and where can this longing be satisfied? To whom shall we turn for rest, comfort and the peace that passeth understanding? Is there a cure for all the sin and sorrow in the world?

To these and all similar questions there is only one answer. In Jesus Christ and in him alone do we find peace, and satisfaction. In the application of the blood of Jesus to the hearts of men is the cure for all sin and wickedness.

"What can wash away my sin?
Nothing but the blood of Jesus."

The task of the Christian people is the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, or the Christianization of the world. If this is true, how can we as a Brethren church accomplish our share of this great task?

We are especially interested in the Province of Cordoba, Argentina, South America, and in the Oubangi Chari, French Equatorial Africa. How can we help to establish the Kingdom of God in these districts?

First, Prayer. We can all pray. Jesus gives us the wonderful privileges of intercessory prayer. We are to pray for each other. Above all else missionaries ask for the prayers of Christian people because they know the value of intercessory prayer. Every month comes the requests for prayer from our missionaries, to prayer-band members and to all others who will join. Prayer is the key that unlocks God's storehouse of blessing.

Second, Give. We can't pray very long and earnestly for anything, but that we become interested in that particular person or object. Interest follows prayers. Then let us pray more often for our missionary representatives and the work that is being done. When we are interested in a project we will manifest that interest by our love and gifts. If "the more we love, the more we give," then some people must love their Lord a very tiny bit, because their gifts for his work are so meagre.

How about our gifts for Foreign Missions? Do we want to retrench, stand still, or go forward? The Foreign Mission Board will have to plan the work just as our gifts indicate. If we don't give as much as heretofore, then the work will have to be curtailed, and who wants to do that? If we put into their hands about the same amount as last year, then that means we do not want the work to grow, and who wants to see this missionary work stand still when there are thousands awaiting to hear of the love of God, and the power of Jesus to save? But if we all give more than last year the Lord's work can go forward, and who will not rejoice in having a share in the task of establishing the Kingdom of God on the earth?

We must also give ourselves, our sons, and our daughters. Let us all ponder the words of Dr. J. Campbell White, who in speaking of Protestant missions, says.

"We have sent only one out of every sixteen hundred of our church members to the mission fields. Every missionary has an average parish of sixty thousand to reach, and we have only sent one out of every sixteen hundred. We have not exhausted our resources. America ought to have a total of thirty thousand missionaries in order to cut down the average parish abroad from sixty thousand to thirty thousand. Twenty-five or thirty thousand people is about a big enough parish for any missionary to look after. I believe we could send one out of every hundred of our church members and the ninety-nine who stayed at home would do a better job, with the power of God realized through them, than all can do if we neglect the opportunity with which God has challenged us."

An additional gift of five cents per week from each Protestant member would increase mission gifts over sixty million dollars, and ten cents per week would double that or increase our gifts over one hundred and twenty million dollars annually.

If every member of the Brethren church would give five cents per week for Foreign Missions, the total gifts would amount to sixty-five thousand dollars annually, nearly twice as much as the total offering to the Foreign work last year.

The world needs Jesus Christ.

What share will YOU have in this great task which is our opportunity?
Nappanee, Indiana.

Sharing the Resurrection

By D. J. Wetzel

The Easter season is the joyous season for the Christian. We rejoice in Christ's victory over sin, death and the grave. It was not only a victory for him, but a victory for us. He has shown us the way. We, too, according to his promise, are looking forward unto that great triumphant day. We have the assurance of the continuity of life, of the immortality of life.

We rejoice in the resurrection as a future hope; but we should also make it a present experience. The resurrection is the arising of the life immortal. We need not wait until death for the arising of the life immortal within us. God has endowed every human life with immortality. The very fact that men everywhere seek God indicates the divine in us reaching out for a higher self-realization. We would realize ourselves in God. And it matters not how primitive our form of worship; the fact that we worship at all is the response of our God-given, immortal soul to God himself. The more attentively we respond to his appeal the more we grow like him. As Christians, we believe that the potential Christ is in every human soul. Some time in the distant eternity we may be like unto him. It is our present duty to become more like him daily. It is only as we give expression to the immortal, spiritual qualities within us that we grow like him.

There is in every normal human life some capacity for love and faith, for sympathy and sorrow, for comfort and courage, for devotion and reverence, for sacrifice and service. In how many lives are all the spiritual qualities highly developed? Christ was the perfectly balanced man in whom every spiritual element was completely developed. Forever he remains the unattainable ideal. We may grow in his likeness, and this is his great challenge. But we have sealed the tomb upon many a spiritual endowment. A person may be an excellent worker in the church, but carry along with him a nasty disposition. Many of his finest spiritual qualities are in the grave. We may be strong in our faith, while many a spiritual power lies buried within us. Let us experience today the resurrection of the immortal, spiritual powers that are within us. Prayer and the study of the Word; fellowship with the brethren in worship—all these become agents that will help to unlock the sealed tomb and give freedom of expression to the spiritual powers within.

There is yet another resurrection in which we may share a great joy. Roll the stone away that is keeping your neighbor's spiritual life entombed. This indeed, is one of the greatest joys of Christian service. Next to me may live a man who is unregenerate, worldly, hopeless. He is vulgar and profane; he fears neither God nor the devil; his home is unhappy. Have you ever placed the lever of love, patience, faith, prayer, hope of unwearied good-will under the huge rock that is keeping his life sealed? Have you ever been the means under God's grace to set his spiritual powers free?

The resurrection is a present experience, a recurring test of our Christian walk and conversation, as well as our unfailing future hope.—Reformed Church Messenger.

The Spirit of Easter

By Helen Keller

Easter is the promise of the Lord that all the best and noblest in man shall be renewed, even as growth and bloom and ripening shall not cease.

Belief in eternal life compels us to believe in good deeds and honest thought. The good man toils not for today, nor for tomorrow alone, but because he knows that his labor shall survive long after his hand has fallen from the plough. The good man pours himself into the world and makes it new. He is among the blessed who win sight out of blindness, order out of chaos, and life out of death.

Since the first Easter morning the soul of man has shone with unwasting light; for then he looked into the radiant face of the risen Christ, and knew that God's universe shapes itself not to destruction, but to a yet more glorious genesis; yea, it endureth from everlasting to everlasting.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Faithfulness of God

By Florence N. Gribble, M. D.

TEXT—"He that spared not his own Son but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?"—Romans 8:32.

For us all! What comprehensive love! What a missionary program! Such men as Dr. Custer of Boston, believing that the Son of God was delivered up for us all, have accomplished great things for God. Realizing that the poor, the miserable, the diseased and especially the tuberculous were among the objects of God's faithfulness, he established his famous homes for the tubercular, whose influence in his own and succeeding generations have meant so much for the blessing of mankind. Yet many a man has had a vision for the needy at his door who has never had a realization of the need of heathen lands. Hear then the cry from Africa:

"Why didn't you tell us sooner?"

The words come sad and low.

O, ye who knew the gospel truths,

Why didn't you let us know?

The Savior died for all the world,

He died to save from woe.

But we never heard the story,

Why didn't you let us know?

"Hear this pathetic cry of ours,

O dwellers in Christian lands,

For Africa stands before you

With pleading, outstretched hands,

"You may not be able to come yourself,

But some in your stead can go,

Will you not send us teachers,

Will you not let us know?"

Truly the God who spared not his own Son but delivered him up for us all, in his matchless faithfulness included the heathen of every land, even dark, ignorant Africa!

But the Apostle has yet other notes of emphasis, for proceeding with the verse he exclaims triumphantly "how shall he not"—Would you know the difference between a man of great and one of lesser faith? The man of great faith looks beyond the difficulties, beyond the opposition and exclaims not, as does his weaker brother, "How shall God?" but joyously, victoriously, "How shall he not?" When in the seventies, a struggling Chicago physician, his heart well nigh broken by the suffering and the agonies of the city's helpless foundlings—children abandoned on unwelcome doorsteps, or worse still, thrown into dark alleys, into loathsome ash barrels and reeking garbage cans,—children blinded purposely by scalding acids, or maimed by cruel blows, felt laid upon him the responsibility of their rescue, he asked not, "How shall God meet the needs of these suffering infants, how shall he provide for my growing family?" but, being like Abraham, fully persuaded that what God hath promised he is also able to perform, he undertook the establishment of the "Foundlings' Home," exclaiming, "How shall God not be faithful?" And when hardly fully established there came Chicago's great fire, devastating his buildings and seemingly destroying his work, he simply remarked in his quiet manner, "God isn't burned up yet," and continued trusting in his faithfulness. It was in the early years of the present century that the writer, then a struggling medical student, was arrested by this inscription upon the walls of the massive brick structure (which, after the fire, had replaced the dilapidated frame buildings) "This institution is dependent for its maintenance upon the faithfulness of a prayer hearing God, and the free will offerings of his children." The "Foundlings' Home" at 15 South Wood Street, Chicago, still continues, although Doctor Shipman has long since gone to his reward, for God, while accepting the co-operation of his children, is absolutely independent thereof. The Creator cannot be dependent upon the creature, and the faithfulness of God is independent of the act or volition of man. Yet God desires and even solicits out co-operation. Why? Because he is seeking to bless us, because co-operation with him is one of the greatest privileges that we can experience. Therefore,

"For thee, O friend of mine, I humbly pray

That God will keep thee ever 'neath his care;

And give thee just those graces day by day

He sees thou need'st to make thy soul more fair.

"That in thee he may find a dwelling place,

And through thee cast his light around,

That in thy life, thy face, thy heart, thy soul,

His own true faithful likeness may be found."

"Let us co-operate then with the Lord Jesus Christ in giving for the spread of the gospel as never before among the heathen.

"How shall he not with him also".... Ah, beloved, if God could give him, his own dear Son, can he withhold the "also?" On the third day of June, 1926, there died at Lurambo, one who had spent thirty-six years in the service of his Master in one of Africa's darkest frontiers. He believed in the faithfulness of God, he believed in the wondrous and gracious gift of God's own Son, and he believed in the "also". For Dan Crawford's "dinner bell," to use his own quaint expression, was often "rung in heaven." He knew how to suffer, he knew how to trust, he knew how to endure as seeing "him who is invisible." He died suddenly after an illness short, sharp and unexpected; he died as many another missionary soldier of the cross has died, bravely at his post; he died in that faith "without which it is impossible to please God, for he that cometh unto God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Of him the words of the poet were remarkably true.

"I am looking unto Jesus every hour,

I am trusting in his faithfulness and power,

Underneath his watchful eye,

Are the flames that purify.

We shall understand their meaning by and bye."

Believing then in the "also" of God's faithfulness, let us give to the heathen the message of salvation, assured that his provision will never fail. Feed upon his faithfulness.

But the apostle proceeds with the utmost logic. "How shall he not with him also freely give? There died on January 31 of this year within the ranks of the ministry of the Brethren Church a remarkable Christian. As pastor his poise and gentle carriage endeared him to all. As a member of the Foreign Board he manifested a sweet firmness and dignity. Toward the members of his own family and in his own home he showed constantly a kindness and tenderness of demeanor. Why was the name of Marcus Witter so sincerely loved? Why is his memory so tenderly revered? Why even here in far off France does the knowledge that he is gone overwhelm one with a sense of loss and emptiness? Because he was a good steward of the manifold grace of God. He believed in the faithfulness of God. He believed that he who spared not his own Son but delivered him up for us all would with him also freely give all things that pertain to life and godliness—all that went to make up a saintly character. I like to think of him as one of great faith in God's great faithfulness.

"A traveler crossed a frozen stream
In trembling fear one day,
Later a teamster drove across
And whistled all the way.

"Great faith and little faith alike
Were granted safe convoy,
But one had pangs of needless fear,
The other only joy."

We who are left, relying likewise and steadfastly upon the faithfulness of God, shall we not give of ourselves and our substance that the heathen may also know that he freely gave his Son, and desires with him also to freely give all things?

There is a wondrous rhythm in the verse. For us all has a corresponding phrase two words of which are understood. TO US ALL—all things! There was a man among you some nineteen years ago who believed that the Lord Jesus was not only given for us all but to us all. When he sang or heard sung the beautiful hymn "He included me," he liked to paraphrase it and make it read, "He included them," the heathen. "I must needs go home by the way of the cross," he longed and sometimes requested that it might be sung, "They must needs go home".....they, meaning the heathen. He went out from your midst to those heathen whom he loved for Christ's sake. He spent the whole of his only furlough with you, beloved ones of the brotherhood, pleading for the heathen of French Equatorial Africa. To you sent him forth, with them he lived, for them he labored, among them he died, in their midst lies buried all that remains of his frail but energetic body. And why? Because he believed in the faithfulness of God who spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, that he might with him also freely give us (to us all) all things. If he were here today I believe his message would be expressed in the words that follow—the words of another warrior for Christ, A. B. Simpson, akin in spirit and in personality to him of whom we speak, James S. Gribble.

"A hundred thousand souls a day,
Are passing one by one away,
In Christless guilt and gloom,
Without one ray of hope or light,
With future dark as endless night,
They're passing to their doom.

"O church of God what wilt thou say,
When in the awful judgment day
They charge thee with their doom?
Go then! In prayer his promise claim,
Prove the full power of Jesus' name,
And take the victory."

But there remains another point to be considered in this remarkable text:....Freely give us all things! What are things to GOD who gave HIS SON? How shall he not give things? ALL THINGS even MONEY? There lived a man who knew how to obtain from God in a remarkable way the gift of money, yet it was not money that he sought. The sole and whole aim of his life was to give a testimony to the faithfulness of God. And so it has come to pass that the name of George Muller is a household word, and needless to say, though George Muller sleeps in Jesus, the Ashley Down Orphan asy-

OUTLINE OF "THE FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER"

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience.)

THE TRIUMPHANT SPIRIT

SUNDAY—Love Incarnate Resists Temptation, Mt. 4:1-11; Heb. 4:15; Jas. 1:12; 1 Cor. 10:13. "Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." In Christ love (God) was incarnated (embodied in the flesh). We see this love in Jesus Christ resisting the mightiest of temptations. Let me face my temptations as he faced his, in the consciousness of God.

Prayer—Thanks for the privilege of worship. Pray for personal virtue; for the tempted; for leaders of worship.

MONDAY—Love Detects Subtle Sins, Mt. 16:21-28; Mt. 6:13; Heb. 12:1. "And he turned and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan; for thou art a stumbling block unto me; for thou mindest not the things of God, but the things of men." How Jesus detected the subtle selfishness in this typical temptation! Such discerning love we need against our besetting sins.

Prayer—For the spirit of meekness; the religiously deluded; the goodwill of men; Christian unity.

TUESDAY—Love Rises Above Treachery, Jn. 13:1-15; Lk. 22:21; 1 Cor. 13:7. "Behold the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table." Contrast the two spirits—in Judas, selfishness unto treachery; in Jesus love that loves still when treachery has done its worst. That triumphant love he promises me.

Prayer—Thanks for responsibilities. Pray for the merciful spirit; the hard-hearted; American homes.

WEDNESDAY—Love Finds Peace in the Midst of Anguish, Lk. 22:35-46; Jn. 13:27. "And being in agony he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat became as it were great drops of blood." May it be that there are Gethsemanes for me? Then breathe on me, O breath of God, the peace that passeth knowledge.

Prayer—For peace within; for those making Christian decision; for our community.

THURSDAY—Love Triumphs over Hatred, Jn. 18:19-19; Acts 7:60; 1 Cor. 13:4, 5. "Love suffereth long. . . taketh not account of evil." All through the abuses of the trials, and the tortures of the scourgings, and the crown of thorns, love failed not. His tears were for his torturers; his sadness for the misled crowd; his burden for humanity.

Prayer—Thanks for sympathy. Pray for the spirit of compassion, for those who are antagonistic to Christ.

FRIDAY—Love Conquers Agony, Lk. 23:36-49. "To-day thou shalt be with me in Paradise." As we contemplate the cross of Christ, survey the curious crowd, and listen to the words from the cross, we sense the triumph of love.

Prayer—For the forgiving spirit; for Christian assurance; for scoffers; for our country.

SATURDAY—Love Reconciles God and Man, 2 Cor. 5; Jn. 12:32; 3:16. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." When I see Christ suffering on the cross, and remember that it was for me, I am moved to repentance.

Prayer—Thanks for the Gospel. Pray for the penitent; for the peacemakers; for the nations.

SUNDAY—Love Victorious over Death, Jn. 20; Lk. 24:5, 6; Rom. 6:9; Phil. 3:8-10; 1 Cor. 13:13. "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen. That wonderful love did not die; it lived on. I would have that immortal love animate my spirit, that I may know the power of the resurrection.

Prayer—Thanks for the risen Lord. Pray for peace on earth; for young Christians and new church members.

lums still exist. How shall he not freely give to even the orphans ALL THINGS?

We cannot do better than at this time than to remember the striking words of Moody:

"Careful for nothing."

Prayerful for everything."

Thankful for anything."

For God has promised with his Son to freely give us all things!

Can we better show our gratitude and appreciation at this time, so appropriately set apart in memory of our risen Lord than by that co-operation which is our privilege, that pouring of our substance at his feet, that the heathen, too, may know his faithfulness?

The finished work of the Lord Jesus has brought to us salvation. Yet our co-operation is necessary in the free-will acceptance thereof, for "he is the Savior of all men, especially of them that believe."

In like manner the faithfulness of God is a complete and independent attribute. Yet for man to benefit thereby, it is necessary that he should co-operate with God. The results of this co-operation are manifested in two ways. (1) Through the faithfulness of God man receives. (2) Through the faithfulness of God, and co-operating therein, man gives. Remember, says the apostle, the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And so it has been with the illustrious men herein mentioned. Custer, Stupman, Crawford, Witter, Gribble, Mueller were co-workers with God in his faithfulness toward the sick, the helpless babe, the needy church abroad and at home, the otherwise uncared-for orphan. Would you then benefit by the faith-cared-for orphan. Would you then benefit by the faithfulness of God? Give, and the needy will receive. To them shall be manifested his sweet faithfulness. But since it is more blessed to give than to receive, it is self-evident, even axiomatic, that the very act of giving brings to the giver an unspeakable blessing, far beyond any that he can possibly confer, for it links him with God.

Golden Text—Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.—1 Cor. 10:12.

LESSON LIGHTS

Lesson Poem

Sullen, and apprehensive at a word,
Peter, the bold disciple of his Lord,
Crouches above the brazier's slender flame,
Flinching to hear his too familiar name
Banded with Christ's, defiant to deny,
Lest one should fiercely whisper, "Crucify!"
The tongue, abrupt to censure or confess,
Is stifled by occasion's harsh distress;
The steady eye that flamed in love or hate
Shifts from wide eye to eye of them that wait.

O Peter! Canst thou thus so soon forget
The grace of Hermon's Mount that hallowed thee,
While yet the tears upon his tears are wet,
From Bethany and grim Gethsemane?

—Elwood Lindsay Haines.

Introduction

As Jesus was on his way to the Mount of Olives on the night of the betrayal, he said to his disciples, "All ye shall be offended in me this night, for it is written, I will smite the shepherd and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad." But Peter boldly declared, "If all shall be offended in thee, I will never be offended." Jesus calmly replied, "Verily I say unto thee that this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice." Peter was very certain of himself, however, and insisted, "Even if I must die with thee, yet will I not deny thee." But when the shepherd was smitten, the sheep did as their Master had said, they all left him and fled, Peter as well as the rest. Peter and John managed to follow Christ "afar off", and entered the courtyard, the inner quadrangle around the palace of the high priest, where they remained while Jesus was in the assembly hall above.

Tests of Loyalty

The true test of loyalty comes when we are off our guard, and when a sharp decision must be made at once, without the chance of any support from our fellows. "Being loyal includes the primary virtue of being honest with one's self as well as with others."

Some words on loyalty to one's country are applicable in a large measure to loyalty to Christ and his kingdom. They were in a speech made by one of our public men in 1917. "I believe that loyalty to one's country should be fundamental and instilled in children from their earliest days, so that it should become second nature. Loyalty means devotion. It means willingness to serve, obedience to the will of the majority. The aspect of democracy enters in the question of loyalty in this country, and demands that our loyalty be founded upon faith in democracy."

"Loyalty also includes the quality of going into a thing without personal reservation. Be prepared to go the whole way, to sacrifice, not merely your comfort, but something more. Men are going to die to prove their loyalty. It is a good plan to live for your country as well as to die for it. Everything must be given up, I believe, if the ultimate demand is made."

Steps to Peter's Fall

He had been self-seeking, striving to be accounted greatest; he had been self-confident; he had separated from his brethren; he had slept when he should have watched and prayed; he had ventured into evil company as one of them. His fall "was the fruit of seeds that he himself had sown. The tree falls with a great crash, but the decay which accounts for it is often not discovered till it is down on the ground."

It is easy to see how Peter's entire life up to this point had prepared him for his fall. He had been always ready to put himself forward, to assert himself before others, and the habit had grown upon him till it really seemed to him that he could not possibly err.

"In the courtyard Peter was in bad company. He had seated himself among Christ's enemies. His object was to conceal his discipleship. Thus he acted denial before he spoke it. Had he been altogether loyal and faithful he would have kept out of such company and as near his Master as possible. The only true and safe thing to do when among Christ's enemies is to take one's place quietly and firmly at the beginning. We must guard against taking the steps that lead to denial of Christ."—J. R. Miller.

Repentance That Counts

"Sincere conviction of sin is the beginning of the birth of manhood worthy in Christ's name to be crowned! Out of penitence the life blossoms into the light. God is love. The lost are found."—Rev Newman Smyth. D.D.

"Peter's penitence is full of the deepest spiritual meaning to all who have ever made Peter's discovery—that they have sinned. We find here four outstanding characteristics of the state of penitence: (1) It is a divine thing. It began with God. Peter did not turn. But 'the Lord turned and looked upon Peter.' (2) It is a very sensitive thing. A look did it. The Lord ... looked upon Peter. (3) It is a very intense thing. Peter went out and wept bitterly. (4) It is a very lonely thing. Peter went out—out into the quiet night, to be alone with his sin and God."—Henry Drummond.

"There is no further account of Peter till the morning of the resurrection. We read of St. John standing by the cross, but not a word of St. Peter. It would be a time of deep searching of hearts, he had indeed been sifted as wheat. This was his great fall for which he had been unconsciously preparing since the day when he had exalted himself because of his great confession at Caesarea. The praise he then received had been too much for him. He had been uplifted within himself, and his pride

Choosing My Life Work

By Orville D. Ullom, Stewardship Superintendent

This question confronts every young man and young woman of today, and furthermore it is not a new problem. Your father and my father have faced it and have made either the wise or unwise decision. This is self-evident.

If we are ever to make ourselves congenial companions and worthwhile friends to other people when we grow into manhood we must discover that particular thing which we like best to do and that which we can do better than anything else.

Robbins in his "Challenge to Life Service" has said, "Each can do something better than others."

Young men and young women, we are not toys in the hands of the forces of nature. God's creation, but we are master of life and of ourselves if we discover God's way and his desires for our life. God has not written a detailed account or biography as it were, out in book form for us so that we might go there and read what we are to do, for he has prepared a better way. He has given us a mind and a heart that we might conscientiously and sincerely make our own decisions wisely. And this would certainly be our way to proceed: thinking of ourselves—our own ability, to do this or that at the same time not underestimating or overestimating our ability.

In this respect we should also consult our friends—those who know us best and especially those who seem most interested in us and our welfare. Then there are those friends that speak silently to us—the best books that lead us into new truths about life and our problems. We are expected to read biographies of men who have attained distinction in their calling—we must never cease reading biographies of great men. They are constant sources of information and inspiration, they are fountains of living water by the wayside, and they will lead us into paths of righteousness, if we read them with a questioning mind, with a desire for new truth. As you read question the abilities of these men and then compare their abilities with yours. Again we suggest personal and confidential talks with men who are now working in the various callings of life. You can well afford to demand of them sufficient time to talk over with you one of the most important decisions you have to make in your whole lifetime. Your earnestness and zeal will prove to them your sincerity, and I'll warrant you that they will grant willingly your desired time.

Not last and certainly above all not least is the factor of prayer which, according to my way of thinking, must enter into such a vital consideration. My God is a God who helps if I am earnest and sincere in my search. He alone knows my abilities, and therefore why shouldn't we seek him by asking that we might walk in the path of perfect health, that we might abide among wise and cautious men of Christ-like character and that we might live a life of loving consideration and service so that we might make our decisions wisely, weigh values correctly, and measure lifetime choices in the light of his knowledge, rather than in the light of our own. Then we shall awake some day to discover that God has called us into a particular field of service, not because we have permitted change or accident to settle the question, but because of a deliberate choice in the light of sound knowledge.

L. W. Crawford says "Vocations have been determined upon by mere chance or accident. Men have accidentally stumbled upon a line of work, winning therein both honor and distinction.

On the other hand, more have drifted into a trade who have awakened later to a realization that they are in the wrong position. But it is now too late to change. Such a man is a slave to his work rather than its master. You cannot afford to let mere chance or accident decide your life work.

Nor can we afford to follow the line of least resistance. Such men are apt never to be more than jobbers—often jobless. These least resisters would talk in this fashion "Dad succeeded in this line and of course he will give me a lift." Rather should your share of the world's work be determined by the need of the world which your trained and developed powers can best supply.

Deliberate choice based on sound judgment, extensive knowledge, deep thought,

JUNIOR ENDEAVOR

A Visit to the Indians. Matthew 25:34-40

It was very early in the morning, many years ago. There were a whole lot of wigwams scattered over a long valley. Everything was quiet and still. Then just as the big yellow sun came up out of the great Atlantic Ocean, an old Indian Chief stepped from his tent and stood still watching the sun. His face was very stern. He looked almost cross, but really and truly he was rather pleased. Did he not have many brave young warriors among his men? Were there not large fields planted in corn. He knew that he was a powerful chief and that his people were doing well, so he was happy.

Soon everyone was up and busy. The women were tilling the corn and attending to their work. Then the chief called the young men together and sent them to get meat for the people. While the women worked in the corn and the young men were hunting for animals to kill, the old man and the chief stayed in camp or near the camp. They were a busy, happy tribe.

One day several months later when the corn was all gathered in and meat had been stored for the long cold months of winter, one of the young men came running to the old chief and said to him, "Chief,

Chief, come with me. I have seen something that I can not understand."

The young man took his chief out of the tent and then pointed out over the Atlantic. "What is that out on the Ocean, Chief? Do you see that white spot? It is coming toward us, for I have been watching it and as I watched it grew larger and larger."

Then the young man and his chief watched. Finally the chief said, "I do not know what it is. We will have to watch it and be very careful."

Not long after that the white spot grew larger and larger and then reached the shore. Then the young man said, "Chief, Oh Chief, it is like a canoe, only it has big white cloth on it. Do you think that it could be possible that people live somewhere across the great Atlantic? Do you suppose that there are other tribes greater than ours?"

After that both men were silent. Many others of the tribe stood with the chief and the young man and all watched in silent wonder as people started to get out of the boat and come on shore. These people looked very unusual to the Indians. The Indians had never seen anyone who had a white skin, and all of these people seemed to have. Never had they seen anyone dressed as these people, or heard anyone talk like these people. All of the Indians were greatly awed. They did not know what to think.

When the white people began to move about and look about over the country, the big chief made a sign to his people, and all of them hurried back to their camp. Then the chief said, "We will not let these strange people see us or know that we are here. Stay in camp this evening, all except those of you whom I ask to watch, and early in the morning we will move our camp where they will not find us."

So they moved. Many years passed and each year more of the strange white people came up on the shore, and each year the people of the old Chief's tribe moved farther and farther away from their old home territory. Sometimes there was fighting and some of the white people and some of the Indians were killed, but year after year the Indians had to move their camp farther and farther away. The old chief died and another became chief, but still they moved and moved.

That was years ago and today the children of that tribe and other tribes just like it are living away out in the western part of our country. We, the strange white people, have taken all of their country from them. No longer can they roam about and hunt as they used to. If these people could know about our Savior, they would be much happier. Let's pay them back for having taken their country, by giving them our Savior and his love.

Under the Southern Cross

In my last letter I had the pleasure of reporting fifty-three confessions in our short revival campaign in January. Nineteen of these have now been baptized and others are about ready. Fifty-four have been baptized in Rio Cuarto since our return from furlough, besides those in other places.

Last week I had the pleasure of baptizing three converts in Cabrera. One is the head of a large family who hopes to bring in all his family. The other two are a man and wife who learned the gospel through the passing of the Bible Coach a year ago. By reading the Bible they were converted and wrote to me for further instructions. They came nearly sixty miles to Cabrera, the nearest mission, to be baptized.

We have also recently held our annual pastor's conference. This year we camped in the home of a believer between Cabrera and Deheza. Meetings were held each night in both Cabrera and Deheza. These were well attended and served to strengthen these churches, which are having a healthy growth under the care of Brother Sotola. At the close of the conference, there were baptisms, a love feast in Cabrera attended with great blessing, and a union picnic.

In connection with the coming of Brother Yett for the pastors' conference we held another field council meeting. Brother Yett and Brother Siccardi are to visit the few remaining towns in the northern part of our district that have not been canvassed by the Bible Coach and then the Gospel will have been carried by the workers with the coach into the homes of every town in a district as large as Indiana, in which there are no other missionaries working. In many of these towns there are isolated believers and good openings for missions if we had the men and means to occupy them. Everywhere Romanism is increasingly discredited and there are large towns without even a Catholic church.

The greatest difficulty we have in our work is the prejudice against Christianity because of the moral failure of Romanism. Go where you will and you will find that where Romanism dominates most there immorality also dominates most. An article in El Testigo recently quoted some statistics which will seem exaggerated to any one not familiar with conditions in Catholic countries. Among other items are the following: In the Protestant countries of Sweden, Norway, England, Scotland and the United States the number of illiterates is less than ten per cent of the population, while in the Catholic countries of Austria, Italy and Spain it is more than forty per cent, and in the last it is sixty-three per cent, which is about the same as in most Latin American countries. On the other hand the number of illegitimate births to one hundred legitimate births is four in London, forty-eight in Paris, 118 in Vienna and 243 in Rome, while in London there is one murder to each 178,000 inhabitants, in Austria one to 57,000, in Spain one to 4,000 and in Rome one to 960.

Nevertheless Romanism with its wealth and strong organization still puts up a constant fight of calumnies against the Protestants and is the worst enemy of the true Gospel. The conquest of these Catholic countries for Christ is coming, but it is not the work of one generation only.

We urgently need the help of Brethren Sickel and Romanenghi so that I may be released for more evangelistic work and the work in Buenos Aires may be strengthened. Rent there is high and the work demands able workers. By all means the Easter offering this year should be large enough to permit a grant of $5,000 for building purposes. Some individual or church might have a lasting monument by donating this amount for a church in Buenos Aires. The lot we have already. We also have a fine lot in Laboulaye and it would be economy to have a building there.

Four of our men are traveling agents for a photo-enlarging firm, and they all carry Bibles and tracts with them to help to evangelize along with their other work.

The professor of English in the college here has gone to Europe and I have been asked to take his classes, but have succeeded in having Sister Nielsen appointed instead. This will put Gospel influence back into the college and that means a great deal.

We are now having a visit from Miss Ruth Fish, director of the training school for girls and women in Buenos Aires. She is returning from a tour of the missions in Paraguay and northern Argentina and says that in those parts Romanism is more dominant than here, and moral conditions such that missionaries need furloughs at the end of four or five years as they cannot endure the strain.

Our people at home should remember however, that while we are giving the witness to all, the majority of our converts come from immigrants from Europe of their children and among these we find many who are splendid people and we need not feel ashamed of the churches that are being built up. We love our people and have confidence. When our Lord comes he will find a homogeneous body of believers in all parts of the world. May we all be faithful in helping to form that body.

The Call of Africa

"Preach the Gospel in the regions beyond you." 2 Cor. 10:16.

"Why didn't you tell us sooner?"

The words came sad and low;
 "O ye who knew the Gospel truths,
 Why didn't you let us know?
 The Savior died for all the world,
 He died to save from woe;
 But we never heard the story;
 Why didn't you let us know?"

You have heard the Gospel message,
 You have known a Savior's love;
 Your dear ones passed from Christian homes
 To the blessed land above.
 Why did you let our fathers die;
 And into the silence go
 With no thought of Christ to comfort,
 Why didn't you let us know?"

We appeal to you, O Christians,
 In lands beyond the sea!
 Why didn't you tell us sooner
 Christ died for you and me?
 Nineteen hundred years have passed
 Since disciples were told to go To the uttermost parts of the earth and teach;
 Why didn't you let us know?"

You say you are Christ's disciples;
 That you try his work to do;
 And yet his very last command
 Is disobeyed by you.
 'Tis indeed a wonderful story!
 He loved the whole world so,
 That he came and died to save us;
 But you didn't let us know!"

O souls, redeemed by Jesus,
 Think what your Lord hath done;
 He came to earth and suffered,
 And died for every one.
 He expected you to tell it,
 As on your way you go;
 But you kept the message from us!
 Why didn't you let us know?"

Hear this pathetic cry of ours,

O dwellers in Christian lands!

For Africa stands before you

With pleading, outstretched hands;

You may not be able to come yourself,

But some in your stead can go.

Will you not send us teachers?

Will you not let us know?"

—G. P. Turnbull (From "A Highway for Our God.")

THE GOSPEL WINS AN AFRICAN WITCH DOCTOR

We are slowly getting into the work at the old Station. We feel quite at home now and are having greater blessing in pastoring the church. God is working here in behalf of his own. The witch doctor teaching recently took thirty of our Christian boys for teaching. From the first day until now, we have been praying for them, and the complete revelation of the secret teachings. Last night a message came to us that the witch doctor confessed and was sorry he took the Christians. This morning the Chief, Shoumaili, and the victims came to the church and publicly confessed their sins. This has been a revelation for the Christians who have been a little fearful and doubtful. God has won a great victory today in Kare-land! The old man himself, whom the Karre call SHOUMAILI, says that he wants to come and hear the Gospel! Tonight at sunset, we are to burn the instrument with which Shoumaili makes his weird calls for victims.—An Extract from a recent letter written by Orville D. Johnson, French Equatorial Africa.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

OAKVILLE, INDIANA

We take pleasure in reporting the recent three-weeks' effort in the Oakville congregation. The story starts back in November when with some twenty-five taking the pledge, we began in our services and at home, definitely praying for a personal and congregational revival. We covenanted to pray daily until the answer came, "Lord, send us a revival, and begin in me, for Jesus' sake." Almost two months later the way was opened for our Brother Kimmell to come, and we rejoiced in anticipation of his helping us. But understand us, that the revival that God gives must come first, and that the past work of our brother is usually the climax of God's answer to prayer.

Brother A. V. Kimmell came here from Milledgeville and Lanark, and with Saturdays off, preached with his whole soul, forceful, moving messages from March 1 to 20, inclusive. Brother Kimmell loves the Word, and uses it; he loves his Lord, and trusts him. Twenty-two full Gospel sermons and eight afternoons of Bible study on the Revelation, were received by large and faithful audiences. Our pre-prayer circles before each evening service were attended by as many as fifteen and twenty, most of whom took part. Our own choir leader conducted the singing, and was an able and appreciated assistant to the evangelist. In fact, I have not forgotten Brother Kimmell's whispered threat to kidnap Charles Kern. We were grateful for much local and outside special music.

There was given us the encouragement that several attended a few of our services who were not even known as "funeral devotees." Some came whose hearts are forever hardened; and this field has an enormous number of unsaved husbands and fathers, seemingly unmovable for Christ and a spiritual life. May God show mercy to them yet; and forgiving our failures, make other efforts successful.

Well, the pastor and wife, and the congregation surely enjoyed Kimmell's fellowship. Several of us expect to some day see his home in California. And he will have reason to remember the fine dinners our folks prepared for him, and the friendships he has made, which were before appreciated by the pastor. The Lord blessed us with exceptional weather throughout our revival. We praise God for all—for the consecration of most of the congregation and for the fine spirit of love and cooperation resultant; for the inspiration and instruction received; for the fellowship in the Gospel work; and especially for the two young people received by baptism and two by letter. May God's blessings attend Brother Kimmell in his manifold tasks for the church; and rest upon the faithful singers, and prayers and workers in Oakville.

HAROLD D. FRY.

OAKVILLE, INDIANA

The meeting at Oakville was the last one for this trip out of the West. We had been away from home almost three months and though other places were calling, duties at home turned us this way. A number of things happened to make this meeting at Oakville very interesting. The church itself has been organized a number of years, but the erection of a new building some time since has given them a splendid place to worship. This is the only church in the town and is strictly Brethren, but in many instances serves the whole community, as any church really desires to do. There are a number of people living here who are members of other denominations, and there are a number of sinners who do not belong anywhere, but the church seeks to minister to all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Brother Harold Fry is the pastor at Oakville. Brother Fry is one of the "boys" from Long Beach, California. Having known him in the West made my visit to his congregation all the more enjoyable. Brother Fry has worked hard to give himself the advantages of a good education that he might be used of the Lord in the ministry, and his earnestness in desiring to be a faithful ambassador is a worthy example to many young preachers and it ought to be an inspiration to any congregation where the Lord may send him to labor.

Sister Fry is also a very capable young woman, and it seems to me that the community is beginning to realize something of the advantages which have come to it in having these two consecrated young people in their midst.

It was quite a surprise to me to find a number of the members of the church are distant relatives of mine. I knew that some of my Grandfather Teeter's family lived somewhere in Indiana, but I had never had a personal acquaintance with that branch of the family and I did not know just where they were located, so when people began to tell me that they were related to me, I began to look them over rather carefully to know whether to back up the claim or ignore it. I think perhaps they had the same thing in mind. At any rate, the results seemed perfectly agreeable and we had many fine visits together. However, the fine thing about real Christian work is that in Christ Jesus we are all brothers and sisters and this was our relationship with the entire membership as we labored together.

The meeting itself seemed to be more help to the members of the church than in the reaching of the unsaved. I never had more regular and faithful cooperation on the part of the church, but the unsaved were hard to get out at all and not many of them yielded to the Spirit when they did come. The afternoon studies were especially appreciated and the night messages had some note for both saint and sinner so the joy of preaching the Word was unbounded. The closing Sunday was in a downpour of rain, but the people were there, and it was a joyful closing day, with baptisms at the closing service. The Sunday school at Oakville is a live organization. The attendance is good, the interest is commendable, and the average offerings are away above the usual. A number of members for the Evangelistic and Bible Study League were secured and a fine generous offering was given the evangelist.

Our home was with the pastor, and they spared no effort in making us comfortable and satisfied. We sincerely thank them for this. The members of the church had the calendar full of dates for meals and visits and there were many left over that we could not accept. It is too bad to be lacking in time and wanting in capacity when so many good things are offered.

If the people of the other churches where I have been this year should read this article, which closes my tour for the present. I would like to say again that I had a splendid time in every one of your churches. I think you have mighty fine pastors. I am praying that you have a very profitable year.

In his Name,

A. V. KIMMELL,
Whittier, California.

LOST CREEK AND KRYPTON

On Friday evening, April 1st, I gave the Commencement address at our school at Lost Creek, Kentucky, known as Riverside Institute. The next day I went on up the mountains to our mission point at Krypton, where I taught a Sunday school class and preached Sunday forenoon. I have been in mountainous countries before, and yet it was decidedly enlightening to be in that section of the state.

Lost Creek

At Lost Creek I found a spirit of optimism and earnestness that would do credit to any school. There were two girls and five boys in the graduating class. All took part in the commencement exercises and all did well. The audience completely filled the room and was attentive and responsive. The enrollment for the year was well up to 150, which is about the capacity of the plant.

The teaching staff and the workers generally are united and efficient. I was much impressed with their spirit of devotion and sacrifice. I am of the opinion that we are getting as much for our investment there as could reasonably be expected, if not more. The people of the place are seriously minded, many of them intent upon an education, and generally responsive to the good influences of the Mission.

The country is exceedingly picturesque. The eternal hills, now brilliant with the crimson of the Redbud and mixed with the white of the Sarvice berry, make an impression of beauty never to be forgotten. I slept, let us hope, the sleep of the just, with the quieting murmur of the Troublesome river in my ears and with the scent of apple blossoms drifting in through my open window. The sky was blue as turquoise and the stars seemed never so bright before. The peace of God came over me and I learned to love Riverside. I think the church will do well to support, pray for, and cherish Riverside.

Krypton

Our work here is younger but as fascinating as at Riverside and the need is even greater. Mr. and Mrs. Kinzie are our workers there and have made commendable headway. They had a school last year and had several children who stayed with them either because their homes were too far away or not suitable. It makes you stop and think twice when you contemplate what that particular section would be if we had never had a mission station there.

True, in the past we have not made as much headway as we have desired, but now with the school, we have a chance. I may be in error, but I do not believe that it is possible to get a foothold there or to do any great amount of good without some sort of a school where the young may learn a better way of living. The old and careless are hard to reach here as everywhere else, but the children, ah, there is our opportunity.

It warms the heart to hear little children from the most wretched homes imaginable, sit at Sunday school and repeat verses of Scripture, or to see them at the table as I did, both at the home of Brother Drushal and Brother Kinzie, bow their heads and hear them repeat a verse before the meals.

I hope and pray that long and happy days are ahead for both of these places. Consecrated and earnest workers as we have at both places deserve our fullest support.

ARDMORE BRETHREN CHURCH

South Bend, Indiana

We are happy, indeed, as we come to the Brethren family with this special report. We have just closed an evangelistic campaign, with Rev. C. C. Grisso, pastor of our church at Warsaw, Indiana, as evangelist, and truly he was the right man at the right time. He was with us from March 14th to March 29th, and during this time he preached the Gospel story as we have long known he has ability to do. The entire parish is saying with one voice, "Duker you made no mistake when you recommended Brother Grisso."

The general spiritual atmosphere of the church was given new life and impulse and had there been no numerical results the meeting could be counted as highly successful. But the numerical results of eighteen services are seventeen confessed Christ as their Lord for the first time, four by relation from the Church of the Brethren, two by letter and eight came renewing their relation with their Christ and his church. Twelve have been baptized since Brother Grisso took leave, and we hope to baptize the other five soon.

The church truly has reasons to rejoice, for those who came represent the best young married people in this community. Counting those who came in this meeting, and the seven we baptized about 10 days before the meeting began. We have increased our membership strength about 33 1-3 per cent and all this cannot help but give us new zeal and determination.

As pastor, we are glad to take up the work where Evangelist Grisso stopped and know that we need not spend time patching up troubles, for Grisso's message is not cankerous with modernism, but a "Repent and be baptized" message—the only message the world needs.

One of the marked features of the meeting was the regular attendance of members of other Protestant churches. Not a few were present every evening. Brother John Clark, the energetic pastor of our church at North Liberty, came over one evening with a delegation numbering about thirty. Then, Brother N. V. Leatherman, pastor of the First Church of South Bend, came one night with a large delegation of his busy folks.

In all this and more, we are rejoicing and pledging ourselves to bigger and better service.

Choosing My Life Work

and divine guidance is a method tested and tried and the one that leads more frequently to success than any other. Grenfell accepted the challenge of the frigid zone and as a result has had his name proclaimed in all zones. Jesus Christ choosing a cross rather than a temporal kingdom became the king of a kingdom eternal.

In making deliberate choices there are many factors involved. The vocation must be judged and we must likewise judge ourselves. L. W. Crawford simplifies the standard by stating it thus in the form of questions:

- Is the vocation
 - A man-sized or a woman-sized one? Will you, in other words, exhaust its possibilities by the time you arrive at full manhood or womanhood, or is it a vocation that will continue to challenge on through life your best growing and developing powers?
 - Is it a life time vocation?
 - Are your qualities adapted?
 - Can you prepare adequately therefore? Can you afford to spend the time and money necessary to make this preparation?
- What development or opportunities are presented? Is this vocation already overcrowded, and is there cream enough in you to rise to the top?
- Will the vocation in all its relations be congenial?
- What type of men and women enter upon this kind of a vocation?
- Will financial and other returns be fully adequate?
- Can you through this vocation, help improve, uplift, and benefit society?
- Can you grow in this vocation, and thus better serve God and your fellowmen?

Denying Christ Today

"Have we none of done as Peter did? Denied our Lord by being ashamed of him; ashamed of our religion; held back from acknowledging him; kept silent when our religion was attacked or ridiculed, and our Master put on his trial once again by the mocking of skeptics, disbelievers, revilers? Do we not at times when in certain company or places ask, What use to confess discipleship, i. e., act, speak, live as a Christian? Disciples of Jesus of Nazareth!—do you never hear the cock crow in your lives?"—Rev. Hermann Lilienthal.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE STORY OF THE EASTER LILY

The lily bulb lay on the floor, under the shelf in a greenhouse. She was brown and hard and ugly, and as she lay there on the brown floor under the brown shelf with many other brown bulbs you never would have seen her.

"I am brown, the other bulbs are brown, the shelf is brown, the floor is brown. I am sure the whole world is brown," said the lily bulb to herself.

But one day she was moved from her dark corner and laid upon the brown shelf under a small glass window. She looked about her in surprise. Why the world was not brown after all! Overhead the sky was blue and the sun was sending down its golden beams through the window right upon her, making her feel warm and comfortable. All about her were beautiful flowers. Her nearest neighbor was a red rose plant growing straight and tall, with green and glossy leaves, and as the buds opened and roses came out, their sweet perfume filled the air.

"Oh, why can't I grow to be like that red rose?" sighed the lily bulb. "I hope to be a rose, too, and wear a red dress, and make every one happy with my sweet perfume."

She watched the people as they walked through the narrow aisles and exclaimed at the beauty about them. But though many people admired the tall red rose, no one even noticed the brown bulb lying so still on the shelf near by.

"That is the very rose I must have for my little girl's birthday," said a young mother one day. "Her name is Rosebud, and her cheeks are as red as that rose, so I know it will make her happy to have this plant as her birthday gift from me."

Then the florist lifted the tall red rose in his strong arms and the rose plant was sent to the home of the little girl named "Rosebud."

When the red rose was gone the lily bulb felt lonely indeed, but she said to herself, "The red rose has gone to make some one happy, how I wish I could grow up and make some one happy, too. I wonder when I can begin to grow." After the rose plant was taken from the shelf the florist said to his helper, "Why, see this lily bulb lying here. It must have been lost when the other bulbs were planted and it was hidden by the rose leaves. Bring a flower pot and make ready the earth at once. It is a week behind the others, but still it is early enough in November for it to be ready by Easter."

"Yes," answered the boy, "but Easter comes very early this year."

"However, we will do our best," said the florist, "to help this bulb grow. It is strange it was forgotten and left on the shelf."

The lily bulb then felt herself lifted by careful hands and she was placed in a flower pot partly filled with earth and more brown earth was put over her head until she could no longer see the blue sky through the glass window.

"The world is brown again," she said to herself, "but I am so sleepy I think I will take a little nap." So she nestled down in her soft bed and soon was sound asleep. How long she slept there in the earth she did not know, but one day she awakened.

"This house is too small for me," she said, and then she began to break her brown home. She sent tiny rootlets down into the ground, and then she pushed her way up through the earth.

"I wish I could get out," she said. Each day the florist came with a sprinkling can and sprinkled the earth above her head and the warm sun shining down through the glass window seemed to call her to come up and see the world. At last she pushed aside her brown earthen coverlet and sent up a tiny green shoot. Again she could see through the glass window the blue sky overhead and the sunshine seemed to smile down upon her, as much as to say, "I am here to help you grow."

She sent down her roots into the dark earth and as the florist brought her water and watched how tall she was growing he helped her stalk to grow straight by putting a stick down into the earth and then tied her carefully to the stick for a support.

"I must work hard," she said. "If I am to be of any service to others, for they all take such good care of me; I must hurry and grow my red roses to make them happy."

One day the lily bulb found she had a bud. It was a long green bud and at first the lily was disappointed. "It isn't like the round red rosebud at all," she said, "and my leaves are not like the rose leaves, either. Perhaps after all I am not to be a rose, but I shall be green, all green, just as I was all brown when I was put in the earth so long ago. Well, whatever I am to be I hope I can be of service," said the lily, "and give happiness to others as the rose did."

At last the sunbeams seemed to knock at the door of the large green bud and the lily opened wide the green petals to let the sunbeams in, when O, wonder of wonders! her flower petals opened wide and she held up a pure white cup like a beautiful bell, and the center was golden as the sunbeams. She still wore a rustling green dress of leaves, but her flower petals were white as the drifted snow, and nestling down in this cup were the golden sunbeams. All the other flowers seemed to bend and bow before the lovely lily, and they called to each other, "The Easter lily has awakened and her sweet perfume fills the air."

The lily plant opened another and another bud, and one day she found herself carefully lifted from her place on the brown shelf, and she was carried away from her home in the greenhouse. It was dark when she was placed in a great church, almost as dark as it had been under ground, but the lily had learned her lesson in patience and knew now that she was at last to be of service.

When the morning sunshine streamed through the stained glass windows, making a rainbow light, it rested upon all the flowers it had helped to grow. There were red roses, the gold and crimson tulips, and yellow daffodils, but standing near the altar was the beautiful lily, while all about her stood other tall Easter lilies in their green dresses, holding up their pure white cups and sending sweet fragrance to all in the church.

And the flowers seemed to tell the same story which was sung in the joyous Easter anthems, "Christ is Risen, Christ is Risen."

After the beautiful service was over the lily was taken to a hospital ward and there it stood looking down upon the white and wan faces of many little crippled children, little faces as pale as the petals of the lily. The lily heard the clapping of little hands and the shouting of children's voices.

"See our beautiful Easter lily," said one. "We never saw such a beautiful plant." "It stands as straight and tall as a soldier," said another, "and just smell how sweet—O, how sweet!"

The Easter lily looked down at the eager little faces raised toward it and said softly, "Now I am truly happy; I didn't know when I was an ugly brown bulb asleep in the ground that I was one day to become a beautiful lily, and have the joy of bringing such happiness to others."

Then one little child said, "Let us sing to our Easter lily." So they sang this little verse:

The pure white lily lifts its cup

At Easter time, at Easter time.

The tulips to the sky look up

At happy Easter time.

And then each little bud did say,

Good people, bless this holy day,

For Christ is risen, the angels say,

This holy Easter Day.—Chicago Tribune.

If we spend our lives looking for favorable circumstances, we shall have no life left when we find them. Let us take circumstances as they come to us, and make them favorable.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

BERKEY-BOYER—On Tuesday evening, March 22, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Boyer, occurred the marriage of Mr. Lemon S. Berkey and Miss Ethel Agnes Boyer. The bride is the youngest daughter of Brother and Sister Boyer and herself a member of the Second Brethren church, of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. The groom is an estimable young man and a member of the United Brethren church. The ceremony was witnessed by the immediate families of the contracting parties and a few other close friends. The single ring ceremony was used and their happy young couple received the hearty good wishes of their friends as well as a goodly number of useful gifts as tokens of esteem. They will reside with the bride's parents for the present. May the blessings of an all-wise Providence and the presence of an overshadowing of the Holy Spirit accompany them on life's pathway.

DIYOLL BELOTE.

MYERS-SCHMIDT—At eight o'clock Tuesday evening, July 13, 1926, Mr. Andrew Myers, and Miss Mabel Schmidt were united in marriage at the Brethren church of Turlock, California. Miss Schmidt is a member and loyal teacher of the Primary Department. Mr. Myers is a fireman at the Associated Oil Co., of Losoak, California. The ceremony was performed by the brother-in-law of the bride and pastor of the church.

KENNETH R. RONK.

KIMMEL-STEEL—Saturday evening, September 18, 1926, at the home of the writer occurred the marriage of Mr. Walter Kimmel and Miss Grace Steel. Mr. Kimmel is from McCleod, Kansas, and Miss Steel from Empire, California. Ceremony performed by the writer.

KENNETH R. RONK.

MESSINGER-GRUBB—At high noon on New Year's Day, 1927, occurred the wedding of Mr. Uram Messenger and Miss Frances Grubb. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home, by the writer. Mr. Messenger is a graduate of the Oregon Agricultural College, and Miss Grubb is a member of the Turlock Brethren church.

IN THE SHADOW

MANNING—Olive Aurelia, daughter of Ashley and Sarah Manning, was born in Knox County, Ohio, June 30, 1846, and departed this life Saturday, March 26, 1927, at the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Annie Hollewell; aged 80 years, 8 months and 26 days.

She was married to Frank Hollewell on March 11, 1866, and to this union were born two sons, Elmer L. and Deaver S. The husband and both sons have preceded her in death.

In the departure of this sister the "Brethren Church" suffers the loss of another of its charter members and faithful attendants.

Since December 7, 1925, her home has been with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Annie Hollewell and the grandson, Howard, who have done all that tender hands and loving hearts could do to make her last days happy.

The relatives, the host of friends and the membership of the Brethren church will very much miss her from our midst. Services from the Brethren church, Milledgeville, Illinois, conducted by the undersigned.

GEO. E. CONE.

CORTRIGHT—Eleanor Matilda Cortright, was born in Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, January 17, 1841. Her father met his death by drowning, after which she, with her mother, one brother, and sister came west in March, 1869.

On January 23, 1875, she was united in marriage to William Hollowell, who passed away October 15, 1922.

Eleven years later, December 9, 1893, she was united in marriage to Hugh M. Fleming at Milledgeville, Illinois. Mr. Fleming passed away in April, 1912, again leaving her without a companion in life.

She was a member of the Baptist church of Milledgeville, Illinois, and remained true to that faith, though after the disbanding of the Baptist church she worshipped with the people of the Brethren church when and as long as her physical strength and ability would permit.

She leaves the following relatives who mourn her departure: one brother Oscar Cortright of Wakeeney, Kansas, Mrs. Anna Alexander, of Conrad, Iowa; Mrs. Alex Gilmer and Mrs. W. J. Halbauer of Miller, South Dakota; Mrs. Walter Knox, Hazelhurst, Illinois. These with the many friends will miss the friendliness of this relative, friend and neighbor. Funeral from the deceased's home on February 2, 1927.

GEO. E. CONE, Officiating.

NORMAN—Victoria M. Norman, a member of the Brethren church, aged 52 years, died in the West Penn Hospital, Pittsburgh, January 3, 1927. She is survived by her husband and five children. Services were conducted at the home by the writer.

H. W. KOONTZ.

ROSE—Odessa Nevada Rose was born in New Salem, May 3, 1902. She departed this life March 3, 1927, aged 24 years, 9 months, and 8 days. February 21 she was baptized and united with the Brethren church of Masotown. She was ever a loyal member, giving her services wherever they could be used. Her sympathetic smile brought encouragement and cheer to the hearts of many and will continue to be a loving benediction in the affectionate memories of all who knew her and therefore loved her. Her former pastor, Dr. Martin Shively, delivered the funeral message.

H. W. KOONTZ.

BASHOR—Corda Samantha Weller was born in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, July 8, 1854. She was the daughter of J. J. and Ann Maria Weller. She had four sisters and three brothers. The parents and one brother and one sister preceded her in death. She was married to Stephen H. Bashor on January 9th, 1878. To this union was born one daughter, who is now living in Los Angeles, California, William Bashor Galloway. We need not relate here, of course, the history of her illustrious husband, who preceded her into the spirit world on October 2, 1922. Mrs. Bashor came to Los Angeles from Waterloo, Iowa (the home of her daughter) in search of health. We were not aware of her presence in the City of Los Angeles until we were summoned by a 'phone message to officiate at her funeral, which we did on March 12th. Only our Heavenly Father can know how far-reaching the influence of her life was, especially as it touched the life of one who will go down in history as possibly the greatest evangelist the Dunker fraternities have ever known. This was certainly true of our Brother Bashor during the period of his active ministry. May God comfort those who mourn.

LOUIS S. BAUMAN.

JOHNSON—Mrs. Fanny Johnson was born March 2, 1862, in Mason county, West Virginia, and passed away at the home in Salem, March sixth, 1927, aged sixty five years and four days. April 2, 1887 she was married to Lewis Johnson, who survives her, with two children. She had been a member of the Brethren church for seventeen years. Funeral services at the house by the writer, and burial in the Oak Hill cemetery.

FREEMAN ANKRUM.

PHILLIPS—Mrs. Sadie Berkley Phillips, wife of Brother C. G. Phillips of Kenton, Ohio, passed to her eternal reward on December 7, 1926. Mrs. Phillips was the daughter of Lewis and Margaret Berkley, and was born at Waterloo, Iowa, August 11, 1870. In 1894 she came to Ashland and became teacher of Music in the College. Mrs. Phillips was an accomplished musician and she rendered a splendid service to the College while connected with it. Here she met her husband, Brother Charles G. Phillips. They were married at Ashland, August 10, 1896. To this happy union three daughters, Ruth, Julia and Dorothy, were born.

Mrs. Phillips made a brave effort to live for her family and her friends. On December 6 the writer anointed her according to James. In this service Rev. Stafford, her pastor, at Kenton assisted. She seemed happy and resigned to the will of God. The end came peacefully and in triumph.

Mrs. Phillips was a woman of fine Christian culture and a beautiful character. She graduated from the Lincoln Conservatory of Music in 1893. She was an active and earnest Christian from her girlhood. Brother A. J. McClain from the College and other Ashland friends attended the funeral services, which were conducted by Rev. Moore and Stafford and Prof. McClain.

She leaves her husband and the daughters above named, one brother, Arthur Berkley and a sister, Miss Lydia Berkley. The daughter, Julia, with her husband, Rev. H. W. Ruopp and a little son, Phillips, were in Europe at the time of the death. Mrs. Phillips was a first cousin of Brother L. S. Bauman. May God comfort all the friends.

J. ALLEN MILLER.

JOLLIFF—Mary Ida Jolliff was born November 11th, 1860, and died March 25th, 1927, aged 66 years, 4 months and 11 days.

She was the daughter of B. F. and Nancy Worst Swinehart, and was the eldest of a family of eight children. Her father and mother, one brother (Samuel) and a sister, Frances, (the deceased wife of C. C. Stair) having preceded her to the Spirit World.

She was united in marriage to David Jolliff on January 16th, 1897, to which union was born one son, Harold, who is a resident of this community.

Mrs. Jolliff was a faithful member of the Fair Haven Brethren church, having united with this church thirty-six years ago under the evangelistic efforts of Rev. I. D. Bowman. Indeed, the Fair Haven church has lost a strong pillar in the death of Mrs. Jolliff. Although having weaknesses, as we all have, it can be truthfully said, she loved her church much. Always interested in good, and the Cause her MASTER represented, reaping much pleasure in the humble tasks that were hers to do.

Although being in ill health for some time, the disease did not assume its worst form until about two months ago, and anxious friends were not without hope for her ultimate recovery.

Throughout the period of her illness the deceased bore herself patiently, accepting with calmness and fortitude a portion full of the bitterness of death.

She leaves to mourn their loss, a devoted husband, who spared no efforts for her comforts in her recent illness, one son and wife, two grandchildren, three brothers, Ephraim and Ray of Wooster, and Ralph of Pleasant Home; two sisters, Mrs. Clara Ebert and Mrs. Verna Pittinger of Wooster, and a host of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at the Fair Haven, Ohio, church. A very large concourse of people assembled. The services were conducted by J. Allen Miller. About six weeks before her death she requested to be anointed. Her faith was strong and she was ready to go. At that time she requested the undersigned to conduct the service at her burial.

J. ALLEN MILLER.

FROM THE STATISTICIAN

To Representatives of the Brethren Churches Greetings:

It is the time of year for the gathering of statistics for our National Conference report. These reports will be available for the use of the district statisticians also. Will not the secretary, treasurer and pastor of each church make it a matter of immediate business to see that the blanks are fully and properly filled out and returned at the earliest date? The blanks will come to you soon, either through your district statistician or from the National Statistician. We should like to be able to make a full and complete report for the brotherhood at our National Conference this year. We can, if each officer of each church will cooperate with us. It will mean but little effort to you but will mean much to the conferences and the church as a whole. Our denomination is judged by other people upon the basis of these reports. I am sure you wish other people to correctly judge us. You will cooperate in this work, I am sure, and we merely call your attention to the importance of you doing so. Thank you, Brethren.

Your Servant as National Statistician,
GEO. E. CONE, Milledgeville, Ill.

The BRETAREN EVANGELIST

- ONE - IS - YOUR - MASTER - AND - ALL - YE - ARE - BRETHREN -

Softly Tell of Christ, Our Saviour

*Softly tell of Christ, our Savior,
Of his love for you and me;
And his promise ever cheering,
Blessings rare and full and free.
As a ship, wrecked, seeks the haven,
As a bird at eve its nest,
We will, in our joy and sorrow,
Come to him and be at rest.*

*Softly tell of Christ, our Savior,
Of the life of him who came
Calling back to life the dying,
Bearing sorrow, grief and shame.
Who, with loving tender mercy
Calls the sinner to his feet,
That he, laying down his burden,
There may free salvation meet.*

*Hear us, Jesus Christ, our Savior,
Once with grief and shame bowed low;
Lo, we kneel and here beseech thee,
Come, thy blessing now bestow.
Lay thy hand in loving kindness,
On each sinful, mournful heart,
Heal it, cleanse it and renew it,
And thy joy and peace impart.*

A Half Million Net Gain

A total net gain of all religious bodies in the United States for the year 1926 was 489,556 communicants, according to the latest statistical report by Dr. H. K. Carroll, whose annual compilation was published in "The Christian Herald" for April 16, 1927. The report does not show "the jubilant note of a year ago," but nevertheless it is a gain and not a loss. Last year's report showed a gain in communicants during 1926 of 984,846, which was practically 200,000 increase over the two years preceding, while the 1926 net gain decreases to 489,556. Dr. Carroll attributes the decrease in gains during 1926 to the almost universal tendency among Evangelical Protestants to prune their memberships of the inactive and absentees. "Scarcely any escape the cutting off process as conducted by pastors and sessions, official boards and the like. One strong influence that appears to govern is the pressure of mounting apportionments for missionary, educational and other benevolent objects and local church expenses. It costs something in these days to be a Christian, and absentees and inactive members are of no help either in finance or service."

"The annual gains of all the denominations for the last seven years, from 1920 to 1926 inclusive, are as follows:

1920	754,654
1921	1,013,296
1922	784,292
1923	690,992
1924	621,630
1925	984,846
1926	489,566
Average per year.....	762,752

"The number of ministers for 1926 is 216,167, indicating a loss of 647. The increase in the seven years from 1920 to 1926 inclusive has been 22,469, or an average of 3,210, which may be regarded as a very favorable average."

Following is the data which Dr. Carroll has collected with reference to the family of Brethren or Dunker churches. He received no late returns on our own denominational situation, and therefore his report shows no growth on our part. No one who has kept in touch with these reports as they have appeared in The Evangelist can avoid the conviction, however, that we have made decide advancement in numbers, notwithstanding the fact that our churches in large numbers have undergone the pruning process, freeing themselves of the burden of large numbers who are practically useless because of their inactivity. It is to be hoped that our churches may so respond in the effort now being launched to collect dependable statistics that a complete and creditable showing may be given by our denominational group another year. In the following tables, the first three columns show the total number of ministers, churches and communicants or members respectively and the next three columns show the respective gains or losses (d means decrease, and b indicates that no late returns have been received).

The President and the Bible

President Coolidge wrote a letter the first week in April to Eugene W. Thomson of Washington, D. C., that is worthy of notice because of the emphasis he places upon the Bible. Mr. Thomson had organized special Bible schools in the Church of the Epiphany, and he and the pastor of the church, Dr. Z. B. Phillips, had called upon the President to explain the campaign of their class to create wider interest in the Scriptures. Mr. Coolidge's response was a remarkable testimony to the importance of the Bible and faith in its teachings to the maintenance of the foundations of the government and of society. The very foundations of our social organization rest upon the teachings of the Bible, he declared, and "it would be difficult to support them if faith in these teachings should cease to be practically universal in our country." He said further:

"Everyone who has given the matter any thought," the President said, "knows of the great literary value of the Bible and the broad culture, aside from its religious aspect, that comes from a general familiarity with it. Although it has been the subject of most careful and painstaking study for hundreds of years, its most thorough students find in it a constant revelation of new thoughts and new ideals which minister to the spiritual nature of the race."

"It would be difficult to conceive of any kind of religious instruction which omitted to place its main emphasis on the precepts of this great book. It has been the source of inspiration and comfort to those who have had the privilege of coming in contact with it, and wherever it goes it raises the whole standard of human relationship."

With the issue of April 16, 1927 of The Christian Herald, Dr. Daniel A. Poling is announced as editor-in-chief of that popular religious publication. Dr. Poling has become an outstanding leader in the church life of America and has distinguished himself in various fields, but he is most widely known and loved for his leadership in Christian Endeavor, being president of the United Society, a position relinquished by the founder of the movement, Dr. Francis E. Clark. Dr. Poling continues as pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church of New York City, a church made famous by the late Dr. David James Burrell. He is director of the J. C. Penny Foundation, president of the New York Federation of Churches, and member of the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. His remarkable ability as preacher, organizer and writer, coupled with his fervent spirituality combine to make his choice as editor-in-chief a happy one. The Christian Herald is to be congratulated, as well as Dr. Poling.

Antimilitarist Clergymen

Effort is being put forth to mobilize the antimilitaristic clergymen in the various Christian nations to unite their energies and to focus their influence against war preparations and in favor of peace. Especially is it hoped that these groups of clergymen shall be able to so marshall the spirit and demand for peace that the churches will no longer give their blessing to the military system, but will set themselves aggressively and positively against it. Such groups of ministers have already been formed in Holland and Switzerland, and at Geneva on the 30th of August, 1926, an international conference of antimilitaristic clergymen was held. At this conference it was decided to form an international committee to promote the aims of the movement as stated in the following items:

1. To unite the antimilitaristic ministers of all churches and denominations of all countries, and if possible to create new groups, and to prepare the way for an international congress to be held at Utrecht (Holland) in 1928.
2. To study thoroughly the question of war from the theological and philosophical basis.
3. To demonstrate without delay by word and deed in and outside the churches against war and preparation for war.

Among those elected members of the committee we notice the name of Frederick J. Libby, of Washington, D. C., outstanding member of the Friends' Church in behalf of peace. The secretary of the committee is J. B. T. Hugenholtz of Ammerstol, Holland, who is at the head of the movement in that country.

At the congress of the World League Against Alcoholism to be held at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 17-23, 1927, it is stated that every church, temperance society or other organization, is invited to send its members. Individual congregations are urged to send their pastors. Coming as it does just preceding our National Conference, it ought to be possible for many of our pastors to be in attendance. The Evangelist wishes to suggest that the General Conference standing committee on temperance should avail itself of this opportunity to gather some up-to-the-minute information and suggestions that might profitably be brought to the attention of our Conference. Write to Attorney Boyd P. Doty of Westerville, Ohio, for any desired information.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The men who are doing things are not as a rule the ones who are doing the criticizing.

Brother Homer Anderson, pastor of the Bethel church near Mulvane, Kansas, writes that interest is being maintained in the work there and that the Sunday School especially is making progress, the attendance ranging from 60 to 70. Four have been added to the church membership since Brother Anderson took up the work.

The Religious Telescope carries the announcement that Prof. J. Raymond Schutz of North Manchester, Indiana, will deliver the commencement address at Bonebrake Theological Seminary, a United Brethren institution at Dayton on May 10. Brother Willis E. Ronk is a member of the graduating class of that seminary this year.

From Clay City, Indiana, we have a report of an evangelistic campaign, in which Brother Claud Studebaker was the preacher, and Brother Mark B. Spacht, the pastor. The field is kept well gleaned, but six were added to the church by baptism. Brother Studebaker's work was highly appreciated and the church was greatly inspired by his preaching. The pastor and his wife have the confidence of the community and are doing good work, as Brother Studebaker bears witness.

The Evangelist office received a pleasant surprise in the form of an announcement of the marriage of Rev. Floyd William Taber, a graduate student at Ashland College, and missionary-under-appointment to Africa, and Miss Ada D. Zellner, also a student in the Seminary at Ashland, on Wednesday evening, April 13th, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Kamoie of Philadelphia. They are at home at 829 Grant Street, Ashland, Ohio. We extend hearty congratulations, personally and on behalf of the Evangelist family, to whom both have already been introduced by their published messages.

In writing to the Evangelist office Miss Mary L. Emmert, missionary at Yaloke, French Equatorial Africa, informs us that "permission has finally been granted for permanent buildings on the Bossangoa station." It will be remembered that Brother and Sister Chauncey Sheldon are located at this point. The interesting letter from Mrs. Sheldon to the Girls' Gospel Team of Ashland College, and published by their kind permission in this issue, was written before this permission was granted. Miss Emmert states that everything is going nicely at the three stations.

The Vir Publishing Company, 1505 Race Street, Philadelphia, announces the celebration of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the great work of Dr. Sylvanus Stall in behalf of personal and social purity. Their ambitious plan is to put one million copies of his books into the hands of new readers during the present year. As an inducement they propose to put the books on the market at one dollar per copy anywhere on the American continent. Dr. Stall's books constitute a commendable effort to inform people at various ages in life concerning some of the very vital and rudimentary elements of clean, healthful and happy living, and have exercised a wide influence for good.

Brother C. C. Grisso, of Warsaw, Indiana, writes of the enjoyable and successful evangelistic campaign in which he participated at Ardmore, Indiana, and reported by the pastor, Brother E. A. Duker, in last week's paper. He states that he spent considerable time preaching the "first principles of our faith", a thing which seems not to be very popular in our revivals today, and yet a thing which needs stressing wherever opportunity offers. Where and when the preaching of our distinctive doctrine does not seem advisable in an evangelistic campaign, there ought to be a special intensive effort put forth on another occasion to indoctrinate thoroughly the new members and to inform all interested friends as to the significance of our church practices. Brother Grisso states that the work at Warsaw is pressing forward, the Sunday School and the W. M. S. especially showing up good. Dr. W. S. Bell's visit is spoken of as a great benefit to the church and the Men's Glee Club from the College was well received.

GENERAL ARTICLES

A Lesson In History

By Thoburn C. Lyon

"History repeats itself." Frequently statesmen deplore the fact that modern nations will not learn from the mistakes and failures of the ancient world. As we read the record of the wilderness wanderings and the period of the Judges, we are amazed that the people failed to learn the lesson so often repeated. For some time the writer has been impressed with the fact that even Dunkard history tends to repeat itself, and that we too often disregard the lessons we should have learned from the former cycle of events.

To illustrate: The writer is now located in a section that was once predominantly Dunkard; Dunkard churches—and the ruins of other Dunkard churches—are still not far apart, though greatly weakened numerically. Within this district another denomination (not Brethren), has risen to a position of power, and the backbone of that new church is almost entirely made up of Dunkard stock, while its competition today naturally draws many that would otherwise be with the Brethren.

The explanation: In that day, more than a generation ago now, the ruling body of the Dunkard church prescribed certain regulations and forms of dress—particularly in the case of women—to which they must adhere as a condition of membership. The results of that controversy are too painfully familiar to most of us to need further discussion. In this community—typical of many others—it was just about that time that another immersionist body began holding evangelistic meetings, and the best young people, the hope of the church, went over bodily to the church that WOULD receive them without imposing uninspired conditions. The principal cause of the controversy then was the eleventh chapter of 1 Corinthians; today we find rather severe interpretations (as we think), of this same passage by some of the Brethren, offending, discouraging and turning away from the Brethren church some of her choicest young people.

If this passage really teaches what some believe it does, we must hold to it no matter whom it may offend; but if this prove to be a "private interpretation," then we should not fail to learn a lesson from the past.

What does the eleventh chapter of 1 Corinthians really teach? It teaches many things of first importance elsewhere, but only of secondary importance in this passage; as for example, that God is the head of Christ, Christ the head of man, and man the head of woman. The main theme of the passage is the COVERING of the women. Every teacher under whom it has ever been my privilege to sit for instruction, and every commentary that I have ever consulted, will bear me out in the assertion that Paul's teaching here was of some additional covering, something more than the hair of woman, something of which her long hair was only an illustration or type. Paul taught that this additional covering was so essential that if the woman refused to wear it she might as well be shorn or shaven as well. In my own mind there has never been any escape for Brethren women from wearing some such additional covering as the prayer cap of the Dunkards or the veils of Jewish women, EXCEPT in verse 16, which many Brethren preachers and teachers have taught me meant that Paul was giving to the Corinthian church advice which they would do well to follow there and at that time; but that even then, if any differed, the custom was not general in other places. How else can Christian women escape this unmistakable teaching? If verse 16 doesn't teach just that, then I must, among other things, ask my wife to resume the prayer covering which the old church decreed, in some form or other.

We might quote at length from the commentaries in support of this position, but feel that to an unprejudiced reader such quotation is unnecessary.

And now, if we may, we should like to say a few things about bobbed hair in general. We wish to say first of all that we are not here discussing the extreme, or "boyish" bobs; we might even admit there is some Scripture to be found against that (though not in 1 Corinthians 11). Bobbed hair is only short hair in a comparative sense; comparatively, it is also long hair, for if my hair were as long as bobbed hair I should soon hunt a barber shop. The argument from nature can only be true in a local sense; for example, the multitudes of unfortunate African women: to be consistent, would not their permanently short hair be a mark of God's displeasure and their consequent shame? And what of the many in America who must resort to "switches" and "transformations" in order to cover up their shame and appear to men to have long hair?

They might fool men so, but it would take more than that to fool God!

Then too, it has frequently been considered anything but shameful for men to wear long hair, even if they had to resort to wigs to accomplish it. We need go no further back than Elizabethan times to see that. We have never seen a picture of Christ or the apostles that had not long hair, though of course these are only based on "tradition." We know that Absalom polled his hair occasionally, but it was worn long enough to become entangled in the branches of a tree. And there were the Nazarites: it has been argued that other men had short hair or the long hair of the Nazarites would have been no sign. The difference was that their hair was long for a reason; some today will shave off a crop of whiskers because of an election bet while others will grow a set, yet neither case proves a general custom to the contrary. If it were always true, everywhere, that it was a shame for men to have long hair, could a righteous God have honored a group who took to themselves a shameful thing as a sign? And what of some of our Godly Dunkard forefathers whose hair hung to their shoulders, longer hair than na-

Some Brethren Church Leaders of Yesterday, as I Knew Them

IX. Eld. Joseph W. Beer

By Martin Shively, D.D.

The subject of this brief sketch, was born in Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, March 26, 1838, and with two brothers,—Solomon and Jacob W., as well as two brothers-in-law,—Thomas Graham and J. B. Wampler, represented his family in the Christian ministry. His education was received in the public schools, presumably the "little red school house," and the Dayton academy, and he made such excellent use of his opportunities for mental improvement, that his scholarship was far above the average. He entered the church in 1859, and was called to the ministry two years later, in the county of his birth, being gradually advanced until 1881, when he was ordained to the full ministry, or eldership. In the prime of his manhood, he was a very forceful and logical public speaker, and a writer of noteworthy ability. In fact he was a poet, exceedingly ready with his rhymes. Again and again I have heard him ask for your name, and then, no matter how lengthy it might be, he sat down and wrote rapidly, and then handed to such person an acrostic poem, in which he had used the letters of such name as the first in each line. And what one would least have expected, the poem so written was not only good rhyme, but full of the best of sentiment. Many years ago, he wrote a poem entitled,—"Faith and Practice of the Brethren," which had a wide circulation in the denomination. He was editorially connected with The Christian Family Companion, and also The Progressive Christian. He was also the author of two books which were once well known among his co-religionists. The first, "The Jewish Passover and Lord's Supper," a book of 258 pages, and a "Summary of Religious Faith and Practice."

Brother Beer served various congregations as pastor, in the east and middle west, and was elected moderator of general conference of Brethren churches, held at Ashland, June, 1882. During the late 80's or the very early 90's, he moved to the Pacific Coast, settling in San Joaquin County, California, where he lived until the Lord called him to the "Rest, which remaineth for the people of God." He had for many years been a periodic sufferer from erysipelas, and, I think, it was after his removal to the west, that he found a remedy which quickly conquered it, but it left him with a malady which was far worse, for it apparently caused the development of a form of epilepsy, from which he suffered increasingly until the end. There were periods of some length during which he was apparently free from it, then there would be a recurrence, with increased violence, until he became entirely incapacitated for any kind of work, either mental or physical. I had known him slightly before the beginning of my California ministry, and during the first six years of my service there, I was intimately associated with him, and the more so, because during the last five years of this period, I was his pastor, and he lived very near me in Lathrop. It was during this period that the Holsinger History of the Brethren and Tunker churches was written, and Brother Beer who had known Brother Holsinger, intimately in other years, became his amanuensis, writing every word of the book, at the dictation of its author. There were few days while the manuscript was in preparation, when I did not spend some time in the office where the work was being done, and what I saw was enough to stir the heart with pity. On one side of the flat topped desk sat Brother Holsinger, so weak that he could only speak in whispers,—so weak that his complete collapse at any time, would not have surprised nor shocked the onlooker. On the other side of that desk, sat Brother Beer, an old man too, but with a keen ear, and a steady hand, writing in beautiful script the story, as it fell from the lips of the sick man on the other side of the desk, but adding no word of his own, nor making any suggestion as to clarification or improvement. If this work could have been done twenty years earlier, it would have been a different book, because then, Brother Holsinger would have been strong enough to have done most, if not all of the work himself, and if Brother Beer had been called in, he would have been a real associate in the task. The task was finished at last, each having given the best that was in him, and for each, it was the last outstanding effort of a life which had long before been dedicated to the service of God, and the well being of men. What I have said now about it, may add to the interest with which you may read the book, and a deeper appreciation of the effort which was put into it. In spite of the physical handicaps of these two men, they lived to reach advanced age, Brother Beer going hence at near if not quite 80 years of age, and Brother Holsinger but little younger.

Brother Beer was a tall, slender man, with kindly face and word, widely known and greatly loved by folks who knew him. His work is done, and he sleeps in ground hallowed by the dust of other valiant servants of the Christ. Whether he lived and labored in vain, so far as the church is concerned, depends upon those who have taken his place, and others who shall come after them.

Has God Forgotten?

By C. F. Yoder

Has God forgotten when the hunter slays
The mother bird upon her nest, nor stays

But leaves the little ones to die?

Nay, he declares that not a sparrow falls
Without him, and he hears the hunger calls

Of ravens when, like you, they cry

And though he has not yet revealed why he Permits such cruel deeds, nor do we see

His recompense to starving birds,
Yet he assures us that our griefs he shares.

Our God hath not forgotten. He declares

He loves us, Let us believe his words.

Hath God forgotten when the storm destroys,
And pestilence devours, and pain annoys,
When helpless hands contend with death?
Nay, he hath not forgotten. He doth see.
The thunderbolts are his as well as we,
The winds are but his loving breath.
The sufferings of the hour cannot compare
With all the glory that with him we share,
Of virtues learned in school of pain.
Our loving Father never can or will forget,
His will is sure to prove the best e'en yet.
And be for us, not loss, but gain.

Hath God forgotten when in mortal hate Men meet in battlefield and there await
Death by the thousands in the hell of war?
Nay, God hath not forgotten. He would stay
The dogs of war, drive hate away,
But he loves human freedom more.
And though we do not understand why love
Permits such tragedies, yet all things move
For good to them that love the Lord.
And so we are content to wait the day
When we shall understand how God's own way
Is all for good, as saith the Word.

Has God forgotten when temptation comes
And blinds our eyes and threats our very homes,
And overcomes our weak and trembling wills?
Nay, God hath not forgotten. He enfolds
His child in his own hand and holds
His feet upon the everlasting hills.
He who was tempted in all points as we
Is able now to save both you and me,
He sympathizes with us all.
No trial shall come too great for us to bear.
No load too heavy if we his strength but share.
Fear not. With him we shall not fall.

Hath God forgotten when you suffer pain,
The temples throb; the heart doth grieve in vain,
And dread disease devours your strength?
Nay, God hath not forgotten. He doth care
He as a Father hears your every prayer.
And he will succor you at length.
It may seem hard to bear the cruel pain.
It may seem long to wait for health again,
But God gives grace for every need.
The pain may bless by bringing us to God;
The wait bring fellowship as on we plod,
And trials may make us rich indeed.

Hath God forgotten when from friends we part
And lasting separation breaks the heart?
What blessing comes from lonely tears?
Nay, God hath not forgotten. Men forget.
But though a mother may forget her child,
No child of God is left to fears.
"Lo I am with you always, till the end."
The Comforter your heart will sure defend;
Your solitude shall yet rejoice.
Then let us say it every day and hour,
"I live in my dear Savior's love and power,
What is his will, that is my choice."

Have we forgotten God? Ah yes, sometimes
We do forget, and sin our lives begrimes,
Discouragement and doubt assail.
We falsely say that he hath left us too.
We act as if he knows not what we do.
We let our faith and courage fail.
But now, henceforth let us be true and strong,
Let us be happy as the day is long,
And let us not forget to pray.
The Word of God will show us what to do.
The Holy Spirit's power will help us thru,
And we will understand some day.

We've Got to Go Back

By Strickland Gillilan

Author of "A Sample Case of Humor," Etc.

Peaceably, penitently, happily, we must go back to the old-fashioned idea of a God that looked after us when we said our "Now I lay me"; or we shall go crawling back, humiliated and crushed, and with generations of climbing to do before we attain our former moral prosperity.

Substitutes for God and for religion have been numerous in the last few years, but they have been more unsatisfactory than the substitution of paper clothing for cloth garments by the Germans during the war.

There have been legions of substitutions for church-going. These, too, are proving Dead-Sea fruit. And lo, we have on our hands a rising generation we can't handle without God, without religion in the home—active, worshipping, reverent religion like that which made us stand a bit in awe of the fathers who led us every day to some sort of conscious contact with the throne of grace and to a realization that we ourselves needed to give a little earnest attention to our souls' welfare.

Some of the old hymns had strange contradictions, confusing and misleading phraseology. For instance, one says:

"Though I forget him and wander away,
Still he doth follow wherever I stray.
Back to his dear loving arms I would flee."

The third line quoted is an open contradiction to the one immediately preceding. But the strayer from rectitude has had a great deal more consolation than was coming to an unrepentant sinner, by stopping at that second line, "Still he doth follow." He doesn't do anything of the sort. He stops at the dead-line of right, and waits for us to come back. The popular interpretation of the old hymn has been:

"Though I forget him and wander away—what's the difference? He'll tag me around and take care of me anyway."

Typical bad-boy and bad-girl philosophy when the child tosses its head and says:

"Humph! No matter if I am naughty! My parents will love me just as much and be as nice to me anyway. They're crazy about me."

This generation is wondering how it is going to manage to keep its children out of reform schools. Mothers and fathers lie awake, and worry, and weep, and wonder why this child is thus or that one the other way. "Why, we wouldn't have dared talk that way to our parents! What do you suppose has got into them?"

The answer is simple. Some day they will even admit it themselves. The parents' parents were backed up in most instances by the Almighty, whom they accepted as their guide through life, acknowledging that guidance in humble and formal reverence every day in the presence of those children. The parents were sent to church and Sunday school in their youth, and accompanied thither in the great majority of cases. The line of communication with God was kept open. These modern parents have cut the wire. Movies in which religion and Sunday observance are usually ridiculed (except for melodramatic purposes) are patronized; Sunday baseball is attended with the children; and the faith and worship of the forefathers are practically set down as some old-fashioned folly.

Parents who had a religious upbringing and are weakly forsaking it are the ones who now gnaw their nails in the night and wonder what's got into the children. It isn't what's got into the children, but it's what got out of the parents. God has been left outside their lives. They will have to go back to him. He knows they know right where he is. He has not forsaken them. He has not forgotten how to bring up children. He doesn't wonder what's "got into" the present generation.

There is going to be a lot of bitterness and heartache and heart-break among parents and a lot of ruin among young lives before we turn again and face the dazzling light. The Almighty isn't going to change his rules. They are fair and just and kind rules. They work out perfectly when followed. They were made for all time. The present generation cannot expect them to be repealed for a generation of spoiled and undisciplined children.

"Still stands thine ancient sacrifice."

When the struggle against the old-fashioned religion has exhausted itself, and the withered, besmirched souls of your children and mine are strewn along the pathway we are now foolishly treading, the next generation will go back. It will have to. It will be glad to!

The teacher does not chase the children all about the lot, catch them, and hold them, and cram the lessons into them. He rings the bell; the pupils know school is in session; and they know where. They must go to the fount of learning, and study. No more is God going to pursue us all about the wayward orbit we have chosen. He is right there in the same old place all the time, waiting patiently and lovingly for us and hoping we will return without the loss of a generation or so of precious souls.

There is a sort of silly crusade on among the humorous publications of the country, declaring that an attempt is being made to destroy the joy in the world. Nothing could be further from the truth. The attempt is merely to try to guide the public mind, without the loss of joy, to more wholesome, more intelligent, more nerve-resting and genuinely satisfying pleasures than the jazz and the clamor and the insane rush after rainbow-ends that is bringing so little lasting pleasure and is promoting such a goodly crop of crime and suicide in this generation.

We'll have to get back to God. We may not take back with us all the forms and customs of old worship. But we've got to bow our heads in reverence and willingly acknowledge a Master and a Guide. When we do, there will be no dearth of happiness. There will be a happier religion, with less outward and mistaken gloom than the old forms showed. And the generations of the future will be the keenest religionists the world has ever known.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

New Lebanon for Christ and the Church

By Lester V. King

(Preached at New Lebanon, at the opening of the pastor's second year. Special invitation was extended to citizens of the community, resulting in a large attendance.)

TEXT: "Open thy doors, O Lebanon."—Zachariah 11:1.

These words are a prophecy of the great Prophet Zachariah. They portray what is to occur to Israel unless she repents. We have here a picture of an invading army. Lebanon was a famous mountain in the South of Syria and was noted for her forest of cedars. Bashan was a kingdom of the Amorites on the east side of the Jordan and was famous for its stately oaks. Hence the prophecy concerning the cedars and the oaks. If the writer had in mind Jerusalem the words are to be taken in a figurative sense. Whatever the meaning we have a picture of an invading army.

I am asking you to think of the words, "Open thy doors, O Lebanon." When the prophet used these words he was thinking of an army. My theme is, "New Lebanon for Christ and the Church." Therefore rather than thinking of opening our doors to an invading army, I want you to think of opening them to a friend. To one who is interested in us and who will work for us and through us. "Open thy doors, O New Lebanon" is the plea I want to make this morning. The plea is a reasonable one and one that should be of interest to the church and to the village. Of interest to the members of the church because of their interest in the church. Of interest to members of the village because of their interest in the village.

I desire that the theme of the morning be our watchword, our goal, our aim for the year ahead. It is our purpose to consider together the doors that are to be opened by the church and the doors to be entered into if we are to take New Lebanon for Christ and the church. If this is to be done it must be done by the church. No organization, no body of people can do what the church can do if she but opens her doors.

Whatever has been the failures during our year's stay with you, they are past. Forever past. Never to return. Let us therefore bury them, remembering them only as a guide and warning for the year ahead.

The progress, and we believe there has been some, must not satisfy us. There are yet cedars to be destroyed by fire. The fire of the Holy Spirit must burn out the evils and urge us onward and upward toward heights yet unattained. We cannot, dare not, settle down to a disposition of self-satisfaction. There are still doors to be opened, and doors to be swung. Now, I believe I have been here long enough to sense some of the needs and some of the opportunities of the church and of the village. That we have here at New Lebanon an open door there is no doubt. Well do I remember the sermon by Mrs. Dr. Gribble some years ago in the Chapel of the College on the text: "An effectual and fervent door has been opened to us." Her plea was that Christ had opened a door of unusual opportunity to the Brethren church in darkest Africa. Now it certainly required on her part a great deal of faith and insight into the future to make such a prophecy. Yet we know now that her faith has been vindicated and her vision brought to pass, even though it did mean the sacrifice of her own husband and other loved ones.

I am made to think this morning that the text of 1 Corinthians 16:9 applies not only to her field. I believe it applies in our own field here. I believe Christ has opened a field here at New Lebanon to the Brethren church such as has been opened to few Brethren churches of our homeland. I was convinced of this fact when I accepted the call as your leader. After a year of work among you I am still more convinced of the fact. Every day I ponder on the thought, I am overwhelmed with the great responsibility that is ours. Brethren, what if we should fail? But we cannot; we dare not.

Consider these two facts:

1. It is God that opens the doors. "It is God that has given us this field. I am sure that Dr. Shively sensed this when he held his first revival campaign here, and started the work of the church. But no pastor or member has opened the field. We have all aided, no doubt, but the great God has swung the doors, and thanks be to him, he has swung them wide open. Friends, this is a serious fact we are considering. What are we going to do about it?

2. Again, it is God that closes the doors. But for your comfort may I say that he will not shut them unless we fail to enter into them. But should we Brethren, should we fail here, the doors will be either closed to us and opened to some other denomination, or closed partly and opened partly to some other church. Our text is but an illustration of this in regard to a nation. What are we going to do about it?

Do I need give proof that we have here an open field?

1. We have here, first of all, a growing, prosperous, well situated village of 450 people, with only one church in the village to minister to this number. Where can you find a field situated like this? The majority of villages of this size are crowded with churches. My own home town is but an illustration of this. It is a village the size of our own with four churches, three of them new brick structures larger than our own. Then tell me that New Lebanon cannot afford ONE BIG CHURCH? We can have here a Sunday school of 300 or 400 folks if we will. And I prophesy that we will if this program is carried out.

2. Again we have here a community of Dunkard bred people with Dunkard ideals and virtues. This whole Miami valley is a Dunkard community. When you speak of the Brethren church folks know what you mean. When you speak of the Brethren church in many localities they usually link it with another church of similar name. But not so here. Now this should make it easier for us.

3. Then too we are located in the center of Brethren churches from which we can draw. We are in the center with Brethren churches to the near east, west, north and south. When members of these churches move they move toward us. And why should they not do this?

4. Lastly, we have the men, the talent and the means to carry out this program and enter this open door. Very few rural Brethren churches have such talent as we have. During the year three Brethren ministers have been worshipping with us. None of us are regular teachers in the Sunday school. And why should we when we have such splendid talent on the part of lay members? Yes, Brethren, we have the material to do the work.

What then? Why do we not take the field? The answer is simple. Our material must be dedicated to the Lord. We need but apply, put to work, use what we have. And God pity us if we fail.

Lebanon in the Bible symbolizes all that is strong, great and beautiful.

If New Lebanon is to be true to her name,

We need to have but proper aims.

And then we'll not need to be ashamed,

And stand before our Lord halt and maimed.

We can be strong in the strength of our manhood. We can be great in exemplifying noble Christian lives. We can be beautiful in the lives we dedicate to the Lord. Yes, what a village we can be and what a church we can be! What are we going to do about it, Brethren?

MONDAY

A DEFINITION OF SIN—1 John 3:4-10. Sin is defined so simply that the mind of the most unlearned can understand and the heart of the child will bear witness to its truth,—to go against the law, to disobey is sin. The fact of sin and what it involves needs to be brought to the consciousness of the last individual until we become disturbed about it.

TUESDAY

THE BEGINNING OF SIN—Gen. 3:1-12. Sin began with disobedience and had its seat in the uncontrolled desires and appetites of life. Its beginning in every life is the same, and its continuance is due to the same appeal. We sin when we yield to the lusts, the enticements and the desires of our own undisciplined and uncontrolled hearts.

WEDNESDAY

CONSEQUENCES OF SIN—Rom. 2:1-11. The consequence of sin, unrepented of and unforgiven, is the judgment of God, before whom nothing can be hidden, but even the very thoughts and intents of the heart are known. To know that we must face such a judge, "who will render to every man according to his deeds", ought to make us vitally concerned about what we allow to have place in our lives.

THURSDAY

CHRIST AN OFFERING FOR SIN—Isa. 53:1-12. The great prophet foresaw the sufferings of Christ and, speaking on behalf of Jehovah, said, "For the transgression of my people was he stricken." Though he was guiltless, "yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him," and to "make his soul an offering for sin."

FRIDAY

ACKNOWLEDGING SIN—Ezra 9:5-15. Confession is the first requisite to forgiveness. He who is not willing to make a full breast of his sin, is not in the mental attitude that would cause him to seek and to receive the grace of God. The attitude of the publican is ever the pre-requisite to forgiveness.

SATURDAY

DELIVERANCE FROM SIN—1 John 1:1-10. "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." That is the provision, and the condition is that we "confess our sins." What a blessed and satisfying provision! and what a simple condition! Is there any burdened soul that cannot find relief?

SUNDAY

THE RIGHTEOUS AND THE UNGODLY—Psalm 1. The happy estate of the righteous is such that every soul may well covet, and one that grows in richness and delight, fruitfulness and stability with the passing years. The ungodly man is so lacking in worth, so light and unstable that he is as the chaff, driven before the slightest breeze. What a contrast! If men could be brought to see it, who would dabble in sin?—G. S. B.

"following the style." If so, it is no longer true; it is now a custom established and accepted for many good reasons. And we can still remember many who scrupulously wore bonnets, but were far more stylishly attired otherwise than many who didn't; it is even so with this head-dress.

It is only too true that there are many, both within and without the church, with bobbed hair who are not true Brethren or spiritual Christians; it is equally true that there are many with longer hair who come no nearer this mark. We know of many women—some younger and some not so young—who, in spite of bobbed hair, acknowledge the headship of the husband as well as of Christ. And in view of the many splendid young women, some of our most splendid young women in every congregation, true Brethren and spiritual Christians, who DO have bobbed hair; in view of the many fundamental things crying to be taught today; in view of the teachings of the inspired Scriptures themselves—we ought not deliberately antagonize or discourage some of our best young people by laying upon them any other commandment than that which is written. In other words, we ought to LEARN A LESSON FROM HISTORY.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Witness of the Light

By Alice Livengood

OUR SCRIPTURE

In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehendeth it not. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light. That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world (John 1:4, 5, 7, 9).

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth after me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life (John 8:12).

Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God: But he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God (Luke 12:8, 9). Now the man out of whom the devils were departed besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away saying, Return to thine own house, and show how great things God hath done unto thee. And he went his way, and published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him (Luke 8:38, 39). But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth (Acts 1:8).

And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all, nor teach in the name of Jesus. But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard (Acts 4:18-20). Then Peter and the other apostle answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men (Acts 5:29).

But rise and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee. Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people and unto the Gentiles (Acts 26:16, 22, 23).

But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear (1 Peter 3:15).

OUR MEDITATION

Animal life and all vegetation could not long exist without the light of the sun, and after a few days of cloudiness how glad we all are to see his rays again. Light seems to be very much worthwhile. "Light! Nature's resplendent robe; without whose vesting beauty all were wrapt in gloom."

Almost two thousand years ago another and greater saving light, Jesus the Christ, came into the world to bring life eternal and happiness to mankind.

But it matters not how bright the sun shines, a plant that is set away in a dark cellar will not benefit from its rays until it is carried out into the light. So neither can man be saved except he is brought into the saving knowledge and grace of the Light of our souls.

Although this "light of men" is here the people who are in the dark cellars of sin and heathendom cannot profit by it unless they are brought to it by those who already are backing in his divine, saving rays. It is our duty to bear witness of the light by doing this, for the love rays of Christ can heal the sin-sick soul just as the rays of the sun can destroy germs and heal many ills of the body.

A witness is one who tells what he knows or has seen. Then, if we are saved by the Light of life and are happy in him surely we should be anxious to testify of all his goodness and mercy to us by telling the good news to the lost.

"I love to tell the story;
More wonderful it seems
Than all the golden fancies
Than all my golden dreams.

I love to tell the story,
It did so much for me;
And that is just the reason
I tell it now to thee."

That should be true of every Christian.

We are commanded to bear witness by Jesus himself when he said, "Go ye," and he also said if we keep his commandments we'll be happy.

Almost anyone who has found a good place in which to buy will tell others—will witness for the place by showing his purchases, or by telling of the bargains seen. Then why not be just as willing and even more so to witness for the Christ. Tell what great things he has done for us and that he is abundantly able to do the same for all those still in darkness, if they will hearken to our witnessing and to the still small voice and come to the light.

"Come to the Light, 'tis shining for thee;
Sweetly the Light has dawned upon me,
Once I was blind, but now I can see:
The Light of the world is Jesus."

Granted that it does require courage to witness at all times and all places, Paul said, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" and Jesus himself said if we do this, "Lo, I am with you alway." What a wonderful promise!

Would that we might all feel as Peter, when he stood before the council and said, "For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." Then would Jerusalem and Samaria and all the uttermost parts receive the message of the Light because of the faithful witnessing of those who had experienced its saving power.

OUR PRAYER

Kind heavenly Father: We thank thee that the light has come into our souls and we pray for courage to ever be witnesses of the light. May our lives and words testify to this and thus those out in sin will too accept of the light because of our influence and thy name thus be honored and glorified. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

A Mother's Tribute to Peter

Oh, yes, you will get to heaven, dear,
I know by the way you pray;
I know by the shine in your love lit face
When you sang the hymns today;
It was "Jesus, lover of my soul"
And "Nearer, my God to thee,"
And the taking "time to be holy," dear.
And the "Rock" that was "cleft for me."

The text was sweet, but the sermon long—

I think that you called it deep—
But I sat in the corner of the pew,
And I guess I went to sleep;
But I was so very, very tired,
And maybe my heart is cold;
I wonder if Christ will know me dear,
If I enter the heavenly fold!

The baby kept me up last night,
So I slept an hour too late,
And had to hurry the breakfast so,
For you didn't like to wait;
I'm glad you told them in love-feast, dear,
Of the joys that fills your days,
And I wish that Jesus would tune my harp
To a gladder song of praise!

Perhaps, if I do the best I can
In this little home of mine,
The Lord will give me, now and then,
A sip of his heavenly wine;
And if I fail of the star-set crown
I have tried so hard to win,
You will lend me yours, for a little while,
With all its jewels in.—Anon.

Introduction

The resurrection of Christ is the turning-point of the world's history. From the day when he rose from the tomb a new impulse was given to the world. The spirit of the Risen One seemed to enter into humanity; men's thoughts have been changed, their habits refined, their morals elevated; the church has been created, the world has been revolutionized.—Bishop Carpenter.

The Stone Rolled Away

This was a great circular stone, like a millstone moving in a groove, which had been rolled over the entrance to the tomb so as to close it like a door. Then the Romans had sealed it by drawing cords in front of it, the cords being fastened to the stone and to each side of the tomb by wax or clay, so that the authorities would know if the tomb had been entered. Such a stone would require several men to move it, and the women (who did not know about the sealing of the grave) had been wondering, as they came along, how they could manage to get the stone rolled away. Their experience in finding the work already done for them is a standing example of the uselessness of worry.

Proofs of the Resurrection

"I have been used for many years to study the history of other times, and to examine and weigh the evidences of those who have written about them; and I know of no one fact in the history of mankind which is proved by better and fuller evidence of every sort, to the mind of a fair inquirer, than that Christ died and rose again from the dead."—Dr. Arnold. So Dr. Lyman Abbott: "The resurrection of Jesus is the best-attested fact in history."

The transforming of the disciples—originally but common men—into apostles, who changed the face of the world, through the gift of the Holy Spirit, is a proof.

The very existence of the Christian church is a proof of the resurrection of Jesus. "Faith in mere visions or phantoms but not such a phenomenon as the Christian church, the greatest fact and the mightiest institution in the history of the world."—Pres. Woolsey.

What the Resurrection Meant to Peter

It meant a chance to throw himself at his Master's feet and ask his forgiveness. He knew he need not now bear the burden so long as he lived—the burden of sorrow for unforgiven sin which weighs heaviest of all burdens. No account of Jesus' first interview with Peter is recorded in the Gospels. The only reference is in Luke 24:34.

This interview must have been too sacred for repetition or record. It was the restoration of the personal relations between

Adult Division Rally Day

Sunday May 1, 1927

By Prof. A. B. Cober, National Superintendent

The attention of all Sunday school officers is invited to a small leaflet on the work of the Adult Division of the Church school, which was mailed recently to all superintendents throughout the brotherhood. At this time we wish to call special attention to Nos. 3 and 6 of the objectives set forth for the year 1927.

The first Sunday of May is a splendid time to rally all the forces of the Adult Division. It is true that every Sunday should be a special day and that the Lord's work demands our best efforts at all times, but it is also true that the Bible classes in many of our schools are not functioning as they could nor as they should. The Sunday school officers, the children, and the young folks need more encouragement from the adults.

The Bible class may be a mighty factor for good if the members will keep in mind the purposes for which a class is organized and will become a "Willing Workers' Class" rather than an "Iceberg Class".

In connection with this Rally Day Announcement we wish to suggest that the president of each Bible class read to the class "Some Things an Adult Bible Class Can Do" and also "Some Objectives for the Year 1927" as printed in the leaflet above mentioned. It might be profitable to have a discussion on these at a special meeting of the class and determine at that time some things for the class to do during the present year.

For the May Rally Day the following objectives are suggested:

1. 100 per cent attendance of the Bible Class membership.
2. A determined effort to increase the membership of each class. What has been your increase in enrollment since January first?
3. By May first you should have increased your enrollment 8 per cent to meet the goal set for the year—2 per cent increase per month. Many classes are going over the top. Why not your class?
4. Have a special worship program including some good appropriate music.
5. Have as many members of the Home Department as possible attend this service.
6. Secure a special speaker to address the Adult Division. Get your committees busy now. Don't say it can't be done. It can.

BE A BOOSTER

Every member should receive a notice of this special Rally Day service. Use your automobiles to bring those who have no conveyance and are not able to walk the distance they live from the church.

Let us make this a big day for spiritual growth in the Brethren Sunday School.

Getting Ready for Leadership

By Orville D. Ullom,

The future success of the boys and girls around us depends wholly upon their growth in character. Their growth in character depends largely upon their home atmosphere, the quality of their friends, their church, their social life and work, and the ideals of the neighborhood in which they live. Now, what meaneth all of this to us? Just this—the boys and girls of the oncoming generation are largely dependent upon you young people who are growing into manhood just now as to whether they shall grow into men and women with Christ-like characters. There is a need here to be met. Seest thou it? Only as we choose worthy vocations in life so that we can raise the standards in the communities where those boys and girls will and must live, will we be making it possible for them to be splendid, true-blue men and women. It was human need that forced Jesus day after day to serve the people of his day. He looked upon them with a heart of compassion and changed their desires into satisfactions. He revelled in his task. Shall we be ministers and make the church the servant of the community? A social worker—religious education instructor—and thus lift up the social and home life of the community? A physician and thus by relieving human suffering made life in the homes far more pleasant? A lawyer, and strive to establish absolute justice to all in the community? In either case every boy and girl in that particular neighborhood will reap the rich fruits of your toil. Is such a service worth all that it costs? That, you one and all, must decide for yourself, but be sure you make the right decision. Oh! those sad regrets! Now is the time to avoid them; not ten years from now. Oh! the gratitude of those hearts you serve. Such satisfaction is worth far more than gold.

For some such task we must prepare ourselves now if the world is to profit by our having lived here. And whatever the vocation of our choice might be, we all want our life to count in the world for all it is worth. This first demands that we select the vocation to which we are called. Such a vocation is the one that calls out the best that is in us, the one that makes us what we ought to be, if we do our part, and the one that demands our best qualifications. The preparation for such a calling never ceases. To think that we never cease keeping ourselves in readiness for our best service. The doctors who join the American College of Surgeons are required to sign the following pledge, "I pledge myself to pursue the practice of surgery with thorough self-restraint, and to place the welfare of my patients above all else, to render willing help to my colleagues, and to give freely of my services to the needy. I pledge myself, so far as I am able, to avoid the sin of selfishness, to shun unwarranted publicity, and money seeking as disgraceful to our profession." These men must of necessity keep themselves in realness every hour of the day for service. How can we help but do likewise? Yes, the cost of such leadership is amazing. It is so high that only the patient, persistent worker attains unto it.

In one of the Northwestern cities were two brothers who were famed as the two leading surgeons in America. Patients came to them from all parts of the world for consultation. Outstanding doctors came to learn from them. These doctors were experts and they served humanity in an expert manner. They had attained unto the position of leadership. But LISTEN, they were first willing to pay the price of preparation. They spent long years of hard laborious study and many patient efforts in their apprenticeship getting ready and even now they live simply, avoid dissipation, guard their diet and sleep, safeguard their nervous energy, give up many social indulgences that they might be more skillful in performing their operations with a clear thinking brain, undimmed vision, untrembling fingers, and steady nerves.

Such expert well trained leadership as this, no matter what the field of endeavor, depends upon five factors. These factors are: first, knowledge. This would imply that you have the facts of your profession at your finger tips. Second, power. This is the storing up of your physical and ner-

Mary and Martha, Who were Friends of Jesus. Luke 10:38-42

Some of Jesus' friends went with him wherever he went. The apostles were such good friends that they followed Jesus wherever he led them for three years. But, Jesus had other friends besides the apostles and the friends who went with him. Mary and Martha and their brother Lazarus were very dear friends of Jesus. Whenever they could, they had Jesus come to their home and there they would do all that they could for him.

When Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead, many people found out about it and believed on Jesus. Now the rulers of the Jews who lived near to Bethany and in Bethany heard that many people were believing on Jesus and they became jealous. Then Jesus and his disciples went away into another part of the country, because they knew it was not safe to stay in Bethany. These rulers wanted to kill Jesus because they did not want anyone to be more powerful than they were themselves.

Mary and Martha were oh, so glad to have their brother Lazarus alive again. They wanted to do something for Jesus, just to show him that they loved him and that they were glad to have their brother alive. So when they found out that the rulers were trying to take Jesus and that Jesus would have to go away, they felt very unhappy about it.

Several weeks passed. Whenever they could Mary and Martha and Lazarus asked people who passed through the village about Jesus. They liked to know where he was and if he and his followers were safe. Then one day when they asked, they received very joyful tidings. A man, who was going through the town, told Lazarus, "Jesus and his disciples are walking along the road just a short distance from town. I passed them a little while back and I think that they are coming here to Bethany."

Lazarus immediately hurried home and said to his sisters, "Jesus and his twelve disciples are on their way to Bethany. Can't we have them all come here to our home? I'll go and meet them and bring them here if you will prepare supper for them."

Then Mary and Martha were both glad. They said to Lazarus, "You go and invite them all to come."

Soon Mary and Martha were as busy as could be. Then they fixed a great long table and set it. Soon all was ready. While Martha was busy, one time, Mary slipped away and went to a place where she could buy ointment. There she bought a pound of very precious sweet smelling perfume. Then she went back to her home.

It was evening when Jesus arrived. Mary and Martha told him how happy they were to have him in their home again. Soon Jesus and Lazarus and the Apostles were all seated at the long table. They did not sit on chairs as we do now. Instead there were couches on which they reclined while they ate. While Martha was serving the supper, Mary got her bottle of ointment and went to the foot of Jesus' couch. Then she removed Jesus' sandals, for Jesus and the men of Jesus' time did not wear socks and big shoes as men do now. When Mary had taken off Jesus' sandals she broke the bottle which held the ointment and poured the ointment on Jesus' feet. Then she took her hair and wiped them dry.

Some of the disciples were surprised at Jesus allowing Mary to do this for him, but Jesus was so glad for the love of his friends. It made him happy to have Mary and Martha prepare a supper for him and his friends and it made him especially happy to have Mary love him so much that she would anoint his feet. Jesus knew that he would not be allowed to live long and he said, "Mary has done this to make my last days before my death happier." So Mary did her bit as a friend of Jesus and gave him much happiness that day, just a week before he was crucified.

Mrs. Sheldon to the Girls' Gospel Team

At the close of the last school year, the Girls' Gospel Team had thirty dollars in its treasury. After thought and prayer, the girls decided to send it to Hattie Cope Sheldon to be used as the Lord might lead in the work there. We have this very interesting letter in reply from Mrs. Sheldon. We wish to share the letter with the Evangelist family, for it was through the kindness and generosity of some of our near-by churches and other denominations as well, where we were permitted to hold services, that we had this little sum to send. Such may rejoice in the blessing and fruits of their giving.

Bossangoa, A. E. F.

November 1, 1926.

Dear Girls of the Ashland Gospel Team:

I am in receipt of your gift which was forwarded me by Miss Helen Garber. It certainly did come as a happy surprise. May the Lord reward you greatly for this.

In thinking over the numerous uses to which this money might be employed, and after much prayer about it, I have thought it fitting to use it for a temporary church building. We hope to have a permanent building some day, but judging by the progress made on the other stations, it looks as though it will take three or four years to get a permanent church building. It always seems best to build permanent dwelling houses before anything else, because the health of the missionary must be protected else his service cannot continue. But in the meantime as in the case of Yaloke services must be held out in the open. At Yaloke for two and one-half years they have done this. I have seen the poor naked natives come shivering up to services. Perhaps it will surprise you to know it is cold out here, but nevertheless it is true. In the early morning when we have our services the wind is often very chilly. Of course it gets terribly hot in the middle of the day. During the rainy season which lasts six months out of the year, the poor natives must sit out in the rain or else we must dismiss the services and that we don't care to do. Sometimes when I have been trying to give them the "Good News" the smoke of their bonfires has almost choked me, and so constant has it been, that at times I have thought surely afterwards, I will be "smoked meat."

The gift which you sent will provide for a building large enough to hold all that will come to services. The foundation will be of stone work, the floor will be pounded mud, which makes a nice, hard floor and looks something like cement. The walls will be of mud and they look pretty nice when whitewashed. The roof will be of thatch, the seats of hewn logs. This may sound crude to you but it looks pretty nice to us since we have been used to no building at all. A church something like this at Bassai has lasted three or four years. Don't you wish you could come and hold a service in this church? I fear that you would have a hard time being understood until you learned to jabber in real African style.

As perhaps the most of you know we are opening a new station at Bossangoa. The permission has not yet arrived but we are waiting, and in the meantime we are giving the Gospel to these hungry people.

If you could see Africa today as I see it, I believe that many would be compelled to come forth and help to reap the rich harvest of precious souls. In any direction that one travels he must pass village after village and perhaps not one has heard the "Good News." There has been no one to bring them the Light. In darkness they sit, from moon to moon, and from one hunting season to another, and still the light is withheld. Robert Moffat as he looked out over the great expanse of territory in South Africa, said, "I see the smoke of a thousand villages and not one has heard that God sent his only Son to die for their sins."

Perhaps you wonder what we are doing here. Yes, we are busy giving forth the glad tidings of salvation, but we are, as it were, only a drop in the bucket. We are trying to occupy a little space but oh, the tribes beyond who will never hear unless more missionaries come forth!

It seems that now is the time to evangelize this great "Dark Continent." Tomorrow may be too late. A recent statistics, put out by the French journal, states that within the last ten years there has been a decrease of 60 percent in the population. This report astonished the medical world and they said we must save Africa from Sleeping sickness, etc. But should we not be just as interested in saving them from sin and pointing them to the Savior? Of course, we do all we can for them from a medical standpoint and hope to do more in the future.

Of these 60 percent who fell into a Christless grave who is responsible? Someone must answer for them on that day. Of course we are not responsible for those but we are responsible for the ones who die in this generation.

Perhaps you may think your talent is not suited for Africa. You may be musically inclined and think this talent cannot be used in Africa. How these people do like music! To my mind it would be great to help them to develop their wild savage music into music that would be suitable for hymns and still be African. That is what they need for the African soul cannot express itself in Western music.

Some may be inclined to teach, and this is a great work out here where schools are almost unknown. This requires no little ability for the teacher must master the difficult, almost impossible French language. All teaching must be done in French.

There is room for all or any talent out here and the Lord seems to use some who have no talent, but through their consecration they are living channels through which the Water of life flows. Consecration is the most essential quality to have.

I am sending my best wishes and prayers for your success throughout this year.

Lovingly yours in his Service,

HATTIE COPE SHELTON.

Just think! Build a church with thirty dollars! A church in Africa would be a fine investment and worthy memorial to a Sunday school class. Let us, if we have not already, at this glorious Easter time, give of our plenty to those who have little, not only that churches may be built, but that more workers may be sent forth. May our hearts and minds be open to his will in our giving at this season.

HELEN GARBER.

Letters from South American Workers

Laboulaye, Argentina

(The following letter has just been received from our pastor in Laboulaye. It is worth passing on.—C. F. Yoder.)

Laboulaye, March 19. Dear Brother Yoder. Grace and peace be with you and your family. Here we are well and encouraged in the work of the Lord. I write to inform you that I have sold the only sulky for $35.00. It was a good sale, as the sulky is old and much worn. I am impressed by the way the Lord cares for the details which we are apt to overlook. It might seem to us that this sulky has rendered its quota of service and is ready for the old iron pile with no one to look at it with gratitude or pity. But the Lord cares for details. This sulky was sold to the man with a market garden and a large family of children whom we visited when you were here. His wife is lame and cannot come to church unless she rides. Now the entire family has been converted and the man has given the sulky as a present to his wife so that she can attend. She is very happy and says she will care for the sulky as a precious treasure, and will only use it to come to church.

The Lord has cared for Prince also. (Prince is the horse donated by Goshen friends for the use of Brother and Sister Webb, fifteen years ago. He has been all over this district in colportage work and has been a most faithful missionary until a year ago when the gift of an auto in Laboulaye made it possible to give him a rest.—C. F. Y.)

He is in an estancia in Villa Rossi whose owner loves him and keeps him in his best pastures and never makes him work. He calls him his superannuated missionary. Thus he is passing his old age, fat and contented, while here in the garage the Lord has provided a good substitute. This makes me trust that the Lord who cares for the horse and sulky will much more care for the workers who yield their lives to his service.

A woman from Mendoza was abandoned by her husband while she was ill, and having heard of Brother Perez here came to Laboulaye for healing. She was both healed and converted and asked for baptism, but fearing it premature to take this step, I advised her to wait. I do not know if I did well in this as she is very sad to return to Mendoza without baptism.

The widow Aguilar and her daughter also wish to be baptized as soon as possible and we would like to have you come in April to celebrate baptisms and the Lord's supper. Bring Mrs. Yoder and remain some days.

JUAN ISTUETA.

Alejandro, Argentina

(Translation of a part of a letter from Domingo Reina.—C. F. Y.)
Here we are all well and the meetings are well attended in spite of the fact that many have begun to work in the corn harvest. Yesterday our hall was entirely filled.

The brethren here have purchased twenty good benches in an auction and have donated them to the work. Now we are going to take them to Gallini for our meetings there. Yesterday Brother Lense went with me to look for a hall there and found one which we will occupy the first of April. We want you to come for the inauguration.

The Bada family are going to loan me their auto to go to Corral de Bustos to visit his brother's family and hold some meetings there. Other families there also are interested. Brother Lense will care for the meetings here in my absence.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

PASTORAL AND EVANGELISTIC SKETCHES

Ardmore, South Bend, Indiana

At the urgent request of the Ardmore brethren and its pastor, the writer assisted them in a two weeks' evangelistic effort the latter part of March. My church at Warsaw consented to such an arrangement since the Ardmore pastor could supply my pulpit in my absence.

Two weeks is scarcely time for a campaign to be carried through properly. The revival spirit was manifest from the very first service and continued to the very last. Many heard the word gladly and came with penitent hearts, believing in Jesus Christ and confessing him as their Savior. The climax of the meeting came after ten days with thirteen coming at one service. The brethren held up our hands while we proclaimed the old-fashioned Gospel of Jesus Christ in its mighty power to save, and we had a real pentecost together. We were cheered and encouraged too by the presence of the brethren from neighboring churches. Among the visiting ministers were Brethren Bell, Leatherman, Clark and Flora. The pastor's home was thrown open to the evangelist, and we enjoyed its hospitality to the fullest. Brother E. A. Duker is the pastor, and is loved by his people. He is getting started nicely in the pastorate, and it looks now as though Ardmore would have to move out her walls or swarm. My! what a fine crowd of young people, thirty of them at one time in the choir! And my how they could sing! Brother Milt Wysong was to have helped us with the singing, but on account of sickness was prevented, so we remembered that we used to do a little singing ourselves and it was a real delight to tune them up and lead them out. The Bible school reached the high water mark on one Sunday of the meeting. We believe the revival will continue. We spent considerable time in preaching and teaching the "first principles of our faith." And if the people around Ardmore don't know what the Brethren church believes and practices it is because they didn't attend these meetings. Those who heard our blackboard "Studies in Christian Baptism," though they had not received it after the New Testament order, said, "After all it is as plain as language can make it." Several of the converts came from other churches, asking for triune immersion. Brethren, let us not forget in these days of extreme liberalism to magnify our plea. The world is waiting for it, and will accept it, if we preach it.

Brother Duker was very cordially received by the Warsaw church where he preached four times. He, no doubt, will give a report of the Ardmore meeting.

Warsaw, Indiana

On returning home our first work was with Dr. Bell in the endowment campaign. Yes, it is all over and we had a good time at it. If any of the Brethren are looking forward with "fear and trembling" to his visit, let me ease your troubled minds by telling you that his visit will mean a real blessing to your church, and make your work easier. He was very courteously received by the church, and Warsaw is not ashamed of her part in the endowment.

The Men's Glee Club of Ashland College was here and gave a splendid entertainment on the final day of the campaign. They made a good "hit" for the college. I might add that every department of the church is alive here and moving on to better things. Our Bible school under the superintendency of Brother Floyd Robbins is one of the leading schools of the city. Our attendance is around 200 each Lord's Day. Our W. M. S., with Mrs. Allen Shaffer as president, with half a hundred members, is doing excellent work. Our bills are all paid, and we are now planning to spend a considerable sum of money on our church building. We rejoice greatly for the victories throughout the brotherhood, and we shall pray that we shall all be kept in the center of his will and be faithful in our appointed task.

Yours until he comes,

C. C. GRISSE.

BETHEL CHURCH, MULVANE, KANSAS

Bethel church, Kansas, to the brethren scattered abroad, greeting: The work is going slowly forward, not as good as we would like to see, for we have never gotten to the place where we were satisfied. We work to get 70 to come to services, and then we want 80 and our wants are never satisfied. But we are doing things all the while.

What we lack is proper organization. We are working to this end, hoping to get to some system of doing things in a more business-like way.

Spiritually we are growing. Since we took up the work here four have been received into the church by baptism, and we have two to be baptized. Our Sunday school is in a growing state just now. We have a young people's class of 35. A number of these have no church home and the prospects here are good to win them. The Bible class has about 35. In a recent contest the two classes tied in membership, but the youths won in attendance. Our attendance is around 60 to 70.

As a rule our Sunday evening services have been rather slack, and we have tried every legitimate method we could think of to get people to go to church on Sunday nights. At last we found something that is working fine for the time being. And our evening attendance is growing until some evenings it is as large as the morning service. We have a family sing each night, when some one family will sing their favorite song, and this works fine. This takes us back nigh the family altar, and it is inspiring to see father and mother and children singing. Then we give them a Bible study on the book of Acts. We will be in the midst of the great missionary work of the apostle Paul by Easter time.

We have lifted an offering for every cause for the brotherhood. These offerings are not the biggest, but we do our best.

This year we raised 350 dollars and paid on the parsonage debt. In a financial way the church is 350 dollars better off than they were when I came to them. And a canvass of the field will be made each year until this debt is paid.

A bank failure was our lot, and two corn failures since I am on the field, has put this church in a financial rut. Last year it rained almost all fall and only a small acreage of wheat was sowed, but the farmers are planning on a real corn year, and we hope they have their hopes realized.

I am sure the Mission Board will be glad to hear from us, as it is helping this church some, and we can let both district board and the general board know that we are here to work for souls and for financial strength to advance the Gospel to the four corners of the earth, that we might hasten the coming of Jesus. We covet the prayers for the church and its pastor.

CLAY CITY, INDIANA

We are pleased to report the results of our recent revival meetings. Brother Claud Studebaker of Leon, Iowa, came to us on the eighth of March and remained until the twenty-eighth. During this time he preached each evening and twice on Sundays. Every sermon was powerful and inspiring. His ability to quote and read the scriptures from memory is wonderful. He is thoroughly Brethren. His audiences were largely composed of members of other denominations, including a number of their ministers who attended quite regularly. He fearlessly and plainly taught and explained our doctrinal beliefs in such a fine and inoffensive manner as to win the admiration and respect of his hearers.

Our place is a hard field. In a sense it is over-churched. We have a large number of denominations and yet there are many who are indifferent to the cause of Christ. The attendance of our own membership was hindered some by sickness in several homes.

However, with the harmonious working of our pastor and wife with the members who were able to attend, we feel the meetings proved to be very successful and beneficial, both to the community and church membership. Six new members were received by baptism, and we were all greatly encouraged and strengthened.

MARTIN R. GOSHORN,

Corresponding Secretary.

THE CLAY CITY MEETING, INDIANA

I had known of Clay City for some years, but to know of a person or place is quite different from knowing them, just as it is a very different thing to know of Christ and to know him. I feel that I now know Clay City and that experience of personal knowledge and acquaintanceship is indeed a blessing to me and I am inclined to think the blessing was mutual, for I am sure we never preached 26 consecutive sermons to any group of people who were more uniformly appreciative and extravagant in their commendations. I doubt if there is a finer group of people in any church than compose the working force at Clay City, and I only have one criticism for them and that is their number is not large enough. Their good pastor, Brother M. B. Spacht, is largely responsible for my presence there, having held a meeting for him in Iowa and had promised a union meeting in his town, therefore the early fall, but his change of pastorate changed our plans.

Brother Spacht is surely an agreeable yoke fellow, and I do not see how my labor could have been more pleasant. He is unassuming and does not blow any trumpets, but is a true workman with a kind and loving heart. His good wife is an able helpmeet and is talented in music. The daughter also is efficient help and presided at the piano most of the time. The oldest boy was the first to make confession in the meeting and the baby boy who was born while I was helping him in a meeting a year and a half ago, was just about the most interesting person in the church. So, the pastor's family is working, and there is a number of very efficient workers there, but I fear if I begin to name them I might slight some one, so will just say for the size of the church it seems they have a large proportion who work and pray and pay. I am sure I have a much higher estimate of the church and community than before visiting them. Our home was the lovely home of Brother C. C. Roush and a real home indeed. We took dinner out in the different homes, and we only have words of praise for every one. We might complain some of the roads, weather, but will not. We had a good meeting, touched a number of souls and eternity alone will reveal the value.

God bless you, Clay City.

Leon, Iowa.

HARDENED CRIMINALS BEING SAVED

"The lives of many hardened criminals have been transformed by the power of God as a result of reading the literature published by the Bible Institute Colportage Association of Chicago," declares Mr. William Norton, its secretary. Since 1894, when the Association was founded by D. L. Moody, millions of copies of its books, pamphlets, Scripture portions and tracts have been distributed. Much of this literature has been placed in the hands of prisoners in county and city jails by chaplains and Christian workers. Many testimonies have been given of the benefits received.

One prisoner in Arizona writes: "I have just finished reading your little book and I must admit it has given me a new view of life." One in West Virginia read Mr. Moody's book, "The Way Home," while he was in jail, and said, "It meant a new life for me." An orphan boy in Kentucky wrote from prison, "I want the Word of God to read on Sundays and spare hours, that I may prepare for a better world."

From North Carolina, a worker writes, "Several men who read these books pledged me their honor that they would live as law-abiding citizens when discharged. Two of the very worst sort of bootleggers that I happen to know are keeping their word." A prisoner in South Carolina writes, "I thought all hope was gone until Miss — let me have some of your books and I began to read them. I read the story of the Prodigal Son. I would read and weep, and cry and pray. I would read my Bible. The devil said there was no chance for me, but I kept reading and praying... The Lord saved me August 15, 1926, and I want you all to pray that God will heal my body so I can do more."

A chaplain in Pennsylvania says, "The

HOPES, VOWS, MEMORIES

By Ona Lee Sams

This poem was written for the dedication of the new church at Washington, D. C., Sunday, January 30, 1927 and in memory of the late Rev. William M. Lyon.

Hopes fulfilled ... we voiced our thanks
As we met in adoration,
And returned to God what we built for him
On the day of dedication.

Vows renewed ... we pledged our faith
And a greater consecration;
May the years that come keep within our hearts
This spirit of dedication.

Memories of one ... whose life was lived
To others an inspiration,
His spirit came from the home of the soul
On the day of dedication.

Hopes, vows, memories, of faithful ones,
Were a part of the dedication
Of God's own house in a city loved—
The capital of our nation.
Washington, D. C.

officials of the prison say the literature has done much to bless and help the men to think of God and their soul's salvation. Most every Sunday men are giving God a chance in their lives."

A worker in California declares, "It would be impossible for me to express the words of appreciation which I receive from the inmates of the city and county jails. Some of these books I have passed into no less than 25 or 30 different hands, and by the looks of them they are greatly appreciated. One young man in particular, who was arrested in Sacramento on a petty larceny charge, a few months ago read one of your books, entitled "The Way of Life." He said that it impressed him so that he has united with a local mission and completely sold out to God from sin. He attributes his conversion to your kindness in making it possible for that little book to reach the jail."—The Bible Institute Colportage Association, 843 N. Wells St., Chicago.

INSISTING ON "MY WAY"

Dr. John Timothy Stone was given a farewell dinner by his people when he recently left on his world tour, and in the course of his remarks he compressed into a few words no little philosophy and common sense when he said: "I don't believe in a pastor forcing his will on the people. The church was not built just the way I wanted it to be. I didn't insist on my way, because I wanted to preach in it after it was built." The spirit of autocracy is not very popular anywhere these days, and least of all should it be found in the Christian church, either on the part of pastor or people. There is no place where "good team-work" is more essential than in a pastoral relationship. Inflexible rules, unchangeable as the laws of the Medes and Persians, are not well designed for congregational usage. A spirit of mutual consideration, adaptation and forbearance is never out of place; but a spirit of arbitrariness and stubbornness, which insists on "my way" and is angered or piqued by criticism, is always unfortunate, and often disastrous. It is all very well for a man in a position of leadership to have convictions and principles, and to stand squarely for what he believes to be right; but it is always important for him to remember that a congregation is not an absolute monarchy, but is supposed to be a genuine democracy. Sometimes it is a wealthy and influential officer or member of the congregation who undertakes to "boss" the pastor like a hireling; sometimes it is the pastor who is tempted to take the role of a czar. In both cases it is offensive to our Lord and detrimental to his cause. The sort of leader who gets the best results is the one who shows his authority as little as possible. Like his Master, he lives "not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

Commenting on Dr. Stone's successful pastorate, the Continent says, "Generally he has had his way, yet he also has the grace and good sense not to insist on his way always, even when he is sure he is right. Many a pastor gets his way at too dear a price. A victory may be disastrous defeat. In all our relations—commercial, political, social, domestic and religious—we can yield much to others, without the weakening principle, and perhaps receive more in compensating consideration than we would have gained otherwise. But if we are rigid as iron to the last degree of having our own way, we may break others only to get broken ourselves."—Exchange.

OUR FOES

"Ours is not a conflict with mere flesh and blood, but with the despotisms, the empires, and forces that govern and control this dark world, the spiritual hosts of evil arrayed against us in the heavenly warfare." How do these antagonists work? How is this cunning antagonism exerted upon the soul? It is exerted both mediately and immediately. First of all, these invisible antagonists work immediately upon the soul. Spirit can work upon spirit; mind can lay pressure upon mind. There is direct and immediate influence upon the secret life of man. That is the teaching of the Word of God, and I freely confess to you that there are phenomena in my own life and in the lives of others which I cannot interpret in any other way. One mind can influence another mind directly without either speech or deed, leaving upon the other the seal and imprint of its own mold. When I say this I do not count it incredible when it is reported to me that there are spiritual antagonists in Ephesus that prey upon the thoughts of man and work upon his imagination and engage his sentiments and ambitions with the purpose of luring him from his sacred loyalties and inciting him to rebellion against the holy and most high God. "Ours is not a conflict with mere flesh and blood," says the apostle. "We have invisible foes."—J. H. Jowell, D.D.

IN THE TYPE CASES

O Printer-Man, say,
What are hidden away
In these boxes, so many and queer?
To send us you're able
Song, story and fable:
O, say! do you keep them in here?

These black little tricks
Shaped like broken toothpicks
Have a queer little face on one end;
Are they fairies or witches?
And oh! tell me which is
Which, and which isn't my friend.

There are wonderful books
Hid away in these nooks,
Long waiting for some one to find;
There are thoughts the most grand,
There are smiles the most bland,
If the sticks be but rightly combined.

When a wizard his wand
Waves over the band,
They start into line and they tell
Things lively and sad,
Good, indifferent and bad—
Songs, stories and sermons as well.

Would mine were the skill
To wave magic at will,
And strike song from each silent key;
To pick from the cases
The little imp faces
That would best spell my poem for me.
—Ilde.

vous energy. Third, skill, the acquisition of speed through practice. Fourth, character, a building up process, growth of ideals and right habits resulting in pure thinking and right action. Fifth, VISION, this is the result of the climbing life.

We are challenged to prepare for this leadership of self-denying service. G. Walter Fiske in his "Jesus Ideals of Living," says, "Responsibility gravitates toward the one who gets ready for it." It is stated that Abraham Lincoln said, "I will prepare myself now and some day my chance will come" Isn't this exactly what we must do? and we certainly must do it with all the vigor of manhood that we possess, and with the intense conviction of a purpose that drives us on and on and on. Power flows through him who can use it. We must become good conductors for the current.

We prepare to live and furthermore to help others live also. For this reason we educate and discipline our body, mind, and spirit. We build up reserve power by avoiding excess, and train our bodies that we may have a goodly supply of physical and nervous energy. We do this all for the sake of our life work, that we might be more capable servants of our God and society.

In this preparation for such unselfish service we must make it the best at our command. How can this be without a broad liberal college education? The real value of a college education can well be estimated by observing the following statistics of the United States Bureau of Education. According to the facts, 269 out of every million of those men who have an elementary education achieve distinction in their profession; those having a high school education 623 out of a million; those having a college education 5,758 out of a million. This shows that the youth with a college education has ten times the chance for success that his brother has. Think what this meaneth in our short lives.

There openeth a way to us all, only as we are prepared to meet the requirements of that calling and the need of those who are calling us to serve them. In this respect the poet challenges us with his thought when he says:

To every man there openeth,
A way and ways, and a way,
And the high soul climbs the high way,
And the low soul gropes the low;
While in between, on the misty flats.
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A high way and a low;
And every man decideth
The way his soul shall go.
Hartford, Connecticut.

Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

Peter the denier and the Master whom he had denied. It was the loving talk when Peter poured out his love and repentance for his deed and received the forgiveness he so needed and desired. It was not the restoration of Peter to his place and work among the Apostles. That came later. That restoration could be recorded, and should be, that all followers of Jesus who knew of his sin should know of his repentance and restoration. But this first interview was one of those deeper experiences of the heart which we never can tell another.

Restoration of Peter

Peter's restoration to the place among the Apostles which he had previously held is recorded in our lesson for today. As the group sat together after the breakfast on the shore of the lake, Jesus said to Peter, "Lovest thou me more than these?" More than the other disciples. This was a reminder of his boast just before the crucifixion, and his denial, that "if all shall be offended (caused to stumble) in thee, I will never be offended." It was also a reference to the fact that just a few moments before he has hastened with greater zeal than the others, than even the loving John, to greet Jesus on the shore. "Peter's vehemence of welcome was most grateful to Jesus. It witnessed to an affection which was at this crisis the most valuable element in the world. Jesus hailed with the deepest satisfaction Peter's impetuous abandonment of his fishing gear and impatient springing to greet him, because as plainly as possible it showed that, after all, Christ was incomparably more to him than the old life." The question itself referred back to the denial. Do you really love me, you who cursed and swore that you never knew me? Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee.

The command of Jesus that Peter should be a shepherd to his flock, and feed the sheep and lambs, proved to Peter and all who heard that he was restored to his old place and work, and accepted by his Master as a true apostle. For Jesus would not appoint a bad shepherd to such a place.

Further Reproof of Peter

John records a very characteristic question of Peter's relating to himself: for as John was listening to the conversation just related, and heard Christ foretell to Peter (John 21:18, 19) the martyr's death which was to be his, Peter turned to the listening disciple and asked Christ concerning him, "This man, what about him?" It was a bit of Peter's old presumption, and Christ instantly rebuked it: "What is that to thee? Do thou follow me; look to your own life; you will find it enough to occupy all your care." Human nature is slow in changing. Even in that hour of chastened return to Christ's fellowship, Peter had to be rebuked. —Illustrated Quarterly.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

WHAT A LITTLE GIRL HEARD

By Emily Huntington Miller

I just ran away to the buttercup lot,
When mamma told me I'd better not;
And a little brown birdie up in a tree,
As true as you live, kept a-saying to me,
"Naugh-tee May, ran away!"
Till I didn't know what to do.
Now how do you s'pose he knew?

And once we went to the meadow brook,
Josie and me, with a fishing hook,
And the very same birdie sang again,
Over and over, and just as plain:
"Naugh-tee May, ran away!"
And Josie, she heard him, too.
Now, how do you s'pose he knew?

Josie she guesses what I heard
Was just my conscience 'stead of a bird;
But the water looked so scowly and black,
We took hold of hands and ran right back
And all the way we heard it say:
"That is the best thing to do."
And mamma, she said so, too.

PEGGY'S BIRTHDAY

By Helen Bisset Drew

Little Peggy was seven years old Saturday, and mother invited her little friends to come and enjoy her party.

When they were all seated at the table and Peggy had blown out her seven pink candles, she turned to her playmates and said, "I'm going to have another party tomorrow."

"Where?" asked Jane, her little chum.

"In Sabbath school" replied Peggy. "My teacher never forgets our birthday Sundays."

Sure enough the next day Peggy, dressed in her prettiest frock, carrying seven bright new pennies in her silk bag, started for Sabbath school.

When she entered the room her teacher greeted her with a smile and handed her the birthday calendar, which had been prepared by the secretary for the month of July. It was a large sheet of light colored paper, ruled far apart for names and decorated with pictures of large flags, which had been cut from colored papers and magazines.

Peggy proudly wrote her full name—Peggy B. Condon—and then took the sticker, which her teacher gave her, and pasted it on a real calendar over the figure "2." July 2 was her day, and the sticker was a small red, white and blue streamer. Had it been March, it would have been a picture of the White House; or April, lilies; or if she had been a December baby a picture of a miniature Christmas tree. Each month had its own particular sticker.

Then Peggy was given a special birthday chair, painted white, with a pink bow for decoration. How proud she felt to have the honor chair, because for many weeks she had fancied just what it would be like to have the other boys and girls watch her in that lovely chair.

After the opening service, Peggy was called to the teacher's desk and given the offering basket, which she passed to the other pupils. Then she led the offering march and led the prayer.

When all the children were quietly seated Miss Carol said: "There is a verse in our Bible which says 'We should love one another.' Can you think of other verses in our Bible which tell us to love or to be kind to one another?"

One little fellow answered, "Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving each other;" and Jane Wier said, "Pray for one another."

"Yes," said Miss Carol, "and we can do that today. We have a little friend to whom we want to show our love, and of whom we wish to think in our prayer. Peggy was seven years old yesterday."

Peggy was handed a small white box in the shape of a birthday cake, with seven pretty candles burning. After she had blown them all out, her little friends counted as she dropped her seven bright, new pennies in the hole on the top—one, two, three, four. Then they sang:

A birthday greeting to you, dear,
May you be happy all the year
If you are brave and sweet and true,
The Father's smile will rest on you;
And he will be so glad to see
You growing up, his child to be.
A birthday greeting, Peggy dear,
May you be happy all the year.

Then Miss Carol led them in their birthday prayer:

God in heaven protect thee
From all sorrow here,
May a happy birthday
Come with every year. Amen

After the prayer Peggy took seven small flags and stuck them in a box of sand which stood in the center of the table.

With all this attention, the little girl felt very happy and she had a glad smile as her teacher commenced the story of the lesson.

At the close of the session Peggy was allowed to choose her special birthday card, and distribute the usual cards and papers to the other children.

Running into the house she called, "Oh, mother and father, I had the nicest party in Sabbath school!"

And then they heard their little daughter's story of the birthday service.—Herald and Presbyter.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

RING-CROY—On March 2nd, 1927, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Croy in East Warsaw, their daughter Helen was united in marriage to Mr. Howard Ring of Warsaw. A double ring ceremony was witnessed by the immediate relatives. The bride is a faithful member of the Warsaw church. C. C. GRISSO.

IN THE SHADOW

KIMMEL—Sarah Croner Kimmel, wife of J. J. Kimmel of near Berlin, Pa., departed this life March 15, 1927. She is survived by her husband and four children. Had she lived two more days Sister Kimmel would have been 86 years old. She united with the Brethren church early in life and led a sincere, devoted Christian life. Funeral service was conducted by the writer from the late home. W. C. BENSHOFF.

HAUGER—Emma Cober Hauger of Rockwood, Pa., was born May 16, 1863, died March 26, 1927, aged 63 years, 10 months and 10 days. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, two grandchildren, two brothers and three sisters. For a number of years Sister Hauger was a member of the Berlin Brethren church. Living at a distance, attendance could not be regular. But she showed her love for Christ and the church, and her belief in the ordinances of his house by making it a point to attend the communion services. She lived a beautiful Christian life. Through six months of suffering, caused by lingering illness, she was patient and trustful and longed for that rest and peace which is promised in Christ. Funeral was conducted by the writer from the Berlin church, assisted by Rev. D. S. Stephen, pastor of the Berlin Reformed church. W. C. BENSHOFF.

MILLER—On March 21, 1927, Sister Eliza Miller, a faithful member of the Aleppo, Green County, Pa., church, was called to enter into the presence of her Lord. During her long life of eighty-six years and three months, her record was that she had never been attended by a physician. Death followed a brief illness of influenza, during which fatal complications developed.

Sister Miller was a thorough reader of the church paper and was vitally interested in the various projects of the brotherhood. She gave liberally of her meagre livelihood for the advancement of the Lord's work. Human standards are inadequate to measure the good her life has done during sixty-three years of Christian service.

She was the widow of John D. Miller, a Civil War veteran, who died fourteen years ago at the age of eighty-five. Surviving are one of four children, fifteen grandchildren, and twelve great grandchildren. Sister Miller, who, because of her hard labor, extreme frugality, loyalty to her church and the family altar, and her constant expectancy and readiness for the Lord's return, represented a type of piety which is becoming all too rare in these days of shallow living.

As a former pastor, this writer was called to return the two hundred miles to Aleppo to conduct the funeral. May the memory of such lives rest as an inspiration and a benediction upon all who knew her. W. S. CRICK.

HUGHES—Sister Elizabeth Hughes, wife of Isaac Hughes, departed this life February 10th, after a long illness at her home at Aleppo, Pennsylvania. Although she was confined to her bed many months, she never complained, being content to endure whatever might be her lot of suffering.

She was born May 30, 1864, and was therefore in her sixty-fifth year. For twenty-two years she was a member of the Aleppo Brethren church. Surviving are her husband and nine children.

There being no Brethren minister on the Aleppo circuit at this time, and this writer being unable to leave his home because of sickness, the funeral services were in charge of Rev. V. K. Betts, local pastor of the Winebrennarian Circuit. May the Lord lead every sorrowing heart to a closer walk with the Savior, whom Sister Hughes fully trusted when she fell asleep. W. S. CRICK.

MILLER—Brother Calvin Clair Miller departed this life April 5th, at the age of twenty-five years. While Brother Miller accepted Christ in the days of his youth, his preciousness, forgiveness and companionship reached their deeper meaning during many long weeks that he lay on a hospital cot, his life slowly ebbing away due to a virulent type of cancer.

He is survived by his wife, two children and five sisters. Funeral services were conducted from the New Enterprise, Pa., Brethren church of which he was a member, by Rev. D. T. Detwiler, of the Church of the Brethren, and this writer, his pastor. May the Lord help us all to remain steadfast, knowing that Jesus Christ, though God's Son, was made perfect through the things which he suffered. W. S. CRICK.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FROM THE STATISTICIAN

To Representatives of the Brethren Churches Greetings:

It is the time of year for the gathering of statistics for our National Conference report. These reports will be available for the use of the district statisticians also. Will not the secretary, treasurer and pastor of each church make it a matter of immediate business to see that the blanks are fully and properly filled out and returned at the earliest date? The blanks will come to you soon, either through your district statistician or from the National Statistician. We should like to be able to make a full and complete report for the brotherhood at our National Conference this year. We can, if each officer of each church will cooperate with us. It will mean but little effort to you but will mean much to the conferences and the church as a whole. Our denomination is judged by other people upon the basis of these reports. I am sure you wish other people to correctly judge us. You will cooperate in this work, I am sure, and we merely call your attention to the importance of you doing so. Thank you, Brethren.

Your Servant as National Statistician,
GEO. E. CONE, Milledgeville, Ill.

Importance of Youth Evangelism

Much has been said about youth being the important time for conversion, but we have not thought so much about the importance of youth evangelism. We have had in mind mainly the responsibility of youth for yielding to Christ in their tender years, and have not so much concerned ourselves with the church's responsibility for promoting in very definite and special ways the evangelism of youth. It is well enough to stress the individual responsibility of getting started early in life; it is the common evangelistic appeal. But we shall never make the progress that we ought to make in saving the youth until we come more generally to approach the matter from the viewpoint of the church's responsibility.

This should be kept in mind continually in the church's dealing with its young life,—in the Sunday school, in Christian Endeavor, in Week Day Bible Schools and in Vacation Bible Schools, as well as in whatever other agencies or organizations we have devoted to the interests of youth. We are so prone to omit the evangelistic motive and emphasis in our religious programs for children and young people and to confine our evangelistic efforts in their behalf to the brief special revival campaign conducted once a year. Too often our religious activities are mere routine affairs with little planning involved and scarcely an aim in view. Even when we take them seriously, we sometimes aim short of the highest goal, and are satisfied with the child's advancement in knowledge, or his skill in various expressional activities; we fail to teach, and plan and execute with a view to bringing the claims of Christ home to the mind and heart of the youthful individual.

In our Vacation Bible Schools, to which many are now looking forward, the evangelistic motive should not be omitted, for it seems that, though it be a real school and the educational element be prominent, it offers opportunities that are rich with possibilities of evangelizing influences. It is not only important that the seeds of Gospel truth be planted in the mind during the tender years, during the period of childhood, but it is equally important that those seeds shall be nurtured and encouraged to bring forth fruit unto eternal life during the days when decisions are more easily made and characters are more thoroughly determined than at any other period in life.

This point, so often set forth and substantiated with figures, is given fresh emphasis by Dr. A. T. Schofield, evangelist, who has tabulated figures of a thousand conversions, giving the ages at which conversions were experienced:

Out of 1,000 Christians:

695, or nearly $\frac{3}{4}$ were converted under 20.
208, or 1-5 were converted between 20 and 30.
69 were converted between 30 and 40.
19 were converted between 40 and 50.
6 were converted between 50 and 60.
2 were converted between 60 and 70.
1 was converted between 70 and 75.

1000

The following observations made by Dr. Schofield on his figures are of interest:

"This suggests that if conversions are not to take place amongst young people, three-fourths of the present Christians might not be Christians at all.

"As we look more closely at these figures, we shall see how remarkably the spiritual unfolding coincides with material changes. Amongst girls the awakening or arousing to a sense of need of salvation and of entrance into a higher life, in fact the real opening of the mind to spiritual realities, takes place mainly from 10-16, amongst boys 14-16; and this awakening takes place as a rule a year before conversion.

"Conversions amongst girls are as follows:—For every 40 at sixteen, we get 36 at thirteen, and 12 at twenty, and 5 at nine and twenty-four. That is to say, conversions at 16 are more numerous than at 13, and three times as numerous as at 20. They are also eight times as numerous at 16, as at 9 or 24. In other words, the age of most conversions is undoubtedly that of fully-developed puberty.

"Amongst boys, for 40 cases at sixteen we get 13 cases at thirteen or twenty, and 4 cases at nine and twenty-four, and conversions are rare after thirty.

"Here again the dawning manhood is the period for conversions; these being three times as numerous as they are four years sooner or later, and ten times as numerous as eight years sooner or later, and ten times as numerous as eight years sooner or later; while at double the age they hardly occur at all.

"There can be no doubt whatever that the most common time for conversions is 16 or thereabouts; and there can be little doubt that the period chosen for confirmation has some connection with this."

Such figures and the resultant observations should be used not merely, nor primarily, to make an impressive evangelistic appeal to young folks, but to stir the church to a greater realization of the seriousness of its responsibility of doing all in its power to direct young minds and hearts into those ways of thinking and feeling, as well as into fields of knowledge, that will make it easy and natural for the soul to yield to the Holy Spirit's appeal and experience conversion.

Smoke Versus Books

There are many baffling inconsistencies in our highly cherished American civilization, but among the most stubborn to explain is the contrast in emphasis given to things that are worthless and even vicious, and things that are vital and of abiding worth. For example, there are 500,000 tobacco dealers in the United States, doing their utmost to promote indulgence in the nicotine habit, while there are only 2,500 bookstores, from which people may purchase that which will broaden the mind and enrich the ideals. With 200 times as much effort being put forth to supply smoke as to supply brains, is it any wonder that the average mind does such little thinking, and that things that make for ideals are held in such cheap regard?

And that does not tell all the story, by any means. Numerous as these tobacco stores are, yet it is possibly safe to say that there are many more billboards and posters, not to mention the newspaper advertisements, speaking eloquently and impressively to the youthful mind of the virtues of the cigarette and cigar, while such a thing as a display advertisement of a good book is almost unknown, and it is only on rare occasions that newspapers advertise or stress the importance of books and magazines. In every conceivable manner that the millions back of the tobacco interests can devise, the smoking habit is being exploited and made to appear respectable and socially advantageous, while one must do some real searching to discover any but the cheapest novel in the average American town. Vast numbers of people who can read and are capable of being appealed to by good books and other ideal-creating and vision-extending agencies, are absolutely ignorant of the existence of the almost-illimitable book-world, and next to nothing is being done to acquaint them of this land of the unknown and to cultivate in them a taste for its ennobling ideals.

This is a situation for which the world of culture, and especially the Christian portion of it, must in large measure bear the blame, and until there is serious effort to amend it, we cannot expect the public mind to be thoughtful or readily susceptible to idealism. Until we bestir ourselves sufficiently to tear down the vivid portrayals of the false virtues of tobacco, and exalt before the eager and receptive eyes of Young America those things that inspire the heart and enrich the mind and enlarge and purify the vision, we need not expect anything nobler springing out of our young manhood and young womanhood than a nicotinized brain can grasp and appreciate.

The Friends and Peace

We are in receipt of extracts from the report of the Peace Committee of the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends. The committee states that its work during the past year has dealt with no emergency conditions until the crisis sometime ago between the United States and Mexico. "During emergencies," says the committee in its introductory statement, "only emergency measures can be taken. Work for permanent peace must be done during times of peace." It is encouraging to note that this committee finds that notwithstanding the fact that their chief work must be done in times of "comparative tranquility," which "robs it of the excitement that attends emergencies," interest in the efforts that are calculated to influence for "the prevention of war" is growing. They have been pursuing a program which stresses five types of activity: A Speakers' Bureau on International Affairs, supplying speakers for churches, luncheon clubs, schools, forums, business clubs, etc., giving information and stimulus toward international friendship; A News Service, sending out articles to the daily press dealing with matters of human interest and calculated to produce a sympathetic, friendly attitude towards the people and problems of other countries; Work at Fairs, where exhibits are conducted and literature is distributed; Work with Schools, disseminating information, promoting peace contests and in various other ways seeking to build up interest among high schools in international friendship; and Work Against Compulsory Military Training, which consists not merely in offering protests, but in seeking to build up sentiment against compulsory military training in schools and colleges.

Such a program is worthy of imitation by or suggestion to a like committee in any pacifist church, even our own. The Friends have led out and are setting an enviable record for constructive work in behalf of peace. They have challenged the Dunkers and Menonites to greater activity in the interest of peace, resulting in two joint conferences on this problem. Also their leadership in the organized efforts of all Protestant churches on behalf of peace has been recognized, and their influence for peace through the wide contacts formed by the American Friends' Service Committee has unusual possibilities.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Christian Endeavorers should not fail to read page 11 this week. You will find there a message from Brethren Riddle and Locke.

Miss Mary L. Emmert, missionary in French Equatorial Africa, gives us an interesting "pen picture" of a village to which she and Miss Myers made an evangelizing trip.

We have a request for prayer from the First Brethren church of Philadelphia in behalf of "Mrs. Jobson, Sr. (mother of our missionary, Orville) who was taken with a stroke on April 16th and is in a serious condition."

In a personal communication the secretary of the Pittsburgh church, we learn that they have enjoyed an exceptionally fine Easter cantata rendered by their church choir to a capacity audience. A large delegation from the Church of the Brethren also appreciated the program.

Prof. M. P. Puterbaugh, treasurer of the National Sunday School Association, reports four additional White Gifts, which takes the Association over the top of its goal. If other gifts have been taken and have not been reported, the treasurer would appreciate receiving them at an early date.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble, writes an interesting letter in which she informs us of how the Lord has been making clear his leading and providing for the needs of her and her daughter, Marguerite, as they felt the necessity of a change of location. They are now in Paris, and you will note their new address, and they are very conveniently situated.

Since the announcement of the serious illness of Rev. Miles J. Snyder, of Danville, Illinois, we have had inquiries as to his health, and we are glad to say that he has experienced a remarkable recovery and is able to be about the house. He attributes his recovery "mainly to the faithful and earnest prayers of a wide circle of friends."

Brother Fred V. Kinzie, our pastor in charge of the Krypton mission, Kentucky, gives us an interesting report of his visits among other Kentucky missions and what he has found to exist at the various points. . . And then he points out that our success in these mountainous districts depends on a similarly aggressive policy with regard to equipment, which is a challenge to the generosity of the brotherhood, as the mission board can go no faster than the gifts of the church make possible.

Brother M. L. Sands, pastor of the Smithville-Sterling church, of Ohio, tells us that they recently wiped out the debt on their new church building at Smithville, and now they are to have a time of rejoicing on May 1st. Dr. J. Allen Miller is to be the special speaker for the day, and other neighboring ministers are to have part on the afternoon program. Their pre-Easter services were fittingly climaxed on Easter Sunday with five additions to the membership, and it is thought others will soon be ready for baptism.

The mother of Dr. R. R. Teeter passed to her reward on April 19 at the age of ninety-two years. She lived in the old home town of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, and was to the last a faithful member of the Brethren church of that place. She leaves a very large relationship to mourn her departure. Dr. Beachler of Dayton conducted the funeral. We bespeak in behalf of the Evangelist family the sincere sympathy for Brother Teeter and his brothers and sisters in their sorrow.

Brother E. M. Riddle, pastor at Bryan, Ohio, tells of the good things that they have been enjoying and doing for the Kingdom. He reports 676 pastoral calls made last year, and the callers at the parsonage were even more numerous. The special union Easter services were a great success as well as were also Easter specials at the Brethren church. Brother Riddle spent two weeks recently in an evangelistic campaign with Brother J. L. Kimmel at Fort Wayne, Indiana, where he found an aggressive and prosperous mission. We shall hope to learn the definite results soon from the pastor.

Dr. W. S. Bell, secretary of the College Endowment Campaign writes that his canvass at Nappanee, Indiana, was a pleasure because of their ready response and their keen interest in the institution. He finds also, as Dr. Beachler found in the former campaign, that the churches that read the Evangelist are easily canvassed because they are already informed, and the Nappanee church is one of that kind. Also, their pastor, Brother S. M. Whetstone, is alive to the needs of the college, and that always makes a difference. Of course, most, if not all, of our pastors, have by this time become thoroughly converted to or convinced of the need of endowment for Ashland College, but in not every case have they been able to bring their churches to their high appreciation of this need, and largely because they have not put their churches on the Evangelist Honor Roll. Nappanee made a gift of $4,652.31, which is the largest that has come from Indiana to date, and brings the total campaign fund up to $105,984.74.

GENERAL ARTICLES

Teaching Them to Observe all Things

By H. F. Stuckman

One of the things most often lamented among Brethren people these days, is the growing indifference of the membership of the church toward the practice of our particular ordinances. It is common to say these days that the world is going to its doom. We point out certain imaginary tendencies, and some others that are peculiar to the age in which we live as evidences in support of our contention. On a great many of these matters we differ greatly. And on most of them there is honest ground for difference. However, we may view religious conditions about us, one thing must be apparent all over America, and in all branches of Dunkerism, and that is, the general participation in and keenness for the practice of the peculiar doctrines of our church is altogether lacking. From east to west, from north to south this tendency to absent one's self from the Communion service and kindred services is all too apparent.

Neither do I think we should be satisfied, by saying that this condition is inherited along with other laxness of this day and age. Many religious leaders are doing this, and with this explanation they dismiss this once sacred obligation resting upon us.

It must be forever remembered, that the only reason why a small group like our own beloved fraternity should exist, is that it is upholding certain teachings of the New Testament that are not being upheld by any other group of religious people. The moment we surrender these things the source of our strength is gone, and our membership—lay and ministerial—begins to drift and shift. Certainly if there has been a common basis upon which we can firmly stand, it is our watchword, "The Bible, the Whole Bible and nothing but the Bible." The moment we surrender on one single point, our position is endangered. We need to remember that almost every great denomination has one day stood where we now stand on these teachings, and these same groups have surrendered, one after the other their positions on matters of doctrine, until the question is never raised in most of them. Are we to travel the same backward road? If we do, our candlestick will be quickly removed, for on no other pretext could God tolerate our existence.

We must furthermore remind ourselves that the tendency to drift away from the simple teachings of the New Testament, is no excuse for us as a denomination, following in their footsteps. There is but one sure foundation for Christian faith and practice, and that is God's Eternal Word. The moment we waver from that, we lose our strength, and become as other organizations. Mere man is engaging in a dangerous practice, when he attempts to separate things fundamental from things not so. He had much better be on the safe side, than to attempt any such thing. To say that the drift is away from these simple practices, and that the whole tendency of life is toward something different, is a flimsy excuse for permitting this laxness among our laity.

ELDER H. F. STUCKMAN
Pastor, Brethren Church, Goshen, Indiana

I want to go on record as saying that we do not face an impossible task, when we seek to keep ourselves spiritual by practices which our fathers have found uplifting, and which certainly are plain teachings of the New Testament. Through all the ages people have been highly susceptible to leadership. Study the Old Testament with this in mind. "As priest, so people," has always been true to human experience. Since this tendency is general, I hope I will not be accused of having any one in mind, when I say we ministers of the Brethren church are neglecting our God-given duty of "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." And this in my own humble judgment is the answer to the question as to why we are losing our interest in these precious doctrines of the church. Even the younger ones among us can remember the emphasis that was given these doctrines in years gone by. Not once in a year, but more often from every pulpit on every Lord's Day, something was said to lead the mind and heart to treasure these things. I could not countenance the Spirit that often prevailed in long drawn out debates between our ministers, and those of other denominations. But certainly those were the days when great crowds were attracted to the services of the church, and when multitudes were seeking entrance into her fold, because of convictions which she had, which convictions were taught and practiced. It ought not be so, but until we ministers realize that most of the knowledge our laity have concerning doctrinal matter, has been gained from sitting under our teaching, and not by their own study of God's word, we will not understand the measure of our influence over them, and for the Kingdom of God.

There are literally hundreds entering Brethren churches, in these days of strenuous effort in our larger centers, who have not the slightest idea of what our church stands for. If it is not the duty of the ministry to acquaint them with these things, whose is it? We have failed miserably in declaring unto them the whole council of God. This is the greatest reason for their lack of interest in these things. As religious leaders among them, we permit ourselves to be too easily side-tracked from our real duty. If we take inventory of the year just closed, and we shall find that we have preached about a lot of things but very little of the saving doctrines of God.

We must not question God's wisdom in shaping a program by which we are not only saved, for the time being, but are kept saved through the years. Every detail given in this program has its place and value in spiritual upbuilding, and to the extent that we neglect these, we suffer spiritually. Let us believe that God knew best when he gave us these things of life, else we will be convicting him of making many mistakes, and tacking on to us many unnecessary things. That would honey-comb our faith and cause it to become of non-effect to us.

Ours is a day when many are decrying so many denominations, and are asking for such a realignment of faith as will produce less denominations. This is hardly possible, when each denomination holds certain practices necessary to perfect obedience, while others turn away in scorn from them. The only conceivable way by which there can be less of denominationalism is by putting church doctrine in the background, and this is rapidly being done. You cannot find a single authority of note, who denies that the practices of our church were not the practices of the Apostolic church, but in spite of this most all of them have departed from them long ago. If these things were commanded of our Lord, practiced by his followers for centuries, by what argument can we repudiate them? And by lightly casting them aside, are we not setting ourselves up as law-givers, instead of closely adhering to Christ our Lord and Savior? Until a new and better program for spiritual upbuilding is needed none will be forthcoming from our Lord, and when it does come, if ever, from him, all Christendom should strictly follow it. Until that time we ought to be found faithful to the only Authoritative guide we have.

Does it not occur to you as singular that these special doctrines are in themselves anti-types, that find their types in the Old Testament? This means that the uplift that came from a proper attitude in these things, has been found through the ages to have been highly beneficial, so much so that Christ saw fit to carry them over into the Gospel age, while perhaps in a varying form, yet essentially the same. This certainly argues for their place in our spiritual experience.

It is also a singular thing that whilst a priest was necessary to the enjoyment of these practices in the Old Testament, in this day each one of us becomes our own high priest, and yet our indulgence in them is far less a matter of joy and precious privilege to us than it was to Old Testament believers. Which amounts to saying that the easier the task of approaching Holiness and Perfection, the fewer there are who strive toward him.

There is just one other phase that I desire to emphasize briefly, and that is the place of obedience in Christian life.

A large place is given to obedience in the mind of Christ and his followers immediately after his departure. He himself said, "He that shall break the least of these my commandments, and shall teach men so, the same shall be called the least in the Kingdom of heaven." Ministers and religious teachers ought to bear this in mind. Our lightness of suggestion and indifference at practicing our peculiar ordinances is going to be highly embarrassing to some of us leaders by and by. James adds his opinion by saying, "He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." How shall we escape this teaching, when we turn away from commands we have treasured in our hearts for many a day, and know to be so fundamentally scriptural in their source? Saint Paul has a bit to say, "If we sin wilfully, after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth therefore no more sacrifice for sin." In writing to the Corinthians he said, "I praise you that you have held fast the traditions." Unless we gather ourselves together on this matter, we will be so far removed from these same traditions, of which Paul speaks, and judgment instead of commendation will be ours.

One might spend much time arguing for the closer observance of our peculiar ordinances, because of the blessings that accrue to Christian living, but space forbids at this time. Suffice it to say, our experience has generally been what I heard Brother Benjamin Goughnour say was his experience after many years of close observance of our doctrines. He said, "For fifty years I have carefully and prayerfully followed our Lord's teaching about the Communion service, and never have I approached his tables, that he did not pour out upon me a rich blessing of grace and mercy. That, I repeat, it has been our experience with these ordinances. Furthermore, when the church was closely adhering to them, she was extremely prosperous in all things, and as she departed gradually from them, her power with God waned.

As I look back over our past, I am firmly of the opinion that instead of being one of the smaller and less influential denominations, if we had more literally been obedient to God's word, we could have had a united Dunkerism, with a denomination second in size and influence to none. Instead of doing that, we have neglected to observe whatsoever things he has commanded us, and by so doing, have correspondingly become prodigal to God and have missed his divine blessings. Only one thing will restore us to full confidence with him, and that is a whole-hearted returning to do all the things which he has commanded us to do.

Let us as ministers begin to lead the great group of folks we shepherd back into a sweet fellowship of obedience to these things.

Jesus' View of His Death as Found in the Synoptic Gospels

By Floyd Taber

It is commonly asserted today in some circles that Paul is the originator of the doctrine of Substitutionary Atonement, and that Jesus knew nothing of it. It is contended that we should lay aside all the doctrines about Jesus formulated by Paul and the Church Councils, and get back to the teachings of Jesus. What we want is Jesus himself, and not any dogmas concerning him.

For the purposes of this article, we will accept this position, and strive to find out just what Jesus thought about the nature of his death. In doing this, we will restrict ourselves to the Synoptic Gospels, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, which are acknowledged by all critical scholars to be the oldest and most authenticated records of the life and teachings of Jesus.

Giovanni Papini, in his recently popular "Life of Christ", voices a widespread belief when he says that the incentive which spurred Jesus to make his last journey to Jerusalem was two-fold: first, the hope that the Jews might accept him; and, second, the fear that if he did not go, even in the face of possible death, his teachings would be forgotten. But we believe that such a view is contradicted by every mention Jesus ever made of this trip to Jerusalem and its outcome.

Just after Peter's great confession and Jesus' transfiguration Jesus told his disciples "that he must go to Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and the third day be raised up" (Matt. 16:21. Cf. Mark 8:31 and Luke 9:22). This statement indicates plainly that he was going to Jerusalem, not in the face of possible death, but in the face of certain death. Moreover, it shows conclusively that he saw some great underlying necessity for his death. The nature of this necessity will be considered later.

When Jesus was transfigured, he talked with Moses and Elijah concerning his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem (Luke 9:30-31). Accomplish is a strange word to use concerning the ordinary death of a man. But Jesus saw that there was a very real sense in which his death was an accomplishment, and thus different than the death of any ordinary man.

When Jesus was in the Garden of Gethsemane, his agony was of greater intensity than it is possible to conceive. If this was caused merely by his fear of physical death, then he was the most ignoble of cowards. He did not have the fortitude of any one of the thousands of martyrs who have died for him in the last 2000 years.

When Jesus was hanging on the cross, he cried, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" Thousands of Christian martyrs have testified that God was very near to them in the hour of death. If Jesus was merely a martyr, he did not have the hogliness of his poorest follower, because God forsook him.

We are forced to recognize that there is something unusual in the death of Christ, something different than can be found in the death of any mere martyr, something which caused the awful agony of Gethsemane and made God forsake him on the cross. Just wherein does that difference lie? We might answer that question directly by turning to II Corinthians 5:21. But we prefer to follow the policy of using only the statements of Jesus recorded in the Synoptics to solve our problem.

Jesus said, "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many" (Mark 10:45; Matt. 20:28). The last three words are translated from the Greek Lutron anti pollon. Lutron means a price paid for redeeming or buying back a slave to set him free. Anti means instead of, in place of, and is used both of price and of official substitution.

"This is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many (Peri Pollon) unto remission (aphesin) of sins" (Matt. 26:28). In recounting the same discourse, Mark and Luke use huper instead of Peri. Peri means on account of, for the benefit of. Huper has the meaning of both anti and peri; for Irenaeus uses it interchangeably with anti, and the New Testament interchanges it with peri."

The use of all three of these prepositions by Jesus shows that he was trying to express in every way possible with the utmost plainness the idea that his death was on behalf of and for the benefit of his disciples, as well as a ransom price paid in exchange for them. His statements as found in these verses speak just as definitely and positively of a substitutionary atonement as any like number of statements made by the Apostle Paul.

Conclusion: Although Paul was the man who expanded and expounded to its fullest extent the doctrine of Salvation by Grace through the substitutionary death of Jesus, yet he cannot be credited with having originated it. The doctrine of the payment of the penalty for sins by the death of a substitute had its inception in the sacrificial system of the Old Testament, was fully accepted and definitely applied to his own death by the Lord Jesus Christ, and was finally set forth in complete form by the Apostle Paul.

The Liquor Problem a World Problem

By Dr. F. Scott McBride

Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America and a member of the General Council of the World League against Alcoholism

The liquor problem is a world as well as a national problem. The fight against alcoholism is a world-wide fight. Prohibition is an international issue. Its consideration now interests all nations and its final success or failure will effect every nation.

Public opinion has always been one of the strongest factors in the long contest against intoxicating liquors. Public opinion was the chief force among the influences that made America dry. Public sentiment on prohibition among the people of all nations will finally decide the action of all the world on the problem of alcoholism.

The influence of America is by far the strongest influence effecting prohibition policies in other countries. The adoption or rejection of prohibition by other nations will depend on what other nations think of prohibition in the United States.

Not the success of prohibition—not the failure of prohibition, but public opinion relative to the success or failure of the dry law in America will determine the prohibition policies of other nations throughout the world.

For this reason the power and influence of the liquor forces of all the world is being directed against the 18th Amendment to our Constitution. A determined, united, liberally financed effort is being made by the wets of the world to destroy or discredit prohibition in this country. If it can not be destroyed it must at least be discredited to save the enormously profitable liquor industry of other countries.

Accordingly the world wets are directing a gigantic campaign of misleading propaganda against American prohibition. And therefore drys in America must do their utmost to bring the truth about the dry laws of this country to the people of other countries.

The Congress of the World League Against Alcoholism to be held at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 17-25, offers an opportunity to inform and impress the world with the facts about America's prohibition progress. Delegates from other countries return to their own with reports of their impressions gained at this gathering of alcohol's enemies.

The information brought by foreign visitors about drink conditions in their own lands will be intensely interesting. But the information they take back home from America will be of greatest importance. Personal testimony of those who have visited us is the most powerful influence possible to offset wet propaganda being circulated in foreign lands.

America, the first big nation to enact prohibition, becomes an important factor in the international situation relative to intoxicating liquors. Because of this the Anti-Saloon League of America is glad to be one of the leading constituents of the World League Against Alcoholism. The cooperation the Anti-Saloon League can give other countries through the World League Against Alcoholism we believe is undoubtedly the greatest contribution toward the welfare of the world that we can make.

World prohibition holds great possibilities for human welfare. The destruction of the liquor traffic of the world would remove much misery and gain great good for the people of the world. Even world peace will be greatly contributed towards by world prohibition. World prohibition would be the "preparation of the gospel of peace."

America's well known missionary spirit impels her church people to support any movement for the good of their neighbors in other lands. But another consideration compels Americans to consider the liquor problem in other countries, and that is self-preservation.

Prohibition can never be a complete success in America while the liquor traffic flourishes in other countries. The existence of the powerful liquor trade in other lands is a constant menace to the success of prohibition here. Therefore, the elimination of the drink traffic in other countries will make observance more general and enforcement more successful in America.

Therefore in the interest of prohibition in America as well as freedom from alcoholism throughout the world, the Anti-Saloon League calls upon its friends and constituents to attend and assist in making successful the Congress of the World League Against Alcoholism at Winona Lake.

It will be an occasion of extraordinary interest with world-wide experts presenting addresses on the most conspicuous issue before the world. It will be an occasion bound to profoundly impress the thought of the world on the world's most pressing problem.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

New Lebanon for Christ and the Church

By Lester V. King

(Preached at New Lebanon, at the opening of the pastor's second year. Special invitation was extended to citizens of the community, resulting in a large attendance.)

TEXT: "Open thy doors, O Lebanon."—Zachariah 11:1.

(Concluded from last week)

Now in view of the opportunities that are ours what is to be our program for the year ahead? How can we take New Lebanon for Christ and the church?

1. In the first place, our church must be a LIBERAL church. I am placing this first, not because it is the most important, but because we need your gifts if we are to carry out a program worth while. It had been said and well said that if you have a man's pocket-book you have the man. Too often men of the world have been more liberal than men of the church. Too often the lodge has shown a more generous spirit than the church. Brethren, this should not be. The early church was a generous church. The early church "blossomed" with their gifts. I am certain we cannot win New Lebanon for Christ and the church without this liberal spirit. My first goal is as follows:

Goal 1. "That we have here at New Lebanon by the end of the year 1927, 100 or more individuals who will honor Jehovah with their substance, the Tithe."

2. Our church too must be a SYMPATHETIC CHURCH. This means that we be at "Peace one with another." Where there is sympathy there is harmony. Where there is harmony there will be cooperation. We must work together. We dare not stand off as if we suspected each other. We need, as Christian people, sympathy for all classes, under all conditions. Did you ever enter a church where the members were cold and formal? Did you feel at home? What we need at New Lebanon, as elsewhere, is "neighborliness." As one author has said, "We need to be together religiously." If we cannot agree in doctrine let us agree in worship.

Goal 2. "That we cultivate here at New Lebanon that spirit of neighborliness in order that the stranger and all may feel at home.

But sympathy means more than this. It means that we take an interest in the souls of men who are out of communion with God. It means that we have a real passion for the lost. Our third goal reads:

Goal 3. "That we strive through the help of the Holy Spirit to win at least fifty souls to Jesus Christ during the year."

This does not mean that we must stop at fifty. Let us each win ONE and we shall do much better. How many here this morning will make themselves responsible for one life?

3. Again our church needs to be a BROAD church and a NARROW church. Some churches are so broad that they allow any one to become a member. Some churches are so narrow that they can worship God only in a church of their own denomination. But our church must be broad, yes, broad in our humanity and in our mission. Broad enough that we shall recognize a brother in every man that breathes. Broad in that we shall be courteous, longsuffering and patient with all men, even as Christ. Narrow, yes, narrow enough that we shall have but ONE MASTER, even Christ, and ONE BOOK even the Word. Narrow enough that we shall not tolerate worldliness or sin in the church. Narrow enough that we shall not take into our membership unregenerate men, regardless of their standing in the community.

Yes, but broad enough that we shall allow all Christian men and women, regardless of denomination, to worship with us. In other words, to give all Christians a church home. This leads me to the fourth goal:

Goal 4. "That we extend to all Christian believers who love their Lord, regardless of denomination, a Church home."

Now, do not misunderstand me here. I do not mean that we shall take them in as members of the church, if they are not willing to abide by our beliefs of church entrance. But I do mean that we shall allow them to worship with us in the blessings of Christian fellowship. In other words it means that we treat them as Christians, and not as of the world.

4. If we are to win New Lebanon for Christ and the church, our church must be a PROGRESSIVE church. Let us as Brethren be true to our name. Too often others of our religious kindred have been more progressive than we. Some churches never get out of the old rut. They always follow the same old methods. They are afraid to try something new, afraid of risk. Quoting from another, "We need the nerve and nack, the backbone and the boldness to push out into new ideals for our Lord." To be progresisve for us here at New Lebanon will mean among other things that we lay out a program for the children of our parish that will make of them strong leaders for our future church. We must lay more stress on youth. If I have any criticism to offer it is that we have been ministering largely to adults and have forgotten our children. Do you want proof of this statement? Why do we keep the main auditorium and class rooms for adults and send the children down to a poorly equipped and dingy basement?

The greatest task of the church today is the Christian education of her youth. The easiest and the most economic way is to save the loss and then the lost. It seems to me that we have reached the place where in the words of another "We must either teach them the principles of the Gospel NOW, or later to teach our boys to become soldiers, and our girls to become Red Cross nurses. Either to give our money to teach religion NOW or hoard it to spend later to train soldiers. Either the blood of Jesus Christ NOW or the blood of our sons on the battle field later." Which do WE want?

Yes, the church must rebuild her program around the youth. Let us claim life at its beginning instead of reclaiming it at its end. Let us choose between hunting the lost sheep or carrying of the precious lambs. If the lambs are properly cared for in this generation there will be no lost sheep in the coming generation. O, Brethren, we need to work with the tender blades. If we let them slip now, we lose a generation for the future church. This leads me to the fifth and sixth goals.

Goal 5. "That a Daily Vacation school be sponsored by the churches represented by our school district this summer. If we cannot secure this cooperation, that we have a distinctive Brethren Vacation Bible school here."

Goal 6. "That we create sentiment and arouse interest in a building project that will care for the needs of the children in our parish for years to come."

5. Lastly, we need here at New Lebanon a spiritual church. The foregoing goals will help here greatly. There are two other goals that are of vital importance:

Goal 7. "That we have either the Family Altar established, or private devotions engaged in at least twenty-five percent of our homes by the end of the year 1927."

Goal 8. "That we put forth every effort possible to have a larger percent of the church members regular attendants at the Communion service.

We lack here and here is where we get close to God. It is here where we renew our covnant with God. Oh, Brethren, we all need this service.

Now I have said nothing about removing stumbling blocks, about cutting down the cedars, about burning out the dross. But Brethren, this will not be necessary if we can carry out the above program. But realizing that it may take years to do this I shall say a word here.

No doubt there are stumbling blocks in our village. It would be an unusual village if there were not. Now may I appeal to the pride of every loyal citizen? No loyal citizen will run a business that would hinder the development of little children or young boys and girls. "Better were a millstone tied about his neck", said Jesus. If there were a pool room, the dance hall, the card table, etc., hindered then he who runs such a place or he who engages in such a play, cannot be a loyal citizen, let alone a true Christian.

It shall be my purpose to seek to create sentiment among Christian people in the right direction. This can be done by filling men with the Holy Spirit. After all the best way to rid our village of stumbling blocks is to starve them out. And it can be done. Do you want to know how. Listen: if you Christian people stay away from such places, it will not be long until they will close of their own accord. You see now why it is so necessary that we stand united. This leads me to the ninth and last goal.

Goal 9. "That we stand united in creating right sentiment against any evils that might exist and when the opportune moment comes that we hit hard."

I want you to see the bigness of our job, our tremendous task, not to discourage you but to call you to your duty.

DAILY READINGS AND COMMENT

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

MONDAY

THE STORY OF CREATION—Gen. 1:1-3, 26-31. "In the beginning God, said the sacred writer, as he was trying to account for the creation of the universe. That was as far back as he could think, and the only explanation he could give. That is the best any one can do. We cannot think of the beginning of things without thinking of God, and there is no accounting for things except in God.

TUESDAY

CHRIST IN CREATION—John 1:1-10. "In the beginning was the Word," declared the Apostle John, in his philosophical defense of Jesus as the incarnate God. That Word was God the Father's creative agency, for we are told that "All things were made by him." That fact gives us all the greater confidence when he comes to us and offers to make a new creation of all last sons of men.

WEDNESDAY

NATURE'S ACKNOWLEDGMENT — Psa. 19:1-6. Nature bears witness to the inexhaustible power and wisdom of the Creator; his glory is flashed across the sky and his praises are sung by myriads of worlds. Happy are they who have ears to hear these voices.

THURSDAY

THE RENEWED EARTH—Rev. 21:1-8. He who was from the beginning and without whom was not anything made that was made, can we doubt his power in the moral world? And do we marvel at the prophecy that ultimately his cause shall win and that this wicked world order shall be supplanted by new earth in which dwelleth righteousness?

FRIDAY

NEW CREATURE IN CHRIST—Eph. 4:17-24. No greater testimony can be found to the inexhaustible power of the Lord Jesus than the transformations wrought in the lives of men. Wherever there is a new creature, there must be a creator; Jesus Christ is that mighty Creator; through him we are renewed in righteousness and true holiness.

SATURDAY

NEW SOCIAL ORDER—Matt. 5:38-48. If the Spirit of God renews the hearts of men, it will cause them to treat one another according to new and higher standards. There is no genuine renewal of soul that does not in consequence of that renewal tend to renew the social order.

SUNDAY

PRaise TO THE CREATOR—Psa. 33:1-9. He who has experienced the new creatureship, the result of God's recreative grace, cannot but proclaim with the Psalmist, "Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous; for praise is comely for the upright." Praise is both natural and necessary to the renewed heart.—G. S. B.

colors. I can do this because you are MEN, real men and women. Yes, we have giants on the other side, but we have the Lord Jesus Christ on our side. Let us go up and conquer the land.

OUR DEVOTIONAL

Jesus the Friend of All

By Mrs. H. W. Koontz

OUR SCRIPTURE

But Jesus called unto them, saying, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for to such belongeth the kingdom of God (Luke 18:16).

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly of heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls (Matthew 11:28, 29).

And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alphaeus sitting at the place of toll, and he saith unto him, follow me (Mark 2:14).

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him and with his stripes we are healed (Isaiah 53:5).

Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us: that the world may believe that thou didst send me (John 17:20, 21).

OUR MEDITATION

Some one has said, "A friend is one who knows all about you and loves you all the same." This quotation could hardly be true of our earthly friends, for we earnestly try to hide from those we esteem our unworthy actions and defects of character. But there is one Friend who does know every incident, however small, every thought and emotion of our hearts, and yet loves us with a love so true and tender, so understanding and sacrificing that it effectually covers our littleness and unworthiness. That friend is Christ, our blessed Redeemer and King.

Who can measure the love of Christ? It is beyond human comprehension how he could lay aside his glory to become a man, "yet without sin", to endure the footsore travels along dusty roads, the weariness of a long day of service, of healing, of preaching, of teaching, of answering calculating questions of those who sought a flaw in his teaching! And wonder grows as one recalls how he bore with royal dignity, yet humility, the disgraceful blows and scornful words of his captors before the final sacrifice, and how patiently and uncomplainingly he endured the mental shame and physical agony of death on the heartless solitary cross. Christ is the one who has given to the word "friend" its beauty, its significance, and its value.

Jesus Christ is the friend of little children. How trustingly they came to him during his sojourn here; how gentle was his touch as he blessed them, and how marvelous his loving words! No doubt, in after years those same children still told the story of their great experience and of the glowing influence those few moments gave to all the succeeding years. Still, though he has gone to his heavenly home, children turn to his friendship and love with the same simplicity and hearty, open faith. They know his call is that of the truest, surest, most reliable friend there is.

Jesus is the Friend of the poor and needy. When on earth he visited their homes, he conversed with them on all the subjects that interested them. He healed their sick, he brought peace to their hearts. He healed their them his special followers. Their ignorance of intellectual learning did not bar them from association with him. Today he is ready and willing to pour out upon them the same wealth of love. His gifts to them of patience, of contentment, of unselfishness, of material aid are ready for the asking. And more than that, he is ready to prepare a place in heaven for them if they will only do their part. He is their Friend.

He is the Friend of those who mourn the loss of loved ones. He who wept at the tomb of Lazarus is not less mindful of the sorrows of his other children. His healing touch is ready as soon as they turn their faces toward him. He is ready to shield them and to teach them how to bravely accept the burden and bear it with a song. His love has purchased for them the certainty of a glad meeting some day, and his wisdom can show them how to await that day with cheerfulness and confidence.

The friendship of Jesus extends to the sinner. His compassion for man in his lost condition was so great that he was willing to die a ransom for their sins. He pities the misery and degradation of the heart that is bound by selfishness and evil. He has provided a way by which the sinner may be cleansed from his iniquities. That way, the sinner's only escape, is his blood, shed on Calvary. Could friend do more than this? He died a cruel death for us, he purchased release from sin, a victorious earthly walk in peace and joy, and entrance into eternal life.

Christ is the Christian's best Friend. He realizes from what depths of sin he has been raised through the love of Jesus. He holds numberless prayerful conversations with his Friend. Jesus always makes the right decision for him in times of uncertainty; he always comforts in disappointment and sorrow; he always bestows his gracious presence. If, perchance, the Christian strays away, he is willing to forgive the truly penitent and to forget forever the misdeed. Because the Christian belongs to Jesus he need have no fear of anything that life may bring him. Such is his security because of his Best Friend.

Yet, while we extol the wonders of Christ as our Friend, we must not forget that it takes more than one to make a friendship. Christ has done all for us; how are we returning gratitude to him? We owe him love and devotion; we owe him time and money; we owe him our share in extending his kingdom, in carrying the message of love to those who do not know it yet. In the words of our Scripture—"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, ... for my yoke is easy, and my burden light."

OUR PRAYER

Our gracious Heavenly Father, our hearts are bowed before thee in contemplation of thy great gift, Jesus Christ. We thank thee for his life on earth, for his death and resurrection, for the priceless gift he gave mankind. Make us feel the necessity of telling the story of his friendship toward men so deeply and urgently that we must without delay set about bringing souls to his throne. Take from our hearts all thought of self; show us how to live entirely for thee. May our footsteps never falter from the path thou hast shown us, nor our hands drop the task thou hast given them to do and we will give thee all the praise. In the name of him who died for us, we pray. Amen.

LESSON LIGHTS

Lesson Poem

"I prayed for power. The answer came Not in the whirlwind's rush and flame. But in a sorrow, vast, profound, That bent and bowed me to the ground. And lo, I found, when awed and dumb, That power from on high had come. That sorrow was my Pentecost, The baptism of the Holy Ghost."

The Day of Pentecost

The Day of Pentecost was the fiftieth day after the Passover. It was one of the three great festivals of the Jews. This event took place then (1) because the disciples were prepared. (2) Great multitudes from all parts of the world came to Jerusalem at this time, and could carry back the gospel. (3) It was the harvest feast, a symbol of the spiritual harvest. (4) It commemorated the giving of the law from Sinai. The new covenant joined on the old.

The Holy Spirit

We know that an unseen power exists by what it does. The sound, the flame, the speaking with tongues, were proofs of the unseen power of the Spirit. The Apostles could not know and realize the presence of the Holy Spirit without some manifestations that made it known to the senses. No one ever saw the greatest forces in the world. No one ever saw electricity, or gravitation, or chemical forces. We know them only by what they do. We know the Holy Spirit by what he did and is still doing, especially in his transformation of people.

Peter's Sermon

The reasoning of Peter was conclusive and unanswerable. (1) What had taken place was exactly foretold by their prophets. (2) God indorsed and approved this Jesus "by miracles and wonders and signs." (3) It was in God's plan of salvation that the Messiah should be a suffering Savior to atone for their sins. (4) God reversed their wicked work by raising them from the dead, according to their Scriptures. (5) Another proof that he was living was the gift of the Holy Spirit.—Illustrated Quarterly.

The Way Made Plain

In the verse that is set apart as the Golden Text of our lesson Peter makes plain the divine requirements of salvation and empowerment for service. His hearers had been pricked in their hearts by his straightforward preaching of Jesus as Savior and Lord. Their guilty hearts became uneasy as he played sin and presented the divine character of the One Whom they had rejected and crucified. "What must we do?" they cried. And Peter told them plainly what they must do. And we have in his reply one of the key verses to the Gospel, a verse that is familiar to every Brethren communicant—minister or layman—who is able to give a reason for the faith that is in him Faith in Jesus as the Messiah and Savior—the first essential to salvation—having been built up in their minds and hearts by his vigorous preaching, he now gives expression to an undying, bold un-

The Storm on Galilee

*Out upon the stormy sea,
Tossed with waves, the high wind blowing,
Weary men of Galilee,
Desperately toiling, rowing,
Pulling hard against the wind,
Dreading shipwreck and disaster,
Seething waves, before, behind,
Where, oh where, was their dear Master?*

*When their hearts were faint with fear,
Satan all his hosts arraying,
Lo! the Master draweth near,
He was on the mountain praying.
And his voice comes strong and clear,
Not to chide them, or upbraid,
Saying, friends, "Be of good cheer,
It is I, be not afraid."*

*Ofttimes we too have to fight
Wind and water, storm and sea,
In the fourth watch of the night
Jesus comes to you and me.
When your boat is far from land,
And the storm is raging sore,
Have you never felt the hand
Of the Master on the oar?*

*Ever heard his sweet voice calling?
To the wind and wave—"Be still."
Never felt the blessing falling
Like the dew on Hermon's Hill.
Darkness He will turn to light,
Quell the wind and calm the sea,
Now, as when that stormy night
Jesus walked on Galilee.—M. G.*

equivocating declarations as to the necessity of repentance and baptism the entrance into the kingdom. Repentance and baptism were the characteristic notes of the preaching of both John the Baptist and Jesus. And our Lord's disciples caught up the refrain and went forth re-echoing its essential features. The Brethren church is the inheritor of that message. Repentance and baptism for the remission of sin, followed by the complying with the requirements for the gift of the Holy Spirit have ever been the dominant notes of Brethren evangelistic preaching. And it is a message that is so solidly grounded in Biblical requirement and example that it should never be compromised or deserted.

The Two-Fold Blessing

As a result of complying with the requirements set forth by Peter, two blessings of unmeasured value flow into the life.

1. There is the forgiveness of sins. No one can know the Lord Jesus until he has known him as Savior. That is what he came to be to every individual life. He would take away our sins; he would redeem us from the bondage of evil in which we are held; he would cancel the debt and make us free; he would restore us to our former birthright and make us members of the Father's household.

2. There is also the gift of the Holy Spirit, or the improvement for victorious living and efficiency of service. Salvation is only the process of God's grace. He who stops with that will miss the thing that will bring the deepest joy, the most satisfying strength and the most abundant fruitfulness. It is the blessing that produces "the fruits of the spirit" as set forth in Galatians 5:22, 23.

The Tongues and Fire

"The various tongues in which the apostles preached may be taken as symbolizing the different ways in which religion appeals to different men." There are dialects of thought as well as speech—natural differences of temperament and character to which the gospel adapts itself." A wise teacher and preacher will take account of these differences in his hearers and adapt himself to all."

"Any form of fire would have suggested the presence of God, but its particular form taught an additional truth. Well has William Arthur said, 'Christianity was to be a tongue of fire.' The tongue, when consecrated to God, is the mightiest and most glorious instrument for good which the world has ever known."—Selected.

A Do-It-Twice Attendance Plan

The personnel of some Sunday school classes makes it difficult regularly to bring the attendance up to the enrollment, yet this is a goal for which every class is constantly planning and striving.

The do-it-twice plan is a simple and effective method of attaining this goal. It has the competitive spirit of the contest without the tedious numerous details. Therefore, it works much better than a contest.

The plan is to advertise that, when the class attains a certain attendance goal two Sundays in succession, it will celebrate. The class votes what the goal shall be. It may be every member present for two Sundays in succession (or 90 per cent present, or whatever other standard seems advisable to the class), the only condition being that whatever goal is chosen it must be attained two Sundays in succession. The slogan is "Do it twice."—Exchange.

ENDEAVORERS---

International Christian Endeavor Convention

Special Announcement

You will want a place to stay while in the city of Cleveland, July 2 to 7. Note this plan of entertainment.

Hotels, homes, auto-camp, or relatives are available. The hotel type of entertainment will surely be very satisfactory, then too, it will save so much traveling on street cars. The auto-camp, short distance from Auditorium may appeal to some.

There are five types of rooms in the Winton Hotel and all for use by the OHIO C. E. Union. The rates will vary from $2.00 to $3.50 per day for each person. Where three or as many as eight stay in one room the cost is less.

Those desiring HOME entertainment may advise the Cleveland committee and secure such with lodging and breakfast for $1.50.

Board? Well, bring your own answer to the eats, by your appetite and pocket-book.

All you Endeavorers who come from other states should get in touch with your county or state officials and secure information as to your hotel or plan for entertainment.

There will be some time in the convention, when all Brethren Endeavorers can be together. YOU BE THERE.

Any questions, write to the undersigned. Remember date, July 2-7.

Another bulletin coming.

REV. E. M. RIDDLE, Bryan, Ohio.

P. S.—Any Brethren Endeavorers passing to or from Convention via Bryan, O., and want a free place to park over night (besides the jail) stop and inquire for Brethren folks. You are welcome. E. M. R.

Why Young Men and Women Should go to College

By John F. Locke

"Society must collect from the individual. Every individual is at the beginning a charge and a drain upon society. He uses up materials from the store society has accumulated. Whether he happens to belong to a well-to-do family or whether he has to be supported in a public institution does not matter—his support must come from the general social store. He at first must of necessity receive without giving.

This contribution is not meant as an out-and-out gift, but as a loan by society. The individual must pay back, not only the original principal, but this with interest, else he has not done his share, nor enabled society to make progress."* Furthermore the individual seeks to adjust himself to every attractive and necessary situation in life.

History has never recorded a time when it did not require a directed effort for man to live for the greatest good to himself and to society. Living conditions are growing more complex all the time and it is steadily becoming harder for the individual to make the right choices.

We do not question fostering the physical life. And if we question the guidance of the intellectual development it is not whether it should be or should not be, but what is the best method of doing it?

As infants we quickly adjust ourselves to our environment, which is carefully guarded that it be safe for us to live in. In youth we seek an adjustment to the world of affairs among men and the rest of the universe. In fact from the time that we establish the slightest control of our hands until they are forever folded, life is a process of adjustments.

Adjusting this article more specifically to the topic, What is the best method of adjustment for the youth who has approached the college age? Let us contrast "college" with all other forms of adjustment.

Reasons why it is the best plan of adjustment.

Write a paragraph on each of these:

1. It is a continuation of the educational plan to which we are already accustomed.
2. It offers a selected curriculum which aims at the broadest type of development.
3. It offers a refined plan of development.
4. It offers an efficient plan of development.

And even if you do not agree with the above, some of you will be willing to say that to attend college is the cleanest and least dangerous, and most enjoyable and inspiring way that the individual can spend some of those years which time requires to mature the physical product.

The most important adjustment of all is the right religious adjustment—getting the

JUNIOR ENDEAVOR

By Virginia Haun

(Topic for May 8)

Making Our Mothers Glad Ephesians 6:1-4

Jane was a very small Christian Endeavorer who had only been in the society a few weeks. She liked to go to C. E. and hear stories and sing songs and memorize Bible verses. There were quite a few children in the society to which Jane belonged. Jane still felt a little bit strange in this group of children on the particular evening that we are going to tell about.

The subject of the evening was "Being Kind" and it seemed that every Junior Endeavorer had some speech to make. Finally the leader said, "Almost every Junior has made a speech. Now I am going to ask some questions and we will see if we can not have speeches by the rest of you." Jane felt so scared. She said to herself, "I know that they will not ask anything that I can answer and if everyone but me says something, I won't feel happy."

The first question was, "How can we be kind to animals?" Jane thought a little but somehow there did not seem to be anything that she could say on that. Soon someone else said something and the question was answered.

Jane listened to the second question and the third question but somehow they all seemed too hard. She was beginning to think that she was not going to get a chance to say anything. Then the fourth question was asked, "How can we be kind to our mothers?"

Now Jane's mother and Jane were wonderfully good friends, so when that question was asked, Jane thought a minute, then she said, "I can tell you some of the ways that I try to be kind to my mother."

Everyone turned to see what Jane would say. "Mother has been sick," said Jane, "so maybe I have more chances to be kind to her than some of you do for your mothers. When mother wants to sleep I get a book and look at it, and no matter how many ideas come to my mind about other things I want to do, I stay quiet so that mother can rest. I know that that is being kind to her for the doctor told me it was."

The leader smiled at little Jane and the superintendent said, "I think that that was a very nice speech for your first C. E. speech, Jane. In fact that was such a nice speech that I intend to talk a little about it myself. Being quiet when our tired mothers want to sleep is a very good way to be kind to them. Not all of your mothers are sick like Jane's, indeed it would be terrible if many mothers had to be sick for a long time, but all of your mothers get tired. When they are tired they need to sleep, and if you children will be thoughtful like Jane and keep very, very quiet, just for your mothers to sleep a little while, that will be one way of making them happy. Now maybe you can think of some other ways of being kind to mothers."

Nearly everyone wanted to say something, and lots of good speeches were made. Some said "We can make our mothers happy by loving them." Some said, "We can do the dishes or carry in wood." Others thought the very best way of making others happy was to be always very obedient.

That night when Jane had a chance to talk to her mother, she told her about her speech at J. C. E. Jane's mother was very much pleased and said to Jane, "I can tell my little daughter a way of making me happy that was not mentioned. It will make me very happy if you will always try to do your part at J. C. E. I am proud and happy because my little daughter has made her first speech, and I want her to keep on making them."

Dr. Gribble's Letter

New Address, 42 Rue Pierre Nicole, Paris, V. France.
 April 3, 1927.

Dear Evangelist Readers:

It has been some time since I have written you. The very fact that there has been so much to write has been in itself a hindrance to writing you.

On March 14th, after much prayer and waiting upon God, Marguerite and I left Montpellier to continue our work in Paris. We were anxious to be assured that it was truly God's will for us. In many wonderful ways he led, hindered, restrained, provided, opened doors, etc., until at last we were certain that whatever there might be here of difficulty or suffering, we could not doubt but what Paris was God's will for us at this time. And so we came. We went first to the Hotel Chevreuse, a small hotel on a quiet street, which had been recommended to us by more than one person.

We were there only two days before we were able to find a room which had two great advantages—on the second floor, (or first as they call it in France), and also has a board floor, also a great advantage—for often we must climb to the third and fourth stories, or even fifth, and then content ourselves with a floor of stone or tile—which keeps one in a state of perpetual chill. So we moved in at once and brought out our trunks, which, pending a permanent settlement, we had left at the station.

A few days later the landlady informed us that she would have a little apartment, that is, bedroom with kitchen, vacant in a few days. So we are to move in Thursday of this week—a very satisfactory arrangement indeed, and one which others had told us would be almost impossible to make, except at exorbitant rates. And this is right in Paris, within a block of the school which Marguerite attends, and only twenty minutes' walk, or a short bus ride from the Alliance Francaise which I am attending. We take it as a special provision from our Father, as while Marguerite could have gone to school in Nogent, I would not have been able to take the long ride daily back and forth as our younger missionaries have done. Meanwhile our new school arrangements have been completed, and we are endeavoring to glorify our Father by continuing our studies in French. We ask an interest continued and increasing in your prayers.

We are both much happier in Paris than we were in Montpellier, and feel assured that the climate, although rather rainy now, will be much better for our health than the difficult and trying heat of the south would have been in summer. We are looking forward to the coming of Brother Taber and of any others whom the Board may send, and hope to have the privilege of seeing them even before our departure, well established in their work in France.

No recent news have been received from the field, but the latest word from each station was favorable.

Mr. Hathaway's latest letter, written in January, had a note of praise for the recently received permission to build at Bos-sangoa. He was just leaving to assist Brother Sheldon.

Meanwhile Mrs. Sheldon wrote happily of the joy they were having even in their meager waiting quarters, first the government rest house, and next the house built for them in a village by a native chief.

And so with hearts full of praise we continue to press on; you in America, our co-workers in Africa, and ourselves in France, all alike dependent on him whose last and great Commission we jointly obey, all alike looking for his glorious coming.

(A sketch of a recent evangelizing trip and typical of village life in Africa).

By Mary L. Emmert

The sun shines warmly on this little peaceful village, far from the maddening throng. It is just warm enough that one can either be lazy or do a bit of work as inclination leads and yet not be a bit out of harmony with the scene. We are in an orchard of rubber trees which find their way even into the center of the village, here one and there a row as fancy or chance dictated. Along one side of the village are the round esquimaux huts of the women with here and there the better built houses with high mud walls which the men enjoy. Two big shade trees stand protectingly near the center of the village.

Different groups of idlers are lounging about, some smoking around a camp fire, whose heat is rather superfluous in the afternoon sun. Some are standing doing nothing. Others are sitting doing the same thing. A few are working leisurely at some half finished houses. There is no winter coming, nor any rent to pay. The women are singing in the distance as they uncover the young coffee plants. Somewhere someone is preparing manioc flour as we judge by the steady beat on the rock. Everyone talks—perhaps of the two strange ladies who have come to see them. They have done all in their power to be sociable and yet they have not been overly curious nor inquisitive.

A bantam-like hen and two tiny chickens come to see us and to eat a bit of the porters' manioc flour, standing on our porch. A friendly dog shows a spirit of investigation. Both are difficult to persuade that they are not as welcome as they would be in their own homes. A chameleon darts like a streak across the open space. He has a pink head and dark body, but runs so fast that we could scarcely affirm that we saw him at all.

The chief blows a whistle and the two women return from their work. Here are three in a row, Indian file. Two of them have their babies on their left hip. All of them have baskets or large earthenware pots balanced on their heads, but that doesn't hinder them from looking around to see the two white people. Their anklets clank as they go past laughing and chattering.

The scene changes: the evening service is over. They have crowded up to hear the phonograph, and some big men have yielded to their impulse and moved right up to the front so they can look into this strange box as it is played at the close of the service. The message has been as simple as we knew how to make it—the wondrous story of God's love gift to a sin doomed world. It has been repeated thought by thought by the native evangelist that our foreign tongue might not detract and bewilder. But the newness of such a Gospel is too much to be comprehended at one hearing, so so they must come again in the morning and then perhaps think upon it many months before it will take root in their hearts and bring forth life.

We walk out through the vilalge toward the creek. The sun has set and the evening haze mingled with the smoke of the many fires blends up into the pale blue and pink of the afterglow. The trees are nearly bare and their outlines are soft against the sky, with here and there a dry leaf hanging to the brown branches. But along the streamlet the tall, dense mass of trees shows dark green. A fire in the valley throws a bright cheery reflection against the stalwart trunks, and suggests a happy fireside scene in the midst of the woods. The new moon looks sedately down—but not too distantly—with a mildly approving air on the laughing groups, each gathered around a few glowing coals.

WHAT DOES EASTER MEAN?

What does Easter mean to you?
 Stately church with cushioned pew,
 Where, Lenten season gone at last
 And days of self-denial past,
 Richly clad, devoted throngs
 Of worshipers unite in songs
 Of praise in lily-scented air?
 Is that what makes your Easter fair?

Does it mean the end of winter's reign,
 Bright skies and welcome warmth again,
 Singing of birds, budding of trees,
 Sweet spring odors on the breeze
 From daffodil and crocus bed
 And balsam branches overhead?
 Sad is the world and cold and gray
 If this is all of Easter Day.

But if this blessed season brings
 A firmer faith in holy things;
 Assurance of a living Lord;
 A strengthening of the tender chord
 Of love that binds us to the life to come
 Where loved ones wait us in the heavenly home,
 No pain or loss can e'er efface the bliss,
 Dear friend, of Easter when it means all this.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

ASHLAND MEMORIAL ENDOWMENT CAMPAIGN

Nappanee Leads the Churches of Indiana in Endowment

The canvass of the Nappanee church for College Endowment was a pleasure and made easy, for all seemed anxious to see the college go forward and were willing to do their best.

The pastor, Brother Whetstone, was enthusiastic and gave every encouragement and aid. It was my first opportunity to get a close up acquaintance and I enjoyed my stay with him. He is doing a splendid piece of work in Nappanee and is held in high esteem by all. The church is a beehive of activity and in fine working condition.

Nappanee senses the importance of Ashland College in the future work of the church. They know a greater Ashland College means a greater church and that we can hope for little without a school to produce trained workers.

We cannot have churches without preachers—neither can we have missions without missionaries.

It makes one heart-sick to find a church so selfish and short of vision as to want to confine their entire attention to their own local church. If all should have the same spirit it would only be a matter of a short time when it could be said, "ashes to ashes and dust to dust."

Again, I find another reason why Nappanee is interested in the College. For the past several years they have been sending their children to Ashland for an education and they appreciate what it means to have their families educated in a Christian school of their own faith. PARENTS, IF YOU are going to send your children to other schools and in some instances to be placed under tutors not in sympathy with the Christian religion and your children return home to scoff at your Bible and Christ—You are the ones to blame. How long before our people will awaken to the importance of a Christian education and send their youth to a school of their own faith?

Once again, I found everybody informed here about the progress in the campaign, as they TAKE THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST. About the first thing I ask when I go into a home is, "do you take the Evangelist," and when they say, yes, we are acquainted, because they know me and my work. When the reply is, No, it takes some time to explain what all our people should know. Our paper that costs less than four cents a week SHOULD BE IN EVERY BRETHREN HOME. I am surprised at how few take it in some of our congregations.

I received my second $1,000.00 gift in Nappanee, the other came from Goshen. I desire to impress upon the minds of our people that this campaign to go over must have several large gifts. There is no investment that will bring in such large returns for the Kingdom, and our money will be serving until he comes.

Finally, Nappanee is a real booster for Ashland and all the interests of the church. THEIR TOTAL GIFT WAS $4,652.31.

A GLIMPSE OF OUR NEIGHBORS

Krypton, Kentucky

For a long time we have felt that it would be profitable and desirable to give to the Evangelist readers a brief survey of the work being done in these mountain highlands by some of our nearest denominational neighbors. This will cover especially those places which we have personally visited, and it is because of being tied closely to our local work that visitation has been delayed. However, very recently the last of those we desired to see at first hand came under our observation. All of the following is Presbyterian work.

Witherspoon College, Buckhorn, Kentucky

This school was visited more than a year ago, and in the absence of specific data, only general information can be given. Buckhorn itself is only a tiny village on the Middle Fork River (a branch of the Kentucky River), seven miles from the nearest railway station, thirteen miles from Krypton. The wagon road over which freight and mail are carried is typical of hills, rocks and mud. Yet more than six hundred pupils wend their way from all over the Hazard coal field to this school. The buildings are artistically arranged in the valley and on the hillsides. The first structure was of logs, but since, all buildings have been built of about three-inch planks ingeniously arranged so as to make a splendid imitation log construction. The cracks are cemented and the timbers painted white, thus presenting an extremely beautiful sight. Here are dormitories, dining halls, administration building, gymnasium, hospital, church, residences for workers, a boys' orphanage and a girls' orphanage (entirely separate). All is modern. A Mr. Murdoch planted this enterprise more than twenty years ago, and he is still at its head. The grades and high school are taught, but other branches of endeavor include community work, extension work, and all the avenues of Christian activity which go to make for Christ and the church. The first Mrs. Murdoch was a brilliant woman of letters, but she gladly spent her time and talent in this inconspicuous corner where she chose her life work, and her grave on the hill overlooks the transformed scene.

Long's Creek is one of the noteworthy outposts of Buckhorn. We did not visit this point, but became well acquainted with the interesting workers, and will say a word in narration. A highly intellectual and much traveled woman of New York, Mrs. Blackman, past her three score and ten mark, is actively riding over the rocks and rills in her beloved work. She finally found in her home city a young man, who had volunteered for South America. Wheth- permanent or temporary, he is helping her in that field, doing community work, teaching school, besides definite soul saving. A third worker enters in June, from another station—a graduate nurse from another mission point—to be wife of the young New Yorker, Mr. Vandermeer.

"Experience is the price often paid for what one does not want."

Wootons Creek

Over two mountain ridges, and the usual ruts and gullies, ten miles from railway and twice as far from Krypton, in the real interior, is a well-chosen spot of Christian activity. Here one finds a well-built, comfortable community house, part of which is used for workers' living quarters and part for public use of community, especially services. Other buildings are a splendid, commodious hospital, modern barn with silo, cottages for pastor and workers, etc. Delco light, frigidaire, running water and sewage system are in operation. Teaching, nursing, clinics by physicians from far away, community activities, and some industrial work keep Mrs. McCord, a woman of demanding personality, and her co-workers busy. Miss Nola Pease, their graduate nurse, a young woman of true worth, soon goes to Long's Creek as a bride (mentioned above.) The Wooton work has had the attention of some of the state's leading men, including Governor Fields. Our visit was made last fall upon the occasion of a Christian Endeavor Convention, which visit was mentioned in a former article of the writer.

Stuart Robinson School, Blackey, Kentucky

The most advantageously located, the most beautifully arranged, and the most substantially built institution of all came into our vision about two weeks ago, when having left the main line of the L. & N. some twenty miles up-stream (or southeast) from Hazard, perhaps forty miles from Krypton, we traveled just one mile on a branch line to the campus of sixteen acres of Stuart Robinson School. Five absolutely modern and immaculate buildings of no mean size grace the rolling campus, and two more are under construction. One building is alone used for kitchen, dining room, storage rooms for food, etc. Here are installed a frigidaire, bread-mixing machine, and many other of the very latest devices for the preparation and handling of food-stuffs. If we understood correctly, this school's annual budget is over $25,000, of which over $15,000 is taken care of by the Presbyterian Home Mission Board and the rest raised by income at the school. But it must be remembered that their students, both boarding and those who live in the neighborhood, are required to work from twenty-five to forty-eight hours per month, the length of time depending upon carefulness and amount of grumbling. The basement of their new gymnasium was thus being excavated without direct cost to the school funds. Real brains and management are shown at every turn, and then when one becomes acquainted with the Mr. Cooper, at the helm, and his brilliant corps of teachers, one begins to comprehend that many beautiful and dutiful lives are obediently hidden away from the world's foot-lights in forsaken mountainous Kentucky.

Hyden, Leslie County, Kentucky

Our last tour, just a few days ago, carried us by legomobile into one of the few counties of eastern United States without a foot of railway track. Hyden is the county seat of this unique political division, and we were quite favorably impressed with the beauty of the little mountain town snuggled in the hills; especially was this impression consequential in view of the fact that every bit of material and personal belongings, except some of the rougher building material, had been hauled a distance of sixteen miles over unimaginable roads. At the time of our visit the rains had swollen the streams until freight wagons had been tied up for a week, and are yet. This is due to the necessity of crossing the Middle Fork River five times in about ten miles. Krypton is the nearest and best junction point on the railroad for Leslie County and nearly all the freight and express are hauled from here. But this has been the practice for years, and today all the staple commodities of life, as well as phonographs, bathtubs, lighting systems, water systems, radio outfits, books on science, art and surgery, all go jolting over the boulders into a county without a road of any kind. Soon this cannot be said, for automobile roads are being begun and railroads are surveying thoroughly.

But now, how about the Gospel? Glad to say some messengers of the cross did not wait for the steam engine or the auto. These many years the mule has carried the pioneer missionary, his wife and babies, as well as personal effects the sixteen miles to Hyden.

Upon urgent invitation, the writer accepted, as a half-way stopping place, the hospitality of a home in a very peculiarly (but appropriately) named branch of the Middle Fork River. "Hell-for-sartin'," they call this particular creek, and the place is well known far and wide. About a mile up Hell-fer-sartin' found the writer in the friend's home. This friend, Mr. Woods, had informed us that they had not had preaching on that creek for six months, and that was the principal reason for accepting the invitation. The creek waters were too high to reach the school house (the usual meeting place) readily, so neighbors assembled in the home, and there we made an effort to break the Bread of Life. In the light of the smoky oil lamb eager faces were discernable, and on some the stern consequences of sin were indelibly written. Present was the father of the host, not an old man, but the father of fourteen children. The wife of the host had not been to Krypton for eight or ten years, and the children of half a dozen summers had never seen a railway or train. Nevertheless, none were altogether lacking in brilliance, and it seemed again only a case of diamonds unpolished.

Next morning, on to Hyden, where we arrived near noon, and found ourselves the guest of a Mr. McKee, and his accomplished physician wife, holding forth as pastor of Hyden Presbytery while on furlough from the Chinese mission field. Hyden Presbyterian work has much interesting history which will have to be passed with but a word. Established in 1894 and maintained since by the Central Presbyterian church of New York City, it has been a real monument of Christian standard in this backward county. The beautiful church is built of native stone and seated with pews from the old Central church in New York. Here also are the Byers Sisters, with their dormitories for girls, and managing the school facilities of the community. Here, nearby, but in a separate organization (non-sectarian), is established the work of Mrs. Breckinridge. She is renowned for her brilliancy and oratorical ability. Under her administration are upwards of half a dozen nurses, mostly from England and Scotland, who ride their splendid mounts over the hills to all parts of the county, and, without fee, attend the sick, especially maternity cases. We understand the principal aim of Mrs. Breckinridge is to lower the mortality rate of both mother and infant, since this has been very high in the hands of careless, untrained mid-wives. There is, besides Mrs. McKee, only one licensed and registered practising physician in the entire county of Leslie. It is a regrettable fact, however, that some of these nurses are not Christian, and with their knickers, boy hair cuts, and cigarettes, create a great sorrow for the Christian workers of the county. This was our understanding of the situation.

Dry Mill

Six miles on the homeward journey, glad to say, is a noble Christian nurse, Miss Tolk, who is laboring with her people, along with her fellow-workers in the school. Here is a somewhat scattered rural community, but in need of medical care, child nurture, and the Gospel. A very commodious community house has been erected and beside it a dispensary about 16x20 feet in size, in which are to be found splendid equipment, instruments, drugs, etc., of which the community can justly be proud. Here again a group of those who could be hastily summoned were gathered in the main room of the community house and we pled with them in behalf of things of the higher life and eternity values.

Summary

One cannot view these properties, contemplate the investments, look into the faces of these intelligent, self-denying workers without coming to the conclusion that it all must be worth while. Do we wonder at the strength of our sister denomination? Our answer can be found in her marvellous missionary enterprises. Can we hold back in fearfulness and apprehension, and yet expect to forge ahead in growth and vigor? No! We dare not hold back; we must go forward!

FRED V. KINZIE.
Krypton, Kentucky.,

BRYAN, OHIO

The Bryan Brethren church ended the year 1926 with a very acceptable record. Every special day was observed according to the church calendar. Reports on New Years' Day were very gratifying, nothing startling, just a good active spirit of service manifested. The treasurer's report was one of interest, revealing the business-like way of handling the King's business. The pastor's report included the facts that 676 pastoral calls were made during the year and also the rather interesting account, that 996 callers were received at the parsonage during the year.

At Christmas time the Sunday school presented the beautiful pageant, "The Light of the World." The recent Easter season was observed with special pre-Easter services each night. Our people joined in the Union Good Friday services from 12 to 3 o'clock, which was the largest group that ever gathered in our city for such a service. Several hundred were present during the three hours. Easter services in our own church were largely attended. The morning C. E. service was very uplifting and soul inspiring. The Sunday school attendance was the largest so far this year. The pastor's message on "The Inevitable Resurrection" was received by almost a church full of worshippers. The evening service consisted of numbers and exercises by the children and a pageant by the young people, entitled, "The Conversion of Cornelius." The church was filled, even people standing, to see this service.

The many auxiliaries of the church show interest and growth. We now shall plan for Mother's day and holy communion for May; International Christian Endeavor Convention in July and a Vacation Bible school either in June or July.

This church recently granted the pastor the privilege of spending two weeks with Brother Kimmel and his people at Fort Wayne, Indiana. We were there only through the week days, having returned here for our regular work on Sundays. Words almost fail to describe the fine spirit of service and co-operation revealed by the people in the Fort Wayne church. We preached to good audiences each night and with Brother Kimmel we drove over the city many times trying to locate folks and get them enlisted in the work of the kingdom.

Brother and Sister Kimmel are doing a fine work and had baptized a number of folks just before this special series of services. Our efforts were not in vain and the pastor will make a detailed report. The outlook is splendid for this church. New faces were in evidence at every service. The people who are already enlisted are a fine type of folks and very dependable. This new church is growing and will continue to do so. We enjoyed our stay with these people, their fine hospitality and the kindness of the pastor and his wife. Ft. Wayne! may God continue to bless your efforts.

E. M. RIDDLE, Pastor.

SMITHVILLE-STERLING CHURCH

We are coming again with a report from this congregation. In our last report we suggested that we were making a special effort to lift the debt on our splendid church building at Smithville. On April first we paid the last note for $3,000 and have our fine church home entirely free of debt. There was a fine feeling of appreciation and thankfulness swept over the congregation when the pastor announced to the large audience that had gathered the following Sunday that the debt was paid. Many words of congratulation have been received from people of the community in our achievement.

Our Homecoming and Day of Rejoicing will be held Sunday, May 1, in the Smithville church. There will be three services during the day, with a basket dinner at noon. Dr. J. Allen Miller will be the speaker at the morning and evening services, and in the afternoon neighboring pastors are invited to be with us and bring messages of cheer and encouragement. A Special Choir will sing on this occasion. The Sunday School Orchestra will be present with some special numbers and other special numbers will be given, such as instrumental duets and vocal solos and duets. Altogether we are expecting a great time in the Lord. The folks at Ashland and the nearby churches are cordially invited to attend and enjoy these services with us.

We just closed a very successful series of Pre-Easter services. The pastor conducted these services, and we began Monday evening, April 11, and closed on Easter Sunday evening. There was a fine feeling throughout the week and good crowds each night. The interest and attendance increased and some of the brethren thought we ought to continue another week.

The services of Easter Day were the crowning services of the series. We had a large attendance in Sunday school with an offering of over $15. There were three special numbers given at the Sunday school hour, a trio by primary children, a duet by junior girls and and a trombone-Saxophone duet by two of the men of the orchestra. A special chair rendered some very fine Easter anthems and the platform was a bower of Easter flowers.

The climax came when the invitation was given at the close of the service. At this time four came forward to enter a closer walk with the Lord. Three of these were adults, coming from another church, and the fourth was a splendid young girl who has been playing the violin in our Sunday School Orchestra.

There was a good attendance and splendid interest at evening services. The sermon for the evening was on the theme, "What is the Greatest Sin in the World?" The people seemed deeply interested. The Holy Spirit was present working upon hearts, but not all yielded and accepted Christ. One lady who has been working with us for some time, came by relation from another church. The total number received during the day was five, and we think that two or three others will be ready for baptism soon.

We feel inspired to greater efforts in our work for him who loved us and died for us and arose again that we might have life eternal.

MORTON L. SANDS, Pastor.

Easter

*After the cross, the crown,
After the grave, the skies;
Christ is arisen from the dead,
We unto him shall rise.*

*Brightly the Easter joy
Beams on our pilgrim way,
Lighting the shadows with the glow
Of the eternal day.*

*Earnest of Heaven's bliss
Comforts our sorrow's night;
Death is the door to Paradise,
Darkness the path to light.*

*Upward, oh, risen Christ,
Draw us for aye to thee;
Upward, o'er sorrow, sin, and death,
Victors like thee to be.*

*Glorified is the way
Thou hast before us trod,
Even so, raise us unto thee,
Savior, thou Son of God.*

Why Young Men and Women Should Go to College

right attitude toward God and having goodwill in our hearts. Getting a college education under the proper influences of a Christian atmosphere helps one to do this. For this reason only can the small denominational college be justified in its existence but this reason is sufficient. College has so much to do with one's whole outlook on life that it is all important that its influences be the highest and best from the Christian point of view.

SENATOR BORAH AND PRESIDENT BUTLER DEBATE ON PROHIBITION

Perhaps the great event of last week was the debate on prohibition between United States Senator William E. Borah and President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University. The debate was held in Boston. Crowds jammed the auditorium where they spoke and the radio carried the speeches all over the United States. Dr. Butler represented the wets and Senator Borah the dries.

There was an unofficial jury of nine. Six of them voted in favor of the position of Senator Borah. The Senator also got the lion's share of the applause.

The speech of Dr. Butler was surprising in its lack of familiarity with the subject. He proposed to take the 18th Amendment out of the Constitution, abolish prohibition and put the control of liquor into the hands of the States, which were to deal with it as they saw fit. Of course in this he overlooked two things; first, that even if a majority of a State voted for prohibition, there would be a minority deprived of "personal liberty," for in a democratic country everybody can't have what he wants; and second, he overlooked the fact that State prohibition has been tried and wet States would not honor the laws of the dry States. Borah twitted him on this, by saying that Butler was willing to have "wet" shipped into "dry" States but he was not willing to have "dry" shipped into "wet" States. This brought great applause.

One surprising feature of Dr. Butler's speech was his attitude to the Supreme Court of the United States. He made a tacit criticism of it, which, reading between the lines, one could see was a willingness to disregard the decision of this great tribunal, probably the ablest judicial body in the world.

He charged Prohibition with the crime wave with which the country is grappling and intimated that it would make the people truthful and sober to restore liquor. Of course, President Butler dismissed reason at this point, as well as at other points, for the career of liquor has been one long course of crime of every mentionable kind and of unmentionable kind also.

Senator Borah answered, more than answered, every point of Dr. Butler's speech in a satisfactory way. In fact, Dr. Butler was a child in his hands, not because Dr. Butler is not an able man but because he has neither fact, logic nor sentiment to stand upon. Any sophomore in a backwoods school could have shown his fallacies, his misinformation, and his lack of patriotism. All this Senator Borah did—and a great deal more. In fact, he made one of the greatest speeches we have read. He evidently left the Boston people with a new feeling about this question. The senator was particularly satisfactory in his attitude to nullification. We quote part of his address—it may show the line upon which this battle will have to be fought. Mr. Borah said:

We have passed modification and we have discussed briefly the question of governmental control. There is another disposition to be made of this liquor problem, to which Dr. Butler referred, although not approvingly. However, if I were as much interested in quoting his speeches as he is in quoting mine (laughter) I could refer you to a speech which he made in St. Louis in which he said: "What's the use of talking about the sacredness of the Constitution?" (Laughter). Well, I am going to talk a few minutes about the sacredness of the Constitution.

There is, my friends, in this country a deliberate, organized attempt to nullify the Constitution of the United States. It is just as well organized and just as intelligently led as was the nullification doctrine of John C. Calhoun, of whom Andrew Jackson said, in his last days, it was the regret of his life he had not hung. And it is with my regret also. Any man who will preach nullification in a government of law, the most insidious, destructive means of accomplishing the destruction of all government of law, is distinctly an enemy of our form of government.

Senate Debate

I am not mistaken about this. I am going to read to you from one of the debates in the Senate, just a paragraph or two.

"Mr. Borah. I beg the Senator to permit me to proceed. The Senator has stated the issue. Let us argue it. The Senator has stated the issue is that they propose to have what they want with reference to intoxicating liquor.

"Mr. Bruce. They do.

"Mr. Borah. Regardless of the Constitution of the United States or of the states of the United States?

"Mr. Bruce. They do.

"Mr. Borah. If that be true, and I have no doubt it is true, is that what the Senator thinks?

"Mr. Bruce. I do.

Undermines Citizenship

"Mr. Borah. If that be true, isn't the orderly thing for you people to do who profess to live under a constitutional government to amend the Constitution in the manner provided by the Constitution itself? Can the Senator conceive of anything more degrading, demoralizing and undermining to the good citizenship of the people than to have a solemn pledge in the Constitution of the United States and then to have great Senators stand upon the floor of the United States Senate and say to the people, 'We are going to have what we want, regardless of whether it is constitutional or not?'

"Mr. Bruce. I can conceive nothing more deplorable, nothing more tragic, nothing more scandalous, but I take human nature as it is, in other words, to look at this question as the Free Soiler looked at the institution of slavery.

"Mr. Borah. Of course, and when Wendell Phillips spoke with reference to that procedure, he said, 'To hell with the Constitution.'

About Senator Bruce

Mr. Borah. But there came a man who, disregarding Mr. Phillips, found a way to solve that great question by amending the Constitution of the United States and effectuating the change which he desired under the Constitution, not in violation of it.

Mr. Bruce. How did he find it? He found it by smoke and fire and blood.

Mr. Borah. I am one of those who believes that the Constitution of the United States is of sufficient value to go through blood and fire in order to maintain it.

Senator Bruce is one of the ablest men in the United States Senate. He is a man of extraordinary vision, intellect, of great culture and of magnificent courage. He has stated there precisely the question which is uppermost in the minds of a vast number of people who are opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment and a question which the Republican party, if it has any of the inspiration of the old days, will unhesitatingly meet in the convention of 1928 by declaring for the Eighteenth Amendment and for its enforcement. (Applause). When men upon the floor of the Senate and throughout the country are advocating defiance or nullification of the Constitution of the United States, I say there is only one thing for the grand old party to do, and that is to declare for the Constitution and for its enforcement from one end of the land to the other.

Senator Borah put heart into prohibitionists all over the land when he declared:

The people of the United States after fifty years of fighting, after fifty years of campaigning, wrote deliberately into the Constitution of the United States this pledge. They believed, or a great majority of them believed, that it means better citizens, better homes, better individual and national life, and be assured they will never repeal it until they are satisfied that its enforcement has had a fair trial and has utterly failed.

Talk about putting through a great reform in eight years. Look back over the history of reforms from the beginning of Christianity to today, and consider those reforms which have had to do with the lives and habits of the people, and it has taken not eight years or twenty years, but centuries to effect these reforms. And yet they say to us, because eight years have passed and there are still violations of the law, plenty of them, that you must take a backward step.

Can't Show White Flag

No, my friends, what we need is not a party giving orders for retreat, but a party giving orders for advance. What we need is not a party carrying a white flag in the face of the liquor traffic, but a party with that old constitutional banner under which the Republican hosts have marched to victory in every great fight for law and order and for constitutional government.

Let me say to Dr. Butler: If I had his learning and his eloquence, and his power of statement, and his commanding character and I could go forth from one end of this land to the other, saying what he has been saying, but on the opposite side of the question, you would find a different morale, a different spirit, a different purpose upon the part of the American people.

We are not going, my friends, to surrender in this fight after eight years of experience, alone.

It was a remarkable debate. It did prohibition good. Probably more such debates will be held and it will be a good thing. Wherever the subject is truly presented prohibition gains fire and force. The people believe in it. The 18th Amendment will never be cut out of the Constitution.—The Christian Evangelist.

FOR OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE HORSE THAT COULD READ

By Hilda Richmond

Molly and Tom and Don came home in great excitement. "There's a horse over on Lincoln Street that can read!" they cried all together.

Grandmother Layton was very busy, so she did not pay much attention to what they said. She knew a man had been in town a few days before with trained animals, so she supposed he was still wandering about getting what money he could by making the animals perform on the streets.

"Did you ever see a horse that could read?" asked the children.

Grandmother never had, but she was busy; so they ran to tell the wonderful news to Grandfather Layton. "Well, one time I saw a trained horse that could push blocks together with his hoof and spell out words," said grandfather.

"But this horse was hitched to a big covered wagon," said Don.

"And nobody told him what to do," said Molly.

"And he could read just as well as anybody," said Don.

"And there were no other animals along," said Don.

"I wish we had run home and taken you over to see it," said Tom. "I just know they've gone to some other town by this time. I looked for a man to come with a hat to get the pennies as they do when the monkey does his tricks, but there wasn't anybody."

"And we couldn't stay long," said Molly, "because we had promised grandmother to hurry back with the loaf of bread."

So all hope of seeing the wonderful horse was given up until next day when they were over on Lincoln Street playing with the Grove children.

"O, there's the ice man!" said Robert Grove, "and mamma forgot to hang out her card. I'll run and get it."

Robert hurried to hang out the big red card, and just as he did so the horse hitched to the ice wagon came across the street. The ice man was in another house getting the ice into the box, but the big horse came without him.

"O, it's that wonderful horse that can read!" said Tom. "You just watch him!"

Sure enough. The minute the ice man went into the house to put Mrs. Grove's ice into her refrigerator the big horse went right up the row of houses until he came to one with another red card out, and there he stopped.

"There! You see he passed a bread card and a laundry card and went right to where it said 'I-C-E.'" cried Molly. "I wonder who taught him to read."

The ice man laughed and laughed when they told him that if he would pass his hat they would put pennies into it. "You see, he learned the route, and he knows our customers," he said. "It isn't because he can read."

But the children believe to this day that the horse can read. "How else can he tell a bread card from an ice card if he can't spell out the words?" they say. "Of course he can read."—Christian Advocate.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

TEN WEEKS OF TITHE EDUCATION

Any church may now put on a Ten Weeks' course of tithing education, right in the midst of its other activities, and at a ridiculously small cost.

The Layman Company, which has distributed many millions of pamphlets on the tithe, now announces an attractive new series, at so low a price that distribution to an entire church through ten weeks costs only two cents and a half per family.

A complete set of samples and full particulars will be sent for thirty cents, this includes two playlets; a Tithing Account Book, Winning Financial Freedom, and Adventures in Tithing.

Please give your denomination; also mention "The Brethren Evangelist."

The Two Sides to Mother's Day

Mother's Day has two sides; it faces two ways—towards childhood and towards parenthood. It speaks to children and young people of a debt they can never pay, and it comes to mothers with a reminder of a responsibility that is great beyond comparison with anything that God has placed upon human shoulders. It points to two sides of a relationship that is inseparable, and is as vital as it is natural, as glorious as it is demanding, as heavenly as it is human.

It is first of all a day for the bestowal of honor on mother. It is a day on which sons and daughters are urged to show some special kindness to the mothers who are living and to revere the memory of those who are gone. It is a time for tokens of love and expressions of thoughtfulness—a letter written, a telegram, a visit, a gift of flowers, or the doing of some particular thing that will bring her happiness. It is a time set apart when we count mother's virtues, seek to re-evaluate her goodness and worth and to pour out the gratitude of our hearts for her loveliness and service. It is a beautiful custom that has sprung up amongst us; it is good for us and for our mothers that we do this.

But the requirements of Mother's Day are not met by a single act, and the honor and love to be shown mother are not to be confined to one day in the year. This day should be but the testimony of a love that is kept fresh and strong and expressive throughout the seasons; it should be but the witness of a gratitude that is ever genuine and a kindness that is ever active. The honoring of mother should be as constant as is her love and the doing of little acts of kindness should be as unending as her sacrifice. Our affection has little reality if it is kindled just for the day; our thoughtfulness has little value if it is spent in so brief a space; and our gratitude has little depths if it can be emptied out in a single expression. Many and long were the days mother spent in watchful care over her child; wearied and worn often yet without release she held to her task; she poured her life out on the altar of a sweet and sacrificial ministry for her helpless babe and her child of increasing years and demands. And it was all done so uncomplainingly, so unselfishly, so lovingly! Can we repay her in one brief day? Will we be grudging of the time we bestow on her, or thoughtless of the little kindnesses that are her due, or measured with the loving expressions that we deal out to her? Will Mother's Day be no more than a day?

But Mother's Day also is a reminder to mothers of responsibility, and may it be that, especially to those who have not yet passed beyond its reach. To the mothers who still have their children about them, whose homes are yet in the making, may this day speak of the responsibility, of the task, that is theirs supremely, and that is God-given. It will be a profitable day for you, yes, and for the church and the state, if you shall by this means be made more keenly aware of the importance of your place and inspired to fill that place to the last ounce of your ability. Remember that you make the home atmosphere to a degree that no one else can, and in that atmosphere the habits and hearts of your children take shape. No influence is greater or more far-reaching than yours, and no responsibility is more bounden, or more demanding of faithfulness in the discharging. "Remember," says the sainted Dr. Cuyler, "that you are making the coat of character for your children. If you fashion it after a worldly pattern, then they may be poisoned with worldliness; but if you devoutly 'seek first for them the kingdom of Christ and his righteousness,' and if you draw them by the powerful attraction of a lovable, winsome, Christian example, then you may hope to see them arrayed in the beauty of holiness." May this side of Mother's Day not be missed.

Governor Smith an Impossibility

There is much stir lately about the chances of Gov. Al. Smith of New York as a presidential possibility on the Democratic ticket in 1928. Leaving politics aside, there are two reasons why the Americans will never elect such a man president, even if he should get the nomination, a most unlikely occurrence. First, he is a Catholic and has shown himself to be loyal to the Pope of Rome, and while our theory of government is against religion playing any part in political preferment, yet so long as the head of the Catholic church does not renounce his claims to political supremacy, Protestant Americans will blackball a Catholic aspirant to the highest office in our land. Second, Al Smith is a dripping "wet", and has done all he could do to nullify Prohibition, so far as his state is concerned, and it is unthinkable that the American people would be willing to jeopardize the Prohibition cause by electing a man of his convictions.

The above paragraph was written before the Marshall-Smith episode and was crowded out of these columns for lack of space, but notwithstanding the newspapers claim that Smith has gained political prestige by his statement, there is nevertheless nothing to make thoughtful Protestants change their minds with regard to his acceptability. His contention that there can be no conflict in principle between a faithful Catholic's loyalty to his church and his loyalty to his country is not convincing. There is too much history to the contrary, and not all ancient history, either, as witness events in France, Italy and Mexico—and too many Catholic assertions to the contrary, and there are too many prominent Catholics in whose minds there is room for a conflict of loyalties to accept his disclaimer at face value. Until some one higher in Catholic circles than Gov. Smith, or even his priestly adviser, comes forward with a renouncement of the Vatican's long-standing claims to temporal sovereignty, Protestants will continue to believe that those claims still stand and that to the extent that conditions may from time to time be favorable they will be enforced. Mr. Smith's statement that even though there might be such claims advanced or held he would not feel bound to respect them may be made in sincerity, yet the pull and persuasion of Catholic influence are so strong, and their measures on recalcitrant members are so severe that one is warranted in suggesting that his assertions are bolder than he himself would likely prove to be. For instance, the terrors of excommunication are such that no true and believing Catholic would willingly face them. Besides Mr. Smith has shown himself to be a Catholic of such religious prejudices and loyalties that it would be difficult to believe that he would have any serious desire to oppose orthodox Catholic political aims.

But even if Protestant America could be persuaded to believe that Gov. Smith's religious alignment would make no difference, yet his wet advocacy has been so radical and so open that no disavowal there would be taken seriously, even if for political expediency he should be led to do so, and it is hard to believe that any political party would wish to seal its death-warrant by putting forward a candidate so diametrically opposed to the great majority of public sentiment regarding a moral issue so vital as prohibition. Mr. Smiths' history at this point handicaps him with a burden too great to be overcome, if he were otherwise free. But having two such serious handicaps, handicaps concerning which the church cannot afford to be indifferent, he must be considered a presidential impossibility, though we may expect his candidacy will be pressed by those interested for all the political advantage possible.

"Meddling Busy-Bodies"?

The wet interests are just now making much ado about the influence which the Anti-Saloon League is supposed to have with the administration of the Prohibition laws under the direction of the lately appointed acting prohibition commissioner, Major Roy A. Haynes. The head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, William H. Stayton, is especially worked up because Wayne B. Wheeler has sought to have the civil service commission to make sympathy for the prohibition law a qualification for appointment to the dry enforcement service, a qualification that is so sensible that one would think it would be required without pressure from the leadership of the church's reform agency.

Th wet leaders have protested against the making of the appointment of Major Haynes permanent and have flooded the President, Secretary Mellon and all others concerned with wet propaganda, and they have done this, as the papers report, in order that "the country may know whether this government is administered by duly elected and appointed officials, 'unhampered by meddling busy-bodies,' or whether it has become a government of, by and for professional propagandists." So far as "meddling busy-bodies" and "professional propagandists" are concerned, it would be difficult to find any more persistent and annoying, or more unscrupulous and obstructive in their methods than are the wet leaders. Aside from the difference in methods, the difference between the "meddling" wets and the "meddling" dries is the difference between the forces of evil and the forces of righteousness, between the powers that would annul the Constitution, restore the liquor traffic and debauch lives, ruin homes and undermine society for the sake of gain, and those powers that have their inspiration in the teachings of Christ, their backing in the church and their aim the making it easier to do right and harder to do wrong. Between two such groups of "meddlers", the good people of our land ought not to have any difficulty of choosing. In fact, if it is considered "meddling" to seek to make it easier for public officials to perform their appointed duties, and more difficult to them to yield to temptations of laxness, let us thank God for such "meddling"; it is for the best good of all that we have it.

The Christian Index scorns the idea of evildoers calling men engaged in reform work "meddlers." It says:

"It is strange how some men hurl the epithet 'meddler' at those who pull the cover from them and reveal their true character. Thank God for the glorious meddlers who have so often set this world right. Martin Luther was a great meddler. Every gunman considers policemen as meddlers. 'Let us alone,' has been the cry of wrong against right all through the centuries. Shall we let 'evildoers and seducers' alone? We say, No, a thousand times No! It is glorious to be meddlers like Paul, Luther, Wesley, Lincoln and a host of others of whom the world is not worthy."

EDITORIAL REVIEW

"Give, and it shall be given unto you", but don't get impatient if the returns are not always in evidence immediately. Your reward may be in increased character, and that isn't produced in a day.

The Ashland, Ohio, church will observe in a fitting manner its first anniversary of the dedication of its new church home on May 22, and hold communion service in the evening.

Brother F. C. Vanator of the Canton, Ohio, church informs us in a personal communication that they are dedicating their new church building on May 8th with Dr. W. H. Beachler of Dayton officiating. We shall eagerly look forward to a report and a picture of their new home.

Brother I. D. Bowman recently had two confessions in his house meetings in Delaware, where interest seems to be increasing. He is also doing some supply work for the Third church of Philadelphia, where Brother J. E. Braker is temporarily in charge until the securing of a successor to the late Dr. Witter.

Brother W. A. Gearhart, our Home Mission Secretary, writes of a survey and lecture trip among churches in West Virginia with special interest in the churches at Grafton and Terra Alta. Outlook at Grafton seems to be promising and efforts are to be made to take the best possible care of the field.

Among the announcements this week are two that have to do with the summer religious activities at Shipshewana Lake, Indiana. Brother Stuckman tells of plans for the Bible Conference to be in session eight days, beginning July 10, to be followed by the Young People's Conference to close July 24. Dean J. Allen Miller is to be the special lecturer at the Bible Conference. Speakers for the Young People's Conference are not yet announced.

As we were going to press news reached us of the death of Elder H. S. Jacobs, father of Dr. E. E. Jacobs, President of Ashland College. He passed away on Monday evening, May 2, at the home of his son. Elder Jacobs was 82 years old and has been blind for many years. He was for a long period of years pastor of the church at Homerville, having served that church several years after being afflicted with blindness. He was one of the ministers at the noteworthy Dayton convention of 1883.

Dr. G. C. Carpenter of Hagerstown, Maryland, writes of the aggressive work being done at that place. In the friendly Sunday school attendance contest between Hagerstown and the First church of Philadelphia, the former emerged the victor in points gained, but both seem to have gained splendid victories in the way of increased interest and stimulation for faithfulness. During the Easter season eleven members were added to the church, eight by baptism and three by letter.

Brother S. E. Christiansen of Washington C. H., Ohio, has recently paid a visit to the Columbus mission and favors us with an interesting statement of the progress now being realized there under the energetic leadership of Brother and Sister R. E. Gotschall. In addition to the commendable progress in attendance, the church has been redecorated and the debt liquidated. It is keenly regretted that Brother Gotschall has been ill and it is to be hoped that he may be fully restored and much of the strain lifted.

At Winchester, Virginia, work is progressing nicely, the Sunday school attendance showing commendable gains and the church membership having been strengthened by five additions. Various neighboring preachers have been given assistance and encouragement to this promising mission point which is being earnestly and faithfully shepherded by Brother E. J. Rohart. A more recent communication just reached us announcing the first anniversary day of the dedication on May 22. An all-day meeting is planned and all nearby churches are invited.

Dr. J. C. Beal, pastor of the church at Sunnyside, Washington, tells of his work there and at a nearby spontaneous mission point. Since the first of the year he has baptized thirty-six people, twenty of whom have been received into the Sunnyside church, most of these residing at Harrah, thirty miles distant. Another correspondent writes of this prospective field, and judging from the results already realized, it seems that some arrangements ought to be worked out whereby a Brethren organization could be effected, as it is contemplated. Brother Beal announces the closing of his work in this field and his desire to locate near the college.

Dr. W. S. Bell reports his canvass of the Milford and Gravelton, Indiana, churches for College Endowment. At Milford conditions are not what they once were, and their gift of $760 was considered good cooperation. The church is receiving the pastoral services of Brother Nicodemus, who also serves the Church of the Brethren in that community. We wonder if this arrangement is not prophetic of a "working agreement" that may become more and more prevalent. May God help us somehow to do away with the wasteful duplication and irritating competition too long practiced by these two branches of Dunkerism. The gift from Gravelton was $100. These two gifts bring the total to date to $105,844.74.

Motherhood

By Delbert B. Flora

"They say a man rules the universe,
That subject shore and main kneel down and bless the empery
Of his majestic reign;
But a sovereign, gentler, mightier,
Man from his throne has hurled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world."

—William Stewart Ross.

Motherhood is God's greatest gift to the human race. It is most intimately associated with God, for in the beginning he created man in his own likeness and gave the gift of motherhood. By means of this wonderful gift our Creator planned that the race should be reproduced and inhabit the earth. The wife of the first man Adam, sinned thus bringing shame and disrepute upon womankind and the name followed her for untold centuries. She was for the most part looked upon as nothing more than personal property of man to be used as slave or chattel, to be kicked out of home or disposed of as desired, a subject of her master's whims.

We have Old Testament accounts of reverence accorded certain women of old but it has not been until comparatively recent date that woman has begun to receive the share of reverence due her. This movement may be traced back to the time when the angel said to Mary, "Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee", for there and then God revealed his highest esteem of motherhood. From that time forward there has been an increased veneration placed upon womanhood and motherhood, until now we as a nation observe the second Sunday in the month of May as Mother's Day. And why should we not? It was by means of motherhood that our Lord and Master came to us and brought to us redemption from our sins. This great gift of God to the human race was made more glorious through the gift of his Son to the world.

The term motherhood is rich in implications. It implies the joy, peace, and comfort of the home. Around mother clings all the memories of home. It is always mother who cares so tenderly for the tiny infant. It is mother who so willingly assists the boy or girl in the early years of school life. It is mother who guides the erring footsteps of the youth just entering the swirl of society. It is to mother that the tired business man comes for consolation. Mother—how sweet the name! About six hundred young people were once asked to write the most beautiful word in the English language. A few over four hundred wrote something about "mother" and many of the others wrote about "home."

Again motherhood implies sacrifice. Many talented mothers have sacrificed their time for their children, instead of going into some more public activity where they would have made a name for themselves. They have cared for the hurts and pains of little ones, and they have darned little stockings and bigger ones too, teaching the higher things of life. Mother has had to get up in the middle of the night and ease an aching ear, or cool a fevered brow, or hold a hand to soothe some restless little one. What matter how tired or uncomfortable she might have been at times? No maid or nurse could be trusted to do what she wanted done for her children. Yes, mother has had to sacrifice time, comfort, personal appearance for the home and for us, and that is why we love her so.

Great are the implications of the word "motherhood," and great are the possibilities of motherhood. Each mother has in her hands the power to make a noble man or woman who will do great things for the world. Hannah, because she had never been given any children, went to the temple and there prayed for a son, promising to dedicate him to the service of God. A son was born to her, and as soon as he was old enough to be taken from his mother, she took him to the temple, where she left him to do temple service, and we read that "Samuel ministered before the Lord" until he was called to be a prophet. Hannah prayed that she might be given a son, and then gave him to the Lord. There are modern Hannahs also. The story is told of a young husband and wife who prayed in much the same way that Hannah prayed. A little girl who later became a great missionary, was born to them. Lincoln, Garfield, and many others have been given to the world by mothers who realized the possibility of doing something for mankind through careful rearing of their children.

Mothers can not only make noble men and women, but they can make the worst criminals. Herodias, when her daughter danced before Herod, bid her ask for the head of John the Baptist as a gift. We can scarcely believe that any mother would ask such a thing of even a stranger, much less of her own daughter who was not much more than a child. Such an example as Herodias set! And assuredly her children followed in her footsteps.

Childhood is largely in the hands of mother and its future rests with her. Yes, and the future of our country rests with its mothers. The home is the heart of the nation and with the break-up of the homes goes the pride and strength of any nation. Mother is the center of the heart of the nation and we may well say,

"The hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world."

Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio.

Mother's Day

*Sometimes in the hush of the evening hour
When the shadows creep from the west,
I think of the twilight song you sang
And the boy you lulled to rest;
The wee little boy with the tousled head,
That long, long ago was thine;
I wonder if sometimes you long for that boy
O little mother of mine!*

*And now he has come to man's estate,
Grown stalwart in body and strong,
And you'd hardly know that he was the lad
Whom you lulled with your slumber song.
The years have altered the form and the life,
But his heart is unchanged by time,
And still he is only the boy as of old,
O little mother of mine!*

—Walter H. Brown.

The One Thing Lacking

By Helen Garber

It was a serene hour at the end of a perfect day that a stalwart young man wended his way toward the little village chapel. It was a young minister who was filling his first charge, and prayer meeting night before Mother's Day. The scene of the orchard bloom filled the caressing evening breeze, the lowing of the cows blended with falling shadows. Daylight's lingering hour fringed with its last delicate tints the feathery white clouds against the azure sky.

Forgetting his little flock, this young shepherd was carried to the memory of a similar night less than a year ago. The shadows fell on a face of tender sadness. A loving mother had left her earthly home to share the promises of that greater love, leaving this hungry plant in the springtime of bloom. A Mother's Day without Mother! Though she was living in glory, this tender heart, untried and uncalled by the trials of life, yearned for an harbor in her heart of love at the returning of this "sweet hour of prayer."

While yearning here in the dreamy twilight, our young friend became conscious of an approaching figure of a woman. She was a little bent and a little unsteady of step, yet in the moonlight, her soft hair seemed a crown of glory. She joined him in the doorway. Her usual motherly greeting was more gentle tonight. The loneliness of both hearts blended into an understanding harmony. This dear old mother to all the village was soon unburdening her soul to her young pastor. Away in the cold city was one whom she was used to call "Donnie." Her heart starved of love, unfed by a visit home. He had given her all she might desire, save a loving visit which had been neglected for the many years since he had left for school. As had been the case the many years before, in this prayer hour tonight, with renewed hope, a silent prayer would ascend to the Father's throne that "Donnie" might come home to Mother just that one day" and be lavished with her undying love.

The above is a much repeated picture of a loving child lacking a mother to love, and a loving mother lacking a child to love. Both pictures are sad and too often repainted in our lives today. Both may find retinting from the Master Hand, and peace and solace in his harbor of love. Note this picture. Three lonely crosses stand out against the morning sky. The black clouds hung as great curtains to the Holy of Holies in which our Lord was about to enter, there to intercede for us. If ever the future seemed hopeless, it seemed thus to the few faithful ones gathered at the foot of the center cross. Though the disciples had forgotten, there was one who had not. The mother of our Lord was there with her Son in that dark hour. In the solemnity of that sad hour, a tender voice from the cross spoke to that loving heart torn with grief, "Mother, behold thy Son!" To his beloved disciple he said, "Behold thy mother!" From that hour, two figures, bowed with grief, silently made their way to the home of John. This is a picture of the true mother's love. Yet, this loving Son was not forgetful of his mother and committed her to the care of that beloved disciple even before he had suffered all the agony of the cross, thus sparing her untold grief. What a beautiful drama it must have been, but oh, the depth of the lesson of love which it teaches!

Are we, whose lives have been so graciously bought by the blood of the Lamb of God and whose hearts have been attuned with his great heart of love, are we lacking this one thing? What are the harmonies which ebb and swell from our heart's harp strings to the tender touches of mother love? Mother, are you so guiding that life entrusted to your care by God that you and he may never experience condemning sorrow? Son or daughter, are you so living that mother is not "dying for a little bit of love," that your Lord and Master may "see the travail of his Soul and be satisfied" because you are living and telling others of his unspeakable love?

How often we sing—

Oh Love, that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee;
I give thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean's depths its flow
May richer, fuller be.

If we love him truly, others will find a kindly expression in our living words and deeds in behalf of Mother. She too has an undying love. It is Mother's love that follows us wherever we go and that will not let us go. We rested in her gentle arms and care from the cradle up. We owe her a life of joy. She wants our life and love, not money and candy and such unfeeling things. The life guided by a true mother will never go wrong. How often have mothers lighted a candle of hope in the child's heart! More things are wrought through Mother's influence than this world dreams of. None but mother can "understand her nearness always to the heart of her child; her clear understanding of its life and needs; her hunger for the full affection of the child once helpless and clinging, now strong and able; her joy in that child's power and happiness; her oneness in spirit with it in all things.

"Mother's just a little playmate who'll defend me.

Yesteryear she traveled in the path that's mine today.
Never need I fear a foe from which she might befriend me,
Faithful little pal who ran ahead and learned the way."

Let us all, both mother and child, on this Mother's Day search into the innermost recesses of our hearts and whether or not we find that one thing lacking, with prayerful resolution determine to have our lives issue in a richer and fuller flow of love because our souls are resting in the peaceful harbor of that "love that will not let me go."

O Little Mother of Mine

*Let every day be Mother's Day—
Make roses grow along her way
And beauty everywhere.
O never let her eyes be wet
With tears of sorrow and regret,
And never cease to care!
Come, grown up children, and rejoice,
That you can hear your mother's voice.*

*A day for her? For you she gave Long years of love and service brave.
For you her youth was spent;
There was no weight of hurt or care
Too heavy for her strength to bear,
She followed where you went;
Her courage and her love sublime
You could depend on all the time.*

A Layman's Views on Feet Washing

By Ora Abshire

If you will go to some churches you will hear not only the laity but the ministry make such remarks as these concerning feet washing:

- (1) "It was just a custom of the times."
- (2) "The disciples were quarreling and the Master did this to settle the dispute."
- (3) "It was a lesson in humility."
- (4) "It was a lesson in obedience."
- (5) "It was a lesson in service."

Now I wish to take up these arguments one at a time and see what the Scripture has to say on each one.

Argument Number 1, I find in Luke 7:36-46 that Christ gives us a very clear conception of the custom of his time; and he tells Simon, "Thou gavest me no water for my feet." Then I turn back to the time of Abraham (Genesis 18:4 and 19:2) and again in the time of Jacob (Genesis 43:24) where we get the best interpretation. Now had it been a custom for the host or a servant to wash the feet of the guest, Joseph would surely have seen to it that his own brothers' feet were washed in that manner: but we note it says, "The servant gave them water and they washed their (THEIR) feet", not the servant, but they themselves. So we must come to the conclusion that it was not a social custom at the time of Christ, that Jesus practiced on his disciples.

Argument Number 2. They were quarrelling. This dispute, so often referred to, happened on the road to Capernaum (Mark 9:33-34). Now if you will turn with me to John 10:22-40 and read it carefully and remember this was not less than three months before the Crucifixion and that practically all this time was spent in seclusion (also read John 11:16). We must admit, we have no record of a quarrel at this time, so must conclude it was not a settlement of a dispute.

Argument Number 3. And I turn to Matthew 18:1-4, and I see the Master teaching humility; (and by the way this is the settlement of the dispute the disciples had on the road to Capernaum, so the settlement of the dispute in argument Number 2). So I conclude it was not done to teach humility. Although I think it would have been a very fine way of teaching it.

Argument No. 4. Obedience, and I turn to Matthew 7:21-27 and I think the necessity of obedience is plain enough and stressed enough to need no comment.

Argument Number 5. Service, and I find that very plain in Matthew 25:35-45 and Luke 10:30-37. And as the Master taught it here I do not believe that was what was being taught in the upper room.

Now you may ask if it was none of these, What was it? And why was it? Now I may not be able to get you to see this as I do, but will say the ordinances of the church today were given the Jew at Mount Sinai in figure or patterns of the true (Heb. 9:1-9 and 10:1-2). Now turn and study the 28th, 29th, and 30th chapters of Exodus.

But as we are dealing only with feet washing, study especially Exodus 30:17-21. Then turn again to Heb. 10:9. And with that remember on the morrow the veil of the temple was to be rent from top to bottom. What did it mean? The old line of priesthood or religion by proxy was abolished, and the new line established whereby all true followers of Christ are admitted by water baptism (Exodus 29:4 and Matthew 28:19).

Then after having been admitted we must do the things necessary to keep ourselves pure (Exodus 30:18-19; John 13:10). Baptism cleanses of all sin prior to that time; feet washing is our means of keeping ourselves clean and free from sin. Now I want you to compare the law with this chapter, John 13; study them in the order given—John 13:8 and Exodus 30:20; John 13:10 and Exodus 29:4; John 13:7 and 12 and 1 Peter 2:5-9; John 13:16 and Hebrews 3:5; Acts 7:37 and Deuteronomy 18:15 and I believe you will get a deeper insight of this ordinance.

If Moses was termed a servant for doing God's will and leading God's people out of bondage; how much more was Christ a servant for leading God's people to a knowledge of God. Because he led where Moses could not—through the grave; from time to eternity and from mortality to immortality, and without any mistake or misstep, along the way.

Is it necessary? Yes, just as necessary for your spiritual welfare as a bath is for your physical. We as a church (and I mean all branches) partake of the fellowship meal. Fellowship with whom? The saints, because we are one in Christ. We partake of the broken body and the spilled blood—the bread and the cup. This thought comes to me. In partaking of the bread we are partakers of the work and suffering of Christ, and in the partaking of the cup (the blood) we are partakers of his purpose. For as the blood gives life to the body, so our purpose should be the motive that guides us on in our Christian life. So it seems to me to be very important that we wash each other's feet before we at the fellowship meal and still more so, that we should have done so before we eat the body or drink the blood of our Lord and Savior, Christ Jesus.

Repentance and Faith

By Prof. Alva J. McClain

(A Brief Discussion of the Sunday School Lesson for May 15th, 1927)

Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and the rest of the Apostles, Brethren, What shall we do? And Peter said, Repent ye, and be baptized every one of you in the Name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. For to you is the promise, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto him" (Acts 2:37-39.)

Repentance and baptism are mentioned here, but not faith. Why does Peter omit "faith" here, when in literally dozens of other passages "faith" is laid down as the sole condition of salvation? There is but one satisfactory answer, namely, Peter was addressing his sermon to "The House of Israel." Now as every Bible student knows, the "devout" Jew had always believed in Jehovah the true God. He had always believed in the coming of the Messiah. The tragedy of the Jew was this—when that Messiah, in whom he believed and hoped, appeared in the world, the Jew failed utterly to recognize him. Peter's task, therefore, was not to convince the Jew that there was a Coming Messiah in whom he must believe. This the Jew already believed. What Peter had to do was to get his countrymen to "change their minds" regarding Jesus of Nazareth. Whereas they had regarded him as a blasphemer, now they must recognize him as their rightful Messiah, the Lord of Glory. Therefore, Peter does not say "believe", but "repent"; and the Greek word means "to change the mind." This was the important thing for Peter's audience of Israelites, and Peter preached the important thing. Peter knew that once his Jewish brethren "changed their minds" about Jesus, faith in him would follow instantly and automatically. Had the audience been Gentile in character, Peter doubtless would have used the formula spoken by Paul to the Philippian jailer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." (Or perhaps it would be safer to say that at this time Peter would probably have refused to preach to a Gentile audience. Peter had to be taught by a vision of God that the Gentiles were to be preached to, as the reader will recall.)

In Christianity, repentance and faith are essentially two aspects of the same thing. The essential act for man is for him to take the gift of God offered in Jesus Christ. Repentance is the negative aspect of this essential act, while faith is the positive aspect. Man by nature is at enmity with God. He cannot reach out the hand of faith to take God's gift without at the same time dropping his enmity. The very act of faith in Jesus Christ involves necessarily a "change of mind." Whereas the man once saw no need of a Savior and trusted in himself, he now changes his mind and trusts in Jesus. The very close relationship between repentance and faith is one reason, no doubt, why when the message of Christianity was carried to Gentiles by Paul he speaks almost entirely of "faith" as the sole condition of salvation. This is very noticeable in John's Gospel also.

It is possible to conceive "repentance" without "faith", that is, a man might change his mind about Christ without actually believing on him for salvation. But it is impossible to conceive "faith" without "repentance." Man cannot believe and trust without "changing his mind." This does not mean that "repentance" is not to be preached. It should be preached, if for no other reason than to emphasize it as one aspect of true Christian faith. The reader should bear in mind that throughout this discussion I am thinking of "repentance" and "faith" in relation to Jesus Christ as Savior. Repentance has a relation to other sins than the supreme sin of rejecting Christ. And here a real distinction arises. Faith in Christ, and repentance in relation to him, is one act which is something we do once for all. But even after we become Christians we sometimes fall into sin, and we need to repent of such sin, confessing and forsaking it. But in this sense repentance is for believers, for those who sustain a relationship to God in Christ. The "repentance" that we preach to unbelievers is inseparably connected with "faith" in Christ as Savior. They are not two steps on the way to salvation, but rather two aspects of the one supreme act in which the soul receives and trusts Christ for salvation.

If one should ask which aspect should be emphasized in our teaching, I would answer that there is no absolute rule. Undoubtedly, in the Bible, faith is the most prominent, especially in preaching the Gospel to Gentile hearers. But in some individual cases where there is already an intellectual knowledge of Christ, it is probable that repentance should receive the emphasis. The reason why Peter preached repentance to his Jewish brethren was that they were acquainted with Jesus and had formed a wrong opinion regarding him which found expression in a wrong attitude.

THE BRETHREN PULPIT

The Cruse of Heavenly Fragrance

By D. F. Eikenberry

TEXT—"Mary therefore took a pound of ointment of Spikenard, very precious, and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped his feet with her hair: And the house was filled with the odor of the ointment."—John 12:3.

There are some things for which human language has no vocabulary. We can only feel them, and must be satisfied. They are of the soul and have a language all their own. Some things can be spoken only in the language of heaven. We may express them but not in human words. The incident of the text is one just such experience.

Jesus is on his last return to the City of Jerusalem. How sad this fact must have made him! He goes by the way of Bethany, the town he loved. For here lived some of his dearest earthly friends. Here it was the great heart of the Son of God wept while standing in the presence of death, stirred by the profound sorrow of friends and loved ones. It was in this village Jesus had declared to the weeping woman: "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die." And the same day he hurled immortality's triumphant challenge against blinding, bewildering baneful mortality, as he called in a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth." Indeed, Jesus must have loved Bethany tenderly.

While there, some grateful friends invited him to a supper. It was a notable company gathered in that home that memorable evening. There was Lazarus, who "sat at meat with him;" Lazarus who had experienced the ordeal of death and the thrill of resurrection. For Jesus had called him back from the invisible by the way of the stone sealed grave. Then there was Martha and Mary, whose lives had been made happy beyond measure because of the resurrection of their own brother Lazarus. Then there was Simon the leper who had been cleansed of the fatal disease, leprosy, and in whose home this supper was eaten. How grateful he must have been to Jesus! Then the blessed disciples were there. They had followed him through all these many days; had seen and heard, had felt and experienced marvelous things. Then above all, the great Master of men, Son of God, was there. What a wonderful company! No wonder Jesus was to be honored by the most beautiful act possible for human hands and hearts to bestow, even upon the Son of God. How we all might gladly wish to have been present that evening in that home, and enjoy the felicity and fellowship of such rare heaven-born souls. It was fitting, All these must honor Jesus. Had he not blest them beyond measure? Had he not opened their hearts to a new meaning of life, and filled them with unspeakable joy and gladness? Had they not seen marvelous things done and heard soul thrilling truth fall from the sacred lips of the Savior of Men? Well could they honor him!

And, even so, well can we today honor him. Many would honor the Christ more truly if men more fully recognized the many blessings that are ours because of his life. We can not conceive what the world would be today if Jesus had not come. Neither can we apprehend what now would be the fullness of its glory if all men to whom came the message of good tidings had believed. This is so; notwithstanding some of the derogatory teachings from the mouths of some of our so-called intellectualists, "higher ups", as to who and what Jesus was and did and claimed to be. How slow we are sometimes to evaluate and grasp the stupendous magnitude and world wide sweep of the spiritual forces Jesus let loose for the uplift of society and the salvation of men. In this land of ours, every life is touched by the spiritual energy Jesus gave to the world. This is true regardless of what the individual may think or believe of the Christ. All have felt the pressure of his energizing vitality. But not all have believed and obeyed. The pity of it! But to all those who have believed and obeyed, Jesus has touched beyond measure. For he has taught us the way of the life and transformed us into the fullness of his grace. His power in human life is so great that today every nation on this earth is feeling, to a greater or less degree, the shock of the impact of the final and authoritative Spirit of the Christ of Galilee, against the wickedness of selfish men. Let us therefore honor him in the beauty of unselfish devotion, and power of loving service. Let us struggle to make sure the consciousness of his holy presence in our lives, day by day.

Mary, the sister of Lazarus, moved by the fullness of her inmost soul, the unspeakable joy of her heart and thrilled with devotion and gratitude because of the multitude of blessings making rich her life, "took a pound of ointment of Spikenard, very precious, and anointed the feet of Jesus and wiped his feet with her hair." Matthew and Mark add to the account by saying, "She poured it over his head," and John adds, "And the house was filled with the odor of the ointment."

But for this good deed, Judas Iscariot found fault. St John says Judas found fault, not because he cared for the poor, as he pretended, but because he was a thief.

How true to the common experiences of life. It matters not how good the deed or how well it may be done, someone finds fault. However, the world will not hurl many daggers against a passive goodness. But a positive goodness probing the piercing lance deep, exposing the puss pockets, false standards, of the prevailing order of many things, will experience the taste of bitterest gall. Or, by the soul fired by the urge of a righteous indignation, uncompromising, intolerant, do battle against commercialized and socialized sin, how sure the greater will be the wail and howl, "away with him!" "Crucify him!" or in the language of the present day American "jungle", "Bump him off."

Well did Jesus say to his faithful few, "Think not that I came to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword" (Matthew 10:34).

But Jesus said, "Let her alone, why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me. She hath done what she could" (Mark 14:6,8). What a commendation! Who could pray for a greater measurement of one's life work? Let us live and labor that the Master may say of us, "Let alone; why trouble ye them? They have done what they could."

So far as the record goes, this is the most beautiful and fragrant act performed in honor of the Christ, while living among men. An act of pure beauty and wholly void of material utility. It was the pouring out of the sweetest fragrance acquainted to men on earth; the fragrance arising from the bursting of the deepest sentiments and profoundest emotions to the hearts of men and women. For Mary's heart was full to overflowing. Had not Jesus blessed her beyond measure? Had he not resurrected from the grave her beloved brother? Had he not filled her life with a rare richness—the holy glow of heaven—a sacred meaning of the fullness of God's love and grace? Had Jesus not deluged her heart with indescribable joy and opened the eye of her soul to visions of the All? All? For these blessings, this wealth, this glory, her heart is deluged with a language unutterable by human tongue. The record does not tell us she spoke a word. It only tells us what she did.

This was her cruse of heavenly sweetness; the fullness of

(Clip and put in your Bible for convenience)

MONDAY

LIFE AND LIGHT—1 John 1. The eternal "Word of life" has become manifest and is the light of the world, and "if we walk in the light, as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

TUESDAY

RE-INCARNATING THE WORD—1 John 2. The word of God must abide in the disciple; it must be his nourishment and strength, his weapon of defense and means of overcoming. It is possible for it to be truly said of us, "Ye have overcome the wicked one," if indeed "the Word of God" abides in us.

WEDNESDAY

THE SINGULAR LOVE OF GOD—1 John 3. The wonderful love of God is manifest in that he has made us to become sons of God. The glorious end of our development as sons we cannot now see, not understand, but we know that we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. It is the likeness that we develop that shall enable us to see him in all the beauty of his holiness.

THURSDAY

THE RESPONSE TO GOD'S LOVE—1 John 4. "We love him because he first loved us." The priority of God's love is to the Christian the great land of promise into which we have gone to dwell and because of which and through which we find every righteous aspiration and hope realized within us. The very love of our being is but a response to his infinite love.

FRIDAY

LIFE'S GREAT AIM—1 John 5. Be not deceived by the false estimates and values around us. The one thing of most value is to have a faith that enables us to know God, to love him and to live in a manner pleasing to him. Every other good in life is artificial compared with this.

SATURDAY

WALKING IN THE TRUTH—2 John 1. Happy are they whose children walk in the truth. And it means happiness to the minister who instructed them—"I rejoice greatly that I found thy children walking in the truth", and then we have the rule for true walking—"as we have received a commandment from the Father."

SUNDAY

CHRISTIAN PIETY IN PRACTICE—3 John 1. This was a layman, not called to preach, but he made it possible for those who did preach to do so without cost to those who needed the Gospel. That is God's method of kingdom extension—Those who have it and appreciate it must take it freely to those who have it not.
—G. S. B.

grance of Mary's life of Christ likeness. It was the happy mixture, the blending harmoniously together of the sweet aroma of her faith and devotion, her service and sacrifice, her unalloyed gratitude and praise, her holy purity and love. It was the delightful incense of her prayers made concrete, yet distilled by holy love into the enchanting aroma—the kind which cometh only with the breezes from above charged with the sweetness of the heavenly fragrance.

It is not hard now to understand why Judas Iscariot complained of a waste. Mary was heavenly. Her life and heart had been translated from the earthly to the heavenly. She was interpreting earth in the language of heaven. While Judas was decidedly of the earth. He expressed the finality of materialism wrought to its own conclusion in the hearts of men. For impurity cannot appreciate purity. Materialism cannot comprehend the spiritual. Ignorance never understood truth and culture. Hate cannot apprehend love. Selfishness is a stranger to benevolence, compassion and sacrifice. While ugliness scorns the beautiful. Between these, all that which is true and beautiful and good on the one hand, and all that which is false, selfish, sensual and unholy on the other hand, between these there is a great gulf fixed, there is no common ground. One is of the Spirit, spiritual, the other is of the earth, materialistic. One affirms, the other denies. One is life, and declares to the world of men, "Life consists not in the abundance of things possessed, but in the right use of God's blessings." The other is despair, and grumbles and growls, "Why all this waste?"

May we at this time, as an application, raise the question, What is the size of our cruse and how much costly ointment does it contain? Are we willing to bring to Jesus the all of the sweetest, richest, the all in all we have and are? The cruse containing our Spikenard is no larger than is the bigness of our own lives. Mary's cruse measured a big faith, a heavenly love, a saintly gratitude, and a service commendable by her Lord and Savior. Our cruse contains no more precious ointment than does our lives contain of Christian graces.

Mary had received so much from her Lord. She sat at his feet as a learner. That is the reason why Mary could give so much. She had received much. We can only give what we already have received. So our gifts, our Spikenard, must of the very nature of things, be measured just in the exact proportions we let the Master fill our lives. Let us open our hearts to him. For the precious Spikenard within our cruse is no richer, no sweeter, no more fragrant than is rich and sweet and fragrant our devotion and gratitude, our service and sacrifice, our faith and love. Let us, therefore, pray the Lord, so to lead us that we might always be sincere with our true self, open minded to all truth, always holding fast to the words of Jesus, "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you; for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened" (Matthew 7:7-8). For as we learn to know, learn to do, learn to be, as did Mary, so may we, when the great Master of men, Christ the Lord, passes this way to tarry at our Bethany for the last time, then may we, too, come into his presence with the savings of a lifetime of truthful learning, of righteous doing, of saintly being, and anoint the feet and head of our Lord with our Spikenard, filling all the room to the full with the sweet odor of its rich aroma.

The truest, the purest, the most beautiful within our lives is our sweetest fragrance, our richest incense. Our lives truly become rich in fragrance, a holy symbol of Spikenard, very costly, when we have wrought out the best within us. When by his grace, through faith we incarnate in our personalities the reality of the Spirit of Jesus, having attained unto the overflow of our divinely given capacity. Then shall Jesus say of us as he said of this good woman, "Let her alone; why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me, she hath done what she could."

Law and Grace

A Word of God Concerning the Wages of Sin, and the Riches of Grace

By Samuel Kiehl

The son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel: and this son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together in the camp; and the Israelitish woman's son blasphemed the name of the Lord, and cursed. And they brought him unto Moses. And they put him in ward, that the mind of the Lord might be showed them. And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp; and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation stone him. . . . Whosoever curseth his God shall bear his sin. And he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord, he shall surely be put to death (Levit. 24: 10-16). To such an one there was no chance for repentance and reformation. The wages of sin is death (Romans 6:23.)

If the same law were strictly and promptly enforced today, how many thousands would meet the same fate! In those days under the Mosaic law every transgression and disobedience promptly received a just recompense of reward. In later years the law of the Lord concerning transgressors was apparently somewhat modified according to Isaiah 1:18, "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."

The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ (John 1:17). Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. 10:4). The whole world lieth in wickedness; yet God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish; but have everlasting life (John 3:16). And today the Word says to all, "Be it known therefore, men and brethren, that through this man (Jesus Christ, God's only begotten Son) is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and by him, all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses" (Acts 13: 38, 39). "Let us therefore give thanks unto the Father, who hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light; who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son" (Col. 1:12, 13), "in whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace" (Eph. 1:7). Let heaven and earth be filled with his glory. "Amen and amen."

Peter Heals the Lame Man

Scripture Lesson—Acts 3:1 to 4:31.

Printed Text—Acts 3:1-10 4:8-10.

Devotional Reading—Acts 35:1-6.

Golden Text—In none other is there salvation: for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved.—Acts 4:12.

The Man Born Lame

Daily they laid him at the temple gate Which is called Beautiful, to gather alms. And lying shrunk and broken, he complained:

"They call it Beautiful, and enter it To praise a God of Beauty; but these eyes Have found no beauty in it!"

Then came John

And Peter, with their message; and the lame Went with them, walking, leaping, praising God,—

"Ah, now the gate is beautiful!" he cried.

And like the lame man (for my life was dark

And bitter), I have halted at the gate And wondered dully why they called it so; But since the name of Jesus lifted me I have gone in to praise him, and have found The way more fair than my poor words can tell. —Roy Temple House.

Wayside Opportunities

This opportunity of healing and service came to Peter and John by the wayside, when they were on their way to worship. It is a testimony to the genuineness of their spirit of worship that they did not allow their desire to worship to hinder them from stopping to show compassion on this lame man. And it is a witness to their Christ-likeness that they had eyes to see the opportunity when it came. As some one has said, "Some of our best privileges and most useful hours come to us in this way, as rows of peach trees grew up by the roadside where the soldiers threw the stones of the peaches they had eaten. We are to be ever on the lookout for unexpected and wayside opportunities to do good."

Gleanings from "The Illustrator"

1. Peter and John Illustrate Fellowship.

They "went up together." v. 1. They appear to have been united by a peculiar friendship, see Ac 8:14; Lu. 22:8; Jn. 20:3; 21:7, 20, 21; 18:16. Their bond of union was love to Christ and to their fellowmen. They remembered the words of Christ, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Jn. 13:35. Christians sometimes find it very hard to love and get along with some of their fellow-believers who are diverse in temperament from themselves; but if we knew their hearts as well as Christ knows them, we should doubtless change our opinion of them. Jesus loved John, but did he not also love Peter and honor him more?

II. Peter and John Loved the Unlovely.

"But Peter with John looking intently upon" the poor misshapen beggar, prepared to bestow a blessing upon him. v. 4. One may bestow all his goods to feed the poor, and not have any love for them. 1 Cor. 13:3.

Peter and John had the compassion of the Savior. Hating sin, they loved the sinner. A hardened criminal complained to the chaplain that so many people came to talk to him about religion, and asked him to keep them away. "What is the trouble?" the chaplain said. "Oh, they all tell me I am a hardened wretch and that if I don't repent I'll be lost. It's all true, but I don't like it that cold, and I won't have them coming here." Some days afterward a gray-haired old man came to the prison, asked to see the criminal, and was admitted. The chaplain listened, out of sight, and after a little heard the old man say, "The Lord Jesus came into the world to save just such sinners as we are." The man whose life had been one long sin, looked up into the saintly face and said, "What, do you, a clean man, class yourself with such sinners as I?" The compassion touched him and he was saved.

III. Peter and John were almost as poor as the beggar.

"Silver and gold have I none." v. 6. They had no money, but they had the wealth of the Spirit, knowledge, discernment, power, the ability to impart hope, to inspire faith, to lift one up whom all the physicians were powerless to help. Filled with the Holy Spirit we can

"Rescue the perishing, Lift up the fallen, Tell them of Jesus the mighty to save."

IV. The Poor in Spirit may be "Rich in Faith." Jas. 2:5

"Such as I have give I thee." v. 6. Paul wrote to the Christians at Rome: "I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift." Rom. 1:11. It is sinful to pine for opportunities of service which in reason we can never have. We should always say, "Such as I have give I unto thee". v. 6. Heavenly people do not need earthly riches. God has given them infinitely greater power to uplift crippled, sinful, suffering humanity. There are better things for a beggar than money. If you can teach him to trust the Lord, he can get his own bread. It is as sinful for the Christian to hoard the spiritual blessing as it is for the miser to hoard his gold. He must not hide his talent in a napkin. Bishop Brooks said: "It is hard to say today whether the need is greater for faithful clergymen or faithful laymen in the church of God." If we obey God's word, he will give strength for "all things," Ph. 4:13, whether it be leaping and praising God, or just ordinary "walking" to the house of prayer. v. 8; 1 Th. 5:17; He. 10:25; Mal. 3:16.

FIRST SPANISH SUNDAY SCHOOL SONG BOOK

After three years of constant, patient work, the Sunday school song book in Spanish has come from the press. It is the first song book in Spanish, with music, for children and young people. There are 173 hymns with special Orders of Service and Responsive Readings for the school session in the back of the book. It has been given a very cordial reception and at the Methodist Annual Conference in Argentina, a motion was adopted making it the official Sunday school song book of the Methodist churches. The editors are now at work on an edition without music. There are at least 50 new songs in this collection in addition to the best songs that were already in use in other books.

The book goes out as a publication of the World's Sunday School Association. One of the editor is Rev. George P. Howard, a Field Secretary of that organization. When Mr. Howard was in the United States on his last furlough, he was able to obtain a number of special gifts which made this much needed Sunday school song book possible. There is still $100 required to complete this initial work and to make it possible to sell the word-only edition for the very low charge of 12c per copy. The music edition is $1.20. The charge would have been much higher if this book had been produced in the United States. In visiting the Sunday schools in Argentina, it is noted that at least one-third of the children do not have song books as there are not enough to go around. The slogan of the Argentina Sunday School Association is "Every member with a song book and every member a singer."

A SATISFYING RELIGION

There is a religion which is satisfying. I will call your attention to four features of it:

1. A sense of the conscious favor of God. You feel that God loves you, that he holds you in his arms.

2. The consciousness that he has made you good. If the world pours into your lap all its wealth and honors, you would still be a miserable creature unless you knew that you were good and honest and true and pure.

3. The consciousness that you are doing your duty to the Lord and to those about you.

4. The assurance that all is going to be well. There may be difficulties in the way now; but if we have the assurance in our hearts that all will be well in the end, it will bring satisfaction.

And this satisfying religion you can have without money and without price on the simple conditions that you go right down and submit yourself to Christ, believe in him, and trust in him.—General Booth.

For Mother

For all the love you've given me,
For all the prayers you've prayed,
For all the tears and all the care,
The sacrifice you've made
For all I am or can become,
For all in me that's true,
I want to thank you, Mother mine,
For all to you is due:
And to the God who loves you
Upon my knees I pray
To send a wealth of happiness
To you this Mother's Day.

The Call to Adventure

By Orville Don Ullom

Hebrews II:8—By faith Abraham when he was called, obeyed to go out unto a place which he was to receive for an inheritance; and he went out not knowing whither he went.

Behold, a real life situation! It is as if the curtain were drawn aside and the privilege were granted us of glancing into the personal life of this young man. Under the care and protection of his father and mother we see him enjoying the peace and luxury of his home life. But now he has arrived at the period of manhood when he must make decisions for himself. It is a question of either staying at home where he would remain more or less undeveloped or of going into a strange land where he would develop self-reliance. And this is exactly typical of the decision we must make. By this I certainly do not discredit the nurture of the home. But if we are willing to grow into the moral and spiritual strength of manhood we must be willing to launch out into a land not as yet our own, and conquer it.

Mother and father hesitate or refuse to grant their consent that son and daughter may enter college. But I wonder how many fathers and mothers take time to seriously consider that this may be God's way of calling their children into some definite field of service. Pressure came to bear upon the life of Abraham to break with the old ties and set out for another land as yet unexplored. May this not be God's way of guiding us today? But fathers and mothers are fearful of the dangers lurking in that alien land. Without a doubt many dangers exist there. But where is our faith in God's protecting hand? And so to Whittier's words on "Eternal Goodness" we turn and read thus:

"I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies.
And so beside the silent sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

And furthermore both parents and young men and young women must realize that according to God's plan for every life our mental powers between the years of 17 and 21 are opening up for their fullest development, and the altruistic feelings of youth are blossoming into their fruition between the years of 22 and 24. I ask you quite frankly just now, "Where can they more fully and more efficiently be developed than in our Christian colleges under the guiding hands of trained Christian leaders?" Where is there a father or a mother who does not wish to see son or daughter make the most of his or her life? Who would rob his child of real life? Then let's make possible for them the best advantages. And with God guiding there surely is a way, no matter how poor or rich you may be. Poverty used to be an excuse, but in this day and age of the world we know better. Where is thy faith, O father? Where is thy faith, O son? God is calling you into service for him.

Abraham went out not knowing whither he went. He was willing to be guided even though he could not see every step of the way, but this sense of mystery is the factor that made it an interesting and profitable adventure. Each step opened up new vistas of light. Certain days doubtless found him in the jungle of doubt and confusion, but with the rising of the sun on the following day the clouds of confusion rolled away. The Father's hand led him on into new light. As sure as the rising and setting of the sun, so sure are we that God through Jesus Christ will lead us into our natural and normal life calling if we but do our part. He cannot lead us unless we obey. Abraham obeyed when the call came. How shall we know when the call comes? Many of us do not know. It is not necessary that we should as long as we remain sensitive to the pure and the right. Our hearts should be like sensitive plates of the camera. They should be subject to impressions that come from friends and the many other sources, because this may be God's method of imparting his guiding knowledge to us. But these impressions should be tested by having them sifted through the closest observation of our mind and heart. Therefore, there is all the more reason why we should keep these sensitive plates—mind and heart—free from exposure to those impressions which will blur and mar its clearness. For with our plates in such a blurred condition there will be no response on our part to the clear small voice when it speaks. The static within will drown the voice without. Consequently we will not obey his voice when he speaks to us

Building a Book-Shelf. Prov. 4:1-9

George and his father live about eight miles out in the country. George is now twelve years old and he is going to tell you about his very own book shelf that he is trying to fill with nice books.

Dear Juniors: Since you are going to study about building book shelves, I thought you might like to hear about my bookshelf and how I happened to start building it.

When I was seven years old, my Uncle James invited my father and me to visit him in his home in Washington. Both of us saved all our money for a long while and when we had enough to buy each of us new suits and pay our railroad fares, we started to Washington. We had a nice trip, but I can't tell you about that, for I am to write this letter about book shelves.

Just before we reached Washington, Daddy said to me, "Your Uncle James has much more money than you or I ever can hope to have and he lives quite differently from the way we are used to living. You will have to be careful not to scratch his furniture or soil anything. Always be very polite."

There I was about to tell all about the trip again. Well, when we had been in the house just a little while, I found the room I liked best. It was a room off in a part of the house that was the most quiet of all the house. In that room you could not hear the noise in the street or any sounds in the house. It was just as quiet as our own home out in the country. And what do you suppose was in that room? It was just filled with books. There, I don't mean filled. If it was filled you couldn't get in to read them. But there were books on all the sides of the room in the nicest cases.
